ArtistWhoPaints InDungeon

crawled by waffle and carthwal

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (1)

Episode 1

I became a picture.

“…….”

This is not a memorial photo, it's a real painting.

“…….”

It also fell into the middle of a cabin in the forest.

“…Should I consider it as returning to farming?”

I was treated like a possessed portrait while living a normal life, but it was fun so it was okay.

* * *

Sergio was an art teacher.

If we were to explain why he, a respectable member of society, became a portrait possessed by a ghost, it was because Sergio, unable to escape the burning school in time, was trapped in the art room and became absorbed in his own painting.

“…….”

It's true.

“If I was going to die anyway, I wanted to die in my favorite place.”

That was the art warehouse, the place where the landscape painting of the cabin in the woods was kept, the place that eventually made him a talking picture.

“As I live, I have had experiences like this.”

Geo sat on the bench and took in the scenery in the painting.

“…….”

The air is mild.

The sound of birds chirping in harmony, as if they were singing in a choir. The spring breeze is light and soft like swaying silk.

Jewel-like sunlight streaming through the lush leaves. The right temperature and the thick scent of the forest, as if soaked in dew… .

"hmm."

It was peaceful.

“Good.”

It's been about a week since I came to my senses in the cabin in this picture.

‘I’m not sure exactly how long I’ve been here because the flow of time has been so irregular…’

It's natural for a resident to inspect a new home. Geo has figured out a few little rules in this picture.

First of all, everything he draws here becomes real.

“…….”

Sergio, who was observing the apple I had drawn, put it down. The ripe apple had a nice scent.

I was proud.

'I am free from food expenses.'

As expected, I am special.

It was very welcome news to Sergio, who was a possessed portrait artist, a gourmet and a glutton.

If you draw an apple, it becomes a real apple. If you draw a bag of salt, it becomes real salt. The same goes for kitchen utensils other than food, such as pots and spatulas, and plants, such as flowers and trees.

'One thing that everyone might be wondering at this point.'

People can't draw.

I tried to draw a human being with watercolors, thinking I might be the first to do so, but all I got was a warm corpse, not a living, moving human being.

“It’s fortunate that the limits are clear.”

Geo was scared. For him, who values friendship, peace, and love, the ability to create humanity would only be detrimental.

Above all, Sergio's dream was closer to that of a building owner than a creator.

'I was relieved that I didn't have any powers that would ruin the cuteness and elegance of my life.'

And the second rule.

“…….”

Geo's gaze fell on a picture frame hanging on a wooden pole.

“Is it like a front door?”

Through the frame, Geo could see the scenery outside.

“It may be because of the importance of communication that tells us not to grow old alone.”

It was also possible to interact with reality and go outside the picture at will. Compared to the many haunted portraits Sergio knew, it had a high degree of freedom.

'It's me after all.'

Even if you become a painter, you can't go down the same path as others.

Geo was very satisfied with his uniqueness, which was unprecedented in human history. It seemed that there were not two such things in the world. If there were, it would be fate, so it was even better.

“…….”

Anyway, leaving that aside.

“…There seems to be no reason to go out into this smoky society and start a new life.”

Why bother leaving this clean area?

“In just a few years, a lot has changed from what I remember….”

It was a bitter thing to mutter at the ripe old age of 29, but that was the reality. It had already been about 30 years since the fire.

'Exactly 31 years.'

After realizing this, Geo leisurely returned to the painting. This talking potato was not confident in adapting to the new society.

“It’s probably been a long time since you were reported dead, so why would you leave here and subject yourself to some kind of biological experiment?”

I didn't want to suffer needlessly when I had this peaceful house where I didn't even have to pay for food, let alone electricity.

“I’m a little worried about the kids in my class… The world has changed so much that I don’t know how they’re all doing.”

31 years ago, when the fire happened, the Earth seemed to have turned upside down.

'Call it a catastrophe.'

From that day on, the world seemed to have changed completely.

When he saw the unbelievable sight of a businessman in a suit wielding a bow and fighting a monster as big as a house, Geo, who was extremely scared, meekly recognized his identity as a drawing.

“That might happen as you live.”

Even if this body dies and is reborn a hundred times, and my bones are not dust and my soul is still intact, I still prefer the peaceful and comfortable life of a haunted portrait to the modern society where I am at odds with monsters.

“There are many different ways of life in the world, and one of them is the life of a portrait….”

And at this point, let's discuss the third story.

"…hmm."

This forest is another ecosystem.

“Should I go collecting?”

Geo took a sturdy basket with him. He planned to bring a lot of food.

'All I drew was a two-story cabin and the forest surrounding it, but as I wandered around, I found plants and terrain features that I had never drawn before.'

It seemed like it was created based on Geo's imagination.

“…….”

Rustle.

"hi."

“Beep.”

"okay."

Geo watched as a rabbit jumped out of the bushes and rubbed against his feet.

'It's small.'

It was much smaller and rounder than the common Korean rabbits, which seemed to reflect Sergio's preference for small, harmless things.

'I like it.'

I liked the fact that it seemed like it couldn't hurt me, and that Sergio himself could win if they fought seriously.

'Is it because I, the owner of the painting, am harmless that only harmless creatures are placed there? That's a plausible guess… .'

After that, creatures that were slightly different from reality occasionally passed by Geo.

A squirrel with round, puffy cheeks. A sparrow with fluffy feathers like it’s winter. A deer with jewel-like, clear eyes and a slender neck… .

“…….”

Geo thought.

Fourth rule.

“…Even though it’s our first meeting, he’s so kind. He must recognize me as his father.”

All beings in this picture show favor to Geo.

'Is it because I drew this place?'

Even though it was a painting, Geo was still a painter, and this world was also a work of art he created.

'It might be natural that the guys living in such a work would be friendly to me, their master.'

Geo walked in the opposite direction of the stream.

“…I’m a freeloader with nothing to do, so I’ll find a sunny spot and take a nap.”

He was on his way to the spring that was the source of this vast forest.

'It would be better if you collect some on the way.'

Sergio was still a gourmet and a glutton. He could eat as much as he wanted and sleep as much as he wanted, though he was not hungry or sleepy.

'If I eat too much, I feel bloated, or if I can't fall back to sleep right after

I've had a good night's sleep... But it seems like I'm still maintaining my basic lifestyle pattern.'

Anyway, being able to eat as much as you want was a huge advantage.

"…ah."

Geo, who was following the stream in the opposite direction, found some red, round berries.

“This would be perfect as a snack.”

It was a thin tree, barely 2m tall, with branches that were bent like overturned plates. The thin branches were full of fruits the size of beads sold at stationery stores.

The berries were spread out in a mound on long branches, and their shape was more similar to a cherry tree than a grape tree.

“If you dry it in the sun, it might have a texture similar to raisins….”

At that moment, Geo's 'system' explained the small, red fruit.

Mung bean fruit

It is red in color. It is sweet and sour, and mainly sweet. It is a spherical fruit with a diameter of 1 cm at the smallest and 2 cm at the largest.

Method of preparation: Make a paste by mixing the dried fruit into powder and the juice of the lulupu, and then make a dumpling. Dry it in a dark place for more than a week. It is a good medicine for bleeding and recovery.

“…If you could give me some notice before you come out….”

Rule number five.

“…Yeah, I guess this will take some getting used to. Time will heal the wound.”

Actually, this is the rule of this forest, but… Sergio seems to have awakened. It’s a phenomenon that appears in people with superpowers after the ‘Great Calamity’.

It was strange that the people of Earth now call those with superpowers 'hunters'.

'That's how I became a person with superpowers.'

What should I say?

“It’s like a game.”

I felt like I was dropped into a healing game of gathering and cooking.

'I guess I should say that it was fortunate that I was able to easily accept this unfamiliar environment thanks to that feeling.'

It wasn't about escaping from reality by saying that this was a game. It was just about 'being in a harmless and convenient environment like a game, so it's easy to adapt to.'

"…hmm…."

Geo reread the system and checked the basket. There was still a lot of space left.

“…Should I put in more?”

He picked the berries so hard that the bottom of the basket turned red. Then he separated the berries by making spaces between them with large, clean leaves.

It was to make space for other forage items to be placed, and thanks to that, I was able to find another herb not long after.

“What was that?”

A small flower that resembles an orchid.

Bye Bye Bye Bye

It has a light blue color. It has a soft vanilla cream scent. It is edible when boiled in hot water for 10 minutes. It blooms in the place where the forest butterfly of 'Forest of Oblivion' died. The petals resemble the wings of the forest butterfly.

Method of preparation: Blanch in hot water to remove toxicity, then dry in a dark place for 10 days. If dried on the leaves of the Dorong Dorong tree, the medicinal effect increases. If you steep the dried flowers on low heat for a day, you can use it as a medicinal tea with a good aroma. It is excellent for stopping bleeding, restoring immunity, and increasing it.

'The taste was quite different, but at least the texture was similar to well-cooked spinach.'

You might wonder what spinach with a vanilla cream flavor is, but it was surprisingly good to eat. It was good to eat as a snack after boiling it once.

'The texture is also fun because it's soft enough to be crushed like a ripe chestnut when you mash it with your tongue.'

By the way, 'dorongdorong' refers to a tree in this forest that is as plump as a baobab tree but much shorter.

The round, curled leaves are plump and sticky like water-filled balloons, and since there was a deciduous tree like this near the hut, Geo could easily obtain the leaves.

“Just in case.”

Geo continued to gather diligently. It was necessary to gather over a wide area, as not only food was needed, but also medicine for emergencies.

Geo, who continued collecting like that, arrived at the spring that was the source of the stream.

"……."

Todok.

Uruk… .

"……."

Spring water trapped in pure white tree roots, as if collecting sunlight and moonlight.

Between the springs, which sparkled as transparently as glass, there were flowers blooming as thin and beautiful as silk made of jewels. They were abundant flowers that somehow resembled lotus flowers.

"With this…."

Lulupu

A flower with a rich bud. It can only grow in clean water, and uses that water to bloom. A fully bloomed Lulupu will retain its shape even if it is broken. However, it can only extract juice from the petals if it touches warm water. It is edible, but has no taste other than a strong scent.

Method: Place the petals in warm, edible water and wait until they dissolve and release juice. Never touch the process. The resulting juice can be used with various medicines.

Available recipes: Blood balls using mandarin oranges and rurupu juice.

“If I make medicine, I’ll probably use it someday.”

Toouk.

I put the basket down.

‘I don’t think I’ll ever use it, but I was bored anyway… .’

He thought it was very suitable for new content, so he washed his hands clean in the spring water and reached out to the lulupu flower.

Geo cut the flower stem with his characteristically blunt and gloomy face. The way he handled the flower was quite delicate, unlike his dull expression.

'It would be fun to take it by the roots, but this isn't the type of plant I usually grow... . Since it's a flower made of water, I can't tell where the roots begin and end. I have to be careful because if I try to do it recklessly and the population decreases, I'll be disappointed.'

The Rurupu he picked was already a fully bloomed flower, so it didn't flow out like water. This meant that Geo had picked the flower correctly.

“It smells good.”

Geo carefully placed the flower buds into the basket.

There were about 20 flowers blooming in the spring, but I picked only three just in case. The petals themselves were so large and plentiful like lotus flowers that picking several seemed like a waste.

'The stem is quite sturdy, but is there any other way to use it? It feels like fiber, and if you tear it lengthwise into small pieces, it looks like it will peel off like threads… .'

Within, Geo had collected all the flowers.

“I think this is enough.”

Geo decided to slowly get a feel for the exact dosage while making the medicine, and put the basket of flowers back on the floor.

Then I admired the well.

“…….”

Choke,

Uruk… .

“…….”

The sound of shallow, transparent water flowing.

A clear scent from a clean spring.

The forest air feels humid.

“…Good.”

This well, which existed even though I didn't draw it, was more beautiful than I could have imagined.

The tree, already dead but still standing strong, was shining white and resembled expensive Carrara marble.

Between the trees, whose veins were so complex that the sky could be faintly seen through them, a clear spring flowed out, breaking the golden sunlight.

'It looks like pearls have been spread thinly.'

The tree's sap hardened and turned into jewels. Before it died, it secreted sap, and large, plate-shaped jewels with a pale blue tint were sticking out from the tree like mushrooms.

It was a transparent, turquoise-colored thing, like a large jeweled dish. It held sun-drenched spring water and gave off a gentle glow.

“…….”

Crunch… .

The spring water flowed sequentially along the jewel plate.

From the highest point, one by one, the jewel plates struck with a bright sound like jade beads at dawn. If you listened closely, it felt like you were hearing the song of a butterfly.

The sunlight streaming through the leaves of the forest scattered and illuminated the marble-like trees, making it feel like a temple.

“…….”

The spring water that flowed down like that collected in the roots of a dead tree, creating a shallow well.

The spring water overflowed from there and spread throughout the forest, and the surrounding area was lit up by butterflies with wings like sunlight. They looked just like fireflies.

Fireflies that can be seen even during the day.

“That’s cool.”

The spring, which had a huge tree towering high into the sky, looked like a huge pond.

‘… There is a saying that good water gives off a fragrance, but does that also apply to water this clean?’

The air surrounding this place was sweet and fragrant, as if I were lying down on a field of flowers. Perhaps the scent of the Rurupu petals was coloring the spring water.

“…….”

also….

“People should return to farming.”

Geo liked it here.

He settled down among the soft moss like a blanket and slowly took a sip of water.

* * *

“It's here.”

An art warehouse in a now forgotten abandoned school.

A man in the portrait hanging there had his eyes quietly closed.

“Look at this picture.”

“Wow, how did you stay like this without getting on?”

“It’s in good condition… Will it count as an achievement if I take this?”

“I think there is a title for the piece.”

“It even has a name? It was an item.”

Now, the last rule.

Geo became a painting.

“…….”

“It’s called ‘Portrait of Geo.’”

That much was clear.

“It’s comfortable hanging out with someone with emotional skills… But is this really Earth-friendly?”

“Would an ordinary portrait be this clean in a closed school like this, in the mountains at that? And there’s no one to take care of it?”

“I guess that’s true.”

“Of course it’s an item that flowed in from some dungeon. There are many other dungeons nearby.”

“Anyway, I think the collectors would like it. They’re crazy about this kind of thing, aren’t they?”

While Geo was sleeping like that.

The entrance to the painting was changing randomly.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (2)

Episode 2

“Okay, then….”

A well-organized kitchen in a forest cabin filled with warm air.

“I have to eat dinner.”

Geo was preparing a meal.

“How can I be this happy without working and just eating and sleeping?”

It was the so-called happiness of being unemployed.

“It’s only now that I’m unemployed that I can finally fulfill my duty as a pig and potato… I have to sit at the dinner table for three hours.”

Sergio was a gourmet and a big eater. The life of a teacher, which required him to lead a regular, unobtrusive, and moderately savvy social life, was too harsh for him, a cultured pig.

“I’ve always thought that I want to enjoy my favorite menu alone at a time that’s convenient for me.”

Sergio nodded with his characteristically blunt expression.

“This is the life of farming….”

I don't know if this is really the realm of farming, but that's what it was.

Above all, Sergio, who looks like he was carved from an Arctic glacier but is from a mountain village in Gangwon Province, has been waiting for the right time to return to farming ever since he came to Seoul.

“I lost my job and became a portrait artist to fulfill my dream of living in the countryside. Is life really a hurricane?”

It was so unexpected and fun. I guess a real hurricane wouldn't be fun though.

“Then let’s keep it simple today….”

Geo took out the ingredients while leaving the lantern hanging above, its flame flickering even in the wind.

sweet potato.

“…….”

A huge sweet potato.

Geo blinked twice as if thinking about today's daily bread, and soon came to a conclusion.

“…Should I try making honey-sweet potato stir-fry?”

Sometimes, when the elders sent me sweet potatoes, I would often make this dish. All I needed was a little honey, salt, sweet potatoes, and butter. Nothing else was needed.

Fortunately, all these materials were in the cabin. Just like the wooden spring that existed without any thought, the furniture and food inside the cabin were also piled up together.

Sergio was particularly impressed by the fact that ingredients that remained in their best condition even after several days, which was a characteristic of the world of paintings, were very popular.

"hmm…."

Dalgrak.

Geo took his jar of honey from the cedar-scented cupboard.

“…The dairy was in the basement.”

Dairy products like milk, cheese, and butter, as well as other basic foods that required refrigeration, were all stored in the cabin's basement storage room.

The warehouse, which was sealed on all sides with transparent ice and kept the air cool, served as an excellent refrigerator. When you entered, you could almost feel your breath, but thanks to the evolution into a haunted portrait, you didn't feel the cold.

'Moderately cool.'

Seeing that other food ingredients didn't freeze at all, I wondered why my breath was coming out.

“It’s a phenomenon that completely ignores the laws of physics… but it’s funny, so that’s okay.”

As he descended the stairs to the cellar carrying a small bowl and knife, a door made of wood as cold and heavy as metal appeared before him.

As soon as I opened the door, I saw a few small jars and a large shelf clumsily arranged inside the ice cave.

'The last time I checked, there seemed to be a variety of types.'

He leafed through the butter on the shelf.

“I would like a butter with a mild flavor.”

Among the sweetening ingredients, honey was a particularly strong-smelling ingredient. Sweet potatoes and honey alone would be enough, but if the butter flavor was also strong, it could be a bit overwhelming.

Sergio found a piece of butter of a pale yellow color among the various types and cut it into small pieces.

“If you put too much in, it will feel greasy….”

Geo took out just enough butter to use in this dish, wrapped it neatly in wrapping paper, closed the storage room door carefully, and went back up to the kitchen.

Sergio's cooking skills were excellent, otherwise the gourmet would never have thought of cooking for himself.

“The child is refreshing.”

Geo cleaned the sweet potatoes with his skilled hands. He wondered how to divide them.

“…For now….”

He blinked twice and cut the sweet potatoes into long rectangular pieces. They were sticks of appropriate length.

“…Because there aren’t that many sheep.”

Geo processed 17 large sweet potatoes.

The iron plate with the small sweet potatoes on it went straight into the oven. The oven, which was already preheated, quickly cooked the outside of the sweet potatoes.

When the outside was crispy but the inside was completely uncooked due to the intense heat, Geo took them out of the oven.

Those sweet potatoes, which were cooked on the outside but raw on the inside, were placed on top of a large wok.

“Butter and salt here.”

I kept the heat low so that the butter wouldn't burn, and sprinkled a little salt on top. The sweet potatoes, which were cooked little by little over a low heat, were coated with butter and gave off a sweet and savory aroma.

“And a little honey….”

Chewing gum—.

“Put it in.”

Geo quickly turned the wok, gently spreading the honey he had scooped out with a spoon. The honey and butter, mixed with great force like Chinese fried rice, settled on top of the sweet potatoes.

“…….”

At this point, I thought it was enough.

"good."

Geo turned off the heat and turned the pan a few more times. This was to help the butter and honey blend together without sticking to the outside.

If this process had not been followed, butter would have separated and runny fat, and honey would have tasted like an unpleasant, sticky monster.

‘That might taste good too, but…’

Of course, when cooking, you have to pay attention to texture. Even if it's the same taste, the texture can make it a completely different dish.

“…Okay.”

Geo put the finished honey-sweet potato stir-fry into a bowl and immediately put the dirty wok in water.

'No matter how foolish humans are, I will not repeat the same mistakes.'

Dried and stuck to the pan, the honey mixed with butter was said to be possessed by the devil's spirit and tested the patience of good men like Sergio.

Anyway, this was his dinner menu today.

“Good.”

Stir-fried sweet potatoes with honey is not difficult to cook, and is a great dish to make as a snack or as a meal.

Sitting at the wooden table, Geo poked at a sweet potato stick with a fork. The outside was shiny like a candy sweet potato, but the honey coating, much more delicate, had a complex flavor due to the addition of butter.

“…….”

The fork went into the sweet potato smoothly, so it seemed to be cooked very well. Geo put the sweet potato in his mouth as is.

“…….”

well….

He came to a conclusion.

“Mahita.”

It was just plain delicious.

‘I like this better than candy. My grandmother said the same thing…’

Unlike candy that makes you poke the roof of your mouth when you eat it, this honey-sweet potato stir-fry had a soft exterior. It only had a smooth and soft texture thanks to the honey and butter mixed in.

It was a dish that gave a different kind of enjoyment from candy that had a crunchy texture.

'Sweet potatoes and honey are a great combination.'

And it was a set that went well with butter and salt.

The butter added to the honey flavor, which could have been a little simple, giving it a different richness, and a little salt balanced out the dish, which could have easily become too rich or sweet.

“I think it would have been nice to add some herbs to this.”

I thought it would be okay to add commonly used spices like pepper, parsley, or rosemary.

“But then the scent will be a bit stronger. It might be hard to enjoy it lightly.”

Geo liked it this way.

'I just like the texture too.'

The surface of the sweet potatoes, which had been stripped of moisture in the oven, still retained their crispiness even after rolling around in honey and butter.

In contrast, the inside of the sweet potato, which was not ripe at all, seemed moist and ripe thanks to the coating of honey and butter.

'The moisture inside must have been trapped by the strong heat of the oven. You did a good job of baking the outside first until it was crispy.'

It's fun to eat it by cutting it into an elongated shape, and you can feel the variety of textures.

If you eat too much, you'll feel full, but this amount was enough to enjoy the meal. Geo is a big eater after all.

“…….”

Geo thought as he looked at the bowl with only a faint hint of honey butter sauce left.

'As expected, Naran Potato is a wonderful potato.'

I didn't want to eat that much because I was about to fall asleep, but this menu was just right.

“I like it.”

The lantern light placed on the table gave off a soft glow. It had a very analogical feel, and when I looked at it closely, I felt nostalgic even though it wasn't my hometown.

“It would be perfect to use when camping.”

Geo stayed like that for a long time in a comfortable sense of fullness that seemed to encourage him to fall asleep. Feeling the laziness of the empty bowl that was empty but not lacking, and the soft voice of the lantern that further softened the air… .

Soon, Geo's gaze turns to the window where the spring breeze shyly greets him.

“…….”

Geo, who had been looking outside at the dark place a while ago, soon got up from his seat.

“…It would be better to prepare the herbs in advance.”

It was to make a medicine related to bleeding that the system had told me about.

For some reason, it doesn’t seem like the day will come when I can write, but creating these pieces one by one and accumulating them is a kind of joy for the artist. It’s a kind of collection.

“First, let’s wash the goji berries and lay them out to dry. It’ll take quite a while to dry them thoroughly enough to make powder. They’re so big, it’ll probably take longer than making raisins….”

He almost fell asleep for a moment, but his mind started to work quickly, perhaps because of the sugar he had consumed.

“Let’s start with about 50 for later. There are only three flowers, so even if they don’t produce much juice, if we grind them into powder, we can still use them later.”

Geo, having reached a conclusion, moved.

He washed the fruit clean with drinking water he had previously brought from the stream. The goby fruit was quite elastic, and when it was put into the water, the inside was faintly visible.

“…It kind of resembles a gooseberry.”

Of course, the difference was clear in the case of the goji berry, which was completely filled with flesh inside.

Geo continued his pointless thoughts and washed away all the berries.

“…….”

Ppop.

“Good.”

The bright red bead-shaped berries soaked in clear, clean stream water. It felt better than expected to hear them being wiped clean by Geo's hands and making a refreshing sound.

After washing all the berries, he placed them on a wooden tray.

“You might get bored, so let’s pack some snacks too.”

Even though it was evening now, the fruit would have been better dried if it had been placed outside in a well-ventilated and bright place.

Geo placed the tray with the fruit spread out right in front of the hut.

"and…."

Entering the house, he approached the wood-burning stove.

'We don't need fire now.'

Knock, knock.

Geo shook the grass with the round ball on it.

Then, a small, dull noise rang out from inside the fruit, and a fire burst into flames. It was a small but strong fire, so it was blue in color. A faint fragrance was slowly rising from it.

It was just nice to look at, like a bonfire burning in winter.

“…….”

Geo threw it onto the firewood in the brazier and lit it.

Drop of water flower

It is an inedible flower that blooms black balls instead of the usual petals. If you shake the flower while it is still in the ball shape before it fully blooms, the stamens and pistils will collide and catch fire.

However, since it only catches fire when it is moved up and down strongly, it rarely catches fire spontaneously.

It means a substitute for a lighter or matches.

“…It’s light and pretty, so if this was sold on Earth, it would be a huge hit as an emotional camping product….”

Geo, who was muttering about worldly greed with a blunt face, rummaged through his basket. Then he took out ten Baibamnil flowers that looked like orchids.

I lightly washed that too, placed it on a small plate, placed a pot on the brazier, and poured water into it. Then I waited until it boiled.

“…I think this will suffice.”

Geo, who confirmed that the water was bubbling moderately, poured in the Vanilla. It had a deep, sweet scent unique to vanilla.

Pong, popong!

"hmm…."

If you want to eat it like a vegetable, it would be better to soak it for a while and then take it out, but this flower is not a vegetable. If it is not properly blanched, it can even remain toxic.

'It takes a total of 10 minutes for the poison to leave.'

Geo faithfully followed the system's instructions. He ate the goby fruit that he had set aside for a moment, waiting for the poison to leave the flower.

“Is it okay?”

Sergio checked the time on the system and stood in front of the pot again after 10 minutes.

He placed the drooping flowers on a plate with long chopsticks. Even though they had been boiled for quite some time, their shape remained intact. He washed the flowers, which had been blanched once, in clean water and left them for a while.

Geo didn't turn off the fire in the weakened brazier, but only replaced the pot on top. The water left over from boiling the Baibamnil would still be poisonous.

“I need to stop this too.”

Geo went back outside, carrying a tray with flowers on it.

Let's open the door like that.

“…….”

Phew… .

A gentle spring breeze blew.

“…It’s cool.”

The texture and temperature of lukewarm clouds gently wrapping around my face.

It was a pleasant breeze.

'Soft and cool.'

Geo blinked his eyes slowly in the hazy wind that strangely made his heart pound and made him feel a little sleepy.

'I wish I could just fall asleep like this.'

The wind, neither hot nor cold, was soft like fine Korean paper or silk and tickled my fingertips.

“…….”

Geo, who enjoyed the small happiness that came unexpectedly, soon started moving his feet.

“…I hope it dries well.”

Geo returned home, lining up the berries and flower baskets. There were already two baskets in front of the house, but there was still more to be done.

This time, what Geo caught was a transparent flower named Rurupu.

“…….”

How should I do this? Geo, who was having trouble thinking, perhaps because he was under a lot of stress, asked the system for help.

“The law of the abbreviation.”

Method: Place the petals in warm, edible water and wait until they dissolve and release juice. Never touch the process. The resulting juice can be used with various medicines.

Available recipes: Blood balls using mandarin oranges and rurupu juice.

"thank you."

Geo, who had expressed his gratitude to the system, poured water into the newly replaced pot.

The cold water poured into the heated pot and the temperature became lukewarm. When I put my hand directly over the water, the steam rising slowly made it look quite warm.

'You said warm water, not hot water, so I think this temperature should be just right.'

Thinking so, Geo held the flower he had brought from the well in his hand.

The Lulupu flowers, which seemed to be made of water but were woven like silk and strong, had a clear and sweet fragrance like dewdrops made of honey.

Let’s carefully put it into the pot… .

“…….”

The sparkle of the petals, like the Milky Way, spread throughout the water in the pot.

“…Apparently, Lulupu’s sparkle is caused by scattering light from sunlight or lighting.”

Was it because I was trapping the bright sunlight or the bright light on my body? It felt like watching ice made with glitter melt in warm water.

"…oh."

Soon the sparkling subsided and the water in the pot took on a more distinct aroma.

A capitalistic thought suddenly crossed his mind that it might sell well if made into perfume, but Geo scooped out the contents before the water had even boiled away.

'I almost was late.'

The flower water that was scooped out like that went into a glass bottle that had been prepared in advance.

“It may not seem like much at first glance, but this is what it takes to make medicine.”

Even though the Lulupu juice was simply dissolved in water, it had an enchanting glow, like paint that an artist had poured his soul into. I wondered if this could really be made into a medicine.

“…….”

Well, there's nothing you can't do if you try. That's just how life is.

“Even a perfectly living human being can become a portrait possessed by a ghost, so it’s not like it’s impossible to make a potion with a strange color.”

After finishing all the grooming, Geo went up to the second floor of the cabin. The sleepiness that had been tickling his eyelids for a while was arousing his sleep.

The wooden steps that touched my feet felt warm somewhere. Although they were clearly made of solid wood, they had a strangely soft texture, and the wood seemed to be good, as it gave off a comforting scent here and there.

The bed in the bedroom that came up that way was soft, as if it was made of water.

"ha…."

Phew—.

I just dug into the bed.

“…….”

His eyes, which had been blinking a couple of times as if he was organizing the day's work, soon closed quietly like a child being caressed in his parents' arms.

A breeze carrying the scent of the forest blew in through the wide-open windows, and the gentle wind passed over my entire body cautiously, as if it were shy. Once on my forehead, once on my fingertips, once on my knees…

The sight is dark and distant. In the meantime, the cries of birds that woke up in the evening are faintly fading away.

“…….”

The soft singing of the insects is a lullaby.

Geo fell asleep.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (3)

Episode 3 A famous auction house. “Huh…?” “Why, what’s going on?” “W-just now… this painting seems to have moved.” “How lame.” One of the managers snorted. “There’s no way an ordinary portrait would be up for auction at this place. It must have been an item from some dungeon.” “Ah…” “They say the place it was discovered was an art warehouse in an abandoned school, but since its origin is unknown, the price will be significantly lower. It’ll be out early in Part 1, so prepare in advance.” “Yes, sir.” Despite the reassuring words of his superior, the employee’s expression was not good. He looked at the portrait in front of him with a sense of unease. “……” Just now. I think our eyes met. “…I hope it’s not an item that inflicts a curse…” It must have already passed the safety inspection, but the world was wide and there were many items. It was thanks to its mystery that its origin and function were not properly revealed by the appraisal skill that it was able to come to this auction house, but because of that, the employee felt ominous. “Don’t horror movies usually start like this? Something ominous and the people around them who aren’t paying attention… It’s just like that.” He just hoped he wouldn’t be the first victim to die there. “Ugh, it’s scary.” “……” The ‘Portrait of Geo’ was silently watching him. He closed his eyes. * * * 31 years ago. Earth was destroyed. When that commonplace introduction became reality, all science fiction movies disappeared from Earth from that day on. People being dragged into another dimension and torn to pieces by unreasonable rules or monsters crawling out of gaps in pitch-black dimensions felt much more realistic than movies. “Crazy…!” “Excuse me, but are you filming a movie?” “Is it a movie, damn it?!” And then, as if they had been waiting, the superpowered people appeared. “Uh… Isn’t this a game window?” “Wow, that popped up for me too.” “What did it say? I was awakened as a priest?” “I don’t have anything like that… It just shows the skill list. But if you’re a priest, do you have a religion?” “Yes, I’m a Christian. Is that how it’s decided?” “I don’t know that either…?” They changed the map of the Earth. “Ah, damage…! What are you doing if you’re not dealing damage!!” “How can you deal damage when Hyung is blocking the front…!” “Are you kidding me?! Then the tank is blocking the front, not the back?!” “Wow, this attack is set…” “Huh…!” They hunted monsters as if they were really playing a game. This phenomenon, defined as ‘awakening,’ appeared randomly to some people, and no matter how much I studied it, there were no exact rules or standards. The only thing that those who were awakened had in common was that a system window popped up like they were playing a game. Of course, that doesn’t mean that hunting monsters was as easy as playing a game. “……” “…Hey, take care of the remains. Even if there’s no body, we should hold a funeral.” “Our team’s damage dealer disappeared… I’m losing energy. How old did you say he was?” “18 years old. I said with my own mouth that I want to go back to high school.” “Is the country going crazy to drag a kid who wants to study out of school?” “What can I do? If I just awaken, I can act like a 10-year-old...” “Well, if I’m an 18-year-old dealer, I’m a nobleman.” “……” “Shit.” The number of so-called ‘Awakened Ones’, ‘Hunters’ who hunt monsters, was always small, so it was difficult for them to escape ‘death from overwork.’ In the face of the changes taking place on a global scale, which was in the midst of a transitional period, individual lives were treated as mere numbers. However, the Republic of Korea was a country that quickly suppressed chaos around the world, centered around three heroes. In an instant, they built a foundation by going through upheaval after upheaval. “Honey, can you call me? Yerin awakened...” As a result, the citizens of the organized city began to feel relaxed. “The teachers told me that she awakened at kindergarten today.” [Huh? Yerin? Oh my… Does she have a job? What are her skills? [What rank?] “I don’t know, Yerin said she doesn’t have a job and her skill is D-rank. I think we’ll have to go to the center to find out for sure.” [Then let’s not make Yerin a hunter. Ask her what she wants to do, and if she says no, don’t make her a hunter.] “I thought that would be good too. Okay, thanks, I’ll hang up.” The name of the dimension became ‘Dungeon’, and the ‘Awakened’ who simply awakened their abilities and the ‘Hunters’ who had a job to hunt monsters were distinguished, and a system was established with guilds and centers. “Yeah, just because a child awakened doesn’t mean they have to be a hunter.” “Mom, do I catch monsters…? It’s scary… I don’t want to do that.” “No, it’s okay. Our Yerin doesn’t have to catch monsters.” At some point, the Awakened began to have different jobs. The Awakened, who had powers that were qualitatively different from those of ordinary people, had been under strict management by the country, but in just 31 years, after experiencing various incidents and changing the government dozens of times, the treatment of the Awakened improved. For those who awakened below C-class, the range of job choices was also much wider. “Wow, that person must be a Hunter.” “He’s definitely a Hunter because he’s wearing the guild emblem.” “Wow… Who is that? I’m seeing him for the first time. Is he a rookie? Have you seen him on TV?” “The black wings are really cool. Hey, that’s a real Hunter.” “I heard that flying skill is so rare….” “That person’s life is on fire.” And just like that, the admiration for Hunters grew even bigger. “I want to be a Hunter when I awaken.” “Hey, I don’t really do dangerous things.” “But it’s cool. They make a lot of money and are popular.” In the end, they were treated like some kind of celebrity. “……..” “Uh… Hey, hey, I guess you heard. Let’s go.” “I, I just did it because it was nice to see you. I’m sorry…” Whether the Hunters wanted it or not, that was the way the world went. “…Haa…” Some Hunters were tired of the excessive attention directed at them. “Are we soldiers or idols…? Why do we get so many requests to come up and take pictures? Are we going to dance on stage like this? In other countries, this kind of thing would be unthinkable.” “Last time, our new recruit came into our room as a sasaeng. Does that make sense? No, I'm not worried about the hunters getting their throats cut off. What the heck is this… Hunters are supposed to hunt monsters, not manage fans." "Popularity depends on popularity. Isn't this obstruction of business? You're worrying too much. I came here to catch monsters, not to show off in front of the public. Korea's perception of hunters is too shallow. This needs to change." There were also opposing opinions. "Huh, I like it. And as for the sasaengs… Are you looking down on celebrities?" "That's not what I meant." "Come on, let's not fight. It's better to be popular than not to be. I'm not advocating sasaengs or obstruction of business, but… If we organize things, there will be less inconveniences." "Yes, the association will take care of that part. If you find it inconvenient, you can file a complaint." In that way, the perception of hunters went beyond superpowered people, monsters, and soldiers to celebrities. As time passed, this perception became fixed, and at least for the people of the city, monsters and dungeons were reduced to the same level of disaster. This means that they were perceived as being on the same level as fires that firefighters could put out. And one of the three major guilds that emerged in South Korea. "Guild leader." "Yes, go ahead." "Even though we have a name like Collectors…" The third-ranked guild in Korea, 『Collectors』. "Isn't this a bit much?" "Isn't it too insulting to tell a collector not to collect?" "Do you know how much money you spent to buy this portrait?" "I'm buying my stuff with my own money, so why are you doing this?" The guild leader there, 'Collector' Bisabal. A middle-aged man smiled thinly. He looked like a polite gentleman, but his smile had an aftertaste that was somewhat unkempt. "This is a piece that even the association president coveted. What do you think? Isn't it surprising?" "Are you talking about the association president? That's definitely surprising." "A person whose hobby is nothing but raising monsters, let alone collecting, has called this piece 2000." "2000..." The 2000 mentioned here did not mean 20 million won, but 200 billion won. Even if it wasn't in the tens of billions, it was by no means a small amount. “…My appraisal skills are lacking, so I cannot know the true value of this piece. I apologize for my hasty judgment.” “The collector got scolded for collecting a lot, but of course that would be possible if he didn’t know the situation.” “Thank you for your understanding. Then what function does this portrait have?” “I don’t know either.” “That’s nonsense...” There are three major factors that are important when evaluating a hunter. A ‘job’ that allows you to intervene in the rules of the world just by existing. An ‘aptitude skill’ that is basically innate the moment you awaken like a stone grabber. A ‘level’ that tells you the proficiency of your job and all skills. If you want to hear about your specific job and other skills you can learn, you’ll need to get help from the center, but for now, the Hunter’s rank is comprehensively evaluated by these three and indicated by the so-called ‘system’. ‘And…’ Bisabal was a person who became an S-class Hunter with only one skill, ‘Appraisal’, which was his aptitude skill. ‘A work that someone like that couldn’t figure out? What kind of bad joke is this?’ The Collector simply smiled as if he was happy, as if he didn’t know the employee’s feelings of great embarrassment. “That’s why I want it even more.” The unique thing about ‘Collectors’, one of the three major guilds in Korea, was that all of its members had appraisal skills. And Bisabal, the leader of the guild, had appraisal skills that were so excellent that they could be said to be the best in the entire world. For Bisabal to have a work whose exact function was unknown. “I think I understand why the Chairman of the Association called it 2000.” It was even creepy. ‘… Maybe it’s because of my mood, but the atmosphere of the work is a bit heavy. Even though it’s just a portrait of one person…’ The office worker guild member nodded. “It seems like a piece more suited for study than appreciation.” “Isn’t that why the chairman coveted it so much? In the end, I won.” “If you’ve said everything you wanted to say, I’ll take my leave now. Getting involved in a whale fight isn’t my hobby.” “I don’t know how all our guild members are so chic.” “I think it’s the guild master’s karma for gathering such people.” “It’s sad.” The guild member left the office in disgust at Bisabal, who was smiling broadly without any sadness at all. He looked like he had come to deliver documents and had been mistreated. “…….” Bisabal, who was left alone, used his psychic powers to hold the portrait and headed to the elevator hidden in the office. “…….” The elevator, which was so narrow that only three people could fit on it, descended very deep. It was the warehouse of the ‘Collector’ guild, which the government had designated as a prohibited area. Only authorized employees or customers were allowed to enter. In short, it was a gallery just for Bisabal. “…….” The warehouse that had arrived like that. “Haaah….” Bisabal let out a sigh of overwhelming emotion. Bisabal’s large hand, which was tightly holding his entire lower body, bulged with joy and satisfaction. “Good.” His snake-like bright yellow eyes sparkled with fanatic obsession. Bisabal’s collection warehouse was his personal space. Instead of the guild members simply displaying the items they brought from dungeons or overseas, he, the guild master, personally purchased them and displayed them. Bisabal’s collection warehouse was filled with dangerous works and items. “Very good.” Bisabal, who could not give up his artwork, did his best to install all safety measures, and the government, which recognized his efforts and achievements, often entrusted him with problematic items. “This place would be good.” This ‘Portrait of Geo’ that Bisabal purchased this time was the same. Click. “Excellent.” It was a painting of a man. Pale skin that goes well with the blunt and gloomy impression. Black hair that doesn’t show any light. And yet, rather than being droopy and gloomy, the atmosphere is sharp and cool, and this restrained arrogance… . Even the peaceful forest scenery that goes well with him. “Who did he draw?” It was a portrait that made one wonder about both the artist who drew the picture and the model who became the work. “If this were just human skill, it would be amazing. Even if it wasn’t, it would be the same. It really seems to contain a living human being…” At that moment. “…….” “…….” The man in front of him. The pale portrait opened its eyes and looked at Bisabal. “…….” Bisabal held his breath. “…….” As if even his organs and muscles were captured by something huge, he couldn't say anything. "……." … What is this? 'What is this?' It was black. It was all black. It was a bottomless pit where the white and the black were divided, but the boundary was impossible to distinguish. The center was so deep that it was impossible to fathom. It was a shadow. And the night sky. And… . "……." Did it resemble the universe? 'Black.' Deep. Colorful. Like life where warmth and cold coexist. "……." The blood vessels and bonds of fate spread out inside. Bisabal unconsciously put his hand on the pitch-black eyes of the man in the painting… . "……." "……." Soon, the portrait. "…Oh." It closed its eyes. "Oh my." At that moment, Bisabal instinctively felt that he had hit an unexpected jackpot. "This isn't an ordinary painting, is it?" It felt really good. * * * "……." Meanwhile, the man in the painting, Geo, was nervous. "Hmm…." With a rare expression of disgust, he quietly stepped back and looked at the picture frame hanging on the tree. It was none other than the frame he had called the 'front door.' Geo muttered in frustration upon confirming that the only entrance was blocked. "For someone like me, it's an ordinary painting." He was a little desperate, to the point where he unconsciously made an excuse that no one would hear. '… Is this a threat to life? I thought it wouldn't happen in this peaceful cabin, but things in the world don't always go as planned. It really is a harsh world.' Before making the potion in earnest, Geo, who was trying to check out the outside world, noticed that his picture frame was being moved somewhere. He checked occasionally and it seemed to be up for auction. And the last place he arrived at was none other than a huge warehouse… . '… Or rather, should I call it a gallery or a museum?' Judging from the completely white building and the well-made interior, he could tell that only very carefully selected works were being exhibited. It seemed to be a gallery that received a lot of love from its owner. And the more he poured his love into it, the more troubled Geo became when his only front door was taken away. "Now I'm committing trespassing every time I go outside. Why did this happen to me, a model student who goes to bed early and wakes up early? Is it because I didn't brush my teeth last night?" Geo had already surprised an employee by saying that he would go outside for a bit. I've never died, but I still didn't want to be burned at the stake for being a haunted portrait. "If the portrait is ruined, I don't know what will happen to this world of paintings…" The Earth must have gotten stronger over the past 31 years. It was a world too harsh and rough for the timid and weak Gangwon-do-san potato Sergio to survive. "It's dangerous outside the blankets." Geo once again acknowledged his identity as a portrait and vowed to stay here. The very next day, when he thought he had to be more careful than before in order to survive in this harsh world, risking the honor of the haunted portrait. "Hello." "……." From beyond the wooden frame, the red-haired man I saw yesterday was leaning over. "Oh." It wasn't really meant to be discriminatory or degrading, but Geo's own cornea spoke objectively and without any selfish intentions. Those bright yellow eyes, resembling reptiles, were creepy. I don't know why, but they even sparkled. Why, really? But I didn't want to understand. It was too harsh a worry for Geo, who had come out of the yard, expecting only a refreshing morning. "Good morning, sir. I don't know if it's a good morning, a good afternoon, or a good evening, but it's a good morning for us humans. Did you sleep well, sir?" "……." "I think I was too rude yesterday. Do you have any intention of talking to me? What is your name? I think it's Geo, since you said 'Portrait of Geo' from what I can tell…." "……." "Sir? Are you listening? You keep opening and closing your eyes, which is very tantalizing for me, who is thirsty for conversation. You seem to have an excellent skill at manipulating people." Damn the gods of heaven and earth. 'Since this is the first person to talk to me in 31 years, something good will surely happen tomorrow. However, even considering that, a truly unacceptable misfortune has befallen me.' Modern society, this scary child. Geo hoped that the person on the other side of the picture frame would maintain an appropriate distance and give him the appropriate amount of attention. '… It's burdensome… .' Sergio, the potato, was simply intimidated by the man who didn't hide his vast energy. Of course, he was grateful that there was someone who talked to this loner. It didn't feel like 31 years, but it was still a long time since he had a chance to communicate. 'The fact that the other person seems quite friendly tells me that this is a good situation.' But still… "Teacher? Are you there? Teacher? If I came empty-handed, I can prepare whatever you want." "……." "Hmm, I guess I have to offer a sacrifice…. What kind of sacrifice do you usually get in this case? The most common cases would be a sinful human or a completely innocent human…. The latter is too hard to get…." "……." "I guess I'll have to contact the prison after a long time. In this day and age, saving a sinful human is a piece of cake. How many would it take?" Oh. 'It's hard.' Even as a mountain village idol, Geo was not prepared to communicate with this person.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (4)

Episode 4

Rustle… .

“…….”

Long, pale hands, caressing the finely dried flower petals in the color of azure.

It was Geo.

"hmm."

He was making medicine.

“It looks like it’s all dried up by now.”

It has been 11 days since the ripened Baibamnil flowers were dried on the leaves of the Dorong Dorong tree.

The flowers, dried out in the warm wind and sunlight, had almost no scent. It felt different from the strong scent that had flowed out when they were first boiled in water to remove the poison.

“If I put it back in water, will it smell?”

Sergio muttered softly and placed the dried flowers one by one in a sterilized glass bottle.

“I wonder if boiling this in tea would make a good medicine for stopping bleeding… No matter how I look at it, this is just flower tea.”

Geo's eyes turned to another tray. It was a tray where dried gourds were kept.

“…….”

In just 11 days, the dried goji berries, which were as dry as raisins, had strangely turned a deep yellow color.

“It seems like the longer I dry this, the stronger the scent becomes.”

In terms of the degree of fragrance, the goby fruit and the baibamenil were polar opposites. The goby fruit's fragrance became stronger as it dried, while the baibamenil's fragrance became weaker.

“…….”

Geo's eyes blinked twice quickly as he calculated what he had to do next.

“…It’ll still be a long time before it’s dry enough to be powdered.”

Dude, it's so moist.

“You deserve to be my colleague, a crispy-on-the-outside, soft-on-the-inside French fries.”

He coolly gave up the goji berries and took only the bibamnil with him and went into the hut.

The system explained that the herbal tea of Vivamnil is very helpful for hemostasis and immunity. It did not tell me exactly how much and at what temperature to take it.

'Do I think I can do it on my own? This guy called System seems to trust me too much, so I shouldn't do that. I'm just a potato from Gangwon-do...'

In that sense, Geo decided to try his hand at tea. Sergio, the wonderful potato, was also talented in tea ceremony.

"…hmm…."

Geo paused for a moment as he placed the glass bottle containing flowers on the table.

"……."

He stood there blankly, as if his computer was rebooting, then he opened his mouth.

“I don’t think there was any tea.”

Teapot.

Simply put, a teacup.

"yes?"

To put it more clearly, it means a teapot and teacups. Sergio, who was interested in gastronomy, knew a lot about tea and tea utensils.

First, we have a teapot for pouring tea leaves, a teacup for pouring the steeped tea, a cooling bowl for cooling the tea, and a discard bowl for pouring the tea and collecting only the scent. There were various types of tea utensils.

Among them, Geo decided to make only teapots and teacups.

“Let’s go to the studio.”

Luckily, Geo had the ability to turn his drawings into real objects.

“To have superpowers at this age… Even the most socially jaded adult can become a magical girl if they keep a childlike side of their heart.”

A 29-year-old man said.

“I am a nice potato.”

In the beautiful name of friendship, peace, and love, Geo honorably ignored the extraordinary changes in my life.

'The direction I go is the path.'

Even if it's a derailed roller coaster.

Perhaps out of consideration for him who lived so thoughtlessly, this world helped Geo in various ways. The structure of the cabin, its furniture, and its living arrangements were the same, and there was even a studio, reflecting Sergio’s taste as he continued to paint various works after becoming a teacher.

Geo went up to the second floor and headed to the workshop that took up half of that floor.

“Where should I look….”

He sat in front of an easel with a canvas on it. There were various paints and brushes in shapes familiar to Geo.

“What should I draw and how should I draw it?”

What Geo had to draw was a teapot. It was to hold a cup of vanilla-scented Vivamnil flower tea.

If the price is the same, it is called a red skirt. Since it doesn't cost more to draw it elaborately, Geo was quite absorbed in his thoughts.

“…….”

About 10 minutes passed like that. After a while, Geo, who was standing in front of the canvas, opened his mouth.

“…A car with a pretty color will come out.”

His unique, calm tone flowed out as if he was coaxing the students.

“I’d like white porcelain.”

What makes a good teapot? Geo, who had drunk tea with a serious mind several times before, knew the answer.

First, it must be pleasing to the eye.

“As white as a sheet of paper.”

Second, it has to be comfortable in your hand.

“So that there is stability….”

Third, it must be in harmony with the tea.

“I need to get a clean color.”

Although Geo is not a great craftsman, he is good enough to enjoy his own small world of gourmet food.

Since it was a precious flower tea that was made with so much effort, I wanted to use a good teapot to brew it.

“…….”

He chose a fine-grained white paint, a dense color like whipped cream.

The cabin's workshop was like an old pharmacy, with all sorts of materials hidden in small drawers. Among them were seashells that were as white as porcelain, which Geo ground up and made into paint.

Paint made from shells that should be on the water's edge. A pure white teacup painted with that paint. With that teacup, we are given sky-blue flower petals... .

"okay."

Good.

“It sounds good.”

I liked it.

“It will look just like a pond filled with the roots of a well. That will do.”

His hand moved.

And following that gesture, Geo's eyes moved as if licking the canvas.

“…….”

Since I'm going to make blue tea, I'd like the color to be warm rather than cool.

Warming up the body is affected by both actual and visual temperature. He wanted to drink warm tea.

“…….”

This teacup must have been made with hands as fine as silk.

She must have hummed and turned the potter's wheel on a leisurely spring day, moving her soft and slow hands so that not a single fingerprint would be left on the moist white soil.

The person who shaped the clay must have had a warm smile on his face that made the onlookers feel at ease.

“…….”

The handle is heavy and smooth, as it will be lifted with a light and affectionate heart. The handle, which extends sideways for easy grip, is like ivory. It gives off such a warm light.

The ends are rounded. The body is also rounded. The surface is so smooth that you can't find any sharp edges. They would have gently stroked the moist clay, cleaned up the inside, and baked it in a hot kiln.

What should I call you?

“…….”

You are a clean sheet of paper, without any lines or curves. That is good for making tea.

The glaze resembles clear stream water without any trace. It is as if it has been soaked in that clear water 100 times and then taken out, and the pure white porcelain is meticulously covered with a glossy glaze, as if transparent stars have been melted and covered.

My round teacup, baked in the kiln once more… .

“…….”

The moment when you draw a shadow and give it weight.

“…….”

Bam, right?

It falls on Geo's lap.

“…….”

Dalgrak.

Light and transparent sound.

‘It’s solid, but….’

He put down his brush and held the teapot in his hand. The feeling it gave on his palm was like a child searching for his father.

"okay."

So in the end, I really liked the fact that it was light like a cloud and soft like cotton.

* * *

It was really nice to be able to actually make the drawings.

'Convenient.'

Geo enjoyed his tea leisurely.

The teapot, made with paint instead of clay and glaze, satisfied Geo. It went very well with the blue tea water flowing gently from the Baibamnil.

'Because it is such a dense white color, it harmonizes well with the creamy, soft scent of flowers.'

The grip felt stable in the hand holding it. It seemed like there was no way I would miss it unless someone ran at me like a bull and kicked me with a soccer kick.

“Good.”

It was a tea that was not sweet at all, but the flavor was so blatantly sweet that I thought it would go well with cookies later.

'How about making iced tea with fruit and sugar? Or it would go really well with milk tea, it has a strong creamy flavor… .'

I don't have an oven, but I do have a stove and some flour in the warehouse, so I'll try making cookies someday. As the old saying goes, the more you eat, the better.

'It doesn't sound plausible that this helps with hemostasis and immunity.'

Geo looked a little puzzled.

“Has my body changed?”

Sergio was originally a person who saw great effects from the effects of food he took in through his mouth.

It is widely known that blueberries are good for the eyes, but unlike some people who don't notice much of a difference when they eat them, Sergio felt his eyes refreshed after eating just a few.

But even though I drink the herbal tea recognized by the system, I don’t feel any change… .

“…….”

Geo blinked twice.

'If we're going to be that picky, then we should start by saying that this body, which has no menstrual symptoms at all, is strange.'

Geo stopped before he could even enter the 'ㄱ' of worry. The wonderful potato understood perfectly on his own.

He was able to eat and sleep, but he was neither cold nor hot to any great degree. He never sweated, and for the same reason he never had to rely on the toilet, regardless of whether there was a toilet in the cabin.

'Let's say I've evolved to a remarkable degree. I don't know what I'm worrying about when I've become a possessed portrait.'

Of course, it's okay because it's funny.

Thinking like that, Geo took another sip of his Baibamnilcha.

“…….”

It was delicious.

"teacher?"

“…….”

“There’s no answer today either. It’s really sad. Aren’t you bored when you’re alone in there? I could really give you some good company to talk to….”

“…….”

“Teacher, are you sleeping? Knock knock? Are you not responding because it’s in Korean? No, you’re not responding in any of the 27 languages….”

It's delicious and looks like it'll be good on its own.

'Then that person will go down in history as the only human being who caused a possessed portrait to vomit while drinking tea.'

It's been 11 days since a gentleman named Visabal started promoting himself in front of the front door.

'The world in the painting may not be accurate because time passes on its own according to my mood or schedule, but anyway… .'

It was amazing to see so much passion and sincerity put into a portrait that only made eye contact for a moment.

“Are you a person who is obsessed with ghost stories?”

It may be exciting to see a magical painting that opens its eyes on its own. That's the charm of a haunted portrait.

But the fact that this man named Bisabal was not such an easygoing person pushed Geo into a world of fear and delusion.

“I heard he’s the chairman of one of the top three conglomerates in South Korea….”

Mr. Chairman, what are you doing instead of working?

The warehouse where Geo's portrait hangs is Bisabal's personal gallery, and he has a great desire to collect works of art... I could tell from the conversations with other employees who often visit the gallery.

Perhaps because there are so many items, this large gallery is not something that can be managed by Bisabal alone, so he said he has no choice but to have at least one manager per piece.

'I also had managers assigned to me, although for some reason they kept changing.'

Thanks to their conversation, I was able to find out a few things about Visaval.

'A guy who is crazy about collecting.'

They say he's usually a gentleman with a playful side and a normal sensibility, but when it comes to art, he becomes a crazy man who doesn't care about the means and methods.

'It's harmful.'

Still, Geo didn't have any ill feelings toward the person named Bisabal.

“…….”

Geo's gaze fell on the picture frame hanging on the tree.

The moment he saw Bisabal trying to have another conversation outside, information that only Geo could see popped up on the smooth glass of the frame.

He blinked twice.

Safety ★★★★☆

“…….”

Amazingly, the frame measured the danger level of the creature lurking beyond the portrait.

Judging by the reactions of the people on the other side, it seemed like only Geo could see that sign.

“Teacher? Teacher? Are you sure you don’t want to have a conversation with me?”

“…….”

“If you tell me what kind of sacrifice you want, I can catch it alive and bring it to you. Sir?”

So there was no particular reason for Geo to leave Bisabal in that state.

'I can already see a future that I can't handle just by talking to it once.'

It was obviously burdensome. Geo was not a vessel that could contain a human named Bisabal.

‘Gangwon-do potatoes must be handled with care so as not to get bruised…’

Although his speech was quite polite and his actions were noble, meeting someone for the first time and standing in front of someone else's house for 15 hours was burdensome, no matter what anyone said.

“…….”

I don't feel any ill will towards him and he doesn't seem like a bad person, so I don't really dislike him.

“…I feel a little reluctant.”

Even if you just listen one-sidedly, it's already tiring.

'The energy will be sucked out.'

Just Geo.

“…….”

All we had to do was wait until it was deemed possible to have a conversation.

'Surely he can't keep doing that forever. Let's try to exchange energy when that guy is discharged.'

I didn't want to rush for no reason.

'dread.'

Geo nodded, knowing that he could avoid that scary person.

“It’s a really nice place to live.”

Geo, who had already been outside the portrait several times, knew that now, the only thing people would see would be a portrait of Geo himself.

The important thing was Geo's own will. When he had the will to interact with the outside world, the 'Geo' in the picture opened his eyes. This was something I found out after installing a mirror in the abandoned school.

'So no matter how relaxed I am inside, it's not visible from the outside.'

Here, Geo's complete freedom was guaranteed. He could enjoy such peaceful rest without any problems, whether it was the CEO of a large corporation or Nabal waiting outside for his answer.

Fortunately, Geo was able to enjoy complete peace after the busy red-haired man, who was expected to be the CEO of a large corporation, disappeared, foreshadowing another challenge.

“…….”

I'm glad to hear you talking like that, so I just leave you alone... .

“…I can’t just leave my only front door like this.”

I had to get my ownership back.

After a moment of hesitation, his gaze turned to the outside of the frame where no sign of life could be detected.

“…….”

Finally, Geo's mouth opened.

“Should we go out?”

It was a sad fate for Geo to automatically commit trespassing as soon as he stepped out the front door, but like all adults in the world, he eventually accepted his fate.

As people live, there are times when they may commit trespassing.

“…….”

This side was also kidnapped, so it was a two-way street.

I wonder if anyone would ask for the opinion of a portrait artist before buying one, but anyway, they hung him in the gallery without asking for Geo's consent.

Then there would also be a violation of portrait rights.

“…Ttaran.”

Geo's ultimate positive mind has successfully rationalized itself.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (5)

Episode 5

One day, a strange rumor began to circulate.

“There are ghosts.”

One of the curators, who was about to head down to the basement, frowned at his colleague's words.

"…yes?"

“There’s a gallery on the 5th basement floor.”

“Oh, yes. I know.”

I couldn't not know.

“The new work I’m working on this time is also located on the 5th basement floor.”

The gallery of the collector was only open to about 300 curators, including the owner, Guildmaster Bisabal, and guests who visited to purchase works.

The gallery has a total of five floors. Each floor has a different type and form of artwork, and among them, the last fifth floor has only the artworks that Bisabal loves the most.

By the way, the affection and risk of the work of art were proportional. That was the meaning behind the fact that the work that the curator was in charge of this time was on the 5th floor.

“What happened on the fifth floor? It’s a high-risk floor, so it’s strictly managed.”

A colleague answered that question.

“I told you before. There’s a ghost.”

“…It’s not like I’ve never heard that rumor before. What I meant was, what incident or incident did that rumor originate from?”

The curator smiled awkwardly and cleared his throat naturally, perhaps out of habit.

“How many ghost incidents have there been in this gallery so far?”

The Bisabul Gallery, which houses all kinds of bizarre and beautiful works of art from around the world, has had a history of accidents.

Since Visabal collected everything that was considered 'art', he didn't care if their true identity was actually monsters.

And most of the ghost incidents that have occurred in this gallery so far have been caused by monsters.

“What kind of monster is it? Since you said it’s a ghost, I think it’s closer to a humanoid.”

“They said I was human.”

“I don’t understand even more. Are you saying that a humanoid monster has entered our gallery?”

In this situation, it is only natural that only humanoid monsters existed to the extent of being evaluated as 'human'.

“Why would such a dangerous monster be in a gallery like this instead of a dungeon? Especially if it’s a humanoid, it would be highly intelligent and have strong pride.”

Humanoid monsters are not only rare, but they also have higher than average intelligence and a strong hatred for anything outside the dungeon.

Humanoid monsters with both intelligence and brute force usually reigned over their dungeons and toyed with visiting hunters.

“If that’s true, why is the guild building so quiet? They would have run out a long time ago and killed everyone….”

“That’s why it’s strange. Every situation we can figure out is contradictory.”

A fellow employee continued speaking.

“We’ve already received 17 complaints.”

“17 times?”

Curator Yoo Seong-un first heard rumors about the 'ghost' two weeks ago.

If 17 complaints were filed in just two weeks, it would be difficult to treat them as mere rumors.

“That’s quite frequent. If it’s that frequent, I don’t think it’s just a rumor.”

“The personnel department is controlling the information. As you know, it would be bad if rumors spread outside that there was a problem in the guild master’s gallery.”

“That’s true. If there’s a problem with the collector who is in charge of the finances of the Republic of Korea, it’s something that the president should rush to immediately.”

“I can’t laugh because it doesn’t seem like a joke. Fortunately, the scale of the incident itself was small, so it wasn’t difficult to control.”

The HR employee who said that immediately sighed.

“But if you are filing a formal complaint with me, it means that it is not something that can be ignored.”

“It’s surprising that complaints came in, even though curators aren’t such easy hunters….”

“They decided that they couldn’t handle it on their own.”

“This is a little difficult.”

Unlike ordinary curators, curators with hunter qualifications are highly knowledgeable. Even if they are not very strong, their ability to appraise and respond to monsters and items is far superior to that of ordinary hunters.

Among them, Visabal hired some of the best talents in the world. The fact that these talents were unable to resolve the issue themselves and instead filed a complaint to the staff member in front of them and the HR manager meant that this incident was not easy.

“…This is really….”

At this point, Curator Yoo Seong-un seemed to know why the HR department had called him.

“What should I do?”

“I’m sorry, you must be busy already.”

“No, because if something happens, I have a duty to respond.”

He was a staff member whose abilities were recognized even among the curators directly employed by Visabal. He was already an A-class hunter, and he also had countless qualifications related to alchemy and barriers.

Such a meteor was often called upon when additional work arose. It was a familiar pattern for him to take on tasks in this way.

“You are trustworthy.”

The HR colleague continued speaking with his characteristically cold expression.

“I would appreciate it if Mr. Yoo Seong-un could take charge of the administrative affairs.”

“I appreciate your kind words, but I still feel like that’s a bit….”

Yoo Seong-un shook his head.

“Isn’t it strange that someone who was a researcher at the association is now in charge of general affairs?”

“I remember that he was not just a researcher, but a research team leader.”

“Yeah, that’s right. I got a lot of stares when I left the association. I don’t want to stand out.”

“If that’s true, I won’t force you any further.”

“Yes, thank you very much.”

Yoo Seong-un asked, scratching his neck.

“Anyway, if it’s the 17th time, doesn’t that mean the monsters have no intention of hiding their true selves?”

“…….”

“If it was a monster with such great concealment that it passed our guild’s inspection and was safely displayed in the gallery, it could have hidden itself without any problems.”

The human resources employee nodded as if he had been waiting for that.

“I was just about to tell you some information about this ghost.”

“That’s good news.”

“Well, it’s a strange phenomenon that has been witnessed 17 times. We can’t be negligent in gathering information.”

The employee continued speaking.

“Thanks to the other curators, who are not as capable as Seong-un, I was fortunate enough to hear many stories about ghosts.”

The human resources staff handed the documents over to Yoo Seong-woon.

“You’ll understand if you read it….”

“Do you have any pictures?”

“Illustrations were added based on eyewitness accounts.”

“Hmm.”

As Yoo Seong-un looked at the illustration, the HR employee explained.

“In all 17 sightings, the ghost’s clothing did not change. It was wearing a large black cloak that covered its face and body, and its inner clothing was said to be a black shirt and suit. It was about 188cm tall, quite large for a humanoid.”

“Then, are you a bit stocky?”

“Because of the large cape, it was impossible to confirm the details, but most people said that at least he wasn’t skinny. But he was never evaluated as being bulky.”

“If the inside couldn’t be confirmed to that extent, then no one would know if it was truly humanoid. It could be an undead type. Why did you decide it was a humanoid monster?”

“There was only one curator who saw my face.”

"oh."

“Let me describe it….”

The human resources officer continued speaking.

“They said he was handsome. He was a curator with a high standard.”

“…….”

“…It may sound absurd, but if someone who examines the appearance of the opposite sex very closely says that someone is handsome, then their facial features must be really distinct and well-organized. And we define that as a human being.”

“No… he’s handsome and tall, what are his special features?”

Yoo Seong-un asked with a trembling expression.

“Hair color, eye shape, skin condition, moles… characteristics like that. I don’t think any facial illustrations were included, but was there no testimony about this?”

“Unfortunately, the curator said that he couldn’t properly identify the features because he only saw it for a short while. However, he said that he thought ‘he’s handsome’ in that split second, but that thought came to him only after he ran away and regained his senses, so I have nothing to say about his external features.”

The agent added.

“For some reason, everyone says that it’s hard for them to make eye contact. That’s why it’s hard for me to talk about facial features. If you can’t see their eyes, then of course you can’t know what their face looks like.”

“There may be a skill related to the eyes, or maybe that part is the main body. Then what about parts other than the face, like the hands or feet?”

“Fortunately, I think I can tell you that.”

The human resources officer nodded.

“It is said that his skin was extremely pale. He had white skin, as if he had never been exposed to sunlight, and he stood out especially in the completely black attire.”

“Is that so? Then it might be a monster with a story… It might have flowed in from some dungeon.”

“And he said she was barefoot.”

“Is it so as not to make noise?”

The personnel department employee firmly denied Yoo Seong-un's muttering.

“That’s not it.”

“Why are you so sure?”

“‘When the ghost walked, there was no sound.’ All 17 curators testified in unison. Even if they were barefoot, there would have been a sound, so there was no need to take off their shoes.”

“Then not making any noise when walking is just a characteristic of the monster.”

In this case, there are usually two things.

'Either it's a monster with a skill that can hide its sound, or it's a monster that's so light that it doesn't make any sound at all…'

Since you said that it was judged to be humanoid, it was likely the former case.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un immediately frowned.

“Did you report it to the guild master? If it really is a humanoid monster, it would be newsworthy, if not research material.”

“I already reported this matter to you, but you only told me to check it internally and not to let anyone know about it. You said you didn’t want the Hunter Association to take it as research material.”

“…I understand what you mean. If you’re the guild leader, you can do that.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded. The words, ‘What if someone dies?’ did not come out.

In today's world, the lives of people who die on the job are treated like rocks on the side of the road.

'Since Bisabal is a person who cares for his employees very much, we can believe that he took action in that regard. He's not the type of boss who would order someone to do something dangerous without thinking...'

Then the HR person said.

“Starting next week, we will begin safety reinforcement training for curators. All trainees will be given an artifact, so Mr. Yoo Seong-un, please make sure to receive one.”

"aha."

Indeed. I understand.

“As expected, our guild works really hard. They even know how to protect people’s lives.”

“Thank you for your kind words. These are all instructions from the guild master.”

The human resources staff continued the explanation.

“The first ghost sighting was 15 days ago, at 4:32 a.m.”

“It’s 4 in the morning, so there aren’t many people. Our gallery, which doesn’t open day or night, is also quiet and empty.”

“That’s right. That’s one of the characteristics of this ghost. I don’t know if it’s because it’s conscious of people’s gaze or if it has some kind of condition, but it usually insists on going at dawn when not many employees visit.”

“It sounds like you’re either timid or clever, one of the two….”

Yoo Seong-woon tilted his head as he handed over the documents. The information that should have been there was not organized. It didn’t seem to have been accidentally omitted.

“…there were no casualties.”

It didn't look like a humanoid monster.

“…….”

No, it just didn't look like a monster.

'… Even if humanoid monsters are very good at trickery, it is definitely a special case for them to just watch people for two weeks. Even if they used a different mental skill and then exploded like a bomb, there is no way this guild with tight security wouldn't know about it.'

If that's true, then this 'ghost' really has been watching people for two whole weeks.

“There can’t be a monster without hostility, right?”

Yoo Seong-un, who was once a researcher at the association, knew how great the monsters’ hostility towards life on Earth was. It was a level that even the most intelligent humanoid monsters could not bear.

Even if that were possible, monsters had no knowledge or understanding of humans. Even if they approached humans with good intentions, it would never have a positive effect.

'Is this why you were evaluated as a ghost?'

At least ghosts would have a high level of understanding of humans.

As Yoo Seong-un thought so, he heard the employee's explanation.

“The locations being seen are getting closer and closer to the ground as time goes on.”

"…hmm…."

“Starting from the first sighting, it hovered around the 5th basement level for a total of 7 times. The next 4 times were on the 4th floor. The next 2 times were on the 3rd floor. Twice more were on the 2nd floor. Once again, it was seen on the 1st floor. It went up one floor at a time.”

“…Isn’t that a bit dangerous?”

“But the last sighting, the 17th sighting, was set on the 5th basement floor.”

“Oh, you went back again?”

“After that, there were no more sightings for five days.”

"then…."

“It looks like the exploration is over.”

“My head hurts.”

Finding a monster that had already hidden in its own home was even more difficult.

“Are there any other special features? Like their behavior? Usually, these types of monsters set their own rules and try to force other humans into that mold. In addition, if they are humanoid, I think they would have even more personal rules.”

The employee nodded.

“As you said, there was something unusual.”

“What is that?”

“He said he would give me a gift.”

“…….”

I don't think I've lived that long, but I've heard that monsters give me gifts.

'… Although the works in the gallery often behave in that way, it becomes a bit difficult to define this guy as a simple monster if we are to be exact… .

Yoo Seong-un, who had gathered his thoughts, asked again.

“…A gift, you mean?”

“…….”

The employee made a subtle expression as if he sympathized with Yoo Seong-un's voice full of distrust, then coughed once and returned to a blank expression.

The staff continued their explanation.

“It is said that when you first encounter a ghost, he approaches you pretending to be human.”

“Who would believe that….”

“Maybe he really believes he is human. Anyway, the next thing he does is ask the employee he meets to talk to him. What is his name? How old is he? What do he do? Where is this place? Why are you here?”

“…….”

“The content is mostly routine and nothing special. They don’t ask for deep personal information, and if you are reluctant to reveal your identity, they don’t ask any more. If you successfully finish the conversation, the ghost will give you a gift.”

The HR staff member motioned for him to hand over the documents. As Yoo Seong-woon handed over the documents with a trembling face, he saw pictures of the 'gifts' the employees had received.

“…This is….”

“Yes, as you can see, it is food.”

“What kind of domestic monsters are these?”

The photo showed a selection of bite-sized snacks, including cookies, chocolates, and candies.

Looking at the neat and simple packaging, no matter how much I thought about it, it was definitely handmade. A homemade snack made by a monster, if it was published in the news, it would be something that would be criticized and called a joke.

“Have you tried analyzing the ingredients?”

“We carried out the test by order of the guild leader, and the test results came out a week ago.”

“Poison or something….”

“No, on the contrary, it was medicine. It was something like an anemia medicine, a digestive medicine, an analgesic, an antipyretic, and an antidiarrheal medicine.”

“…….”

“The research team couldn’t figure out how ordinary cookies and chocolates could have such medicinal properties. They tasted and were made up of ordinary snacks.”

Yoo Seong-un asked, shaking the documents.

“Then how did you detect the ingredient effect?”

“As you know, with the full support of the guild leader….”

“Did you bring me back from prison again? After all, that place is the cleanest.”

“Because it’s a place full of useful test subjects.”

“That’s true. But the research was done quickly even with the help of the prison?”

“I don’t know why, but the guild leader happened to have some prisoners prepared.”

In an era where even the lives of innocent workers were treated like rocks, criminals had no human rights.

The head of the collector's guild was someone who was very good at making use of such things, so I had a rough idea that he probably used such a criminal for this experiment as well.

The human resources officer continued speaking.

“What’s even more surprising is that the gift was just the right medicine for the employee.”

“…Are you saying that you gave snacks containing digestive ingredients to employees who were sick, and snacks containing fever-reducing ingredients to employees who had a fever?”

“That's correct.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un swept his face.

“It’s said that there are emotional skills that can be used against living beings, so it must be quite high-ranking.”

“They’re a headache, because they’re showing favor to us.”

“It’s easier to just be a monster that’s causing a ruckus. This one can’t be subdued or appeased.”

Yoo Seong-un let out a long sigh and nodded as if he had accepted his fate of soon being given additional work.

“I’ll take care of it. I’m an expert in this area.”

“Thank you. And I have one thing to tell you….”

“What is it?”

“The date when the incident started.”

“This is ominous.”

“It happened after the guild leader exhibited ‘Geo’s Portrait’ in the gallery.”

"…ah…."

The personnel department employee looked at Yoo Seong-un with pity at his elasticity.

“…….”

“…….”

That would be the case, as ‘Portrait of Geo’ was a new work that Yoo Seong-un was in charge of.

“…Working overtime again?”

I couldn't help but laugh out loud.

"cheer up."

“That’s right.”

I'm already tired.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (6)

Episode 6

A pure white gallery.

Pure white lighting.

“…….”

A man in black alone among the works that sparkle in the light.

‘… came out.’

Yoo Seong-woon, who was hiding in the gallery at the request of the HR staff, stared at the 'ghost' while hiding his presence.

Whether it was luck or bad luck, on the very day he received the request, Yoo Seong-un was able to confirm the identity of the person rumored. As he had heard before, it was a tall man wearing a pitch-black cloak covering his entire body.

‘I can’t even hear footsteps.’

The rumored 'ghost' was barefoot.

'Even though I'm barefoot, it's strange that it's this quiet.'

But it wasn't like there was no sound at all.

‘It seems that the curators up until now didn’t have hearing enhancement skills so they couldn’t hear it… .’

Yoo Seong-un closed his eyes.

“…….”

Fall, fall.

Pass… .

“…….”

very.

It's a very light noise.

‘… This is… .’

He opened his eyes again.

‘…It sounds like plants hitting each other.’

It's a strange metaphor, but that's how it was decided.

It was like a light vine or a dry flower petal that weighed less than 1g being puffed up and rolled around. That faint and hollow sound was not a noise suitable for a man who was 188cm tall.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un continued to observe, hiding between the artwork and the pillar.

‘…I am appreciating it.’

The 'ghost' wandered around the empty gallery, occasionally stopping in front of works protected by glass walls. He spent a particularly long time in front of sculptures and paintings.

What was surprising was that he was really just 'watching'.

'Since there are so many dangerous items, if you touch just one, there will be chaos, but thankfully that doesn't happen. It seems to be a highly intelligent type of monster, but it is indeed a special case.'

That doesn't mean I don't appreciate other forms of art.

'Are they interested in art, or are they just doing it to kill time… or are they just looking for a usable item?'

The 'ghost's' behavior as he walked through the gallery with his back to his chest like a nobleman or an educated soldier was somehow weighty and restrained.

It was almost as if he was the owner of this place, but out of nowhere, Yoo Seong-un remembered a story about a vampire from a certain castle.

'Vampire Count... a bit childish.'

Considering the pale skin like a corpse and the inhuman presence, it seemed like a pretty good match.

The black cloak that had been wandering around the gallery for a while… .

"…ah."

I stared straight at the hidden meteor cloud.

“…….”

The gaze.

We ran into each other.

“…….”

“…….”

black eye.

At that moment, Yoo Seong-un felt dizzy.

‘… That’s… .’

What is that?

'It's black.'

It was too dark.

But it was bright.

It seemed warm but was cold, it seemed empty but was heavy.

Even though it was clearly a long distance away, I couldn't take my eyes off of it enough to see the blood vessels in its eyes.

No, it might not have been blood vessels. The thin, elegant branches made of gold and silver were vast, like a forest. The black center, where the pupils were not distinct, was dark enough to make one fear.

It was so huge. So huge that it was too deep for human perception to handle. It took my breath away. I felt anger and awe without any basis.

There was a power in it that made one stop breathing without even trying to choke on one’s breath. Without hiding, without showing off, just standing there… .

existed.

“…….”

“…….”

Two blinks.

“…….”

Parsley… .

With a faint noise, the cloak moved.

“…….”

A little bit away.

Further away from there.

Any sign of it stopping further away soon disappears.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un moved his feet.

The place where the sound disappeared was none other than in front of ‘Geo’s Portrait’.

“…….”

… Are you trying to act coy?

It had its eyes closed as if nothing had happened.

“This is driving me crazy.”

Day 1, complete.

* * *

Even in a world with supernatural powers, not everything about 'ghosts' is explained. This can be seen from the fact that the profession of shaman still exists.

So it was difficult to explain the moving portrait.

“…….”

“…….”

4:29 a.m.

The portrait opened its eyes.

"…ah."

Yoo Seong-un let out an exclamation without realizing it.

The gloomy looking man, 'Geo', opened his mouth.

"hello."

“…….”

"good morning."

“It’s morning….”

At those words, Yoo Seong-un looked at the background of the portrait.

“…….”

Oh, indeed.

It was a forest with bright sunlight.

“…It’s dawn here, though.”

"okay."

The eyes of 'Geo' who said that contained the gallery of Bisabal.

“I didn’t know it was dawn because it was always lit by white lights.”

His voice, which felt somewhat awkward, was more blunt than I had imagined. He was clearly talking, and Yoo Seong-un was listening, but for some reason, I couldn't shake the thought that it was 'quiet.'

What should I call this sense of alienation? I couldn't say it was like a machine. Rather, it was a bit more… .

“I apologize.”

“…You don’t have to apologize for that.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

The steady tone, as if he knew what he was going to say next. The clear voice, as if there was a set input word, was strangely easy on the ears.

“But I was surprised.”

“What are you talking about?”

“It is rare to find someone who does not get scared when they see a talking portrait.”

“…….”

There was no emotion in his calm voice and blunt face. It wasn't much of a reaction to say he was surprised.

'Lies are immature.'

Or maybe he just didn't feel the need to lie skillfully. But that gloomy, hardened face didn't seem like it could act flexibly.

While I was thinking like that, the portrait asked me again.

“What is your name?”

"I am…."

Even though Yoo Seong-un is an insignificant human, the power that Jinmyeong possesses is dangerous anywhere.

'They say that in all contracts in the world that bind souls, the most important thing is each other's names.'

So this portrait, 'Portrait of Geo', could have made a strange contract after hearing the name of Yoo Seong-un. Names were such an important concept to strange beings from all cultures.

But he answered obediently.

“It’s a meteor.”

The 17 employees had never been disadvantaged by telling the portrait their names. Now, since it was against the rules to do something bad to Yoo Seong-un, they could tell him this much.

The portrait still had a blunt face even when he heard his name. Even though he was leading the conversation, the portrait didn't seem to feel much emotion.

Wouldn't it be strange if that were considered arrogant?

“I see, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“…….”

“This is a face that has a question for me.”

“That’s true.”

“Would you like to talk to me?”

I was invited to talk.

'It's the same train as the previous 17 people.'

Yoo Seong-un felt a strange weight.

'It must be the weight of the rules.'

It was so dense that it was difficult to wriggle around in, but at the same time it wasn't so heavy that your feet would sink into the mud.

This air and this feeling was like a giant whale regulating the waves to take care of a mere human floating in the sea.

“…….”

okay.

This is 'consideration'.

“…Then I would like to ask a question.”

Since he had come this far, he could not back down, so Yoo Seong-un decided to have a conversation as the portrait said.

“Can you come out of that portrait?”

“Yes, you can go out.”

“…….”

Monsters hate humans. I thought he would be a little worried since he was asking about his own information, but his answer was unexpectedly quick.

Perhaps it was obvious that he was flustered at that part. 'Geo', who was staring at the meteor cloud without blinking, pointed it out.

“You look embarrassed.”

“I didn’t think you would say something like this… so obediently.”

“There was no reason not to tell you.”

“Why?”

“Because you asked.”

“What if I asked with impure intentions?”

“That’s a lie.”

The portrait spoke in a low, soft, but clear and firm voice.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un is a kind and polite person.”

"…I?"

“That’s why I spoke up.”

“…….”

“Is this a sufficient answer to your question?”

Yoo Seong-un decided to be careful.

'This portrait is sensitive to good and evil.'

And, although I don't know what the criteria is, I also have the ability to distinguish between good and evil in others. I can categorize people I've never talked to before.

'In this case, if a person judged to be evil speaks to this portrait… will it simply ignore it?'

Or should I attack?

“…….”

“Do you have any questions?”

“Ah… right.”

Yoo Seong-un asked, recalling the recent 'ghost incident'.

“The black cloak I saw yesterday was ‘Geo’, is that you?”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“Then, the ‘ghost’ wearing a pitch-black cloak and handing out delicious gifts that has been wandering around this gallery these days is you… Is that what I’m thinking?”

“…….”

What are you thinking about? 'Geo' blinked twice and muttered.

“It’s a ghost.”

“…I’m sorry if I offended you.”

“No, the talking portrait is definitely haunted.”

The portraitist continued speaking in his characteristically gruff voice.

“But I have never died.”

“…….”

“Still, I think I am the ‘ghost’ that Mr. Yoo Seong-un was talking about.”

“…is there a reason you were wandering around the gallery?”

“I was wondering where I was now.”

His voice was very calm and soft. It was hard to imagine that he was interested in anything.

“It was interesting because there were rare pieces on display.”

“…….”

“I was curious about what kind of place this gallery was, what kind of people worked here, what kind of lives they lived, what names they had, and what kind of tastes they had.”

Although the tone was still dry, his answer was truly monster-like in that it was interested in human lifestyles.

'No… I'm not sure, but maybe it's not a monster.'

In that case, things get more complicated.

"……."

"When you're alone, you tend to look for someone to talk to."

Geo's pitch-black eyes landed on Yoo Seong-un, as if he was trying to convey something. It was an artificial movement of gaze, as if he was trying to convey, 'I am looking at you.'

"Even more so for a polite person like you."

"I guess you like polite people?"

"At least I figured the staff who run this gallery would be a better conversation partner than the red-faced leader here."

"If you're talking about the leader… um, are you talking about the leader of the Bisabal guild?"

"He is a talkative person."

The portrait's eyes narrowed slightly. It was a subtle change that was hard to notice, but its meaning was clear.

"You talk so much, it's hard to respond."

"……."

Ah, guild master.

'You looked ugly.'

So that person was not able to have a conversation.

All the curators on the fifth basement floor knew that Bisabal was very interested in 'Portrait of Geo'. He often talked to 'Portrait of Geo', saying that it was a really special portrait.

‘But why didn’t that person say anything about this portrait?’

I knew that 'Geo's Portrait' could speak and move, but I had never actually had a conversation with 'Geo'.

Because 'Geo' judged the visa to be rude, he deliberately did not respond to his conversation.

'You reap what you sow.'

I knew I would suffer losses if I lived like that. Honestly, I think that person deserves to suffer some losses, but anyway.

Yoo Seong-un, who had gathered his thoughts, bowed his head politely.

"sorry."

“…….”

“I would like to apologize on behalf of our guild leader.”

His role is to manage the works here.

Among those works, there were many that had an ego, like 'Portrait of Geo'. In particular, there was no good in going against the rules of 'Geo', who was assumed to be a humanoid monster.

'More than anything, it seems like you're sensitive to manners.'

Fortunately, the expression in the portrait was still grim. It was neither happy nor angry. It was still gloomy and pale, but it was stiff and did not show any discomfort.

As expected, the portrait spoke in a calm voice.

"it's okay."

“Our guild leader is a bit of an odd person.”

“He didn’t seem like a bad person, so I’m okay with it.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un remembered additionally.

'If they are not evil, I will not be hostile even if they are rude.'

Even as I thought that, I felt breathless. It was because I couldn't carelessly judge my opponent's abilities.

'So the guild leader of the Visabal has the emotional skills to judge good and evil? He's a monster that's hard to handle in many ways. It'd be hard to find emotional skills like that anywhere in the world.'

No, to begin with, I wonder if it is even possible to define a being with such ‘eyes’ as a monster… .

“…….”

“…….”

After a brief silence, the portrait opened its mouth again.

“Do you have any questions?”

“…your bluntness astonishes me, Geo.”

“I was just being polite.”

“It’s just manners.”

“Shouldn’t a human being be polite?”

That aspect is what makes it seem inhuman.

'Usually people don't follow manners that meticulously.'

Rather, it felt like monsters who had only a vague idea of human life were awkwardly imitating it, and it felt a bit too thorough.

While Yoo Seong-un was a little tired, the portrait continued talking about a different topic.

“This is my first time seeing Mr. Yoo Seong-un. Is that right?”

“That’s right. The head of the Visabal Guild said he no longer had time to manage your portraits, and the previous curators were assigned to other works. So I took over the job.”

“Thank you for taking the time to organize the portraits so neatly. I wanted to say hello to the previous people, but I wasn’t ready. I’m grateful again for their contributions as well.”

“It’s their job to take care of the work, so don’t be thankful. But I’ll let them know that you were grateful.”

But something just occurred to me.

“…Can you tell what people outside are doing even when your eyes are closed? Were you constantly observing this side from inside that portrait?”

To his question, 'Geo' answered with a blunt face that showed no clue as to what he was thinking.

“You are in the frame, so I can only look.”

“…….”

“Moving pictures are interesting.”

“…Is that so?”

For some reason.

It was a little creepy.

'Is the picture not of oneself, but of people outside of oneself?'

Even Yoo Seong-un himself couldn't figure out exactly what part was creepy.

If the portrait is true, then 'Geo' sees everything outside the painting as a painting. Even though to us, the painting is 'Geo's portrait'.

In that picture, we are… .

“…….”

It's a picture.

“Is this a sufficient answer?”

"…yes."

As expected, this is a dangerous entity.

"maybe."

Day 2, complete.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (7)

Episode 7

After finishing the third day, Yoo Seong-un confirmed that the portrait had closed its eyes.

“…….”

He went to see the guild leader at 9 o'clock in the morning.

“It’s dangerous.”

“What’s dangerous?”

“That portrait is dangerous.”

He reported with a calm face.

“The portrait has nothing to do with the favor the individual has for us humans. It is true that there are rare monsters that are friendly to humans, but it is also true that their favor has been a great poison to humans.”

“Are you trying to say that Geo’s portrait is like a favor to those monsters?”

“No, it’s more dangerous than that.”

Yoo Seong-un reported what he had confirmed.

“The portrait knows exactly what it does, how it looks, and what impact it has. It’s completely different from the monsters we’ve seen before, who just blindly shower people with favors and suffocate them.”

Above all else.

“He recognizes himself as a human being.”

So, he would try to interact with humans somehow. He didn't seem like the type to be averse to conversation.

“But at the same time, he doesn’t see us as human beings.”

"then?"

“Geo judged us by our drawings. He is appreciating us like that.”

Yoo Seong-un felt the powerful spirit of 'Geo'. It was something that any creature that could think without any special analytical equipment or skills would naturally be able to feel.

It wasn't just the power that came from the measured gait, the heavy atmosphere, and the noble appearance. Yoo Seong-un still couldn't forget the feeling of being lost when he met Geo's black eyes.

Something so huge that we can't even recognize it is pretending to be human.

“And yet he says he is human. I don’t know if he really thinks that way or if he is trying to be, but it seems like he is definitely sincere. It’s not a lie.”

In cases like this, even if things were normally safe, once something happened, it was bound to get bigger than you could imagine.

Because he was fully aware of what he was doing.

“Besides, he is sensitive to good and evil. However, we cannot know where the standard comes from. Even though we judged him to be ordinary, if ‘Geo’ concludes that he is a villain… I cannot even imagine what the result will be.”

“Can you really not imagine?”

“Yes, this time… I guess.”

Yoo Seong-un sighed.

“There was no crowd to compare it to, and no reference material. This was my first time seeing a talking portrait.”

Weapons with egos are considered rare and are loved by many hunters. But a portrait with egos, a being whose identity is indistinguishable from a ghost, a monster, or a human.

Even though he had many unique experiences, this was a difficult case.

“I was thinking of sending it to the Hunter Association as research material….”

“Would you be available?”

“I guess so. I know, I thought you would.”

Yoo Seong-un covered his mouth as if to stop himself from sighing, then quickly controlled his expression and continued speaking.

“Then I will report to you periodically. It is difficult to determine the exact identity after seeing it for a day or two.”

“Please. I’m planning to go and talk to him again soon, but I don’t want to be ignored again, so please find out what Geo likes.”

“It’s a very personal request, but I understand. It’s my job, so you don’t have to ask me to do it. Isn’t it something I’m supposed to do?”

“I don’t know how all our employees can be so chic.”

“I think it’s because you’ve gathered only these types of people.”

That's why Yoo Seong-un had to go to work every morning at 4:30.

* * *

“Aren’t you lonely?”

The portrait blinked twice at Yoo Seong-un's question.

“I am not lonely.”

It's still a blunt answer.

Yoo Seong-un smiled faintly.

“I apologize if this was an impolite question, but this is a place where no one comes or goes except for the staff who come to manage the artwork.”

“…….”

“I guessed that sometimes coming out of the portrait and looking around might have been part of that feeling.”

“I like places where there are no people, so it’s okay.”

“Do you feel uncomfortable talking?”

“That’s not it. It’s just….”

The portrait continued to speak.

“I’ve said so much already, I’ve always imagined a future where I wouldn’t have to say anything.”

“…….”

“I’ve always wanted a quiet place where I don’t have to talk too much, get too involved, or worry too much… This is the perfect place for that.”

Yoo Seong-un asked him.

“…Were you a human before?”

“He is still a human being.”

“Oh, right. So what I meant was… was it a normal person who wasn’t in the picture? Because normal people aren’t put in frames.”

“Yes, I did.”

"okay."

Humanoid monsters are divided into two types.

There are types that were born as monsters but later evolved to take on a human form, or types that started out as humans but at some point became part of the 'origin' and became monsters.

'In this case, it's the latter.'

Monsters who have memories of being human are particularly prone to negative emotions.

‘This side… rather looks peaceful.’

But it wasn't a very pleasant peace.

“…….”

It's like a funeral.

'Portrait of Geo' looked just like someone's death.

“Well, then… isn’t it boring?”

“Sometimes it’s boring.”

“How do you relieve that boredom? Do you have your own method?”

“Usually I eat.”

“…….”

Oh, this was a bit surprising.

“…Eat?”

"yes."

The portrait answered in its characteristically blunt voice.

“I enjoy eating.”

“…….”

I hope that material isn't human.

‘…He doesn’t look like someone who would particularly like to eat.’

If you think of the other person as a normal human being, well, he didn't seem obsessed with food.

'… Rather, he gives the impression that he is not interested in anything. He shows an indifference that borders on cold-bloodedness.'

He is a handsome man. He is not thin, but he is not thick either.

With his pale skin, his darkened eyelids, and his marble-like, still face, he didn't look like he would find pleasure in eating.

But there was more to the surprise.

“This may sound rude, but….”

“You can eat it.”

“Yes, I’m sorry. I asked the obvious.”

The picture is eating rice.

“Is it okay if I ask how you eat?”

To Yoo Seong-un's question, 'Geo' answered as if it was nothing special.

“I cook. I think about what I want to eat, get the right ingredients, prepare them, put a pan on the fire or put it in the oven… and that’s how I finish cooking.”

“…….”

“Because I’m just an ordinary human being.”

Although, the part where it is explained like that feels rather inhuman.

When Yoo Seong-un did not answer, the portrait explained another case.

“There is a way I can enjoy it because I am in the portrait.”

“Oh, how about that…?”

“I need a little help, but Mr. Yoo Seong-un can bring me joy too.”

“…What kind of pleasure are you talking about?”

It could bring joy. For a moment, I was anxious as I recalled the tyranny of monsters throughout history, but the portrait did not ask for a living sacrifice or warm blood.

He looked at the meteor cloud with emotionless eyes, like black paint on paper.

“Are you good at drawing?”

“…If you can describe something, you can draw it. Sometimes I have to draw things or plants I’ve never seen before in my reports….”

“Then please draw an apple.”

“…….”

“It’s not difficult, is it?”

Yoo Seong-un asked back with a slightly surprised expression.

“…Is this… on top of the portrait?”

"you're right."

"…All right."

'Portrait of Geo' is a being with clear rules. Yoo Seong-un was not stupid enough to ignore what such an unidentified being asked to do.

He took out paints and brushes from the hard case he always carried. The portrait asked him what he saw.

“Do you always carry art supplies with you?”

“I try to bring as many different things as possible. You never know what might happen in this gallery, so it’s good for me to be prepared in many ways.”

"okay."

“…….”

Although the portrait's reaction was still calm, Yoo Seong-un felt inwardly eerie.

‘What would have happened if I didn’t have my drawing tools…?’

The 'Geo' I've talked to so far has been a flexible being in his own right, but, well, this brother's existence has always shown a capricious side.

Yoo Seong-un took a deep breath and placed his brush on the portrait. He felt a sense of betrayal, as if he was sullying a noble work of art.

“I’m not that good at drawing.”

“It doesn’t matter.”

“Uhm….”

Soon after, he drew a bright red apple.

“…That apple isn’t that pretty.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“Here I drew the apple you wanted.”

"okay."

“Can I eat it?”

“…….”

As he said that, 'Geo' reached out to the apple drawn in a corner of the portrait.

"thank you."

Moved.

A thick, white hand soon picked up Yoo Seong-un's apple.

“…….”

And then,

Crisp.

“…….”

“…….”

You can see the yellow flesh inside the red apple.

The portrait took a bite of a model-like apple and said:

“It’s delicious.”

"…ah…."

“They are ripe and have a nice aroma. They are a little small, but they are good for a snack.”

"that…."

This is my first time seeing anything like this.

“…….”

“Is it strange?”

Yeah, it was amazing.

Enough to make your heart flutter a little.

“…That’s amazing.”

Yoo Seong-un was a person who observed and managed the existence of other types. He had been doing this since his previous job at the Hunter Association.

Since the dungeons were created and monsters began to dominate, Yoo Seong-un has always taken on the role of exploring and researching the strange phenomena and the beings at the center of them.

There was definitely a sense of pride and satisfaction there, and it was because I loved it that I was able to be here.

“Honestly, yes, I was surprised…. It was my first time seeing anything like this.”

“I understand.”

“So, did you just eat the apple in the picture?”

'Geo' nodded.

“I am an ordinary human being, but I am in the painting. So I can say that I am also a painting. In the same way, I can do a lot of things in the painting.”

“…….”

“When I don’t feel like cooking, I just draw a finished dish like this. It’s convenient.”

"…okay."

“So I can repay your kindness.”

The portrait blinked twice.

“Then I’ll see you tomorrow.”

"tomorrow?"

“I’m not ready right now.”

"…All right."

"thank you."

Day 4, complete.

* * *

As the portrait artist closed his eyes and opened them, he suddenly found himself holding a paintbrush in his hand.

'Geo' started drawing a picture.

“…….”

“…….”

It was very red, like the apple that Yoo Seong-un had drawn the day before in the morning.

The shape is a triangle with round lines. The structure is clearly three-dimensional, and the transparent light makes it even clearer. The light that hits the soft, warm sunlight somewhere shatters into pieces and spreads throughout the structure.

The color resembled a pomegranate. It was transparent and red. But it was even redder. It was so red, as if it contained freshly shed blood, that it hurt my eyes if I looked at it for too long.

It soon comes to life.

“…….”

The end becomes sharp like a knife.

“…….”

It also embraced darkness, and eventually placed even the scattering shadows beneath it.

“…….”

"ruler."

The portrait spoke.

“This is a thank you.”

As he pushed the red jewel with his fingers as if it contained a heart,

Bam, right?

“…….”

It fell onto Yoo Seong-un's hand.

“…….”

“It's yours.”

“…This is….”

He asked.

“What kind of jewel is it?”

“I don’t know.”

“…….”

“But it must have been deep enough in the ground to be hot.”

'Geo' continued the story of the jewel.

“It may have been in a place hot enough to be in the heart of a planet, and it may have taken on the heat of my friend. Then, after a very long time, it was discovered by human hands… and it may have taken on a pretty form.”

Whose story is this?

“…That’s an interesting story.”

“I’m glad it sounded that way.”

"haha…."

Yoo Seong-un let out a hollow laugh without realizing it.

“What did you use to paint this jewel? Your brush clearly wasn’t dipped in any paint….”

“…….”

“This gem looks real.”

The portrait did not answer.

Instead, Yoo Seong-un asked.

“Can I have this?”

“You gave me a gift.”

I'm talking about that clumsy apple drawing.

“This jewel is a thank you.”

The words in the portrait sounded exactly like the devil's. There was absolutely no reason for it to be so, but the strangeness, the haziness, the ecstasy made me think that way.

And Yoo Seong-un expressed his honest feelings about the unbearable sense of unreality.

“You are right.”

"okay."

“And that sounds exactly like the devil’s answer.”

I couldn't stand the question. This is what a researcher is like.

“Why do you always answer in such simple language? Geo, you, well, speak in a very simple and precise way that can satisfy the other person’s wishes.”

“…….”

“I know this is a rude question, but I have to ask. Is it because you lack human emotions that you can do this? Or is it because you choose to be that way?”

The portrait did not answer and just looked at the meteor cloud.

After a long moment, and after he blinked twice, 'Geo' answered.

“I don’t understand what you are saying, Mr. Yoo Seong-un. I did not use overly simplistic grammar, nor did I provide answers that were intended to satisfy people’s needs or desires.”

“…….”

“I’ve always been like this.”

His voice was still gruff and low, but it seemed twisted somewhere.

It wasn't peaceful. It was as if the dead buried in the coffin had been dragged out into the world of the living, still calm, yet somehow strange… .

“I have human emotions, to the point where I can’t figure out why I have to explain them.”

“…….”

“It’s not that I don’t have feelings, and it’s not my choice to be whatever it is. I’m just this kind of person.”

The portraits sometimes looked angry, sometimes as if they were making excuses because they had been stabbed in the back, or sometimes as if they were really frustrated because they couldn't understand what the other person was saying.

Maybe this is all just my imagination and he has no feelings at all.

'I don't know what you're thinking.'

Yoo Seong-un spoke cautiously.

“I know, I know. I know you’re just a normal human being.”

“…….”

“You seem to feel loneliness, joy, and many other emotions. But you have a way of speaking that doesn’t show any emotion or personal desire. It’s as if you have nothing…”

It's just kind of like a service.

‘… I shouldn’t say this much.’

Yoo Seong-un felt curious. At the same time, he was also impressed. Although he was hired as a curator by Bisabal, his true nature was always ‘exploration.’

“…….”

“…….”

The portrait opened its mouth again.

“I am an ordinary human being.”

He continues speaking like this.

“I wanted to eat an apple, so I asked Mr. Yoo Seong-un to draw it.”

“Yes.”

“It was my personal wish. Mr. Yoo Seong-un drew me an apple, so I gave him one in return. We exchanged gifts, and that is a natural courtesy between people.”

"okay."

“I was just being polite.”

“…….”

“So I don’t quite understand what you’re saying.”

I couldn't tell if what he said was a lie or the truth. It was difficult to read the imagery from the constant pitch of the voice.

“Do you know that your eyes are very dark?”

“A lot of people have black eyes.”

“That’s right.”

“Black eyes are common. There’s nothing special about them.”

“…….”

“Don’t think of me as too special. It’s better not to.”

It's like a giant whale explaining to humans that he is small.

Are you denying it even though you know that it is contradictory?

'Or maybe you really don't know.'

'Geo's' blunt face completely obscured the truth inside him.

“…I will be careful.”

Day 5, complete.

After that, the portrait did not open its eyes for a while.

“…….”

Oh, really.

“I really need to fix this habit….”

Did you make him run away?

* * *

“…….”

It's hard to live a social life after a long time.

“…Should I take a break?”

The ultimate positive mindset activation.

'Let's take a rest.'

So he returned to his farming life.

“Taran.”

That was the reason why Geo was locked in the portrait for ten days.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (8)

Episode 8

Geo didn't have any thoughts.

People have imagined all sorts of things because of his hard expression, gloomy atmosphere, and overly formal speech. Maybe he lost a loved one, maybe he did something dangerous in the past…

It's a misunderstanding.

'What should I eat today?'

Sergio was just a pig and a potato.

“…Cheese fondue….”

A spring breeze blew gently across the bed. He, who had been lying down like a cat due to sleepiness, woke up.

“I’d like cheese fondue.”

Today's content was fondue.

The pig didn't hesitate before the meal. Geo went down to the icehouse and chose the cheese to use for this dish.

“What should I do?”

Cheese fondue was easy for anyone to make as long as they had the ingredients. Of course, there would be some idiots who would argue with this, but Geo wasn't idiot-handed so it didn't matter.

However, cheese fondue is not a dish that requires such complicated techniques, and there are many different recipes for cheese fondue.

“I think the base would be Brie cheese.”

Brie cheese is a safe choice for making cheese fondue.

“Is this Brie cheese?”

The Brie cheese wrapped in white paper had white mold spread like silk on its surface, as if sweet sugar powder had been generously sprinkled on the chewy surface of the cheese.

There was no specific name written on it, so I sniffed it and cut it in half, and it was definitely Brie cheese.

“Plain and good.”

Brie cheese is a mild cheese. It has a mild mushroom and nutty flavor, making it perfect for fondue. It goes very well with bread or fruit.

“If you just put this in, it will be a little bit chewy.”

The downside of Brie cheese is that if you eat a lot of it, it can be greasy and heavy.

The melted Brie cheese has a creamy texture that melts smoothly without being elastic, and because of its mild flavor and texture, it can be easy to get tired of it.

“…….”

Geo blinked and muttered.

“I wish it was a little more salty.”

I was drawn to cheeses that were strong, salty, and tangy, since Brie is on the mild side.

“Parmesan would be good.”

The official name is Parmigiano Reggiano.

'Parmesan cheese' is commonly known to Koreans as a seasoning sprinkled on top of pizza. However, it is a deteriorated version of Parmigiano cheese, and the two have almost nothing in common.

“You were here.”

Geo found some grated Parmesan cheese.

“It’s burdensome to just cut it into pieces….”

This cheese is an ultra-hard cheese that requires maturing for more than a year. It is very hard, but the grain inside is still clear. If you don't cut it along this grain, it will fall apart.

In that sense, the fact that it was pre-portioned was very welcome. Parmesan cheese sold in whole pieces is larger than a tire and is very expensive, so Geo had never done the portioning process before.

'I'm glad I didn't have to waste precious cheese.'

Geo put the cheese, cut into bite-sized pieces, into the basket.

“…….”

The scent was already strong.

“Good.”

Parmesan cheese, which exudes a tangy aroma, has a variety of flavors.

First of all, it's very salty. Even if you just take a bite the size of a fingernail, your tongue will feel tingly and the smell will go up to your head. The flavor is very strong.

At the same time, it gives the pleasure of a sweet taste as rich as honey gently moistening the tongue like a ripe peach and then disappearing without a trace.

'That's why it's also delicious when eaten raw.'

Unheated hard cheeses remain much more mild in flavor. If you are a cheese beginner, I recommend eating them raw, and there is a peak of flavor called crystals between the Parmesan cheeses in that state.

“…….”

Geo loved the small but crunchy texture.

'It smells like nuts too.'

If you add too much, it may be overwhelming, but if you add a small amount, it is suitable for bringing out the flavor of the fondue.

"and…."

Let me add one more.

“Gruyere.”

Gruyere cheese would be a good choice.

This cheese is a hard cheese like Parmesan, but it is slightly more flexible than Parmesan, which is aged for a year, and is saltier and much sweeter than Brie.

'One of the fun things about it is that it has a subtle walnut scent.'

The strong nutty flavor was appealing in many ways. This rich flavor would definitely go well with the cheeses I gathered earlier.

“…I guess that’s enough cheese.”

If you put too much in, the smell and taste will be strange. Geo went up to the kitchen on the first floor.

“Then now….”

Dalgrak.

Geo found a thick earthenware bowl in the drawer.

“Let’s start cooking.”

The cooking method was simple. First, prepare the ingredients you want to eat with the cheese.

Anything goes. Cherry tomatoes, asparagus, sweet potatoes, potatoes, onions, broccoli, zucchini… Also, things like soft bread, crispy croutons, and chewy ciabatta.

It was even good eaten with fruit.

'But this one passes.'

Since it was meant to be a meal and not a snack, I wasn't drawn to anything sweet or sour.

“Should I just stir-fry it?”

He cut the ingredients into bite-sized pieces and put them in a wok, heated them up once, and then Geo put all of them in the oven. He was going to take them out after briefly and thickly searing the outside with strong heat.

The ingredients baked in the oven would have a subtle smoky aroma. It was worth preparing the fragrant firewood in advance.

“This is ready.”

Next is cheese.

Chop the cheese you brought. All the cheese should melt at the same time so that it doesn't separate and is well mixed. If the chunks are too big, each one will melt at different times and the oil and fat layers will separate.

'When I first made it, I melted it all down and the cheese grease formed the Han River. Even thinking about it now, it was a disaster.'

Put a little olive oil in a heated earthenware pot and add a clove of garlic to give it some flavor.

“And wine.”

This is a cheat key that captures the savory flavor of cheese and brings out its flavor.

In Geo's cellar, there were also wines in bottles without labels. Of them, the one with the cleanest taste was a white wine, which had a pleasant aroma that blended well with the scent of garlic and olives.

“…….”

Hold on.

Geo thought as he closed the wine cork.

'I should try making alcohol sometime.'

The only thing left was time, and the process was a bit tedious, so it wasn't a big deal. Geo vowed to make everything from wine to distilled liquor, flower liquor, and fruit liquor. Baek-su had the right to waste time.

When the alcohol had all evaporated, Geo brought over the cheese he had cut up.

“Put everything in….”

Place all the crumbled cheese in a clay pot heated over low heat.

“I’ll see you next time.”

When it has melted to a certain degree and the cheese's oil has risen to the top, add a little starch water that you prepared in advance. This helps to melt the oil and fat layers of the cheese that tend to separate no matter how well it is melted.

“A spoonful of alcohol.”

I liked alcohol with a high alcohol content and strong flavor, like whiskey or brandy.

“…….”

The cheese fondue was completed in a smooth, soup-like consistency, yet chewy at the same time.

“Taran.”

I liked it.

Geo brought the cheese and various ingredients and sat down at the table. He lit a small candle underneath the cheese so that it could stay warm.

'This part is a bit troublesome.'

Since cheese will harden again if left cold, it needs to be heated continuously like this. So, if you want to eat cheese fondue, you need fondue tools.

“It’s a good thing I made it in advance.”

Anyway, the meal began.

“For now….”

Geo picked up some ripe asparagus.

“…….”

After soaking it in cheese and taking it out, the cheese, which had been softened by alcohol and starch, followed. The asparagus, which had been baked until golden brown in the oven, still had a deep green color.

The unique scent of fresh vegetables and the soft, subtle scent of asparagus rose. The fresh flavor of asparagus, which goes especially well with fat, was expected.

"hmm…."

Crunchy.

The stem was chewed elastically.

'it's good.'

The asparagus juice, which flowed out like the juice of well-cooked meat, had a mysterious bitter taste.

The bitterness of asparagus, just like the astringency of yuzu tea, blended well with the other ingredients, just enough to not be irritating.

The surface, once burnt to a crisp, was like a thin leaf crumbling away. The stems just below it were soft and succulent, having been heated in a fan and oven, and beneath that, the stems of the still-vibrant plant were crunchy and chewy.

'It goes well with cheese too.'

Creamy, soft Brie cheese provides the base. It could have been a bit too much, but the tangy flavor of Parmesan takes care of it, and the rich walnut flavor of Gruyere connects the two.

The delicate flavor of asparagus goes particularly well with fats, like cheese, cream, and butter, and it meshes perfectly with this fondue, which has been given a hint of garlic.

Moreover, the juicy and crunchy texture made it feel like eating well-ripened spring vegetables.

"……."

This is life.

"…A life where you can fall asleep even while eating… Nothing could be more desirable than this."

I was eating fondue that gently caressed my insides, feeling the soft spring breeze coming in through the wide open window. This place was heaven.

"After I finish eating, I'll go out and take a nap. Where should I sleep today?"

The next choice was Ciabatta.

"It's well cooked."

Ciabatta was a bread famous for its softness and chewiness. The lightly floured exterior was swept with butter, giving it a roux-like flavor.

Thanks to being baked in an oven, the outside was very crispy, and the buttery side boasted a crispy yet soft texture like croutons in soup.

"Then now the cheese…."

Phew, soak it.

"……."

well.

I put it in my mouth.

“…….”

It was very good.

'This is it.'

Geo placed a well-cooked potato on top of a cheese-covered bread.

“Ugh….”

As expected, fondue was great because it was fun to eat it in combinations.

From crispy and chewy bread to cheese with a variety of textures and buttery, richly flavored potatoes, the composition was flawless from texture to taste.

‘Let’s start with a tomato… .’

Ppop!

“…Ah, this is delicious too.”

The cherry tomatoes, briefly and strongly grilled so that the flesh would not become overcooked, were still crunchy, with a slightly warm broth inside. Their outer surface had a soft, chewy texture, like a well-cooked sausage.

“It would go well with cheese, too.”

After eating it with cheese like that, I was happy with the colorful flavors.

“Should I add croutons this time?”

Geo ate whatever he could.

Crispy croutons dipped in chewy cheese, soft broccoli that's just right (but not too soft) and creamy cheese, and sweet, crumbly sweet potatoes and salty, savory cheese… .

It was quite a large amount, enough to pile up in a large bowl, but Geo quickly ate it all.

“…….”

He was amazed at the miracle his stomach had performed. It may not be Noah's Ark, but it could be Geo's Ark.

“Have the sheep increased?”

He was clearly a big eater, but I don't think he was this big of a eater before he entered the picture.

“…….”

Geo's ultimate positive mind activation.

'It's okay because it's fun.'

Warm.

His rationalization was successful.

Even after eating this much, he didn't feel bloated. This was a welcome development for Geo, who was a gourmet and a big eater, and who truly found pleasure in eating.

“These days, people even breathe fire, so someone like me would be considered a nobleman.”

As people live, they may evolve and things like that, right?

“I guess I should grab a snack and go take a nap now….”

Geo put the dried goji berries, Baibamnil tea leaves, and a glass bottle filled with warm water into a clean basket. The goji berries, which were dark golden in color, had grown to the size of raisins and made a useful snack.

'The ones dried outside have completely hardened. Soon we'll be able to make a medicine with the goby fruit.'

Geo wore a black cloak.

'I'd like to upgrade this later too.'

The cloak I made when I first came to my senses in the painting was still usable. It was made to avoid being seen by any scary beasts, and also to prevent my body from getting rubbed by the poisonous grass or my clothes from wearing out.

It was okay, considering that it was made by patching together fabric from the cabin.

'It's light, thick, and well-ventilated.'

My body doesn't feel cold or hot easily, but when I lay down on the bare ground, my back got cold. In such a situation, a cloak would be a pretty good blanket. After adjusting his clothes, Geo headed to the spring.

As I walked slowly, I arrived at a spring that was still beautiful, quiet, and colorful with the murmurs of all kinds of creatures.

Then what is it?

“…….”

now.

“Okay.”

I'm sleepy.

Geo, who was chewing on some chewy dried goby fruit, soon fell asleep without even taking a sip of tea. The cloak, which was large enough to cover his entire body, served as an excellent blanket, as expected.

“…….”

New liquid—new liquid—….

Soon, as he fell asleep, butterflies resembling sunlight flew up to him.

“Beep.”

“Purur….”

“Ugh.”

Five or six round rabbits. A deer with long legs. A few plump cats that resembled wildcats, and a few small and large birds that were croaking.

So they all gathered together and fell into a deep sleep.

“…….”

“…….”

It was a peaceful nap time.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (9)

Episode 9

A slow evening.

The top floor of the cabin, the attic. Soft lighting. The scent of the flowing forest. A black wooden desk standing in front of a round window.

Geo was there organizing the rules he had discovered.

"therefore…."

Geo continued.

“I guess you could say it’s 1:1.”

Geo could do anything in this picture.

It wasn't like he had really done 'anything', but it felt like it. In a world where even warm corpses could be created, I had to assume that nothing was impossible for Geo.

'But when reality gets involved, it's a different story.'

Asking Yoo Seong-un to draw an apple was also part of the effort to confirm this.

'Whether I draw a picture or someone else draws it for me, it's the same picture from my perspective, so I enjoy it without any problem, but the moment I take it out, it becomes reality. I thought it would be too much if there were no restrictions… .'

That's where the doubts started.

“I’m glad Mr. Yoo Seong-un is kind.”

I was touched when he asked me to draw an apple right away and I obediently did so.

“What a mature person, he even goes along with the nonsense the portrait tells.”

So, thanks to the kind consideration of the manager and the efforts of the past few days, Geo was able to figure out my situation.

When Geo goes outside the picture, his figure disappears from the picture and the frame becomes a simple landscape painting. If Geo wants to give a gift to the person outside the picture, he has to receive something from the other person.

It was a 1:1 rule, where if something came, something went.

“…….”

Of course, the snacks given to the 17 employees I met earlier were just a favor.

'Everyone was so scared that I thought giving them some snacks would lighten the mood.'

As a result, the atmosphere did lighten up. It changed from horror to absurdity. Yes, even I would have been flustered if a black mass suddenly popped out of a picture and handed me a cookie.

'It's true that those people helped me.'

In conclusion, I was just being polite.

If someone gave you something or you had something to apologize for, my grandmother told me to give them something along with some sweet words to entice them. She said that was basic courtesy in life.

'He said that gratitude and apologies in words are like a corpse.'

It was a given that he should speak politely, and that he should give gifts, no matter how small, whether he could afford them or not. To Sergio, whose facial muscles had degenerated to the point where they were worse than a pony's, it was advice that made sense.

Therefore, Sergio, the good potato, still faithfully followed the words of his grandmother, who was his life mentor, even at the age of 29. If not, he would not have been able to become a teacher loved by his students.

Anyway, so.

“I can’t just receive help.”

That was Sergio's rule.

“In that sense, I think the rules of this world fit me quite well. It may be a result of my personality being reflected, like the animals in the forest.”

I liked it.

“In order for me to pass something from a drawing to reality, I also need to receive something.”

Geo was able to do quite a lot of things freely.

In this picture, where one enjoys almost the power of the Creator, it is already a given that one can operate outside of reality without being bound by any separate rules.

'You can even create passageways with pictures so you can get to other floors without taking the elevator.'

However, when Geo was a painting and the other side was in reality, he could not break this 1:1 rule. This was something he learned through conversations with Yoo Seong-un, the employee who managed the portrait.

“When I asked that person to draw an apple, a system explanation came up.”

The explanation was to thank you, and there was even a time limit.

'It's been about a week.'

I'm still not sure what problems would arise if I didn't pay him back within a week, but I felt like nothing good would happen, so I gave Yoo Seong-un a gift the very next day.

“…….”

Geo rolled the clutter next to the desk with his fingers. It made a rattling sound as it hit the wooden table.

"jewel…."

Among them were jewels of various colors.

“I didn’t know I could make this either.”

Geo likes various painting styles.

They say that a true painter has his own worldview, but Sergio was not that kind of painter, but rather a teacher, so he painted in various styles. Sergio was also skilled in hyper-realism.

The jewels he was touching now were created in that way.

“I made paint with this, so it was easy to draw the jewel I gave to Mr.

Yoo Seong-un.”

It feels as if the paint, the picture, and the result itself are living things.

“…….”

It was a feeling that something that was clearly not alive and breathing had life in it.

“There is nothing special about this wonderful potato that goes so well with the limits of thought….”

I've never felt this free at 29 years old, like I've taken off my underwear, but anyway, it was nice to have so many things to do. As a result, Geo seems to have evolved into a potato that shows off more diverse charms.

Geo, who had finished organizing his thoughts, continued with his thoughts like a freeloader.

'... Let's sleep outside tonight. It'll feel good to sleep while looking at the stars. What should I make for breakfast tomorrow? It'd be nice to just roast potatoes with salt, right? And if I'm bored, I could farm. If I ask Mr. Yoo Seong-un... .'

The weather is good, so the crops will grow well. You will feel refreshed when you find seedlings you like and farm them.

I want to eat the crops that I've grown, and give them as a gift to Mr. Yoo Seong-un, who is outside the picture. If there are bees somewhere, I want to bring them here and raise them.

“Let’s go out and travel a lot.”

Then I'll come back to the cabin and paint again.

If you draw a picture… .

“…….”

Geo, who had been half-asleep in the languid spring air, quietly opened his eyes.

“I need a pet.”

The scale has gotten a bit bigger, but isn't this also a rural lifestyle?

“Having a pet in a house with a yard is like having pork belly and soju. And I am a healthy Korean man who drinks pork belly and soju… So I have come to the conclusion that I need a new family member.”

The creatures of this forest were friendly to Geo, but they still had the basic wariness of wild animals, so they were not easy to touch.

'I wanted to touch it like a rice cake, but I was firmly rejected.'

And Geo, being the gentleman he is, didn't bother to pet the rabbit he didn't like.

The forest friends were just wild animals that easily approached Geo and just as easily left him. It would certainly be fun to befriend such guys, but Geo had another way.

“If you draw a picture….”

Humans cannot create it, and they have no intention of doing so. Humans are already sufficiently responsible for that one thing themselves.

But what about animals?

“…Can you make it?”

Geo headed to the workshop on the second floor.

* * *

Up until now, everything Geo had drawn was objects.

“There was no ego.”

He drew fruits, vegetables, food, plates, furniture, and many other things, but they were not living, breathing beings, apart from the life force that Geo vaguely felt in them.

“…….”

Geo was sitting in front of the canvas.

“…Will it work?”

Humans have failed, but could small animals possibly do so?

“…There are no other people here, but there are other animals….”

It seemed possible.

“…….”

Geo got up from his chair and walked over to the small drawers that filled the wall. They looked like medicine cabinets you might see in an old oriental medicine clinic.

There were countless of them, but Geo knew where everything was.

“…here, definitely….”

Moon.

I opened a drawer.

"there is."

There was a blue and transparent jewel.

Geo doesn't know exactly what this gem is, but it was cool. It was refreshing rather than cold, and although it was hard to the touch, its insides swayed fluidly as if flowing water.

“…….”

It was a liquid in the shape of a solid, flowing and sparkling within a single form, and it was no different from living, breathing life that came together.

“Let’s do this.”

In addition, Sergio took out some jewels, dry leaves, and minerals.

He breaks the jewels with an awl and a hammer. He turns the leaves that still have vivid colors despite being well dried, and the minerals that contain various colors, into powder. Those that are made into fine powders like flour are born as paints in Geo's hands.

“…….”

It is made with the sap of trees found in the forest and has physical properties.

“…….”

Add another difference there to find the appropriate viscosity.

“…….”

The finely ground paint on the glass plate, where the colors were clearly visible, glowed softly like fireflies.

‘…pale as the Milky Way…’

It gave me that refreshing feeling.

"it's okay."

Geo started drawing.

There was no lake in this forest. It was perhaps natural, but I couldn't help but feel a little disappointed. I wished there were endless, transparent things like a small pond, a magnificent lake, or a vast ocean, and they would give off the scent of water.

Geo moved his brush, imagining the cool breeze blowing from the vast puddle of water.

“…….”

Round body.

Their heads are small, their wings are big. They will only sing songs, so they don't need to be that big. They will make their homes where there is water, and the homes themselves will be their own.

“…….”

A bird that is water itself.

“…….”

What kind of bird is that?

“…It looks like they’ll form a group.”

They will live in groups.

It can stay anywhere there is water, and can create ponds, lakes, and oceans wherever there is no water.

They are transparent water, living and breathing, and at the same time, they are birds that create cool breezes.

“The colors will be different for each person.”

Since water is transparent, those with egos will think.

'I want to have a color that expresses myself.'

They're going to be cute friends.

They put all kinds of treasures into their bodies to decorate their transparent selves. Just as all birds take care of their feathers, they use their small beaks to select treasures that fit their bodies and put them into their transparent bodies to decorate themselves.

It could be a flower. It could be a jewel. It could be a fruit hanging from a tree or leftover food. It could even be a very old relic or a small fish.

“Everything is….”

Because it's up to you.

You, being water and birds, were free to do anything.

It was okay to fall asleep in a flowing stream, or to fly freely across the vast sky. They had freedom.

“…….”

Geo drew a very small bird.

They have a round body, wings that are exactly the same size as their bodies, long tail feathers, and a short beak. They are small and can hide anywhere, and they know that they are water.

Water that contains life.

“…….”

Jewels, flowers, and fruits are placed in that transparent body, making it shine in various colors… .

It was beautiful.

“…….”

Geo carefully tapped the bird's beak with his fingertips.

"ah."

-Poruk!

“…….”

A bird carrying its own treasure sat on Geo's shoulder.

"…hi."

Parsley.

"nice to meet you."

Pass, pass!

“Yeah, me too.”

Instead of crying, the bird rustled, making sound with the flowers inside its body.

He was a quiet but noisy friend.

“He was a chatterbox.”

The flower petals trapped in the small, transparent body playfully cried out, making a faint noise.

“That’s amazing.”

Before he knew it, Geo's room was filled with transparent, sparkling birds.

They hovered around Geo for a moment, then quickly went out through the open window. The wind created by the flapping wings of the living water droplets was more powerful than one could imagine.

The picturesque sight of cherry blossom petals fluttering in the bright spring breeze was truly beautiful.

“…….”

Geo, who had been blankly staring for a moment, soon moved his feet and stood on the terrace.

"…ah."

there is.

“It’s not far.”

They formed a small pond next to Geo's cabin. He leaned back, resting his chin on the terrace railing.

“Wonderful things.”

The pond, or lake, surrounding the cabin was flowing gently.

Beneath it were countless 'treasures', like sand on a beach or pebbles on a riverbank. The lake, filled with things like flowers, jewels, and fruits, sparkled enchantingly in the moonlight.

They became one and flowed gently, but then suddenly, they came up and looked around. Then they hid inside again and formed a pond with their friends.

“…….”

Geo closed his eyes. As the sparkling water disappeared from his sight, moving about alive, he soon heard them breathing.

Instead of the twittering sounds, there was a faint noise of jewels rattling, flower petals rustling, and small stones or sand moving. That was how they talked and cried.

It's like the sound of cicadas in midsummer... .

“…I should go to sleep.”

Geo went out of the cabin, carrying only a pillow. Then he lay down between the cabin and the pond.

“…….”

Rustle—.

As he lay down to fall asleep, he heard animals approaching.

'Even though everyone ran away when I tried to touch them, they're approaching me quickly.'

Birds that had been tilting their heads on the branches flew down and landed on Sergio's chest. Deer that had been sniffing the shallow, wide pond moved their long legs and came next to Sergio.

The squirrels that had been scurrying about among the bushes flocked to him, dropping acorns and small nuts into the pond.

“…….”

Geo muttered at the sight.

“…Toll?”

Is it a toll gate fee?

Anyway, both the squirrels and the birds in the pond seemed satisfied.

'Okay then.'

Anyway, isn't it peaceful?

If the friends Geo had created were not beings who deserved to be ostracized, and if they could just mingle and blend in with the existing ones, he would be satisfied with that alone.

At that point, Geo thought.

“…….”

I think it would be fun to decorate this portrait.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (10)

Episode 10

Although the portrait closed its eyes due to Yoo Seong-un's haste, Bisabal, the owner of the painting, was not angry with him.

“It was a portrait that wouldn’t even respond when I spoke to it anyway. It didn’t even look at me.”

“…….”

“The 17 employees who had been in conversation so far ran away because they couldn’t stand the pressure of the portrait. In that sense, I think Yoo Seong-woon’s attempt is very meaningful and successful.”

"but…."

“It may not have been a good choice to let Geo run away, but I scouted you because of your curiosity, Mr. Yoo Seong-un. You don’t need to apologize for that.”

“I will be more careful in the future.”

“That will do.”

Fortunately, Bisabal was a special person to his family.

The curator's job is to maintain and manage the work. This kind of curiosity that a researcher would have is not appropriate. Nevertheless, I was grateful to have met a boss who supported this meteor cloud.

"ha…."

But Yoo Seong-un was still in an awkward position.

'Just because there's no big problem doesn't mean the mistake goes away.'

It's been quite some time since I was hired by Bisabal as a curator. I thought I had become dulled by appreciating and managing Bisabal's collections, but it seems like nature is what it is, and I was drawn to the mystery of the dungeon I saw after a long time.

Yoo Seong-un went into his personal studio and bit into a piece of candy. A tired adult needed something sweet.

"……."

Yeah, that's right.

'Geo's portrait is not of an ordinary monster.'

That piqued Yoo Seong-un's curiosity.

"…It could simply be a mutation…."

A small murmur.

"……."

Yoo Seong-un sat on his chair for a long time, staring into space.

Soon he opened his mouth.

"…Should I contact the gardeners?"

Gardening was a secret profession practiced by associations in various countries.

In fact, it is not to the extent that it is being 'secretly operated'. Anyone with the right aptitude can do it.

However, it would be more appropriate to say that it was not spread openly and semi-forcibly because there were so few suitable candidates.

'But since I pretended to retire as a researcher, it's difficult to contact you again.'

The gardener, a sort of secret researcher and adventurer, was the one closest to the truth of the dungeon.

He knew a lot of information that was unknown to the world, but Yoo Seong-un, a former gardener, could not explain the ‘Portrait of Geo’ with his knowledge. It was something of a kind that he had never seen before.

“…Well, it’ll work out somehow.”

Squeak… .

Yoo Seong-un sighed and slumped down in his chair.

“There’s no need to rush, so let’s take it slow.”

No matter what humans do, the ‘source’ does not run away.

'It's too big for that.'

There was no reason to rush into revealing the secret, and I didn't feel like doing so. It was just a few days ago that I acted so hastily and caused 'Geo' to run away.

“Let’s reflect, reflect….”

Fortunately, Geo's evasion didn't last too long.

A few days later, Yoo Seong-un was able to see the portrait with his eyes open.

* * *

"…uh…."

"hello."

"…hello?"

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“Good evening.”

“Yes, that’s right.”

The forest in Geo's portrait was a starry evening.

“It’s dinner time for us too.”

“Wasn’t it dawn?”

“I came a little early today. It’s not even 12 o’clock yet.”

“It definitely seems earlier than usual. Is there a reason?”

“I came to check out other works I’m in charge of.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“Then Geo, I saw you awake.”

“I am always awake.”

“That’s an amazing story.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been whining, asked in his characteristically calm voice.

“What were you doing now?”

His gaze was fixed on the brush in the portrait's hand. It was a very strange sight, a painting holding a tool with which to paint.

'It's a sight that would make the guild leader's eyes roll.'

Geo answered obediently.

“I was making a bird.”

“Oh, you were drawing a bird.”

"yes."

“Can I take a look too? If you don’t mind.”

“If Mr. Yoo Seong-un wants, I can show you.”

The man with the blunt face put down the brush in his hand, and soon Yoo Seong-un tapped somewhere unseen. As his delicate fingers called out to someone with restraint, something strange occurred.

I heard the sound of water lapping, and soon a bird appeared.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was surprised.

Of course, it was flat, like something out of a painting, unlike the previous gems… but at least it felt as alive as Geo.

“…that bird….”

“This is my new family.”

“Oh, I see.”

I wanted to answer as calmly as possible, but I don't know if that worked out well. To be honest, Yoo Seong-un was a little excited.

“What a beautiful bird.”

The bird was very small. Among the species found in Korea, it was probably a type of concave-eyed bird.

But the tail feathers were much longer than that, and the wings were so transparent that they were hard to see. Maybe they were just merged together.

It was made of very clean water. It resembled the holy water that Yoo Seong-un, a former gardener, had occasionally seen in dungeons, or the spring water of a remote area where no life existed.

“Did you just make that, Geo?”

I think I know why they said 'make' instead of 'draw'. It was definitely a living, moving creature.

“You were holding a brush.”

“It sounds fun, so I’m making several.”

“Several?”

“Right now… I think it’s a little less than 100.”

“That’s amazing.”

The point is that each of those 100 horses was drawn individually.

“It won’t be easy.”

“It doesn’t matter, I have time left.”

"ah…."

“It’s also fun.”

“…….”

Are you surprisingly a person who seeks out interesting things?

'Something to keep in mind.'

Although it's hard to tell the difference between Geo and the overly polite and stiff-faced person, it's something to be wary of as a human being that a monster or something else lives a life focused on interest.

Yoo Seong-un, who had memorized the information in his head, asked again.

“It looks like it’s made of water, but can that bird sing?”

“I don’t have vocal cords, but….”

Porruk…!

Clink, clink!

“…like this.”

"aha."

There was a rustling sound as the bird shook itself off like a wet puppy. It sounded like a small water bottle being shaken, or like a thin, viscous jelly being stirred around.

Yoo Seong-un smiled faintly.

“That’s how you cry.”

The portrait added:

“There are other ways to cry too.”

“But didn’t you say you didn’t have vocal cords?”

“It’s similar to the method before.”

Geo took out a small jewel from inside his suit.

"how is it."

Pitter-patter…! Pitter-patter!

“It's yours.”

chop.

The small bird snatched the green jewel from Geo's hand. It bit the jewel here and there with its small mouth, as if assessing it, and then swallowed it whole.

"ah."

Geo handed over a few more gems, still with a blunt expression.

“You can cry now.”

"how…."

At that moment, a rustling sound was heard.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un could soon tell how the bird in front of him was crying.

‘… by moving or bumping into an object placed in the body… .’

It looked like a fairy tale.

The jewels trapped inside the bird's transparent body floated around and even bumped into each other, making noise.

Although it looked like a dense jewel, the jewel floating inside its small body sparkled with the light-scattered water.

Geo spoke as if he was teaching a newborn animal.

"okay."

Dalgrak!

“You are doing well.”

Click, click!

“…….”

Then I saw him blink twice. He looked tired, perhaps because of his mood, even though his blunt expression hadn't changed.

“They are chatterboxes.”

“It looks pretty quiet.”

“I can’t even imagine how noisy it would have been if there had been vocal cords.”

“That’s… but.”

The bird, showing the quick movements typical of small animals, moved around busily on Geo's hand, flapping its tail. Then it spread its wings and flapped them.

'The wings are bigger than you think.'

The wings, large enough to cover the entire body, were absorbed back into the body and lost their form.

'That part is just like slime.'

It also seemed a bit similar to trying to put something in his body. It seemed like he was doing it for decoration rather than hunting, though… .

How will you react when you meet the enemy?

“…your drawings are really cool.”

Is this a portrait and a painter? As he thought about that, Geo looked at Yoo Seong-un's words.

Those eyes, which were so dark that they seemed almost bright, briefly captured the meteor cloud, then opened their mouths.

"thank you."

“I hope I didn’t say anything rude?”

“It was a perfect compliment for someone who draws pictures.”

“Then that’s good.”

But it's a living painting.

'Anyone would say that's cool.'

As Yoo Seong-un was blankly staring at the bird, the portrait asked.

“Do you have any other questions?”

“Ah, a question….”

Is this also one of the rules of 'Portrait of Geo'?

'It seems like they give me a chance like this every time.'

Yoo Seong-un answered, gauging the other person's patience and kindness.

“I always have questions. So here they are again. Geo, you showed me such a wonderful picture.”

"okay."

“This bird is truly beautiful. Do these guys have their own sense of beauty? Or are they acting according to your taste, Geo?”

“…….”

The portrait blinked twice and answered.

“I don’t know much about these guys.”

"okay."

“But they like to decorate themselves by putting things into their bodies.”

Perhaps because they had talked quite a bit so far, Geo continued speaking without hesitation.

“I’ve made about 100 birds so far, and each one has a different preference. This one likes jewels, some birds want flowers, some birds want sticks or rocks. Sometimes it’s small fish or fruit.”

Porruk!

As the portrait waved its hand, the bird sitting on it flew away. The sound of water was heard.

“They don’t follow my aesthetic sensibility. They have their own set of tastes. It may have been influenced by me a little bit… but it’s not something I can impose on them now.”

“It looks like a real bird.”

“This is a painting. The paintings I paint, as the owner of the painting, become real. They can breathe and live if I want. They can.”

“…….”

“Is this a sufficient answer to your question?”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been silent for a moment, soon opened his mouth.

“This bird doesn’t look like a simple painting. It looks alive. Could it possibly come out like you, Geo?”

"well."

Geo didn't give a clear answer. It seemed like he didn't know what would happen either, or he didn't want to tell them much. Yoo Seong-un didn't care much and just let it go.

I just asked cautiously.

“Here….”

“…….”

“Do you have a soul?”

31 years after the dungeon was created, people have come to acknowledge the existence of 'souls'. It was an inevitable trend as various skills targeting souls were created.

There is nothing that is not rare about such skills.

“Have you created a bird with a soul, now?”

"well."

Same answer as before.

'I don't understand what you mean.'

The portrait was still blunt.

It was a face that did not resemble that of a person who had just created a new life, and so it had a more alien and eerie appearance.

'They act like it's normal to act in a way that doesn't look human at all, but they have eyes, a nose, and a mouth that look like a human's, so it feels even more bizarre.'

It felt like a completely different level of discomfort compared to the monsters and other creepy things I usually saw.

The portrait answered as expected.

“I don’t know either.”

“If you, the owner, don’t know, who will?”

“Nobody may know.”

His voice was clear.

“I just painted a picture. And I was a person in the picture.”

“…….”

“I can decorate this picture, and the decorated picture becomes real in this portrait. Just like the last time Mr. Yoo Seong-un drew me an apple….”

“…….”

“After all, it’s just a painting.”

It may sound like a pun, but it wasn't wrong.

'The picture within the picture is real.'

Yoo Seong-un asked again after a while.

“You created a bird in a painting. You drew a jewel and gave it to me. And you were able to pass it on to me.”

"you're right."

“Geo, you are clearly a painting, but you are also a human being and can affect reality.”

He asked.

“So can you draw a real life here?”

“…….”

“It’s not just about going out of the picture and going back in like last time, but it’s about being able to portray something like a destiny, a past, or a memory. Or else….”

“…….”

“Or a real person.”

Geo answered immediately.

“It might be possible, it might not be possible.”

“…….”

“But I don’t want to do that.”

“…Why? Isn’t it lonely or boring inside the picture?”

“I don’t feel lonely here.”

His speech was still blunt.

“I feel comfortable here. The weather is always nice, the spring breeze blows, and the forest is full of scent. Nothing is too much trouble or too much effort.”

“…….”

“If you ever get bored, all you have to do is make new friends like you are doing now. That’s enough.”

Yoo Seong-un was a little surprised.

“Are you satisfied with your peaceful world of paintings?”

The existence of the other types he had seen so far had always been a desire for reality. Regardless of the presence or absence of self, their actions were instinctive, like the stems of plants stretching out toward the sunlight.

“Don’t you feel like coming out?”

“I'm tired.”

“That… may be true, but….”

“I don’t want to leave. This is my home now.”

“…….”

Just now, clearly, you said, 'now.'

‘…There was a time when this portrait did not live.’

The portrait claimed to be human, and said that there were times when it did not remain a portrait, but there was no guarantee that it would remain on Earth.

'It could be another dungeon or dimension. No, if we think about Geo's usual speech and attitude, this one seems a bit more likely.'

The portrait continued speaking, regardless of Yoo Seong-un's thoughts.

“I cannot create a creature that threatens me.”

“…a threatening creature?”

“Humans are always beings who have the potential to harm other beings. The only creatures I can create are those who are kind to me. That is the rule of this portrait.”

“…….”

“I didn’t know at first, but after trying a few times, I understood. Since I am the owner of this portrait, I cannot create a being that can erase me. That is why I cannot draw humans.”

The portrait murmured.

“Because a portrait without an owner is not valid.”

After saying that, Geo looked at the meteor cloud again.

“It is a bit daunting to create humans.”

“Why?”

“That’s so special.”

“Isn’t it better if it’s special?”

“I’m not that special, so that’s no good.”

“…….”

“I am satisfied with the extent of my specialness as a talking portrait.”

It was certainly so profound that it was hard to believe that it was simply the thought of a portrait of an ego.

'It's definitely not an ordinary monster or item.'

That's why it had an eerie aspect.

“…….”

“Does this answer your question sufficiently?”

“Today, yes.”

Monsters too,

Items too.

If you are neither a ghost nor a human.

“See you next time.”

What on earth is this?

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (11)

Episode 11

“…….”

Geo was standing in the workshop.

“…….”

What he was looking at was a large number of drawers covering the entire four walls.

What he was thinking of was the paint supplies that would be quietly sleeping in that drawer.

“…….”

Finally, Geo moved.

“…Let’s do what we wrote last time.”

He brought out the materials he had used in the past to create water birds.

That wasn't all. There were also white, transparent pebbles like marble from the stream, as well as gemstones that resembled aquamarine and emerald.

A piece of obsidian branch, hidden in the forest, pretending to be a burnt tree. The light green bark was so vibrant that it seemed as if it would sap out when pressed… .

When he thought that this was enough, Geo stopped taking out ingredients from the drawer.

“If there’s any left over, it’ll be tiring to put it back, so if there’s not enough, I’ll bring more out later….”

Dalgak, Dalgrak.

I placed the materials on the workbench.

“…Today’s content.”

Make your own paints.

“Good.”

Basically, the materials needed to make oil paints were pigments to create the color, oils to dissolve them, and a glass plate and pestle to mix them together to make a fine paint. If you wanted to mix them well, you also needed a fillet knife of an appropriate size.

Among them, what Geo was trying to make now was a pigment that would give color.

“Let’s try breaking it first.”

The materials I had just taken out of the drawer were not enough to make proper paints. They had to be made into colored powders, and that would require crushing them first.

Geo prepared a sharp nail and a hammer. He stared at the transparent jewel, then placed the nail on a certain spot and tapped it.

“…….”

Even though it wasn't a strong force, the jewel that hit the crack exactly broke in two.

Geo thought.

'As expected, Naran Potato is a wonderful potato.'

This mountain village idol knows the splitting point just by looking at a mineral.

'I should have been a miner.'

Geo continued his work.

Dalgrak.

“…….”

Knock, knock.

Tsk tsk…!

“…….”

Exactly.

"…okay."

Perhaps because he only checked the weakest joints and gave them a shock, the jewel was quickly split into pieces smaller than Geo's little fingernail.

“This is enough.”

Geo smashed the gems into small pieces with a hammer, then scooped the smaller shards into a ceramic pestle and ground them vigorously.

At some point, the sound that had been hitting my ears suddenly changed to a soft sound like glass beads rolling, and all the jewels turned to dust.

“…What is the principle behind this….”

The pigment that was completed was a mysterious mixture of blue and light green.

“It’s a problem, everything that makes me up is so special that I shouldn’t be taken to the lab.”

All the materials in this studio were unique.

Originally, if you grind a gem, all you get is stone dust. Most gems are transparent and have beautiful colors because of their molecular structure, but if you grind them, you can't find the transparency of the gem.

But the jewel here was different.

'Even if you change it, the color and transparency remain intact.'

Even after going through an amateur process like Geo's, the original color was still intact, which was truly the benefit of excellent materials. When the finely ground gems were gathered together, they would shine with a unique, refreshing transparency.

Geo silently made all the ingredients into pigments and slowly mixed them with the prepared oil.

“…….”

No matter how much powder he made, the oil and pigment did not float even when mixed with raw stone powder. Normally, he would have to prepare oil that matches the characteristics of the pigment, but the wax he had in his studio showed excellent viscosity and compatibility.

“…and mix incense….”

Beyond simply adding color, Geo also added a matching scent. Oils scented with flowers or fruits worked surprisingly well with pigments.

“If you grind it and put it in….”

The pigment and fragrance oil were added and ground finely on a glass plate.

“…….”

So that you can feel the silk brushing your hand.

Very nicely.

* * *

The water birds Geo created were more playful than expected.

“Kids.”

Dalgrak.

“Dad, the back of my neck is cold.”

They were crawling inside Geo's collar and making a nest.

Inside the collar of a shirt, inside the slightly open sleeves, and in any space in pants or tops, there were water birds wedged in.

'Isn't it uncomfortable?'

If we were to use a metaphor of small water balloons, the sight of those guys crumpling up their shape and settling inside the clothes was hardly like balloons or birds.

Geo looked up at the ceiling for a moment, his crumpled appearance still maintaining a minimal round shape.

“…….”

I'll let it slide because it's funny.

“…Maybe it’s because it’s a task for me as a parent, but I guess he likes to be stuck somewhere. Or maybe he likes to hide.”

Waterfowl tend to flock together, or else they prefer to stay in a certain place.

Sometimes when I went outside the cabin, I was surprised to see puddles of water even though it wasn't raining.

'It's definitely different from an ordinary puddle of water, so you can tell right away.'

The pool they were gathered in had a faint blue glow, was strangely transparent, and had various odds and ends rolling around in it.

It was ironic that when I thought of them usually gathered in a round bird shape, I didn't feel any viscosity at all.

“It looks like just water.”

Passover.

“If you keep making a fuss, I might stick a straw in your mouth and suck the piss out of you.”

Rustle, rustle.

“I was joking, don’t drink it. Even I thought it was a scary thing to say.”

Living water? How can you drink that?

“It is physiologically difficult to eat something alive, drink paint, or ingest a child that I created with paint.”

Dalgrak?

“I feel fear before I am moved by your filial piety, which allows you to sacrifice your own body if your father is thirsty. I think it would be better to control yourself.”

Geo was sitting in his studio, having a meaningless conversation with his hundreds of swollen children.

“I have to build you a house.”

At first, I didn't think much of it, but when I saw living, moving water moving around near my house, I couldn't help but get a little worried.

If they were just quietly hanging out together, it wouldn't be a problem, but they would often come into the house and cause trouble or steal things. Geo would say they're cute and let it go, but sometimes they hide in the stream...

“I’ve been saying this since a while ago, but I really didn’t mean to drink. I made a slip of the tongue, kids.”

Piss.

“No, I don’t want that. Don’t criticize this dad for his strange tastes. I just wanted to drink water.”

I almost drank the water fowl.

“Don’t you know how surprised I was when you popped out of my mouth? Yes, you, you with nothing in your stomach right now.”

The only way to distinguish water birds was through the soft light and the odds and ends within them, but they had no belongings and were completely absorbed into the stream, making it impossible to distinguish them.

When Geo felt the water gurgling in his mouth, his heart sank. The people involved seemed to not care, but surprisingly liked it, but Geo did not have such a ruthless taste.

“You need a home too.”

Dalgrak, Dalgak?

“You need your own habitat.”

Do we not have money, time, or land? In this abundant and vast world, how can we live like a slave?

"and…."

I also had a personal interest.

“I’m going to try decorating this place a little bit too.”

Knock knock, bang!

“It’s too monotonous now.”

A cabin, a vast forest, and a beautiful spring. That alone wasn't enough.

“I need to build a fishing spot.”

There is a reason why open-world RPGs are so popular. Since ancient times, it has been the norm for all content to have a map that is not just large, but also rich in elements to enjoy.

“This isn’t really a game, but it’s something that needs to be developed further. It’s the same context.”

The outdoor activities Geo does now are limited to gathering and farming. He had to gradually increase the content he could do so that he wouldn't get bored without having to go outside the picture.

“I feel strangely uneasy outside these days.”

B.B.

“Is it because it’s not the world I remember…?”

Yeah.

“I don’t want to live there.”

Geo liked the current picture.

“The life of a freeloader is also good.”

Actually, this was the best.

“…Come out now.”

Click! Click!

“I don’t mind watching you draw, but I get nervous when you guys keep your clothes on. My shirt is about to burst right now, you poor thing.”

Dalgrak… .

“Do you think this dad is doing this for my own good, kids? Remember, this is all to build a home for you.”

Fortunately, the water birds came out of Geo's clothes without any problems.

“…….”

Thanks to his children who knew how to listen when he spoke, Geo was finally able to pick up a paintbrush.

He opened his mouth.

“If you go fishing….”

A big lake would be nice.

“Let’s go to the lake.”

Let's make a lake where the trees and water are in complete contact.

There will be fish living underneath. There will be small trouts that flow in from the stream, and there will be flat fish that are trapped and hidden in the sand at the bottom.

“Good.”

Let's also build a bridge for fishing.

There is a wooden bridge that connects the middle of a large lake. The color is a little light. I like the soft and gentle color like freshly baked bread. If the water of the lake is slightly visible between the wooden planks, it would sparkle in the sunlight during the day.

What will the evening scene be like?

“…….”

The surface of the water will glow like a soft lantern as it sways in the wind.

I wish I could see inside it better when it gets dark at night. I wish I could see all the way inside that deep lake.

It would be a bright but soft light, like the fluorescent bracelet I treasured and enjoyed as a child, hiding under a thick blanket in a dark room so that only I could see it.

“…I don’t mind if the colors change depending on your mood.”

Rustle.

“Gold for a good day, red for a bad day, blue for a sad or gloomy day… green for a normally peaceful day.”

Parsnip, parsnip.

“You can’t cry because you don’t have vocal cords.”

If you can't hear it, make it visible.

“Then I will talk to you too.”

Although Geo was the creator of the water birds, he could not control them as he pleased.

So, we don't know what the water birds are thinking, their appearance is vague, and they have no vocal cords, so they are quiet, so if we don't listen, we can't tell where they are.

'It wasn't for nothing that I almost got eaten. Such a disaster must never happen again.'

If it weren't for their playful and talkative personalities, Geo would definitely not have found them.

“…….”

That seemed a little sad.

“I’ll go out to play at night. We can talk then.”

Piss.

“If you shine that kind of light on a dark evening, I can see you even if I’m in the cabin. Okay, that’ll do. I’ll be watching you from the veranda, so you can tell me what you want to say then.”

Phew, phew.

"okay."

Geo moved his brush again.

“Let’s do that.”

The lake he drew held the night.

“…I like it.”

The lake wasn't just one color.

Water birds like to stay together, but the treasures they put in their bodies are different. They have different personalities. What they say, think, and do cannot be the same.

'So the complaints and boasts you whisper every night will all be different.'

So I put their halos on one by one with a brush.

“It’s just like pointillism.”

If you look closely, you will be able to tell which of you are tired and in pain, and which are happy and joyful.

From a distance, I can tell what all of you want to talk to me about and when I need to come and talk to you.

“Good.”

It looked like a flower garden blooming on the surface of water. It was clearly water, perhaps because it was painted with homemade paints, but it had an inexplicable freshness to it.

"good."

Or maybe fireflies, or forest butterflies that fly around here like sunlight and moonlight.

Perhaps it resembled the sparkle of transparent light reflected on a glass window.

“…….”

When Geo had drawn out all their emotions, the lake was dyed golden.

“…It seems good.”

The thrill of bringing something from imagination into reality was indescribable.

The lake will be located a little far from the cabin, and certainly far from the spring. The trees that border the lake will still retain their greenness.

“It will be blue during the day.”

When you scoop up the water, it will be as clear as if it contained the sky, and inside it will be a cool blue like the sea, and when the sunlight hits it, the glitter will look like white.

There are so many water birds hiding there, moving around, and sometimes when they are bored, they stick their heads out and play.

“At night, you can sparkle as you wish….”

Sparkle like water made of mist.

“They are scattering eggs.”

Like a newborn baby who laughs at the slightest breeze, you will shine brightly.

Just imagining that makes me feel so good.

“…….”

Talk.

As soon as I hit the canvas, the painting disappeared.

Perhaps it was my mood, but the scent of water was wafting from far away. It was such a gentle scent that just smelling it made me want to lie down on the moss and fall asleep right away.

'It's like a fragrance coming from water where there is nothing. Is it similar to the feeling of white tree spring water?'

The bird on the shoulder flutters as it smells the scent, and the bird sitting on the canvas flaps its wings.

Padduk!

Porruk, porruk!

Passs ...

Click, click!

Snap…!

A number of birds that had been hanging from the light flew through the open window.

The lively flapping of wings, like a migratory bird returning to its hometown, feels cool as if a wind has passed by from the sea… .

“…….”

I liked it, after all.

The same goes for water birds.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (12)

Episode 12

“It’s completely frozen.”

Geo picked up the dried apricots that had been left to dry in the yard of the cabin.

“…And it’s not even yellow….”

The shiny, metallic sheen really gave it a golden color.

It was just like an ugly gold dust, in size, weight, and shape.

“Since when did I start walking the path of an alchemist?”

It was amazing how plump and juicy red berries had changed like this.

“Is the color similar to sunlight?”

The berries, hard enough to be ground into powder, didn’t look like food. However, Geo, who knew that they could be made into medicine, tilted his head and placed all the dried berries into a glass jar.

Geo, who entered the cabin, received help from the system for the first time in a long time.

“Looking for a knowledgeable friend who can teach me how to make blood sausage.”

Method of preparation: Make a paste by mixing the dried fruit into powder and the juice of the lulupu, and then make a dumpling. Dry it in a dark place for more than a week. It is a good medicine for bleeding and recovery.

“Yeah, here’s that knowledgeable guy. His confidence was well-founded.”

Today's content.

Making blood balls that are good for recovering from bleeding.

“Taran.”

It was a lot of fun to waste time doing productive work.

For Geo, who loved creating and raising things, these things were not a hassle at all.

'Making rice cakes in a hut with plenty of sunlight.'

It was exactly my taste. Geo took the materials and headed to the workshop.

“I’m not going to draw, but there’s no better place to work.”

Since the studio was so large, he could make full use of the workbench as long as he avoided the paint. Geo placed all of his materials on the workbench that he had cleaned in advance.

“…….”

Geo, who had just washed his hands, hesitated.

“…Can I just grind it into powder like I did with pigments? Is this the narrow-minded way of thinking of an art teacher who has only ever touched art materials? But it’s called ‘dried fruit,’ but it’s almost as hard as a mineral….”

Geo, who was in a moderate panic, unconsciously touched the dried fruit. Surprisingly, his mind and body found peace.

“It’s warm.”

The forest, where the weather was clear day after day, was always sunny. As you can see from the warm color, the well-dried goby fruits also felt the warmth of the sunlight.

It wasn't just the skin that felt hot, but there was a gentle heat that permeated even the blood vessels.

“This is the power of sun-dried fruit… Amazing.”

The heart that received that energy began to beat leisurely and clearly, as if it were a lazy afternoon, when I was taking a nap. I felt a gentle sensation, as if I was rolling around in a blanket filled with the scent of sunlight.

“…….”

bang-!!

Geo struck the hammer.

“It’s harder than I thought.”

Boom, crunch!

“Next time, don’t say it out loud like this….”

Crunch… .

“Should I grind it first and then dry it?”

Knock knock, knock.

“But then it would be difficult to keep all the juice in this way.”

The fruit, as hard as a mineral, shattered with a dull sound.

“…….”

I think this is enough.

'Put it in a bowl and grind it.'

Geo nodded.

Geo was a person who made pigments using all kinds of hard things, such as jewels and shells. Naturally, the bowl would get scratched or broken, so he made several bowls in advance to prepare for such cases.

Among them, Geo, who brought an unusually clean glass bowl, began to crush the fruit.

Knock, knock.

“No, what kind of firmness is this….”

Even though it was chopped into small pieces, there was a sound that made me wonder, 'Is this right?' No matter how much I thought about it, it seemed like Geo himself had awakened as an alchemist.

'I guess I'll have to make a grindstone later too.'

Judging by its insane firmness, I thought maybe it had been dried too long.

“Maybe I was under the impression that forest materials wouldn’t spoil.”

One of the special features of this forest was that the food and crops did not dry out or spoil.

It was the same with cooking. I thought that a world where food never gets moldy was every chef's dream.

But I learned for sure from this fruit that this condition does not last indefinitely. The goby fruit that was left out for a long time did not spoil, but continued to dry out and became excessively hard.

“…….”

Is that why I feel even warmer?

‘… I need to think about this a bit more. I’ll have to try it out myself to see what kind of results I’ll get if I stick to a certain method.’

A warm sensation that cannot be felt from ordinary fruits was felt from the dried fruit. Considering that it was an ordinary dried fruit just a week ago, it certainly seemed to have its own unique characteristics.

Anyway, it was funny and good. Now Geo could go somewhere and say that he had tried forging gold.

“This is enough.”

Booths… .

It's a moist powder.

“It looks just like snow.”

Among them, it seems like the snow clumps together well.

It's dried out so much that I feel like it can't possibly be like this anymore, but where does this subtle moisture come from?

In fact, there was no moisture at all, but Geo might have been mistaken in thinking that it was strangely moist.

"…hmm."

As I took a quick taste of the powder, my body felt refreshed and a sweetness spread across my tongue.

“…….”

Geo blinked twice.

“…It would be delicious if you put it in while baking.”

In the past, when sugar was scarce, it is said that common people used ground chestnuts found on the roadside instead of expensive sugar or strong-smelling honey.

Its rich flavor and subtle sweetness go well with many foods, so it is even used to make crepes.

“There’s nothing I can’t do.”

The powder from the dried fruit, fully ripened in the sun, had almost lost its original sourness, and only the characteristic green sweetness of dried fruit remained.

The sweetness was very strong, but it also had a light taste like grain or eggs. It was something I had never felt when eating freshly picked goji berries, so I wondered, 'Is this the taste of sunlight?'

“It might be difficult to use it as part of a meal because of its strong fruity flavor, but it would go well with sweet pastries such as crepes or madeleines topped with whipped cream or ricotta cheese. It would also go well with the refreshing lemon flavor of the goby fruit.”

To be called a true pig, you must think about what to eat, even when washing, eating, and sleeping. In that sense, Geo was a pig.

“I should have told you in advance.”

The goby fruit, full of pulp, was even more juicy. It felt like drying jelly the size of a Kyoho grape.

‘If you want to use this powder in cooking…’

It seemed wiser to dry them in large units in advance.

'It'll take quite some time.'

Geo lifted the glass bottle, having ground all the berries into powder.

“Since you might fail, let’s try most of them. People should always live with the possibility of failure in mind. That’s the shortcut to longevity.”

He left just enough powder to make balls smaller than the beads sold in stationery stores.

Geo, who had finished sorting out all the powdered goji berries, lifted the bottle next to him. Something inside was rustling deeply like a transparent Milky Way.

“…….”

It was the juice of the Lulupu, a flower from the well, that I had made a while ago.

“…Of course it wouldn’t have hurt….”

The juice of Lulupu contained in the glass bottle somehow resembled the spring water from which it grew.

Should I say it is similar to water filled with sunlight? Or should I say it contains slightly warm moonlight?

Lulupu's juice, which materialized the light that she had carried in her body her entire life and made into her own blood, was difficult to express as simply water with glitter in it.

‘… It really looks like the Milky Way. I wonder if this is what it would look like if the Milky Way were reflected on the shallow waters of the White Tree Spring.’

Perhaps because it was so enjoyable to look at, Geo, who had been staring at it for a while, soon muttered.

“That’s cool.”

Geo dropped Lulupu's juice onto the barracks filled with finely ground powder.

Even though I hadn't dropped a single drop, the powder had already become soaked and had taken on a deep golden color. The powder, which had a cool blue color that gave off a unique sense of moisture, had a strangely cool feel to it.

“…like gold dust soaked in water.”

Geo, who was thinking for a while, pressed the powder down, then took it in his hand and rolled it gently. Because he was timid, it was very small, but the rice cake was completed.

“…….”

It looked like a real gold bead.

“……?”

At this point, shouldn't it be called a gold ball rather than a blood ball?

“Well anyway.”

Geo, who had a feel for the moisture content of the powder and the moistness of the juice, started making rice cakes one by one.

Thanks to his experience of tearing and eating sujebi (handmade dumplings) and making and eating honey-made rice cakes at home, he was able to make some pretty good rice cakes. Geo was able to make a total of 15 rice cakes.

“…….”

Geo felt a moment of emptiness as the powder of the goji berries he had worked so hard to grind was all used up. Life was bitter. There was a secret to life in it.

“…But there was still juice left.”

Because the powder itself was so moist, I couldn't use up all of the juice from the Lulupu, which spread incredibly well. In the end, I only used up about a third of the bottle, let alone half a bottle.

“How do I deal with this?”

It was at that very moment that I was worrying about that.

“…….”

“…….”

"uh…."

Geo made eye contact with a water bird sitting by the window of his studio.

“Oh, wait a minute.”

Dalgak Dalgak Dalgak!!

"no."

Damn it-!!

Lulupu's juice was stolen.

“…….”

What is this?

A water bird puffs up its body to the max and wraps its entire body around a large glass bottle to block it.

"……??"

Geo was taken aback by the greedy figure that looked like a slime straight out of a game.

"What are you going to use it for?"

It was funny how he swallowed a bottle three times his size with his small body, but I was really curious as to why he did that.

"Why did he show such enthusiasm when he couldn't even swallow it all?"

Dalgrak… .

"It's not that being stubborn won't work, it's that the bottle is bigger than your body."

Dalgrak!

"Do you see this bottle sticking out? Do you see it? I declare that you have the makings of a pig."

Daughter!! Cut!!

"Such a sharp clipping, what a novel performance art. You are truly my child."

It was mainly because he hit the ball without thinking. These days, it seems like even paint can be inherited.

"How do you plan to use it?"

I wondered what use the water bird would have for that, but the water bird flew into the glass bottle as if it were nothing. In the blink of an eye, the water bird was crumpled into the shape of a bottle.

"uh?"

In this way, the water bird combined with Lulupu's juice.

“What is this….”

“Kururuk.”

“Did you tell me?”

“Kuruk.”

“Make a sound?”

Has it evolved?

“…….”

As expected, you are my child.

'Things don't always go as planned.'

As Geo turned the bottle upside down and shook it, the water bird that had been trying to cling on for some reason, whether it was pride or something else, was soon pushed away.

Chulup, bong!

Iron Buck!

“…….”

“…….”

The guy who fell down with a cute sound like a stationery liquid monster was soaking up all of Lulupu's juice and was shining somewhere.

“…….”

“Kuruk.”

Talking, and most of all.

“…It’s warm.”

I felt warmth.

“What happened?”

“Kururuk.”

“It’s absurd and fun, but I don’t know what kind of harmony this is. After all, life is a series of contents.”

“Kurung.”

“If you drink Lulupu’s juice, will the animals evolve? When I took a sip, nothing changed? Is this discrimination?”

Perhaps it was a possible change because the waterfowl was a species born from Geo's hands. Common sense would suggest that it would be impossible for a creature whose entire body was made of water to croak as if it had vocal cords.

“It might not be good to suddenly grow up, but I don’t think it’s a bad change for your body.”

“Gurrrr.”

“Well, that’s fortunate, but….”

Geo, who had been pondering the boiled egg, soon accepted the whole situation.

'It's okay because it's fun.'

Yes, in fact, Geo didn't think about it at all. He successfully finished all his worries.

“Water that talks and flies? That’s really amazing.”

“Crunch?”

“It seems like the body color has changed a little bit….”

The once transparent body turned a light yellow color, like water mixed with gold dust.

The water bird that drank the Rurupu juice was probably one that often carried jewels around, as its sparkling body was filled with yellow and transparent jewels. It matched well with Rurupu's unique sunlight and moonlight-like sparkle.

"hmm."

This color, which is no different from the visibility of a yellow sign, would be visible even when passing by on the KTX.

A guy full of gorgeous and gentle colors. This one definitely seemed like it would stand out from the others.

“If it stands out this much, I can give it a name.”

“Kurururul?”

“Do you like it? That’s good.”

Geo said soon.

“Golden….”

“…….”

“I also thought that was not right the moment I said it. This dad sometimes makes slips of the tongue.”

Geo saw the water with a serious expression for the first time.

Even though I am a parent, there are things I can and cannot say to my children. Naming Geumjok is definitely one of those things I cannot say.

“…….”

The Seo family had never had a talent for naming. He put more effort into his brain and thought about it seriously.

“Then, what about Honey…?”

“Crunch?”

“Because it’s a sweet color.”

The bird, with its warm golden color, resembles sunlight or moonlight, but also resembles honey with a strong fragrance.

Geo said, stroking the slightly squishy and hardened goldfinch.

“My naming sense only goes so far.”

“Kururuk.”

“You’re so merciful that you don’t hate this.”

Honestly, I thought you'd hate it because the name is Honey.

'Maybe you don't understand what I'm saying and don't know what honey is.'

I thought about that for a moment, but what can I do if I like it anyway?

Geo watched the honey slowly sinking into the glass bottle again.

“You’re cute.”

It was healing to watch.

“A crumpled cat in a box….”

“Krrrr.”

“Does your voice get crooked as your body crumples? It’s even cuter.”

“Kyu-ryung.”

“This is the epitome of cuteness.”

Honey, who had managed to squeeze herself into the glass bottle, picked up the bottle. The strangely lukewarm glass bottle was just the right size and felt like a hot pack.

'It smells sweet too.'

It's like looking at a warm bonfire, and it makes my mind go blank.

"hmm."

As I gazed at the warm and pretty glass bottle with its sweet scent, I felt drowsy, as if I was eating lunch on a spring day and attending class.

Eating and sleeping are the pig's duties. And it seemed like Honey was doing the same.

“…….”

Geo put the glass bottle inside his outer garment without blocking its opening.

“I take it you agree.”

“Krung.”

The two fell asleep, lying down like spread-out laundry.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (13)

Episode 13

“…….”

Geo said as soon as he woke up.

“…fruit tea….”

I want a warm and sweet fruit tea.

“Let’s make some blue.”

That's how today's content was decided.

Making cheong wasn't that difficult. All you needed were tools that had been sterilized with love, fruits that had been grown with affection, and a certain amount of sugar.

'Oh, this is the amount of sugar you need to consume to the point where you think you're going to get diabetes.'

And most fruits could be made into syrup. You could use more than one fruit as long as they blended well.

“…….”

The first fruit Geo decided on was the goji berry.

“But I think this will be too sweet.”

If there were two flavors needed to successfully make fruit syrup, which is sugar water itself with the flavor of fruit, the first was sourness, and the second was bitterness.

The sugar alone is already sweet enough to make your tongue sting, so if you add sweet fruit to it, it becomes nothing more than canned fruit. Geo learned this fact when he made syrup with ripe, sweet tangerines.

“That tastes good too.”

But what Geo wanted now was a bitter fruit tea with a sweet base and a hint of sourness.

It wasn't a very difficult composition.

“I’ll need some sour and bitter fruits to go with the goji berries.”

The combination I often eat in real life is mainly strawberry and lemon.

Strawberries aren't completely sour, but they're soft and sweet overall. On the other hand, lemons have sour flesh and bitter peels, which adds depth to the strawberry's one-dimensional sweetness.

This time it was similar.

“Although they are sour, the goji berries are on the sweet side.”

And because the sweetness is so strong, I thought it would go well with sour fruits like lemon or bitter fruits like yuzu. Such a fruity drink with such a variety of flavors was especially satisfying when drunk as a warm tea.

"honey."

“Gurr.”

"let's go."

Geo, with a golden water bird on his shoulder, set out on an adventure with confidence.

He spoke to Honey, who had already moved into the basket.

“It’s okay if I just draw and make things like lemons or yuzu, but the food that’s made that way all tastes so-so… I like harvesting them myself better.”

“Kururuk?”

“It’s good for me, and it’s also good for the fruit syrup I’m going to make in the future. If possible, I’d like to try using unique fruits from this forest rather than fruits with weak flavors.”

Geo could draw pictures and create edible things. But strangely, all the ingredients and food he created were somehow bland.

It was okay to eat it when I was bored, but I didn't want to use it in a dish I was going to make. Geo pledged to make a fantasy-like fruit syrup, putting his grandmother's honor on the line, as she was the village's leading lady.

“When I think about it that way, farming doesn’t seem like a bad choice.”

“Kkuk.”

“As someone who grows new potatoes in Gangwon-do, I think the soil here is very suitable for farming. It’s always a mild spring day, but it’s not always windy, and it never rains, but the soil is always moist, and there are streams here and there. It’s a good environment for watering.”

“Kuuuk….”

“I don’t have any seeds or seedlings, but I think I can get help with that part from Mr. Yoo Seong-un. If I want to receive something beyond the picture, I'll have to give something in return, but I can give as much as I want…."

The human life guaranteed unlimited content had such an onion-like charm. Even if it didn't seem like it, if you squeezed it, anything would come out.

"Good."

Great. Isn't this freedom the greatest happiness of being unemployed?

"It would be hard for crops grown by my own hands, full of the energy of the Gangwon-do mountains, to taste bad. Right?"

"Gurrrr."

"I really feel like I've become a country person. It's like I've moved to the countryside. I should have lived a peaceful and warm life like this a long time ago…."

For Geo, who was born in a mountain village in Gangwon-do, it could have been a homecoming.

"Ever since I was little, I enjoyed helping out with various tasks. Thanks to the fact that the elders had set up so many different things, I was able to try beekeeping, dig up ginseng, and meet wild boars…"

"Crunch?"

"I'm not talking about poaching. We literally met and parted ways without anyone getting hurt or killed. I think we met thanks to someone who was going around the mountains to collect mushrooms and ginseng."

There was no one who didn't have a vegetable garden, and some people raised chickens, ducks, or quails. I remember how happy it was to make cheese with fresh milk from a farm I knew across the street, or simply eat honey.

Geo was a man who had done almost everything a human could do on earth.

“There’s no way someone like me wouldn’t be able to do some farming.”

Grandma, please watch over me.

“I will prove my talent in the name of our village.”

“Kkurung?”

“I was originally taught that you shouldn’t put your name on something like this.”

My grandmother's guiding principle was that if you can't do it, you should sell the names of the elders in the family.

“Of course, I don’t think this is the kind of situation you’re talking about.”

Interpretation was a matter of personal freedom.

“Then what kind of seeds should I ask for….”

“Kur?”

“…First of all, potatoes, sweet potatoes, and corn are absolutely necessary.”

Geo's mouth opened.

“It’s not for nothing that it’s a representative famine relief crop around the world, so it’s good to grow it in case of emergency. And I hope you grow some radish, too. In particular, if you pick out the young radish sprouts and mix them with rice, soy sauce, and oil, they're so delicious."

"Gulp, gurgle."

"Pumpkin? Pumpkin is good. Old pumpkins that grow big are good for making porridge, small and sweet pumpkins are delicious when simply boiled and drizzled with honey, and long and plump zucchinis are good for making soup with a moderately rich flavor and filling. You know a thing or two."

There were many other things that came to mind.

"Like lettuce?"

"Kung kung kung…."

"It's surprisingly good. It's easy to grow, and if you pick off the well-grown leaves and eat them with rice and soy sauce, you can quickly solve a meal. Or, you can boil things like bok choy in a clear broth and eat them."

"Kururuk."

"Peas would be nice, too. Oh, and cherry tomatoes… I like these too. If you have a vegetable garden, you should definitely have at least one tomato plant."

Having said that, Geo looked down at the basket in his hands.

"……."

"Cur."

"aha."

Honey was seen spread out like a liquid monster spilled inside the basket.

"okay."

It's cute, so that's fine.

Honey was a bird that mainly carried jewels. The jewels in the basket, which were filled with golden liquid that seemed to be dripping with rich honey, were quite a sight to behold. It seemed like it would not be boring to be together.

Geo, who was talking about his future farming plans, soon stopped in front of a tree.

"ah…."

A pitch-black tree.

It was a tree made of obsidian.

“I found this first.”

Starflower Tree

A living obsidian tree. It grows by absorbing the starlight that shines on its body. The flowers of the starflower tree bloom every morning with the light and obsidian residue it has absorbed. The flowers of this tree are effective in treating burns and frostbite. The tree's sap and bark are mainly used as materials for works of art.

Method of preparation: The buds just before they bloom are good for frostbite, and the fully bloomed flowers are good for burns. They can be used by boiling them in water until they are soft, then soaking them in the sap of the Dorong Dorong leaf for ten days. Be careful not to ingest the flowers without the above process, as this can cause burns and frostbite.

“…….”

Geo blinked twice as he looked at the explanation that appeared automatically.

“Did I use too much obsidian paint last time?”

A considerable amount of obsidian powder was consumed in the process of creating a habitat for water birds. It is a material often used to create a transparent texture like water or glass, and it would be a good opportunity to collect it.

Geo found a chisel and a hammer in the basket. They were tools that did not fit the word for foraging, but they were the best helpers for collecting starflowers.

“Get up, son. I find it cute how lazy you are, but Daddy has to work.”

“Gulp.”

“This isn’t your type of thing. Give it to me. That’s right.”

Geo, who gently coaxed Honey, who was playing with the tools, and retrieved the items, quickly put the basket down on the ground and approached the obsidian tree. He touched the branches of the obsidian tree to check the temperature and moisture.

I felt a faint warmth as if to prove that I was alive, and the sap flowing through it like blood.

"maybe…."

Geo found a dead branch among them.

“Is it this way?”

A hard branch with a strangely cold aura, reflecting light sharply rather than sparkling, and not feeling the slightest bit of moisture.

Geo felt around the edge, checked it, then brought the chisel and hammer closer.

And then knock, knock.

“…….”

Boom…!

"Okay."

The obsidian branch fell off easily, making a clear sound.

The branches that were still alive could not be easily separated as they are now. They were too hard and had sticky sap stuck to them inside, so they would not break easily even if you tried to break them.

'Obsidian is so hard that it is difficult to use it to make paint.'

The sticky, sap-oozing branches were difficult to grind into a clean powder. Unless you wanted to make sharp knives or arrowheads or extract the sap, it was best to pick out as many dead branches as possible.

“That would be better for the tree too.”

Although it is an obsidian tree with a glassy texture, it is still alive. It is a tree that blooms flowers that are excellent medicines, so removing the dead branches would be much more convenient for the tree.

Geo was careful not to let the weakened dead branches break into pieces, and he split the long branches into pieces. The obsidian pieces that contained the cold energy of the stars in the night sky all went into Honey’s stomach in the basket.

“Are you going to take care of it?”

“Gurrrr!”

“Okay, let’s do that.”

It seems like he's trying to get some independence funds in advance, but anyway, he's a bird that really shines. He's like the embodiment of greed that doesn't suit his clear and clean face.

'If it's a shiny stone, it's useless.'

If I do it, I will do it, but at least I won’t suffer for it. Geo looked up again and looked at the starflower tree.

“…….”

The tree was a deep black color that reflected the sunlight clearly like a mirror.

The black obsidian, so cold that it seemed like it should only be seen on a snowy mountain, blended well with the spring environment where flowers and grass were in full bloom, perhaps because it was alive. Occasionally, a forest butterfly, a shape of light, would land on it.

Geo, who had been admiring the sharp, hard tree for a while, moved his feet again.

“…I have to find the fruit.”

“Kyu-reuk.”

“I wish there was some good fruit.”

Fortunately, Geo was able to find a fruit that he liked before long.

drought complex

A tangerine fruit with a light brown peel and cracked skin like a drought field. It does not rot for nearly a year after harvest, so it is used as a preserved food during drought. If exposed to fire or left under the hot sun for three days, it becomes sweet like honey, but is sour and bitter when eaten raw. It is rich in nutrients, so canned food or soup made from it is an excellent nutritional supplement that can save people on the verge of starvation.

Processing method: Process the drought complex into an edible form and consume it.

“It’s a nutritional supplement.”

That part is also very interesting.

“…You’re saying it’s bitter?”

Geo was drawn to this point more than anything else.

'There's no mention of it being poisonous, so I don't think there's any problem eating it raw, but how sour and bitter does it have to be? Could you tell me a way to make it sweeter?'

He bravely picked the fruit.

It was exactly the same size as a Korean tangerine, and the peel was a little harder, but the shape was similar. The flesh inside was also a deep yellow color like honey, but it was all the same as a tangerine.

Sniff sniff, Geo took a bite of the fruit without hesitation after smelling its sour scent.

“…….”

Gulp.

Geo swallowed the fruit calmly.

“…….”

“Ku, kuru… kururu…”

"okay."

At Honey's nervous reaction, Geo nodded with his characteristically blunt face. His facial muscles, which had long since degenerated, did not succumb to this level of hardship and ordeal that occurred only with his tongue.

“It’s so bitter.”

It tasted like I knew why the recipe was only 'processed into an edible form and consumed'.

'Perhaps even the poisons of history were sweeter than this.'

It was a shocking stimulus that made me dizzy.

He barely managed to hold onto his fading senses and realized that the texture was harder than a tangerine and that it was less juicy, but compared to its amazing taste, it didn't bother him too much. He took a deep breath for a while.

“…….”

Why do I feel like I don't hate him? Geo has gained confidence.

“At this level, it’s as sweet as the sweetness of the goji berry.”

A basketful of honey came out, disgusted. The taste seemed too shocking for the sweet honey to handle.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (14)

Episode 14

Fruit syrup is really easy to make.

“It’s a bit of a hassle to prepare, but if you mix half the pulp and half the sugar and leave it to ferment, it becomes fruit syrup.”

Geo brought a clean, sterilized glass bottle filled with friendship, peace, love and affection.

Although it was so big that it was more like a jar than a bottle, Geo, who resembled his grandmother, the village's big shot, was not going to skimp on ingredients when cooking. It had to be this big.

“Okay, let’s see.”

The full-bodied goji berries and the bitter-smelling drought clusters were washed clean in water. The flesh of the goji berries was soft and juicy like a light jelly, while the drought clusters were firm and had little juice, like unripe tangerines.

The skin of the goby fruit is so thin that it melts, so I just cut it into quarters without any additional process, and for the drought-stricken fruit, I peeled off the white, translucent outer skin, leaving only the flesh.

"and…."

Just pour it.

'It would be better if the juicy goji berries were on top.'

At the very bottom of the glass container, place a layer of dried fruit and lightly sprinkle sugar on top. Then, place the dried fruit on top and pour in a generous amount of sugar to create a layer. Once the sugar layer is firmly formed, you can continue to repeat.

Geo pressed down hard to make sure there were no air holes between the flesh.

“Because I don’t want you to get hurt.”

The food in this forest did not spoil or mold, but this process was necessary so that the flesh could be mixed well and the sugar water could be absorbed. Geo filled the glass jars tightly.

“I’m done.”

All you had to do was seal it and store it in a cool, shaded place for a few days.

“I wish it would ripen quickly, but it will probably take some time.”

“Kung, kung, kung.”

“You can’t eat it yet. Even if you take it out and eat it now, it’ll just be sugar-covered fruit. Later, when the flesh becomes more mushy and the sugar water infuses it with flavor, you can drink it as tea.”

“Kkuk.”

“Cooking is sometimes the aesthetic of waiting.”

Honey grumbled and complained, but there was nothing she could do. It would take some time for the fruit juice to fully ripen.

“It won’t take that long. The weather here is warm, so the sugar will melt quickly. The juice will come out smoothly.”

“Kung.”

“Don’t stick to the floor, you’ll get dusty. It’s annoying. If you keep doing this, you’ll end up cleaning all the floors in our house. You’ll go from a honeybee to a dustbug.”

It was late and I was hungry after my adventure to make a successful fruit punch. It was time to indulge in a meal rather than a fruit punch that might ripen at any moment.

"hmm…."

Let's make it really simple.

“Let’s make rice balls.”

“Huh?”

“Can you eat rice too?”

“Gurrrr.”

“Where does the food I eat get digested in this transparent body…?”

As expected, Honey had all the qualities of a pig. Geo, the father of this round piglet, nodded in satisfaction.

“Gurrrr!!”

“Okay, I understand. Let’s go.”

The rice balls that Geo made this time were literally food.

Freshly cooked rice with a little salt and sesame oil.

“It’s a good thing the rice was cooked in advance.”

There was a stove in the cabin, but no electric rice cooker. In the first place, there was no electricity in this world, so there was nothing we could do about it. That’s why Geo had already drawn a cauldron and placed it in the kitchen at the back of the cabin.

As I opened the heavy iron lid, white steam rose up.

“Good.”

As I nodded, the steam that had been floating around suddenly disappeared.

“……?”

At that moment, Honey, who was next to me, caught my eye.

“…….”

I don't know if it was because of my mood, but for some reason I felt like I had gotten a little bigger.

“Kururu.”

“…Are you sure you’re drinking all the moisture that came out of the rice right now?”

“Kung.”

“Your body smells like freshly cooked rice. It’s so delicious, and if I sleep with it next to me, I’ll be so hungry I won’t be able to sleep.”

“Kurung.”

“I’ve seen people put steam on their faces for skin care purposes, but this is the first time I’ve seen someone inhale the steam itself….”

Is this what they mean by 'give way to your stomach, not your skin'?

“It’s amazing.”

The sweet scent of Lulupu's juice and the savory smell of freshly cooked rice were coming together. I couldn't quite define what the scent was.

Geo scooped up some food with a slightly excited look on his face. No matter how surprised he was, a living thing had to eat.

“Let’s make porridge with the stuck-on scorched rice. It’s a very easy-on food, so it’s good to have whenever you want. I’ve never seen anyone who got sick from eating this.”

“Cur.”

“First, make rice balls, then later. If you eat nurungji porridge in the morning when you first wake up and are half-asleep, it’s really refreshing.”

Returning to the kitchen, Geo lightly sprinkled salt and sesame oil on the fluffy rice. There was no need to worry about this or that since the cabin cupboard was stocked with all the basic ingredients.

'What will happen if I use all of this?'

It would be fun if it were automatically filled in like when I first checked the cabin, and even if it wasn't, I could just draw a picture and make a new one anyway, so that was good. But it didn't seem to be filling in yet.

Geo seasoned the hot rice by gently stirring it with his chopsticks.

“Actually, this alone is delicious.”

The smooth, savory taste unique to freshly cooked rice, the rich aroma of sesame oil that gently envelops it, and the rice balls lightly seasoned with salt are so heartwarming when eaten right after they are made.

“It’s a good meal when you need to eat but don’t want to eat something fancy.”

“Gurrrr.”

“If you can eat it, eat it. I don’t know how to eat it, but… wasn’t the steam from the pot a little while ago enough? You seem to have grown, but aren’t you already full?”

“Gulp.”

“Okay, then try it.”

It's a sight of water eating rice.

'It seems fun, so let's leave it alone.'

Geo made rice balls, making a promise to himself.

A total of about 39.

“…….”

“…….”

“Dad, I’m hungry.”

“Gulp….”

“I’m like that because I’m hungry.”

Geo was a big eater.

“Sometimes you have to eat a lot like this to feel full.”

But it didn't stop there.

“I’m going to grill it once for texture. When both sides are golden brown, the texture is better and the rich flavor is more intense.”

“Kung….”

“I don’t know if it’s because the sesame oil flavor is stronger or because the grains are burnt… but it’s much more delicious to grill it like this than to just eat it as a plain rice ball.”

“Kuk kkuung.”

“Well, I guess I’ll get sick of just eating rice.”

Geo lamented the situation his laziness had brought about. He knew that a day would come when he would regret it like this.

“I should have made some side dishes in advance. Then I could have enjoyed a more colorful meal even if I only ate rice.”

“Keuuuung….”

“It would be nice to make a soup with the fish caught from the lake, and it would also be nice to mix various ingredients and make salted seafood. It would also be nice to have something like a meat soup, but it’s a bit strange to eat meat here.”

When it comes to hunting animals on land other than fish, not only do I not know how to do it, but I also feel reluctant to eat cute and round animals that fit Geo's taste. In the first place, I don't know how much flesh there would be in that small, round body.

“Should I ask Mr. Yoo Seong-un for something like this?”

“Gurrrr.”

“With seeds, right?”

Geo placed a well-made rice ball on a pan that was heated sufficiently in the brazier. Along with the sizzling sound, the rich scent of sesame oil and the fragrant smell of crackling grains rose.

'It's a simple but good combination.'

Geo, who had finished grilling all the rice balls, sat down at the table and took a bite.

“…….”

It was delicious, as expected.

‘… Is it because the rice is well-cooked and chewy? Thanks to baking it once, the texture and flavor are good. The saltiness is just right, so it doesn’t get too bland.’

The rice that went into this was in a picture drawn by Geo, so it wasn't in very good or bad condition. So it was a little difficult to expect the power of the ingredients, but the rice ball was still quite tasty.

“Is it because it’s a meal after work?”

“Gurrrrung.”

“…….”

A bird shaped like a rice ball came into Geo's sight.

"oh."

No, that was Honey swallowing a rice ball.

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.”

“Kururuk.”

“I swallowed this.”

“Kurururururung.”

“Even though it’s bigger than your body.”

Geo was convinced after 3 seconds.

“That’s funny.”

“Kkuk.”

“While we’re at it, do you want to have another one? Maybe we can make it bigger here.”

“Gurururum.”

“Yeah, it’s probably not fully digested yet. Of course. That’s how it looks.”

“Kur?”

“Oh, Dad knows everything.”

A peaceful day passed like that.

* * *

“…….”

Damn… .

The meteor cloud in front of the portrait tilted its head.

“You don’t open your eyes again these days.”

I waited from midnight until 5 a.m., the current time, but the portrait did not open its eyes.

Yoo Seong-un muttered, running his finger along my chin.

“I don’t think there are any separate rules for this part.”

The portrait would open its eyes at the time when there were least staff.

The time when I could talk changed from day to day. I didn't necessarily run away as long as they didn't ask rude questions, but I wasn't always looking outside the picture.

Perhaps he liked the world in that portrait.

'Personally, I think it would be wise to do so, though.'

However the world inside the portrait was realized, it was much better than looking at the dirty and complicated modern society. At least, that's what Yoo Seong-un thought.

“…If you think about it that way….”

Perhaps 'Portrait of Geo' likes silence.

“I guess this could be considered one of the rules.”

Yoo Seong-un sat against the wall in front of the portrait and took out a notebook.

'I should keep a record.'

What he does is observe, analyze, maintain, and manage unknown objects or phenomena. With his vast knowledge, Yoo Seong-un has paid such close attention to 'Portrait of Geo' for the first time.

Fortunately, 'Portrait of Geo' was a relatively friendly opponent to humans. It answered questions and returned favors with favors, which was quite gentlemanly.

“Is it roughly organized?”

Thanks to this, the analysis wasn't that difficult.

Value manners

Enjoy giving gifts

No change in facial expression (is it because it is a portrait?)

Knows a lot about people and respects them

‘… This part is definitely special.’

Although Geo's true identity has not been determined yet, caution must be taken. There was a reason why humanoid monsters were designated as the most dangerous elements regardless of their attitude.

'Because those guys knew little about humans.'

Eleven years ago, the first humanoid monsters friendly to Earthlings were sighted. Based on this, associations from various countries began to seek ways to communicate with the inhabitants beyond the dimensional gate.

However, there was an incident where the bodies of the delegation that went over the gate for the purpose of friendship returned as 'healthy deformities'.

'The humanoid monster at that time expressed it in his favor… .'

The body of the envoy seemed inefficient to humanoid monsters, so they increased the legs to four and divided the mouth into six parts.

It was a favor, but at the same time it was a disaster for humans. That was when the saying that monsters are monsters for a reason came into being.

“It’s still scary when I think about it again.”

Since that incident, humanoid monsters have also become targets of subjugation without exception.

No matter how kind they may be to humans, there is no way to know how or when their terrible true nature will be revealed.

'So, I want to be wary of this portrait, but there are too many suspicious aspects to do so. Geo knows too much about humans to be considered a typical humanoid monster. He doesn't unconditionally hate Earth creatures either.'

He is neither very friendly nor very hostile to humans.

A bit cynical, yet at the same time polite and considerate, 'Portrait of Geo' seemed like an ordinary human being, just seriously blunt.

“…….”

Bam.

Yoo Seong-un pressed the pen on his notebook.

“That part is a bit hard to understand.”

Geo didn't look like a monster.

'Unless you're a curator or a gardener, you might say it's a monster... .'

Still, I wasn't sure.

“Yeah, it really could be a monster.”

It could be an item with a self, it could be just a cursed portrait, or it could be a hallucination of a level higher than we can even imagine.

'It's only been about 30 years since the dungeon was created, so we can't know everything.'

So, the best thing Yoo Seong-un could do right now was to analyze this portrait and respond to it.

"hmm…."

First of all, I had a question.

The eyes in the portrait seemed distant and not human, and the appearance of the beauty that did not seem to belong to this world, along with the pale yet stimulating colors, gave off a strange sense of unreality.

'That AI's businesslike tone and unchanging facial expression probably added to the pressure.'

but.

“No matter what, Geo is still a gentleman.”

As can be seen from the rules listed above, Geo has never been a threatening or violent opponent based on his actions so far. As can be seen from his deep understanding of humans, he was definitely considerate and respectful of humans.

'Unlike the ignorant humanoid monsters of the past, this one thinks from the perspective of humans.'

That means there is a depth of understanding that cannot be seen in other monsters.

'And based on that, you express your favor and consideration.'

Didn't you even give her a gift?

“…….”

After thinking for a moment, Yoo Seong-un wrote a new sentence in his notebook.

Prefer nice or polite partners (1:1 rule?)

'... I'm not sure, though.'

If we look at the people Geo has given gifts to so far, they were all people he owed money to or who had treated him kindly.

Since it is a portrait that can distinguish between good and evil in humans, I thought it would be good to like someone who is kind and well-mannered.

'Well, anyway.'

That's not what's important.

“…The question is why did the other employees get so scared and run away….”

The staff here were all people that Bisabal had insisted on nurturing or transferring one by one. Bisabal's collecting habit was shown not only on objects but also on people, and Bisabal, who was very attached to his staff, did not choose stupid or incompetent people.

So, even if they were low-ranking employees, would Bisabal have chosen them carelessly, especially those who managed his beloved gallery? They were all strong and capable people.

“But when I met Geo, I felt scared and pressured.”

Yoo Seong-un has never met Geo in person.

The last time he came out, Yoo Seong-un was just following him and watching him. So, he had no idea what he felt when he confronted Geo head-on.

I could only vaguely guess.

“…….”

If you can oppress a human being just by existing, then the level of your soul must be enormous.

'... If we're going to be that picky, should we be grateful for the quiet sleep inside the portrait?'

Yoo Seong-un sighed deeply with a troubled expression on his face.

“What on earth did you bring, Mr. Visabal…?”

Are you finally going to destroy the Earth?

It was a day when I felt a craving for cigarettes, even though I had quit smoking five years ago.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (15)

Episode 15

“I figured it was a resolution issue.”

“…Resolution?”

Surprisingly, the portrait easily answered Yoo Seong-un's question.

“When I go outside, it’s like the picture becomes reality.”

“Yes.”

“Then wouldn’t there be a difference in the area that humans who see it can perceive?”

Geo, who had opened his eyes after a long time, continued speaking with an attitude of not being shy.

“I don’t know because I’ve never seen a mirror outside of a painting, but most of the staff here seemed to be in a state of utter confusion when they saw me and talked to me directly, as if they were dealing with something unknown. Even after we finished making our names and exchanging information with each other, the fear only grew stronger….”

“Do you think there was a problem in the recognition process?”

“Yes.”

Good analogy.

'It's amazing how the soul can be expressed like this. If you were a teacher, you'd be quite suitable.'

Yoo Seong-un, who did not know that Geo was telling the truth without any lies, thought that this was just the most plausible metaphor that the portrait could explain.

I understand what you mean by resolution.

'Come to think of it, Geo has been introducing himself to everyone he meets for the first time.'

Yoo Seong-un asked a question that suddenly occurred to him.

“Do you value your full name?”

“You can increase intimacy by exchanging names. I figured that would be the case, too.”

“Uh uh….”

“It was to increase intimacy?” Yoo Seong-un asked back with a slightly embarrassed look on his face.

“Have you been using your full name on purpose to make us feel more intimate?”

“It’s also a matter of human courtesy. If you want to get to know someone, you should introduce yourself first.”

"okay."

Rather, it seemed as if he didn't know that that aspect could be even scarier.

‘… It must be really hard to feel close to a being with such a huge soul that you have trouble recognizing it even when it’s right in front of you, and ask for its name.’

To spiritual beings, the true name is always a subject of trade. Unless you are a local or elderly person, even such people know the dangers of exchanging true names.

'Besides, Geo, who is completely black, looks just like a god of death, so he will be more cautious.'

Of course, this is a rule that applies between people. In fact, sharing names is a useful technique when extracting information from others. Just sharing names can build a little bit of trust.

In that sense, it's something I feel every time.

‘…Does Geo really think of himself as human?’

That was the part that needed to be taken care of.

'If the natural respect and consideration that we have now, based on humans, come from such an illusion, we must maintain Geo's ability to think of himself as a human being as much as possible.'

Otherwise, I didn't know what kind of disaster would occur.

“Um… yeah.”

If you think of yourself as a human being, it is easier to ask questions about this and that.

“Then how old are you?”

“I’m 29 years old.”

“…….”

But this was a bit unexpected.

“…29 years old?”

"yes."

“You’re young.”

“I’ve heard the term ‘presbyopia’ a lot, but it’s a painful reaction.”

“Oh, no, that’s not it….”

Even Yoo Seong-un himself found it funny when he asked about the age of the portrait he was talking about, but he had no idea that the portrait, which made him feel dizzy just by looking at it and made it impossible to even make eye contact, was not even thirty years old.

'I wonder if this is also my own illusion.'

It was a statement that could have easily come out if Geo recognized himself as a normal 29-year-old human being, regardless of how long this portrait actually existed.

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“I never thought you’d be younger than me.”

“I’m curious about Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s age. Can you answer?”

“I’m 33 years old.”

“I thought you were in your 20s.”

“That’s really kind of you to say.”

“You’ve been around for a while.”

The portraitist spoke in his characteristically blunt tone.

“Then, you can speak comfortably.”

“Ah… is that okay?”

“I don’t think I ever asked you to use formal language.”

“That’s true, though.”

I deliberately raised my voice because I thought he valued manners, but he didn't seem to care about that. Maybe he put more weight on polite behavior than flashy words.

'Anyway, it seems like you don't dislike me.'

I wouldn't ask someone to talk to me if I felt uncomfortable or uncomfortable.

“Then I’ll make it a little easier.”

“As you like.”

“I’ve been speaking in a high-level tone the whole time, so it feels awkward to try to be more relaxed.”

“For something like that, you speak quite naturally.”

“Ah, that’s… I’m used to being spoken to informally….”

Although I got used to the class life while working as a curator or researcher, in fact, when I worked as a gardener in the past, I was a wanderer.

Even so, I wasn't at the point where I would ignore all manners and manners like a scoundrel, but honestly, I felt more comfortable speaking informally.

“Who the hell said that, presbyopia?”

“It’s something I’ve heard often.”

“You don’t look particularly old. Did someone frame you?”

“Some people don’t believe me when I say I’m in my 20s….”

“Oh, I understand that.”

Yoo Seong-un was convinced.

“You have a rather heavy aura. You don’t seem to be in your 20s.”

“That’s a story I’ve heard often.”

“Then it’s certain. Maybe it was because he didn’t have the aura of a young man.”

I don't know if this portrait was once a human being and has become a painting, or if it's just a painting with human memories, but when people say, "You don't look your age," I think it's because of the atmosphere.

“Besides, before you even mention presbyopia or anything, he’s just handsome.”

“Thank you for the compliment.”

“If you’re that handsome, the feeling of maturity doesn’t matter at all.”

Her skin was as smooth as porcelain, as if white powder was dripping down it, and her facial features were sharp and clear, giving her a strong impression.

The expression that seemed at times angry but at other times just calm matched the bluntness well.

“It must have been popular.”

“I have no dating experience.”

“…….”

I never thought I would hear such a story from a portrait artist.

“…Not there? With that face?”

“I have never had any experience receiving a confession.”

“Have you ever done this?”

“I didn’t do it because I wasn’t interested.”

“I think I know what the situation was.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed hollowly.

It's the same context as before. The atmosphere was so heavy that he couldn't confess even though he had feelings for her, or he probably assumed that she already had a lover by that face and backed off.

‘… Seeing you say things like this, I guess you were once a human and then became a portrait.’

Considering the remarks made by someone who seems to have some experience in social life.

“What….”

But, I don't think it's time to ask about that yet.

'I made you run away last time.'

Yoo Seong-un decided to change the subject.

“But it seems like you don’t come out much these days?”

“Aren’t we talking right now?”

“Other than that, there were times when I actually came out.”

Because of this, ominous ghost stories still circulated among curators. Since Bisabal had kept his mouth shut about this, Yoo Seong-un was unable to explain the truth behind the ghost stories.

“At that time, it almost felt like I was going to go outside the gallery.”

“I’m sorry if I caused any misunderstanding, but I had no intention of leaving at that time either.”

“That’s surprising. I thought you wanted to go outside the gallery because your radius of action kept expanding.”

“I was just wondering how far my place extended.”

“Now that we’ve checked everything up to the first floor, does that mean there’s no need to go out?”

“There’s that too….”

The portrait looked down at the meteor cloud.

“I originally tried to avoid active adventures in crowded places, and I am trying to avoid this as much as possible because I am afraid you will be inconvenienced.”

“…No, that was a really unexpected reason. Is that why you didn’t come out? That was such a considerate decision.”

I really wish other monsters and ego weapons would see Geo's behavior and learn from it.

'I didn't know I would receive such consideration from someone outside of Inoe. If I reported it to the academic society, there would be chaos.'

Should I say it was amazing or amazing? It was a portrait whose true identity had not yet been determined, but as a gardener, I was grateful for the good fortune of having encountered such a special being.

I guess all of this is consideration that is possible because I think of myself as a human being… .

“Then, wouldn’t you like to hear Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s story?”

“…My story?”

“I feel like I’ve only talked about myself up until now.”

“Oh, I see.”

Yoo Seong-un was convinced.

'Could this also be considered a 1:1 rule?'

It was a portrait that I really liked being fair. Well, since I've been digging up a lot of stories about portraits up until now, it was a natural flow without having to say any rules or anything.

“Where should I start talking….”

Yoo Seong-un blinked and chose a topic to bring up.

“…First of all, I’m a curator. I’m in charge of maintaining and managing the gallery of the guild leader here, Bisabal. There are many curators here besides me.”

“If it’s a gallery, does it also sell art?”

“Sometimes, yes. This gallery is a place where the most precious and dangerous things in the world are collected, so sometimes there are people who try to buy the works here for the purpose of subjugation or research.”

Yoo Seong-un also explains his work to such customers.

“That’s why any artwork that no curator can explain is marked as not for sale without exception. Even if it’s a gallery that only collects the most dangerous things in the world, if a customer buys it and it causes damage, we will ultimately be held responsible.”

“Aren’t you going to pretend not to know?”

“Even if you want to pretend not to know, you can’t. Things get even more complicated because it can lead to not only a simple legal battle but also an armed conflict. Even if you sign a contract in advance that says, ‘We informed you of the risk and it’s your fault for the damage,’… you can’t address all the customer complaints.”

Moreover, direct retaliation could be inflicted on curators who were not particularly skilled as hunters. In fact, assassins were hired by other companies and several curators were killed.

“The guild master here is so horrible to his staff that it’s unacceptable, but curators elsewhere frequently suffer retaliation.”

“Doesn’t the company there provide separate measures?”

“Why would you do something like that? There are plenty of people who want to work. It’s cheaper to hire new employees than to protect existing ones, so most people just leave them alone.”

“It’s cool.”

“That’s the way the world is.”

It might be disillusioning for a monster who seems to like good things, but in the human world, it wasn't such a big deal.

“Outside the city, people are already dying. There’s no manpower to protect them, and monsters are crawling out… The countryside, which has no proper infrastructure, is practically nature itself.”

“…….”

“The level of civilization in the city and the countryside is about a century apart. Well, there are some people who say that it’s better in the countryside because you don’t have to deal with all the hardships and oppression.”

The portrait spoke bluntly.

“I'm tired.”

“Did I talk too much?”

“I meant that the picture was nice.”

“I agree with that.”

I don't know what the inside of that picture would be like, but it seemed much more peaceful than this dirty and deadly world we live in.

The portrait then asked.

“So, Mr. Yoo Seong-un, are you continuing to work as a curator?”

“Ah… that’s, no. I haven’t been employed for many years.”

“If you don’t mind, could you tell me what you did before?”

“…….”

Is it okay to even say something like this?

After thinking for a moment, Yoo Seong-woon quickly confessed.

“I used to be a researcher.”

“That’s an unexpected answer.”

“And before that, I was a gardener. Actually, I still am a gardener.”

“Are you a gardener who maintains a lush garden of grass and flowers?”

“No, we control the source.”

There was a source in this world.

“I don’t know how much you know, but there are things called dungeons on Earth. They’re dens of monsters made with various themes…”

“…….”

“There are times when the same plants are found in separate dungeons, even though they are clearly from different dimensions. We call them ‘Children of the Origin.’”

The same type of plant is found in dungeons filled with fire and dungeons made up of caves.

This happened despite the dungeon being completely unrelated, and some researchers said it was possible because the plant was derived from the source.

“Can you explain the source?”

“We don’t know the details either.”

But the source was that kind of existence. The lowest, most basic concept of all dimensions.

“If we compare it to a tree, the dungeon is the fruit, and the monsters inside are the seeds of the fruit. The origin is the root of the tree.”

“…….”

“That is, I suspect that the power of the source is also what creates the dungeon.”

“Thank you for sharing this wonderful story.”

“I find you strange too.”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking, smiling heartily.

“Gardeners analyze, manage, and share what happens from that source. They are similar to researchers who analyze the names and powers of new monsters that appear. They are also similar to geography hunters who travel through dungeons and rewrite maps.”

“It seems unrelated, but why is it called a gardener?”

“Well, well.”

Yoo Seong-un blinked his blue-tinged eyes. They soon became a slightly brighter color.

“Some people see the origin as a garden.”

“…….”

“…Because I actually manage a ‘garden’.”

The portrait asked.

“It’s a garden.”

“Yeah, the garden.”

“Is it different from the original?”

“You could say it’s part of the origin.”

Yoo Seong-un answered faithfully.

“If we call a person the source, then the garden we are talking about is a part of that person, such as his blood vessels, fingernails, heart, and eyes.”

“…….”

“They are huge and there are a lot of them. A very small number of highly qualified gardeners are in charge of each of these gardens, which is quite a difficult job….”

Yoo Seong-un laughed as if he was sighing.

“Many people are dying. It’s a difficult job to be relaxed in one way or another.”

“Is it something that someone has to do?”

“If you are chosen by the source, you will definitely have to do something, and if you neglect that work, the difficulty of various dungeons will increase sharply.”

“It’s scary.”

“…Even if you say you’re scared, I can’t feel it….”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking, scratching his ear as if he had heard nonsense.

“I am still a gardener. Becoming a gardener is not something that can be chosen by one’s own will, so even though I am currently working as a curator, I cannot shed my qualifications as a gardener.”

“Is it difficult?”

"any?"

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“It’s still worth doing.”

When I close my eyes, I see huge snow-capped mountains. I see glaciers. Their grandeur is captivating.

“Having my own garden is pretty cool.”

“……”

The portrait answered immediately.

“I understand.”

"okay?"

“Me too.”

"I see."

That's how the conversation ended that day.

I don't know what it was like for the portrait artist, but at least for the gardener it was a pretty enjoyable time.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (16)

Episode 16

"this."

An exclamation that came out while suppressing a smile as if pretending to be polite.

The visa officer asked.

“You’re saying you weren’t coming out because you thought people would be scared?”

“I didn’t say it that way, but in summary, it’s not wrong.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“It seemed like he knew that a being of such a high level of soul as himself would run into trouble if he encountered a defenseless person. But it seems a bit out of harmony that he insists on being an ordinary human being….”

Then Visabal narrowed his eyes like a snake and said:

“It’s true that we can’t rule out the possibility that he’s a humanoid monster in the form of a portrait, but he can’t be considered a simple monster either. He doesn’t hate humans at all.”

“…….”

“If it’s something that even the curator of the meteor cloud isn’t sure about, then it’s probably something related to the source, but since he hasn’t submitted an official report yet, I think it’s something I’ve never seen before.”

“Yes, for now.”

It was rare for a gardener like Yoo Seong-un to have an existence whose source he didn't know.

'The monsters in the dungeon are also beings born from the veins of the origin, but their difficulty is on a different level from that of the origin's children. If it were a type of origin child that Geo had never seen before, the story would become much more complicated.'

The so-called 'Children of Origin' could be found equally in all dungeons. They cannot be resolved through simple subjugation like regular monsters.

That's why he needed extensive knowledge about them and the ability to deal with them, and Yoo Seong-un was a veteran who had been working as a gardener since he was 11 years old.

The portrait of Geo, which was unknown to Yoo Seong-un, was clearly a target of caution.

“Anyway, even if you say ‘child of the origin,’ it is certain that he is an unusual being.”

If there's one thing that monsters and the children of Origin have in common, it's that they don't know how fragile Earthlings are.

Even if they knew, monsters hated humans, and the children of the origin were indifferent to humans.

Either way, it was bound to be harmful to humans.

“It is rare for a human to be this friendly.”

“It is indeed something the association would covet.”

“I asked you last time, but are you going to pass it on to me?”

“I have no thoughts.”

The possessiveness of the Visabal is quite considerable, so even if it is only for a short while to inspect, he will never leave his things in someone else's hands. If it is a clean transaction, it is okay, but he will not handle such a half-assed matter.

“It seems like Curator Yoo Seong-un is managing it well, so is there a reason to hand it over to the association research institute?”

“If Geo is a child of the Origin, he can harm people without any sense of guilt. He may claim that he was just following his own rules, but… I don’t know how much of a disaster that would be for humans.”

An investigation was needed.

“At this point, all I can understand is the story of the portrait. I don’t know exactly what technique is used, how high the level of the soul is, or what role it plays in the source.”

“I’m not the type of person who wants that.”

“…….”

“Do you remember what I asked you to do when I hired you, Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

Yoo Seong-un answered with a sigh.

“It was about analyzing, maintaining, and managing the gallery’s works.”

"you're right."

“But I am no longer the research team leader of the association. There is no one who can analyze ‘Portrait of Geo’ as well as I do.”

“Why are you saying such sad things? I’m sure Curator Yoo Seong-un knows this, but I don’t want to have a weapon.”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“I want a piece of work.”

Bisabal narrowed his eyes and smiled. He exuded the natural arrogance of someone who was used to looking down on others since birth.

“That’s why I founded this guild, this company. I don’t have even the slightest bit of pride as a hunter, let alone as an artist.”

“…….”

“No collector expects a Van Gogh self-portrait to ward off evil spirits or give them good dreams. No one cares about that function. They are just curious about the story contained in the painting, and they want to protect that story with their own hands.”

“It could be really dangerous. He’s the only being that’s been freed from the Guildmaster’s emotional skills, and even if he’s considerate and respectful of humans, his status is too high. Even if he doesn’t feel divine, he’s almost like a god that priests serve. Just because the portrait is careful doesn’t mean humans can rest easy.”

“Did you see those eyes?”

“…….”

That's a random comment.

"…yes?"

“Have you ever seen those eyes, Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“…Are you talking about the eyes in the portrait?”

“Oh, I guess you’ve never seen this before.”

“No, it’s not that there aren’t any.”

“Then tell me.”

The secretary waved his hands elegantly. Even the gesture that urged him to answer was filled with the nobility of a high-ranking official.

“How was it?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un's worries did not last long.

“…It was so long ago.”

horror.

Awe and disgust, anger and sadness, joy and ecstasy, despair, loneliness and dizziness.

Towards a being so enormous that it cannot be recognized in an instant… .

“…I don’t really know how to explain it. I have emotional skills, but I couldn’t objectively understand it because the level was so clear even without using the skills.”

It was so far away that it couldn't even be expressed with a boring word like space. I felt like I was directly reaching a place that was visible but unseen.

“It was clearly black, but it also looked white. It was so dark that it felt brighter, and the pupil and iris didn’t seem to be distinct, but when I looked inside… I could see a narrow path.”

There was rainwater in it. There was a stream, a brook, a vein.

It was as dense as a tree, yet as delicate as human blood vessels. It was also so vast and colorful that it was too vast for humans to perceive.

It was as if a human had glimpsed something that should not have been seen. Something so large was within those narrow pupils.

“The saying that the eyes are the windows to the soul comes to mind.”

“It’s a good impression. It’s not bad.”

“When you say that, it seems like my impressions are unsatisfactory.”

“There’s nothing we can do about it.”

Visabal laughed as if he was appreciating the mistakes of a very immature child.

Yoo Seong-un suddenly remembered his real age. He was old enough to teach Yoo Seong-un.

“I told you to look at my eyes, but you only looked at the artwork and came back. We are all human beings who can have conversations before we each have our own jobs and tastes.”

“…….”

“If Geo has an ego, then he also has eyes that can communicate with people.”

He asked again.

“Have you ever seen his eyes?”

“…In the sense you just said, no.”

“Have you ever thought about what emotions Geo feels and how he looks at Yoo Seong-un, other than the intensity of his soul and the torrent in his eyes?”

“No, there isn't.”

Who could think such a thing in front of that great being?

How dare someone as small and insignificant as me.

“…Something like that…no one but the leader of the Visabal Guild could do it.”

“How can a gardener be so narrow-minded? Be brave, be brave.”

“Isn’t that too much to expect from a mere gardener?”

“Geo is a good person.”

“…….”

“You are so sweet.”

Bisabal continued speaking as if he was teaching a child.

“They don’t hate others even though they are reluctant to be bothered. How kind of a person would they be if they didn’t resent the inconveniences they experience? They are polite and respectful, but they are also compassionate enough not to force others.”

“That’s a generous assessment.”

“Besides, I’m afraid of hurting someone.”

“…….”

It was an unexpected story.

“…Are you talking about Geo? At best, it would be like a human stepping on an ant.”

“Yes.”

“Are you afraid of the harm itself, rather than the disgust at the bug bursting out in front of you?”

“Didn’t you say you were affectionate?”

“We couldn’t even have a conversation, and at most we made eye contact….”

“You need to have this level of ability to be a guild leader. You need to be able to figure this out just by making eye contact.”

“…I see.”

Bisabal is the person who created the top 3 guilds in South Korea with only emotional skills and no separate military force.

Considering that his physical abilities were at the average male level, you could see how amazing his eyes and mouth were.

'That kind of person may see things differently from me. Perhaps the way he sees the world is different.'

Yoo Seong-un said with a sigh.

“…I understand. So you’re saying we can proceed like this without taking any further action?”

“I’m glad you understand. I’m sure Geo will do his best not to harm humans, so please don’t make him angry. People who are originally kind are more scary when they get angry.”

“So, we’re trying to prevent that from happening….”

“There is no way to prevent individuals from getting angry, and even if there were, it would probably be something as simple as sealing or destroying the portrait. No matter how harsh the world has become these days, you can’t treat someone who is trying to live a normal life that way.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un asked with a subtle expression.

“…Are you looking at the ‘Portrait of Geo’ as a person?”

“So who has had a conversation with Curator Yoo Seong-un so far?”

“Isn’t it a different level?”

“But it is a being that considers itself a human being, with the will to talk.”

"that…."

“How is that any different from humans?”

The eagle spoke as if singing.

“Even if they weren’t in Geo’s portrait, there are plenty of dangerous people. Right now, there are five hunters with high-risk abilities in South Korea, and they’re all living well on their own. Some people treat them like dangerous dogs and pick fights over everything, but that happened 100 years ago, when there were no dungeons.”

“If you remain so extravagant, something you will regret might happen. Geo is someone who is fully capable of that.”

“Those dangerous hunters are enjoying their daily lives, so why would we oppress their portraits?”

“Not oppression, but investigation….”

“But what if Geo gets angry?”

“…….”

“He’s a friend who values manners, but if you pry into his feelings without permission and get angry, it’ll be a bigger disaster. Just be a good conversation partner for Geo.”

He pointed beyond the window that made up the entire wall.

“And often take them outside.”

“…Are you serious?”

“I know what Mr. Yoo Seong-un is worried about.”

Visabal nodded.

“Yes, I know. The children of the Origin are very secretive and cautious beings. They are part of the ecosystem that is not of much interest to humans. They are nature itself, and so we know that they can come as a sufficient disaster. That’s what they are.”

“…….”

“And humans are also a part of nature.”

He said calmly.

“Geo is no different.”

"…yes."

“Be nice to him. If there are rules, follow them. If there are childish conflicts, grumble and resolve them.”

"All right."

“If he said he was 29, then that’s right. He’s not even 30 yet, but as a senior in life, shouldn’t I take care of him?”

“…There is a high probability that it is Geo’s mistake. He is not actually 29 years old, but his memories match that of a 29-year-old youth, so he may have said so. In fact, he may be well over a thousand years old. If he is the child of the Origin, that is certainly possible.”

“What’s so important about that?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un sighed and nodded.

“That’s true.”

He was a gardener.

They put a lot of effort into their garden, pour a lot of love into it, and take pride in it.

Geo is a being related to the root that forms the foundation of the garden. Although he says that he needs to be dealt with, I also want to treat him in a gentlemanly manner unless the portrait side reacts first.

“I finally got to speak to you as a curator of the collection.”

“I am always grateful for the thoughtfulness of our curator, Yoo Seong-un.”

“It’s gross, so let’s stop. Anyway, so….”

Yoo Seong-un asked, glancing at his watch.

“Are you saying I should be Geo’s guide?”

“If possible, please show them around our guild, introduce them to our staff, take them to see a good play when they go out, buy them something to eat, and show them around tourist attractions.”

“You really are a guide. No, but I think it’s a bit strange to introduce you to the staff… The staff would have refused you first. Geo doesn’t like noisy things either.”

“You can decide for yourself. If Geo likes quiet, you can help him go out and explore the company or the outdoors, even at dawn.”

“What on earth do you believe in….”

“Didn’t I say I saw it?”

It's a bright smile.

“I saw it.”

“…….”

The Visakha sees what humans cannot see.

Yoo Seong-un decided to believe that.

"…All right."

“I ask for your continued support, Curator Yoo Seong-un.”

“Even if an accident happens, I don’t know about it.”

“I’ll take care of that.”

“Anyway, what are you thinking….”

Despite his grumbling, Yoo Seong-un was in a pretty good mood.

'I can expand your scope of activity.'

I was already worried about Geo, who was always in the portrait.

Although he himself said it was more comfortable and better inside, it would have been more comfortable for Geo to know that he could still enter officially.

‘I guess it’s because this is the first time I’ve seen a child with such smooth communication, but when I just watch him, I feel like doing this and that for no reason… .’

From the perspective of a gardener and curator, Yoo Seong-un felt special.

If he were to face that huge figure in person, the story would be different, but for now, Geo was just a talking portrait. Since Yoo Seong-un was in the position of managing him, this kind of feeling wasn't all that strange.

'… It's true that this is a sentiment that came out of the stomach. But when we face that situation properly someday, let's be careful not to stiffen up and make Geo feel uncomfortable.'

Something entered Yoo Seong-un's field of vision as he came out of the guild.

“…….”

Bungeoppang shop.

“…This is rare.”

Yoo Seong-un happily approached the bungeoppang cart.

“Are you doing business?”

“Oh, yes, I am doing it.”

“How much for 10 bungeoppang?”

“It’s five thousand won.”

"please."

"wait a minute."

The owner of the cart was a young man with a blunt appearance.

“Here it is.”

“It looks delicious…. Do you keep coming here?”

“They’ll come before they get caught.”

“Hmm.”

The somewhat blunt tone reminded me a little of Geo.

“…….”

Oh, right.

“Just give me ten more.”

"thank you."

“I’m more grateful for this.”

“What are you thankful for?”

“That’s because it’s rare to find a place that sells bungeoppang these days. It’s become harder and harder to find one recently.”

"iced coffee…."

It seemed like it would take some time for the new bungeoppang to come out, so Yoo Seong-un continued the conversation. The young man must have been bored, because he spoke in a friendly tone, unlike his usual tone of voice.

“It’s hard to do business. Even if I sell bungeoppang outside the city, no one will buy it, so I come in here every now and then to sell it.”

“Oh, so you’re coming here from outside the city?”

“Who among the city people would do business like this?”

The young man shrugged.

“Most of you either work in offices or work as hunters, don’t you?”

“Even so, it must be quite a distance. You must be tired, but you’re amazing.”

“There are still a few people who help me out because they like bungeoppang, so it’s still doable. My younger brother is also a hunter around here….”

“It seems like it would be a bit expensive to find a house around here.”

“It’s hard to afford city rent. Obtaining citizenship isn’t something that just anyone can do.”

“Isn’t it easy to get a short-term permit? That’s because the hurdles are low.”

“I have permission. Sometimes I can’t finish work until the terminal closes… I just don’t look for accommodations. It takes time and money, and there’s no benefit to it.”

The young man who turned over the fish-shaped bread plate said.

“Besides, I have a 10-year-old brother at home, so I have to go back.”

“Ah, that’s for sure… I should go back. If I leave you alone and a monster comes into the village, it’ll be a disaster. It’ll be safer to have my brother here.”

“My younger sister also works as a porter, so she only earns money here. She comes home once every three days and goes out the following week. Right now, my younger sister is at her parents' house, so I came out to work."

"That's amazing."

"It's good because it sells well around here."

"I see…."

Yoo Seong-un tilted his head and asked.

"Then when can I come out?"

"I think it will probably last until early spring… It's still winter. When the weather gets warmer, then I'll look for something else to do."

"It will last quite a while though. I will see you often."

"thank you."

The young man took the bungeoppang out of the machine. Steam was rising from the freshly made bungeoppang. It had a savory aroma.

"Eat it while it's warm."

"Oh, thank you."

Yoo Seong-un headed back to the company carrying the bungeoppang.

To be exact, in front of 'Geo's Portrait' on the gallery side of the Visabal.

"Geo, are you awake?"

"……."

“Geo?”

Fortunately, Geo opened his eyes quickly.

“What's going on?”

“They were selling bungeoppang in front of the station, so I bought one.”

“It doesn’t seem to be one.”

“Oh, I see. Not just one. I brought about ten because I thought you might like them.”

“…….”

The portrait blinked twice and then nodded.

“Thank you. Thanks to you, I am receiving bungeoppang for the first time in a long time.”

“Do you know about bungeoppang too?”

“I didn’t know there would still be any bungeoppang left though.”

"…okay?"

As expected, Geo seemed to be someone who had lived in Korea.

'Or maybe it was a being of a similar dimension... Even if it didn't live, it may have only received memories.'

As Yoo Seong-un stretched out the bag containing the bungeoppang, it quickly disappeared into the painting.

“Oh… It literally became a painting.”

“Thank you for the gift.”

“It’s nothing special. I hope it suits your taste.”

“I love this kind of street food.”

“That’s fortunate.”

I was worried that he would have a cold expression that not even a needle would go in.

'He looks a bit aristocratic.'

Geo seemed like a celestial noble who had never touched water, or an AI civil servant created for the busy modern society.

I was worried for a moment whether Geo, who had a sharp and heavy aura that could be felt just by looking at his expression, would like street food. I wondered if he would look down on me and say, ‘How dare you give me this as food?’

“Next time, if there’s something like egg bread or takoyaki, should I buy those too?”

“…….”

“…Geo?”

Geo, who was silent for a moment, soon took something out of his bosom.

It was a neatly tied white bag.

"…that?"

“These are tea leaves.”

"car?"

“I found a flower that smelled good, so I tried drying it.”

“…….”

“This is a thank you.”

When he reached out his hand.

Outside the picture, Geo's hand popped out with a bag of tea.

“…This is something different.”

“Take it.”

“Uh, um, thank you.”

Rustle.

A pleasant scent wafted from the paper bag held in my hand.

'It's creamy.'

It was a scent that would come from sweet custard or milk cream.

“…….”

I felt a little strange.

'... If I say that I don't have to repay you like this every time, it might sound rude to the person who has the rules. I feel ambiguous because it feels like I'm being treated excessively compared to what I always give.'

Yoo Seong-un said, putting the bag inside his coat.

“Thank you, I guess I’ll have some tea soon.”

“I hope it suits your taste.”

“First of all, the scent is really good. I will drink it gratefully.”

“And I have a favor to ask.”

“Huh? Please?”

Geo asked.

“Can I ask for some seeds?”

“…What kind of seed?”

“Anything that can be grown in the field is fine.”

“…….”

What on earth are they doing in there?

'A field.'

Suddenly, Yoo Seong-un became curious about the scenery inside the portrait.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (17)

Episode 17 [Forest Butterfly Flower Tea] [Rating: –] A tea made by drying flowers that grew from the corpses of forest butterflies that live in the veins of destiny. It has a light blue color and a soft creamy scent. It is processed directly by Geo, the owner of the forest, so even human bodies can accept it. The moment you drink it, your blood vessels will regenerate, making it excellent for major injuries, and it reconstructs your cells to always be immune to minor diseases. [Duration: 6 months] “…….” Yoo Seong-woon, who had finished his feelings, pursed his lips and swept his face. “… Geo, you punk….” What on earth did you give me? “This isn’t a tea that I can trade for 10 bungeoppang.” * * * As I’ve always thought, the ‘Portrait of Geo’ was an absurd existence. ‘I still don’t know its true identity.’ It could be a monster, an item, or, as Bisabal and Yoo Seong-woon speculated, a child of the origin. ‘But it has a human form… and it knows a lot about humans and society.’ Whatever his identity, it was close to a miracle that he was personally bending to the rules of such humans. Probably, such a being would never appear in the world again. At least not in this narrow dimension called Earth. 'The guild leader of Bisabyeol, known for his good taste, must have spent that much money for nothing.' And what that 'Portrait of Geo' asked for was... "Is this good enough?" It was seeds. Crop seeds. "I just gathered everything I could." Yoo Seong-woon smiled awkwardly and showed the seed bags in his arms. He had collected them as best he could in the few hours since receiving the tea leaves. Tomatoes, corn, potatoes, sweet potatoes, lettuce, cabbage, cucumbers, peas, pumpkins, peppers, carrots, radishes, watermelons, eggplants, and more... "I wanted to get you some better seeds, but there aren't many stores around here that sell those seeds. I managed to get them from a shabby store tucked away in an alley, but I'm not sure if you'll like them." “Of course I like it. Looking at the amount you brought, I can see how much you did your best in a short period of time. You look as if you are sorry for bringing so much.” “You received such precious tea, but it’s not balanced with just seeds, so that’s why…” Yoo Seong-woon said as he handed over the seed bag through the frame. “Even if the seeds aren’t cheap, the tea you gave me was too much.” “…….” Geo asked while checking the seeds. “Aren’t the seeds really cheap?” “Huh? Oh, right. Usually, the seed bag you’re holding is equivalent to the cost of a decent meal out… So on average, I don’t think it’s that cheap.” “…….” “…Did you ask because you thought the seeds would be cheap?” “Yes.” The portrait was still blunt and emotionless, but looking into those black eyes, Geo felt sorry. He was indeed a kind-hearted guy, just like Bisabal had said. Geo blinked twice, wondering what he was thinking or if it was just a meaningless habit. “Excuse me. I didn’t think it would cost that much.” “I don’t know what you’re apologizing for. It’s incomparable to the tea you gave me.” It was obvious that Geo’s simple and pure kindness toward humans was quite destructive. Yoo Seong-woon laughed awkwardly and waved his hand. “The fact that you made it yourself is beyond measure, and with all the effects attached… To be honest, it was such a precious gift that I wondered if I could drink it.” Even at first glance, the tea Geo gave him was valuable. Didn’t the possessed portrait say it was made by itself? ‘Whether Geo’s true identity is a humanoid monster or a child of the Origin, the fact that it’s rare remains the same.’ But even the effects that seem to be able to revive a dead person… “…I’m truly grateful for your kindness. However…” Yoo Seong-woon continued speaking after thinking for a moment. “…I’m a little worried. I’ll enjoy the tea you gave me while I’m enjoying it, but don’t give such a precious gift to others.” “…….” “Most people don’t know how to accept kindness as it is. They’re not as generous as you think.” First of all, there was a high chance that they would accept kindness as fear. Unless you were extremely greedy or indifferent, it would be difficult to simply be grateful for such an excessive gift. ‘Someone would definitely take it as a threat and get angry or panic. However, even if a greedy person were to receive such a gift, it would cause problems.’ Although he thought it was a waste, Yoo Seong-woon saw that Geo’s tea was not meant to heal his ailments, but rather to be enjoyed while drinking it. Yoo Seong-woon, who was familiar with the rules of origin, had no intention of selling the tea or using it for other purposes to displease Geo. “You wouldn’t feel bad if the tea leaves you gave him were auctioned off without your knowledge, right?” “Auction? I never thought you’d give so much meaning to such a trivial car.” He acted as if to say, ‘Humans do incomprehensible things, like assigning value to meaningless things.’ “I guess so.” Yoo Seong-woon laughed awkwardly. ‘… For someone who claims to be human, this is such a blatant lack of understanding.’ However, for Geo, who never thought deeply, it was an inevitable judgment. His system had clearly said that it was at the level of a fatigue recovery agent, and Geo had no reason to doubt that. It was worth at most a vitamin supplement, so Yoo Seong-woon’s words couldn’t help but feel like a fuss. “……” “……” At Geo’s indifferent response, Yoo Seong-woon couldn’t help but think, ‘So there really is a side to human common sense.’ To most monsters, a gold nugget is no different from a rock. “Um, so…” Yoo Seong-woon continued. “You may have given it to me only because you saw its value as tea, but from the perspective of ordinary humans, that’s not the case. It would be better to refrain from giving gifts that would make greedy people’s eyes turn.” Surely, the owner, Geo, would know what kind of effects the ‘Forest Butterfly Flower Tea’ has. Since he said in the first place that he ‘made it as tea because it smells good,’ he really wasn’t interested in any other uses for it. Such indifference was certainly the same as any other beings of the Origin. ‘Monsters, and even the children of the Origin, are often ignorant of human greed. No matter how well Geo knows human physiology, he shows such a carefree attitude that is clearly outside of humans… There's definitely no room for excuses.' What might be nothing special to monsters is a great resource to humans. Beings born from the veins of the Origin didn't understand that fact well. There were many times when humans would say that they were making a fuss. "…Well, that's right, if you say it's making a fuss, I have nothing to say…." They just wanted to prevent any accidents that might happen. "The gift you give without any intention can be a huge impact on us. Right? Well, it's a gift from the portrait." "……." "Actually, you seem too strong to be hurt by the greed of such people… But there are many people who are more persistent than you think. Be careful not to let your kindness be used." Geo stared at Yoo Seong-un. '… It's even scarier because you're not saying anything. It should be less intimidating because you're inside the portrait, but is it still this much? This is scary.' There was no emotion to be found on Geo's face in the portrait. That inanimate expression sent shivers down Yoo Seong-un's spine. Bisabal had said, 'Get away from that intimidation and see Geo's true nature,' but how could that be easy? Just like how it would be difficult for an ordinary person who suddenly fell from 50km in the sky to appreciate the scenery in the sky, it wasn't easy for him either. That's how much weight the gaze of 'Geo's Portrait' gave him was. "… Was that presumptuous?" Geo, especially, had a well-established ego and was a being within the source, so his own rules would be firm. The babbling of a mere human being he had barely met might have been irritating. 'But I couldn't pretend not to know. It's our job to eliminate as much potential for problems as possible.' That's what gardeners do. They travel around and take measures to ensure that the source and the Earth can coexist. Furthermore, 'Geo's Portrait' was a special case, so he had to make this request. Humans are beings who easily give up their identity due to greed. "..." "No." It was a little cold and heavy, but it was gentlemanly and calm. Fortunately, the portrait was still the same. "Thank you for your advice." "...I'm grateful that you took it as advice." "Honestly, I think 'strange' is the right word, but the outside of the painting will be different from the world I know." Geo continued in a voice that was strangely polite. "It might have been inconvenient, but I appreciate you being considerate of me and telling me." "…Your speech is still so sharp…." Did Geo know that part made him seem even less human? 'I think he thinks he's a normal person, but… Are you ignoring that contradiction even though you know it, or are you really acting like this because you don't know…?' Geo asked around that time. "But why are seeds so expensive?" "…Huh? Oh, seeds?" Realizing that the topic had returned, Yoo Seong-woon nodded and answered. "Well… It lets you farm. Whether it's tomatoes or lettuce or whatever, once you start farming, you'll be able to take responsibility for your daily meals. Even if that's not the case, if you sell it to other people at the market, you can make money and buy meat or other necessities…" "……." "Usually, most households that want to farm would prefer wild seeds that can be found for free in places like the mountains rather than refined seeds like these. Anyway, it seems like seeds sold at stores are expensive in many ways." "I see." "Well, it might be hard to understand someone like you who lives close to nature." "No, I understand." "Then that's fortunate." Yoo Seong-woon continued. "Anyway, it's extremely troublesome to grow seeds or seedlings yourself, and the quality is poor. That's why there are specialty stores. If you somehow made seeds through home-made crafts, that might be fine, but seeds sold by professionals like this are quite expensive." The portrait muttered softly. "Farming…" "Did you ask me because you were interested in it?" "Yes." Geo nodded. "I've done it a few times before." "Really? It was before…" "And since the time in the portrait overflows, I also thought that I didn't want to keep my hands still." "Your paintings are like that, and you have many hobbies. You must not be bored living." "In order to live a happy life, you shouldn't have boring times." "That's true." He understood. 'You must have a lot of hobbies to spend that endless time.' Geo was maintaining his ego clean enough to the point where he thought he was human. There was no hostility or frenzy that a monster would have, and it was different from the excessive indifference that the children of the Origin showed. Excessively blunt, but still maintaining intelligence enough to pass for human. 'That won't be easy.' On the one hand, it was also regrettable. '... Living the life of the Origin with a human mind would be quite burdensome... .' It would be easier if he just gave up his humanity. "... " But from the gardener's perspective, that kind of thing shouldn't happen. 'It's the same from the human's perspective.' That delusion had to be dealt with so that it could last as long as possible. Yoo Seong-un shrugged and shook off all his emotions. With his usual indifferent smile, he asked Geo, "So you're going to farm now?" "I think so." "I guess there's a place to farm in the portrait? That's amazing." "It's just an ordinary cabin." "Hmm... " A cabin. "It sounds very peaceful." “It’s actually peaceful. The weather is always mild, the ground is damp, and there’s a quiet and comfortable forest with a clear stream running through it.” “…That’s really…” It was exactly like Geunwon’s story. “…It’s a place I want to visit.” “I’ll invite you sometime.” “I guess it’s not possible right now?” “The house is dirty, so it’s not possible right now.” “I guess so.” Given Geo’s personality, the fact that “the house is dirty” was likely a lie, but in any case, he couldn’t go in even though the landlord didn’t allow him. Yoo Seong-woon naturally had that much shame. “Then have a nice farming time.” “Can I see you again tomorrow?” “Oh, that…is it because of the thank you?” “I received so much, so I should repay you.” “It’s nothing.” “Besides, Mr. Yoo Seong-woon gave me good advice.” “…Is that so?” If he refused any longer, he’d get angry. ‘Geunwon’s existence has its own rules.’ The monsters in the dungeons created by the influence of the source had consistent habits and behaviors, and they also had separate methods for interaction and strategy. In the case of the ‘children’ who were closer to the source, they were stronger if the rules were strong, not weaker. ‘This guy is already considered a child of the source. He must have high self-esteem for his own rules, and even if he didn’t, it would be physiologically impossible for him to break them… so I can’t refuse him.' The source is nature itself. Just as a mere human cannot prevent a disaster, in order to coexist with nature, humans had to learn humility and adjust to others. "Um…" Yoo Seong-woon smiled awkwardly. "Please give me something not so great." "The tea leaves weren't great either." "I guess so…?" As a child of the source, it would be difficult to determine what was valuable to humans. Yoo Seong-woon hesitated for a moment and spoke with difficulty. "…Something delicious?" "Are you asking for something to be cooked?" "Just the snacks you gave to the employees you met before will do. You said you gave them things like chocolate, cookies, and jelly." "Yes, that's right. They were all kind people, so I gave them gifts." "Really?" Judging from the way he said this, it seemed that Geo definitely gave gifts to 'good people.' He probably considered all actions such as being polite, making conversation easier, and giving gifts to himself to be 'good.' "I think snacks like that will do." "I'll keep that in mind." "Oh, and by the way." Yoo Seong-woon told him what he had heard from the Bisabal Guild Leader. "He said it was okay to come out." "……." "You used to come out of the portrait often. Since the employees were scared, you usually woke up at dawn. You were the only one who had ever talked to me." "There was no particular need to go outside." "However, it can be stuffy, so the Bisabal Guild Leader said that you could come out and look around the company building if you wanted. Here, your access card." "I've never worked in the Collectors' Guild. I don't know anyone except for Yoo Seong-woon, so would it be okay for an outsider like me to wander around?" "It might be difficult for important places, but I've made it so that regular employees can go. If you come out later and run into other employees, you can show them the card and cover it up to some extent." Even that would only be vague. 'The soul's level is so high.' Still, it was easier to deal with later than not having one. The members of the Collectors' Guild are quick-witted, so they'll be careful. The portrait looked at the white necklace card Yoo Seong-woon had handed it to her. "Well, it seems like you have a way to get around without one. But it would be better for you to have official permission to enter, right?" "……." "If possible, I'd like you to come out during a time when there aren't many people, but… You can come out during the day as long as it's okay with you." "That's a sufficient answer." "Uh… And don't hurt anyone else." "What should I do if I get attacked first?" "There's nothing that can be done." If a stupid human had stepped on the tail of an angry tiger on purpose and gotten eaten, it would have been a natural death. "I'm not on anyone's side." Yoo Seong-un was helping the origin and humans coexist as much as possible, not unconditionally on the side of humans. The gardener always had to remain neutral. "You attack too." "I can't do that, so I'll try to run away." "Thank you for that." So, this was a sign of trust that humans could show. He just hoped that the 'Portrait of Geo', which had the 1:1 rule as it had been until now, would properly repay him. * * * A month later. Ghost stories began to circulate in the collection shop. "It was Black Cloak." There were no deaths. Bisabal's gamble was successful. Oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (18)

Episode 18

If there is one place that is most important within the collection building, it is the Bisabal Gallery.

Accidents and incidents are frequent because only dangerous and sensitive items are gathered here. On top of that, there are people who are after such rare works. That is why security guards patrol the inside of the building no matter how late it is to prevent casualties.

That day was just another ordinary day of patrolling the building at dawn.

"huh?"

A pure white wall.

Pure white lighting.

A dark-haired man standing alone in a long, clean hallway.

“…….”

He was covered from head to toe in a black cloak.

The face was not visible.

“…….”

All I can tell is that he's wearing a black suit, even though his front apron is open.

“Who are you?”

“…….”

“Excuse me, but could you please identify yourself?”

The dawn patrol squad consists of eight people in the building, and each floor is assigned to its own responsibility. No other guards are assigned to the same floor.

So, that black cloak means either an employee who stopped by the guild for a moment to run some business in the early morning, or an outsider of unknown identity.

But it felt strange.

“…Please identify yourself.”

Seriously, it was weird.

Still, I couldn't explain exactly what was strange.

“…….”

“…….”

A strange creepy feeling came over me.

'…what?'

The guild building is always brightly lit for the guards on patrol or the staff working overtime. The hallways are cleaned frequently and are clean, and the pure white marble walls are elegant and beautiful, just as the guild master, Bisabal, would like.

So there was nothing to be afraid of. Under the bright light of day, there were no shadows anywhere, but that pitch-black entity stood out… .

“…Who are you?”

It felt like it shouldn't exist.

“If you are an outsider, please show your ID card.”

“…….”

“Why are you here at this hour? I didn’t hear that there were other customers coming from the first floor. Trespassing on the guild premises is considered a serious felony….”

“…….”

“…you may experience inconvenience in appointing a lawyer, which may be applied to your disadvantage in a trial, and you may be suppressed by force without a separate process, so please keep this in mind when answering the questions.”

Isn't it strange? What started out as a very small oddity gradually grows bigger.

The longer he observed, the more he saw, the more he felt a sense of discomfort. Soon the guard realized.

'Why?'

Why did I feel like that shouldn't exist?

'No, why in the first place?'

When you see a being in human form, do you think, 'That'?

The thought that something was strange did not leave my mind, and confusion clung to my whole body, disorienting my mind.

A quiet, strange feeling ran up my spine and slowly tickled my heart. It was a very slow, natural pace, like breathing in sleep.

“…….”

“…….”

Under the hood of a pitch-black cloak, beneath the pitch-black fabric, as if nothing should fit, a voice was heard.

"hello."

“…….”

“My name is Sergio.”

A clear voice that seemed to be engraved in my brain, and a straight pronunciation that was completely incomprehensible. I thought it was a good voice without even being able to resist.

It asked politely.

“What is your name?”

“…….”

“I wonder what your name is.”

I couldn't bring myself to answer that nice voice.

“Would you like to talk to me?”

I could tell.

"…I am."

This is not human.

“…I, I….”

It wasn't a monster, an item, or an illusion.

‘…What should I do?’

My breathing became heavy and choked as if I had never had a breath to begin with.

It was a collectors' guild where many incidents and accidents occurred, and he was a guard with a lot of experience, but he had never encountered such a being before. It was a huge, non-human thing that was imitating a human while wearing human skin.

It would have been better if the imitation had been less than sloppy. Like the ball-jointed dolls with bizarre movements that we've seen so far, or the monsters that mutter nonsense with a noticeably low level of comprehension.

“…….”

"teacher."

“…….”

“What is your name?”

But that is.

It was perfect.

“My name is Sergio.”

He seemed like a perfect human being.

Yet, contradictorily,

I knew I could never become human.

‘What the heck is this… .’

He was certain that the opponent was not human, even though he looked completely human. Without any basis, he was defining the opponent as neither human, monster, item, nor hallucination.

So what on earth does that mean?

“Can't you hear me?”

“…Why are you asking my name?”

“The basic courtesy when having a conversation is to use your full name.”

“…….”

“I’m just being polite.”

Manners?

I couldn't figure out what on earth was imitating human courtesy.

"…Gourd…."

“…….”

“This is Park Na-gil.”

I spat out the name as if possessed, but I didn't feel like my soul was being taken away. However, the black cloak seemed satisfied.

That was the most horrifying thing of all, but I couldn't even bring myself to show it. My breath was suffocating.

“Nice to meet you. I’m Sergio.”

“…….”

Does the author realize how many times he just called himself

'Sergio'?

‘As if he were emphasizing that he is human like you… .’

Then the black cloak took out an unexpected object and showed it to me.

“I have a pass.”

“…This is… a customer access card.”

“I received permission to tour the area from the local guild leader, the Visabal.”

“…Is that so?”

At least the guild master knows about its existence.

'And the behavior is being condoned.'

Why on earth?

The guard looked up and saw the black cloak again.

“…….”

“Is this a sufficient answer to your question?”

“…Of course.”

It was a very businesslike voice.

The voice, which has a regular rhythm, seems to have an appropriate pitch, but when you listen closely, it also seems to go back and forth between high and low notes.

‘Even if you have an access card, you still need to know basic personal information… .’

It was clear that what I was hearing was a man's voice, but as time passed, it became more and more difficult to guess its age and gender.

Even though it was right before his eyes, he couldn't recognize it. All he could see was a figure with a pitch-black cloak and a body that was neither thick nor thin.

“…….”

Could it be that within the shadow of that black cloak, there really is something in human form?

“Mr. Park Na-gil.”

"…yes."

“Can I walk around here?”

“…….”

The guild leader gave permission.

So, even though he was a mere security guard, he had to say something positive, but his mouth didn't open easily. It was because of an ominous feeling, as if he was accepting a promise from the devil that he could cause disaster.

The guard nodded his head with difficulty in front of the gloomy, heavy, or cold figure.

“…Of course…”

"thank you."

“If the guild leader gives permission, you are welcome to visit as much as you want.”

"okay."

“…How long do you plan to stay?”

Black Cloak answered two seconds later.

“Until the sun rises.”

It was a creepy answer.

“…….”

"…okay."

I felt like I was going to throw up.

He could not understand why he felt creepy, what on earth was the eerieness, and where this indescribable silence came from, even though they were having a conversation.

The feeling of my cognitive faculties being impaired and my judgment being clouded by fog was like a motion sickness. I felt like I was facing something I couldn't handle.

'No, actually I can't handle it.'

It was burdensome to interact with something that was 'not supposed to be' recognized.

“…….”

“Mr. Park Na-gil.”

Every time he called my name, a shiver went down my spine.

How can I explain the feeling of my body temperature dropping by one degree, the feeling of all my blood vessels being held in someone's hands?

“Yes, yes.”

“Thank you for your kind response.”

“…it was something I had to do.”

“You have a strong sense of responsibility.”

“…….”

“I think it is something that deserves praise.”

It was a strange thing.

When the black cloak lifted me up, I felt elated despite the nauseating horror.

'Am I crazy? Or is it that driving me crazy?'

I was so touched and proud of myself even though it was a situation that should not have happened at all. I couldn't even explain why I felt this way.

Looking at me like that, the man in the black cloak reached out his hand.

“It's a gift.”

“…….”

“Take it.”

Black Cloak handed over a small envelope, neatly wrapped in paper.

It smelled so sweet it was almost ecstatic.

“It's yours.”

The strangely businesslike voice sounded strangely friendly.

“I was very rude.”

“Oh, no.”

“Then I’ll see you next time.”

Are you leaving?

The moment I raised my head with that intuition, my eyes.

“…….”

“…….”

Our eyes met.

Those eyes.

eye.

pupil.

The iris, the pupil, that round sphere. Inside it. That. That round thing. That. That. That. Black and white.

Something black, something white. Was it black? Was it white? Was it dark or light? Was it shadow or light? Was it death or life? Was it fate or destiny?

It was too deep inside. It was too deep. It was too deep. It was so deep, it was scary, it was so deep inside. It was deep. I felt like I was falling. I was falling. Can I get out? It was impossible. It wouldn't work. That wasn't the eye. That wasn't the pupil. That wasn't the iris. That wasn't the pupil.

No, no, it won't be. It shouldn't be. It was clear that it wasn't. No. No. No, no.

No, it isn't.

“Mr. Park Na-gil.”

The moment I heard that extremely businesslike voice.

“Thank you for your hard work.”

“…….”

… was dragged out.

“…….”

He stood there for a long time.

The pitch-black cloak doesn't make a single sound as it moves, and the sound of bare feet not wearing shoes is not even heard as they touch the smooth floor.

It’s strange that all I can hear is the sound of small creatures scurrying about. That black thing can’t even be called a small creature… .

Soon the sound subsides.

“…….”

It's just static.

"…where…."

Where did you go?

The guard moved his feet.

He followed the corridor where the black cloak had moved and headed towards the place where the sound had stopped. He was able to reach the 'place where the sound had stopped' soon after.

There was a portrait hanging in the hallway that I had never seen before.

"ah."

It was a painting of a man with a calm face, as if asleep, set in a forest with a peaceful cabin in the background.

My stomach was churning.

“…….”

He ran away at a slow pace.

It was exactly the same as usual, at that speed.

I didn't have the confidence to touch him. If I had to do my duty as a security guard, I would have definitely reported the unidentified work and dealt with him, but I couldn't even think of that. The security guard just left as if he was possessed.

And the next day, the portrait was no longer in the same spot.

* * *

“Have you heard?”

The Guild Collector was originally a place with many ghost stories.

It's all because of the guild leader, Bisabal's collecting habit, and because he keeps picking up so many strange items, all sorts of incidents and accidents happen.

That's why employees who have worked at the collection store for more than two years aren't really surprised by these horror stories.

“A black cloak?”

“Yes, there’s been a rumor going around these days.”

“I guess one of the guild leader’s works had an accident.”

“I thought so.”

It's a world where most ghost stories are explained by monsters or items.

In an age when fellow humans were more feared than ghost stories, rumors about the 'Black Cloak' were just a fun pastime.

“I heard he’s so handsome. I’d like to see him.”

“They say you can’t see his face well because of the cloak?”

“It’s quite shy for a piece brought by the guild leader.”

“How can we avoid accidents? No one got hurt, right?”

But as time passed, that light atmosphere gradually became heavy.

“…….”

“This witness also said he was on vacation.”

“…Is it that scary….”

“I heard that he originally planned to resign, but the guild leader persuaded him to take a vacation instead.”

“If even the guild leader has to come forward, isn’t the situation more serious than we thought?”

Usually, these types of 'ghost stories' are mostly resolved within a week.

Usually, the cause of such ghost stories is monsters or items that appeared in Bisabal's works, or mental skills that were activated because of them. It would be strange if it wasn't resolved within a guild full of hunters.

But now that 'strange thing' was happening.

“No, why can’t this monster be subdued? What are the curators doing?”

“There is a story that even they can’t handle the monster.”

“Then it would be better to just throw it outside the guild….”

“…….”

“…I said something stupid.”

The Collectors' Guild ran a special gallery that could never be replaced by anything else.

The government was directly regulating the people who entered the collection, and dangerous items were being collected from all over the world. Where on earth would they dispose of the items that the collection center could not handle? Another disaster was sure to occur.

Until now, all incidents and accidents have been reduced to 'ghost stories' before they became such a disaster.

“But it’s not like it can be suppressed to this extent….”

“There was even talk that there was no suppression in the first place.”

“Why is that? Wouldn’t it be better to destroy or seal it?”

“I knew I wouldn’t succeed anyway, so I decided not to make myself feel bad….”

“Does it make you feel uncomfortable? That means you have that much intelligence… Does that mean you have an ego?”

“The rumor that it’s a humanoid monster is the most credible, but doesn’t it have an ego?”

“Wow, this is crazy. Bringing in a humanoid monster all of a sudden.”

“How many years ago was the last humanoid monster sighted?”

Never before had Bisabal allowed a 'ghost story' to go this far. He was a man who knew very well how much more efficient his employees were when they felt secure.

And yet this situation has come to this.

“No one got hurt?”

“Not really….”

And this situation continued.

“…….”

“…….”

“…Then there’s no problem, right?”

The employees began to understand on their own.

“There are no injuries, no deaths. Then why is it a ghost story?”

“Essentially, a ghost story is a strange story… If it’s really just a story, then it makes sense.”

“Was it just a story? It seems like it really existed since there were witnesses. It’s really amazing.”

“That’s why.”

This is the guild 'Collector'. All the staff of the guild are collectibles collected directly by the collector, Bisabele.

His realistic and cynical staff, who suited his tastes, gradually calmed down on their own.

“Hey, I guess I was kidding.”

“I heard someone saw it?”

“Then it’s an illusion skill.”

“I see.”

“Anyway, you said it wasn’t dangerous?”

“Maybe the guild leader brought in employees without telling us.”

“Well, we don’t know all the employees. Hasn’t something similar happened before?”

“He was just a quiet employee, but there were rumors that he was a ghost. If you look at it that way, it seems like a possible story.”

“Wouldn’t it be better to announce things like this in advance? Right?”

“The guild leader has a very unique personality. Let’s all understand each other.”

“That’s right. I wonder when you’ll introduce this new recruit….”

The guild leader, Bisabal, is a person who cherishes his employees terribly. If a 'ghost story' like that is left unattended, then it must not be that dangerous.

Whether real or not, whatever its identity, the employees trusted the Visa.

“…….”

“…….”

Even Visabal himself knew that.

“…Is this what you expected?”

“What do you think?”

The collection regained its peace.

Even though nothing was resolved.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (19)

Episode 19

“It was dangerous.”

Yoo Seong-un said as if sighing.

“I agreed with that, but seeing my employees gossiping about ‘ghost stories’ made my heart flutter. It almost led to internal strife.”

“Our guild members aren’t so narrow-minded that they would fight over a ghost story. Curator Yoo Seong-un, do you have low trust in your coworkers?”

“It was a gamble, a matter of trust and confidence. This wasn’t something that could be reassured based on trust between colleagues.”

Although things worked out well in the end, it still was a risky gamble.

“It’s like completely releasing the existence of a source whose identity has not even been properly identified….”

We still don't know what Geo's true identity is. For some reason, it still is. No matter how much Yoo Seong-un searched through the books, he couldn't find a single similar person.

If we entrust the investigation to the association, we might be able to get some answers, but it is unknown what the probability is, and in the first place, Bisabal would not have let it happen.

'He is such a devoted person to his own things.'

However, what was certain was that 'Portrait of Geo' was clearly a being that had been strongly influenced by the source.

Gardeners and some humans who know of their existence call such monsters, items, skills, or phenomena 'original beings'. It is difficult to define them specifically, so they are just vague terms.

It may be a bit of a stretch for a professional in this day and age, but 'Portrait of Geo' was one such case.

“It almost turned out to be a disaster.”

“Well, Curator Yoo Seong-un, what do you think Geo’s true identity is?”

“Are you beating around the bush…?”

“It’s a simple question.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“I don’t know. It’s just like it has been so far.”

Geo's path was different from that of the normal origin beings.

“First of all, there is a high probability that it is not a monster.”

“They are certainly hostile to civilization outside the dungeons.”

“Their hostility is more of an instinct. It’s a reflex, like when a human sees a cockroach and gets scared or wants to kill it right away. It’s not something the monsters can control themselves….”

“Even if it were possible, that level of patience and judgment would have already surpassed the level of a ‘monster.’”

“In that sense, I decided it wasn’t a monster.”

Geo's favor may sometimes feel indifferent or merciless, as it is due to his love for the race itself, but that does not mean that it is not pure favor.

So it couldn't be a monster.

“Isn’t it showing a completely different aspect from the monster?”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“Of course, there are monsters that are friendly to humans, but strictly speaking, that’s closer to love and hate than affection. If the deformity incident 11 years ago was truly pure kindness, they would have carefully observed the humans crying out in fear and taken care of it.”

“But did you say they were happy?”

“There are some who have no intention of understanding humans, and perhaps they just found their reactions amusing. As for this part, the incident was quickly resolved and ended unsolved… I can’t say anything for sure.”

“That’s not important right now, so let’s move on.”

“Well, and….”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking, rolling his deep blue eyes.

“It’s not even an item.”

“There must certainly be items that have egos.”

“The ego contained in an item is something that was created by humans. It has its limitations.”

He added.

“You can’t judge someone by how much they can think like a human… you have to look at their essence.”

“The essence?”

“Geo created life, even if only in a portrait.”

Yoo Seong-un thought for a moment and tilted his head.

“Perhaps a life created in this way could come out of the picture. I haven’t heard the answer from Geo, but considering that there are no restrictions on its own ability to come out, and that it can easily take objects out of the picture, it seems highly possible.”

“What if Geo draws a monster and it comes out?”

“That seems possible. Even if it doesn’t work, it’s confirmed that Geo can escape at will. If it’s not a monster but an item, or if Geo brings out a contract beast that has been subjugated by his soul, that alone will be impossible to handle.”

“And a mere item can’t do that?”

“All items are created by humans. No matter how much you think about it without prejudice, only highly intelligent monsters can create them. Creating life is impossible for humans or monsters, and the fact that the level of their souls is incomparable to that of humans has already been testified by numerous witnesses. It is not an item.”

"aha."

He laughed and giggled as if he found the visage amusing. He was really immature for his age.

“Then what about a type of skill? In the case of skills, it was proven long ago that they can manipulate souls. There is a user of the resurrection skill who can bring back a dead person, although there is only one person.”

“That too is just messing with the original soul, and cannot create a completely new soul. Even if a skill capable of creating a soul exists somewhere in the world… In the first place, the skill is an intangible energy that intelligent life can handle.”

“So you’re saying that Geo, who has a form and an ego, can’t be a remnant of a skill? But what if he’s just some kind of awakened being who gained the skill to turn himself into a portrait?”

The visage changed as he waved his fingers.

“Geo himself describes himself as a 29-year-old young man who has previously been in human society. If so, he may simply be a type of Awakened being that has not been revealed until now.”

Yoo Seong-un shook his head.

“It’s impossible.”

“Why? Mr. Yoo Seong-un, the research team leader of the association, does he see something?”

“If you look at it, it would be the guild leader who would see it better than me… I just know something.”

“So what do you know?”

“Do you know why people with superpowers are called ‘Awakened Ones’ in the first place?”

“Uhm….”

Visabal shrugged.

“It’s not something I’m really interested in.”

“If you just say you don’t know, it might damage your pride.”

“I guess it’s a lot. I’m the head of one of the top three guilds in South Korea. Can you imagine how expensive this pride is?”

“You must be foolish.”

Yoo Seong-woon continued speaking, letting out a bitter laugh.

“It’s easy if you look back at the meaning of the word awakening.”

“1. Wake up and come to your senses. 2. Realize and know. 3. Wake up and observe carefully and be on guard.”

“…If it’s not your area of interest, then it’s like a Korean dictionary….”

“If you don’t even know the meaning of the words, I wonder if there’s any point in becoming a guild leader with just one emotion skill.”

“Oh, yes. You must be stupid.”

“So which one is it?”

“Um… anything is fine.”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking nonchalantly.

“The important thing is its essence.”

“That’s interesting.”

“In any sense, awakening is the reconfiguration of something that already exists.”

He rested his chin on his hand.

“Whether it’s opening your eyes and coming to your senses, straightening out your regrettably twisted mind, or maturing internally and reflecting on your younger days… it’s a change that takes place within that one person who has always existed.”

“Aha, so?”

“The Awakened One’s skills are not the result of receiving abilities that were not there before, but rather the awakening of abilities that were originally buried within one’s nature. Dungeons were created, energy and resources that were not originally on Earth appeared, and the environment changed along with them. Humans evolved to adapt to that.”

“I think there was something similar in the center’s textbook. So, is it okay to understand it as meaning that it is just a matter of realizing that the stone you originally had was a diamond when the time came?”

“It’s probably about the same.”

Yoo Seong-un scratched the back of his neck.

“In that sense, Geo cannot be considered an Awakened One.”

“Hmm….”

“Even if he is an Awakened One, his original soul level has awakened, not been granted a new one.”

“I see.”

These two do not know it, but there was an error in Yoo Seong-un's words. Sergio was a very, very, very coincidental case of his soul being elevated through a union with the Source during the process of Earth's new birth.

This was a miraculous transformation of probability that would be difficult to observe on a small scale like Earth.

“I have a headache.”

“It’s a headache.”

Of course, the two of them could not have figured this out, only 30 years after the catastrophe.

To them, who were ordinary humans, the 'Portrait of Geo' was not a human being from the beginning.

“…….”

Bisabal, who had been blinking his bright yellow eyes and thinking, opened his mouth.

“Then what if we call Geo the ‘Child of Origin’?”

“I think that’s a little… strange.”

“Please explain in what sense this is strange.”

“Most of the children of the Origin are not of the opposite sex. No, we don’t even have to go as far as children; this applies to almost all beings born from the Origin….”

Yoo Seong-un said with a trembling face.

“If I were to describe the existence of the source in one word, I would say it is a ‘living story.’ So I cannot think. Even if it seems like I am thinking, it is an illusion and I am not actually thinking.”

“Are you sure?”

“…That’s not… true. Even though I’m a gardener, I’m not really an expert in this field yet.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been hesitating, continued speaking.

“I said that because all the children of the original source that I have seen so far could be seen as nature itself.”

There are often cases where humans create a dungeon with their own strong ideas and rules, and then become the boss monster there.

But they too could not be called 'children of the origin'.

“Monsters are one of two things. Either they were created in a dungeon, or they became monsters because the dungeon was created.”

“Hmm….”

“It’s different from the ‘Children of the Origin’ who arise directly from the Origin or who coincidentally belong to the vein of the Origin and are then created here and there in the dimensions.”

“Your story is always fascinating to hear.”

The beast laughed, its eyes slitting like a snake's.

“From my perspective as a hunter, the greatest secret in the world would be the dungeons.”

“That’s a good thing. There are still many people who can’t adapt to the mere existence of dungeons, but if we were to tell them that the dungeons were formed from a universal concept called Origin… everyone would have their heads cracked.”

“We are always grateful to our gardeners. Would you like some coffee?”

“Okay. I’ll take the caffeine.”

Yoo Seong-un was openly disgusted. He was already busy and often worked overtime, but recently he had been consuming as much caffeine as he could in order to talk to Geo, who only opened his eyes at dawn, and he was on the verge of vomiting.

“Anyway, well, that’s right. If we really have to explain it, it would be much easier to say that Geo is the child of the Origin. There's no other way to explain it… The Origin isn't a narrow concept that can be understood by the existence of Earth in just 30 years."

"Well, since we don't even know the dungeon yet, we probably don't have the capacity to explore knowledge further down."

"It seems like the chairman is still interested, but I'm not sure. It's still hard to say anything about Geo's true identity."

The source is an ecosystem and nature. Just as the nitrogen in the atmosphere does not understand humans, the children of the source have a very poor understanding of humans. They just survive in their own way and cultivate their own 'story'.

But Geo wasn't like that.

"I don't know how that's possible… well, I don't know. But since you said you were once human, wouldn't we be able to find out something if we investigated that area…?"

"……."

"Even so, I cannot understand how a human could become a child of the Origin. Even if they were human, it is possible that they were not humans of Earth."

Many novice gardeners confuse 'monsters' with 'children of the origin', but just because they are formed under the great influence of the origin does not mean they are the same.

"Monsters are born in dungeons, and children of the origin are born from the origin. They were born from different ships, so they can't be the same."

"Is it roughly an uncle-nephew relationship?"

“Hmm… I guess it’s somewhat similar.”

The order is that a 'dungeon' and a 'child of the origin' are formed from the mother body called the origin, and then a monster is formed from that 'dungeon'. Usually, this flow is followed.

“If it’s a humanoid monster or something similar, they’ll create a dungeon themselves and create new rules or monsters there, but that’s not common….”

The saying uncle and nephew is not so wrong.

“There is also a story that the dungeon is also one of the children of the origin.”

“Oh, is that so?”

“This part still needs more research. I can’t say for sure. Anyway….”

Yoo Seong-un saw Bisabal.

“So, was it okay?”

“…….”

“I decided to let this unidentified entity go free.”

The sage shrugged his shoulders.

“…Haven’t we already been discussing the answer to that question a little while ago?”

How on earth can we possibly leave that unidentified, uncontrollable entity unfree?

“It’s not a monster, it’s not an item, it’s not an Awakened One. But there are too many strange things about it to be a child of the Origin.”

“…….”

“He creates life, has a high level of soul, and can do anything. He does everything by himself. If there are any restrictions or conditions for coming out of the portrait, I don’t know, but he can do that freely and easily.”

“…That’s right.”

“How are you going to stop it? Is it even possible? We can’t even handle the gods that we’ve become so familiar with, so how are you going to stop the ‘Portrait of Geo’ whose identity is even more unknown?”

Visabal smiled and waved his hand.

“Oh, maybe it would be possible if he took a human he cared about hostage.”

“Are you crazy?”

“I expected that kind of reaction. It’s not to our taste in terms of humanitarianism, and I don’t know how effective it would be in the first place. With Geo’s abilities, he could easily take the hostages away… That would only cause trouble.”

“…….”

“Do you understand?”

He smiled cheerfully.

“We can’t stop it.”

“…I know.”

“What’s the difference between trying to stop a tsunami by using a small child as a meat shield and me? If you can’t stop it anyway, at least you shouldn’t get in trouble.”

He smiled thinly. It was a smile that seemed to be comforting a child who was struggling, and it felt like the old man's gaze was looking down on him.

“And as much as possible, it would be good to save up favors.”

By the greatest stroke of luck, 'Portrait of Geo' is very gentlemanly, polite and fair.

If you receive something as a favor from someone, you should return the favor in the same amount, but in a greater amount. Perhaps that is Geo's 'rule'.

“This incident was a kind of vaccination, a warning to coexist with something I would never be able to handle. Fortunately, I know my people very well, and they have lived up to my expectations of insensibility.”

“…The numerous ghost stories that have occurred in the guild so far may have also played a part. Nothing much has happened so far, so I guess they thought there was no need to be terrified by a ghost story now.”

“That's it.”

“…….”

“This place is called ‘Collector’.”

A place managed by Bisabal himself, filled only with employees selected by Bisabal himself, and filled with works of art that Bisabal himself loves.

That was the 3rd largest guild in South Korea, 'Collectors'.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, remember. ‘Portrait of Geo’ is not something we can control.”

It was stupid to even think about fighting.

“It was a natural disaster, and fortunately, they were able to communicate with us and were kind to us. That was truly an incredible stroke of luck, an unbelievable miracle.”

“…….”

“Don’t think that the fate of the Earth is in your hands and foolishly throw away this miracle. We must be careful, generous, and always kind.”

“…Did you buy Geo knowing this would happen? Since he was going to be exposed to the world anyway since he was up for auction, did you buy him first to avoid any potential disasters that might arise during that process?”

“I see quite a lot.”

“…….”

“I thought it wasn’t an ordinary piece of work.”

Visabal then smiled with a childish and mischievous face. It seemed like it would be out of place to dress up like a gentleman, but he actually seemed lively.

He said.

“Because it was the only work I couldn’t read.”

That was right.

“…….”

“…I trust the guild leader.”

“It’s difficult to trust too much.”

“To be exact, I trust your judgment.”

Trust those eyes.

Since it was a successful gamble, Yoo Seong-un decided to swallow his words.

“But I guess I’m still anxious because I’m just human.”

“How can I be foolish when I have a speaking disaster in my heart?”

“It’s like that feeling right before a horror movie starts.”

Oh, yeah.

That's it.

“…Is it because there’s something so huge in front of me…?”

What can I do with my heart that is cowering before a giant?

Humans are originally such small beings.

* * *

Meanwhile, in a truly unbelievable and mind-bogglingly miraculous miracle that should never have happened, on that day that was supposed to be the last day of the Earth but wasn't, Geo unknowingly merged with the Source and evolved into a possessed portrait...

“This is the taste.”

I was farming.

It means that there are no thoughts.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (20)

Episode 20

“Good.”

As always, this content was quite successful.

“A person must sweat.”

“Kung?”

“He who does not work, neither shall he eat.”

“Kung kung kung…?”

The body of Honey, a sweet-colored water bird, trembled. Geo shook his head firmly at the sound of her crying, which seemed to ask, 'Then what about me who doesn't work?'

“What on earth are you worried about when you’re so cute?”

“Kkuk.”

“Don’t worry about the weird stuff, you’re already doing your part with cuteness.”

Even if Geo lived thoughtlessly, he was not an irresponsible author who did not take responsibility for a single living creature he created with paint. As the son of Geo, who was a gourmet and a big eater, Honey would never have to go hungry.

“Do you understand?”

Honey was convinced and spread out comfortably.

“But come out of there.”

“Cur.”

Of all things, it was in Geo's basket.

“It’s hard to get the seeds out.”

“Kurung.”

“Who do you take after to be so stubborn?”

“Huh?”

“Me? I’m such an unfilial son.”

Geo bent down and rummaged through the basket. There was no major problem because Honey's body was transparent water itself, with only a very slight viscosity, but this guy had played with the seeds and they were all mixed up in a mess.

"this…."

“…….”

“…I think it was an eggplant seed.”

Fortunately, Sergio, who was from a mountain village in Gangwon Province, was able to identify the type of seed just by looking at it. This is not something that everyone from Gangwon Province can do, but it was possible because Sergio himself was serious about this type of farming.

Geo, who had enjoyed farming since he was young, got up with eggplant seeds and put them in a hole he had dug in advance.

“Is it time to plant potatoes now?”

“Crunch?”

"huh?"

There was a brief miscommunication, but Geo soon figured out what Honey was wondering about.

“I didn’t mean to plant my father.”

“Kung?”

“Potato is a nickname. It’s like a second name.”

There is an anecdote that the mother, who loved potatoes, named the baby Potato after seeing the ultrasound picture of the fetus, saying, "He looks like a potato." And the grandmother, who saw the newborn Geo, nodded and said, "He only ate potatoes, but he gave birth to a potato."

“I thought I was a potato until I was four because all the adults called me a potato.”

So I wondered if that was how he grew up so healthily and harmlessly.

“Well then, that’s fine.”

“Gurr.”

“You too, grow up healthy.”

The Seo family has always respected the free will of new life.

After a few days, Geo finally succeeded in planting all the seeds that Yoo Sung-un had given him. He had even planted potatoes, sweet potatoes, and corn, which were famous famine relief crops, so starving to death seemed a long way off.

“Well, it would be harder to starve to death with this body.”

“Gurr.”

“No matter how hungry Daddy is, he won’t eat you, Honey.”

The location where the crops were planted was the garden behind the hut.

“Actually, at this point, it’s a bit ambiguous to call it a garden.”

It was a little bigger, but it was still a garden. It wasn't as big and expansive as those who ran a business through farming, so Geo had some excuse. Anyway, it was a garden.

Geo was a great adult who could compromise with reality.

“Then let’s go back.”

“Kuk kuk kuk.”

“Yeah, I have to try the cheongdo I made.”

It was the point where the fruit juice I had made previously was starting to ripen.

“The combination of sweet and sour goji berries and sour and bitter drought sweet potatoes is a great combination.”

If there was one thing I was worried about, it was whether the two were in proper balance, but I didn't really care about that. Geo, who had a long history of cooking, had already acquired the taste of his grandmother's cooking.

“It was just a guess and an eye guess, but there’s no way I could be wrong about the combination of things I eat.”

As befitting such pride, a good scent was already wafting from the glass bottle.

"hmm."

Geo entered the kitchen and blinked at the cupboard containing the fruit juice.

“It’s been a while since I’ve sweated, so why not have some cool tea?”

“Crunch?”

“I shed a sweat of the heart.”

In reality, Honey pointed out that Geo's body did not excrete waste products such as sweat, but didn't he work anyway? A person who worked had to drink refreshing tea to increase his work efficiency.

“Then I’ll have to get some ice from the warehouse.”

Pigs don't hesitate when it comes to food. Without even wiping away the sweat that hadn't come out, Geo went straight down to the warehouse.

In the icehouse filled with all sorts of food items, of course there was ice. In every corner of the warehouse, which looked almost like a cave, you couldn't even tell where the ice ended, and there were pieces of ice.

“It’s a little cold.”

As we opened the heavy door and entered the warehouse, Honey stiffened.

“Kku, kkugururuk.”

“If it’s too cold, I should go out… uh.”

“…….”

“…Are you frozen?”

At that moment, Geo was expressionless and very shaken by Honey's appearance, which had become transparent ice itself.

Even though she was already frozen, Honey shook her body and groomed her fur.

“Poopung.”

“?”

“Kkuk.”

“Has it evolved?”

“Cur.”

“I too have evolved from a human into a possessed portrait, so there is no reason why a water bird cannot become an ice bird.”

I thought Honey, who had turned to ice for a moment, was dead once, and I was surprised once by how flexible she was despite being ice, but if there was no problem, then so what?

Honey is cute even when frozen, so that's okay.

“I think the moving ice bird is interesting enough.”

“Gurrrr!”

“You are happy too, so this father is happy.”

Honey, who resembled the Creator and had no sense of crisis from birth, was simply delighted with her own transformation.

Even though he was a bird whose body was made of water, it was hard to believe that he could freeze so quickly, but Geo wasn't particularly surprised since he had transformed from a human to a portrait.

“Since when have we been following the laws of physics?”

Living life ignoring the laws of physics, it couldn't be anything but an interesting life.

“First of all, ice….”

“Kuk kuk kuk.”

“It’s over there, thank you.”

Honey's wings, which had turned to ice, were no longer fused together with her body as before.

It also showed the location of the ice and frantically preened itself, perhaps because it had developed feathers or body parts that it didn't have before. It seems that birds are not able to keep their feathers still.

'It was a bit less when it was water.'

Geo slowly walked through the ice warehouse, leaving Honey on his shoulder.

“…….”

It was cool.

"ha…."

The breath came out.

A breath so thick that it can be seen at a glance.

It must have been that cold, but for some reason Geo didn't feel the cold and the food didn't freeze.

It was unclear whether the icehouse was deceiving Geo, or whether he and the food were stronger than the ice.

'It might be the latter.'

Geo lowered his head and looked at the floor.

"…hmm…."

He muttered.

“If it breaks, it will be a disaster.”

A bottom of ice like an abyss is visible.

'It looks like solid ice, but it's so transparent that it looks like there's a lake underneath the ice.'

It was a very transparent floor. The ice that had frozen very slowly was not opaque but clear like glass, and the floor was covered with such ice. Geo couldn't even guess its depth.

They were slightly smooth, had a soft blue glow, and occasionally a glowing halo could be seen inside. They glowed for a few seconds like fireflies and then disappeared, and Geo was curious about their identity.

“Could it be a species of resident similar to a forest butterfly?”

“Kung?”

“Or maybe it’s just some glowing moss or bacteria or something.”

They didn't move. They just glowed for a moment and then disappeared.

It resembles dim starlight.

“…….”

It's a dreamy sight.

“The color is similar to that of a glacier.”

There was no strong scent of the ocean, but the transparent, blue ice floor, whose depth was unknown, reminded me of a glacier. I have never actually seen a glacier on Earth, but I thought it might be something like this.

Geo raised his head and looked at the view of the icehouse.

“Where on earth did all this ice come from? There’s ice everywhere.”

I was curious every time I saw it.

“This icehouse is quite a distance down from the first floor of the cabin. So there might have been groundwater under the cabin.”

Then a contradiction arises.

“Yes, it doesn’t make sense that the groundwater beneath the forest in such a mild climate would be frozen solid like this.”

That's why it was even more mysterious.

“Good.”

Funny.

“It’s just like a fairy tale….”

I liked it.

Geo still moved his feet with a blunt face without any expression.

Honey had already adapted to my body not spreading out like before, and as expected, she flew around the large ice storage room like a cave, making a pleasant sound. It was a scene like a movie.

After walking for a while through the ice cave, Geo was able to find what he was looking for.

“Yeah, that’s right. It was here.”

It was ice that had grown like a stalagmite in a cave.

“This sounds good too.”

“Huh?”

“It’s just like a cave.”

As absurd as it may sound, the icehouse also looked like a limestone cave made of ice.

I wonder where it was flowing from, or if it was melted, or if it was a vein like a tree. Water was dripping here and there in the icehouse, and perhaps because of the low temperature, it was forming columns or pillars like this.

“This is usually how limestone caves work. Water containing a lot of lime slowly builds up columns on the cave floor as it drips, and the droplets splash here and there, popping out like coral, or….”

“…….”

“Here. It will remain in a pearl shape like this.”

It is actually called cave pearl.

“Of course, this should be called an ice pearl rather than a cave pearl….”

Doesn't this really feel like a cave, a great formwork created by nature?

“…….”

Ice Pearl

Underneath Geo's cabin, in the icehouse, a naturally occurring ice-shaped pearl. A transparent pearl with a faint mother-of-pearl sheen, edible. It melts at high temperatures like real ice and is odorless and tasteless.

Method of Concentration: When melted and consumed, it is very effective in stabilizing mental disorders such as depression and mania.

“Should I take this?”

Whatever the effect, doesn't it taste the same as actual ice?

“It’s tiring to cut down those huge ice bamboo shoots.”

“Crunch crunch.”

The ice bird, Honey, flew away and swallowed one of the round ice pearls. Geo couldn't help but admire its quick appearance.

“Are you eating? Are you a pig?”

“Gurrrr!!”

“No, that’s a misunderstanding. If it sounded like I was saying something, it was a huge misunderstanding. My dad likes pigs.”

Raised by his grandmother for most of his life, Geo took after her tastes in some ways, one of which was his inability to stand skinny people.

In that sense, it would be a happy thing if Honey, who can be called my child, got chubby.

“Kids should eat a lot and grow well.”

Become a pig, yap.

“Then let’s go up now.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“I’d rather be okay with it, pig.”

“Gurrrr!!!”

“Kids need to be chubby to grow up well.”

Geo, who came up from the icehouse while comforting Honey, headed straight to the kitchen.

The fruit juice that I had taken out of the cupboard in advance smelled good, and I was already looking forward to how delicious it would be.

He took out a clean glass and poured two spoonfuls of fruit syrup into it.

“It smells really good.”

The scent of the goby fruit, which becomes stronger the longer it dries, seemed to intensify even more if it went through some sort of ripening process, even if it wasn't dried.

The sweet chestnuts soaked in sugar and infused with its fragrance gave off a uniquely refreshing sweet aroma.

“I think it has a citrusy scent, maybe because the drought complex is a fruit of the tangerine family….”

I should say that it has a bitter and sour scent unique to lemon peel.

“I’m looking forward to it.”

The fruit juice in the glass had artistic value in itself.

The fruit juice, which had absorbed a lot of sugar and given off its juice without sparing any, had a shiny sheen.

The flesh of the goby fruit had changed into the form of a chewy jelly, and the drought-resistant jars, from which the thin membranes had been peeled off one by one, had hardened slightly, spreading out their grains so that they were visible.

“Add some ice pearls here too….”

“Knock knock.”

“That’s the pearl you ate earlier. Put it back.”

“Huh?”

“No thanks.”

Honey, who had turned back into water, tried to vomit out the ice pearl she had just swallowed, but was stopped by her father's authority. It wasn't even penguin milk, so she didn't expect it to go that far.

“Now, if you stir it gently….”

Dalgrak, shut up.

The glass and the ice pearls clash, making a clear sound.

“Fruit tea is complete.”

"closely."

“Are you a chicken?”

“Kkurung.”

“I don’t know your identity.”

The finished fruit tea was so beautiful that I wanted to draw it. The crimson tea reflected through the glass was very transparent despite its dark color.

Whether it was the influence of the ice pearls or not, the sparkling blue light I had seen in the warehouse kept shining and disappearing like shooting stars, and in between, I could see full moons and crescent moon-shaped pieces of fruit.

Let’s just take a sip… .

“…….”

I felt an ecstatic flavor.

“…It’s delicious.”

It was a flavor and savory taste that I had never tasted before.

The vermilion tea was smooth and refreshing, but just when it seemed too sweet, a leisurely bitterness soon came over him and politely calmed him down.

The intense sourness of the drought complex, combined with the goji berries and sugar, felt like a cute whining child.

'I like the flesh too.'

The goji berries, which had had all their juices sucked out by the sugar, were like jelly. Technically, they were similar to konjac jelly, but much more runny.

It had a soft yet strangely elastic texture, like the grains of grapes with the skin completely peeled off.

The drought complex had a taste that was just like the grains of a grapefruit or an orange, and it felt like the juice had been drained by sugar, like a goji berry, but it felt a little harder.

But it wasn't an unpleasant hardness. The grains that spread gently in my mouth gave a pleasant texture.

‘The taste and smell are all mixed together and difficult to distinguish…’

The tea is never one-dimensional and has a soup-like flavor, and the fruit pulp adds enjoyment to the texture that can be monotonous. And the strange change that melts gently on the tongue.

The small change was probably a halo of light trapped within the ice pearl.

“…Popping candy?”

It didn't really spread out or burst like a firecracker, but the blue halos dotting the tea water added a strangely savory flavor. I felt a pleasure on my tongue that couldn't be expressed in sweet or salty terms.

It was a fruit tea that whetted my appetite for no reason.

“…….”

“Gulp?”

“It would be perfect as a gift.”

There must be a lot of sheep, so I thought I'd pack some.

“I should give it to Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

It's a grandmother's instinct to want to share her cooking.

Geo, who grew up hearing his grandmother, his life mentor, tell him to "live a life of generosity," wanted to fatten up Yoo Seong-un.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (21)

Episode 21 “Geo.” 4:29 AM. Yoo Seong-woon called the portrait. “Geo, are you awake?” “I am awake.” “Good.” He called because he knew that he usually wakes up around this time. “There are days when he skips, but the time when we can communicate is usually around 4 or 5 AM… I’ll have to watch the situation more, but I think it’s better to think of this as a rule.” This “Portrait of Geo” is friendly to humans, but no being from any source shows mercy to humans who break their own rules. Even if it was a being that was almost human-like and gentlemanly, he had to be careful. “I wanted to talk to you.” “Do you have any business with me?” “I heard you’ve been wandering around the office lately. There are a lot of rumors.” “I wonder what the rumor is.” “I don’t know if you’ll like it… but they call it the ‘Black Cloak.’” Yoo Seong-woon continued with his signature innocent smile. “I think there’s a rumor that says, ‘The Black Cloak gives gifts to good people.’” These were the guild members that the good-eyed Bisabal personally gathered one by one. Regardless of their military power, their brainpower was not bad. They figured out the rules of the 'Black Cloak' in their own way. "Did you give gifts to other people this time?" "You didn't give them to everyone." "I know, you gave them to people who were particularly polite or kind, right?" Those who received gifts from Geo had something in common. 'Either too weak, or too strong.' He could guess to some extent. Those who were too weak would have given gifts as an apology for being afraid of him, and those who were strong would have communicated normally in front of Geo's force, so Geo would have judged them to be 'well-mannered.' An apology, or a gift of gratitude. It was a result that fit the 1:1 rule. 'Rather, those who were neither this nor that didn't receive gifts.' Employees who were strong enough to not shed tears or a runny nose, but not strong enough to communicate normally in front of a huge force. Those people didn't receive gifts. "Um...." In order to prevent any accidents, I thought I needed to explain this part. 'Since he's imitating a human, he's not so rough that communication is impossible.' Well, how can you define the existence of the origin as gentlemanly? 'This much should be okay.' Yoo Seong-woon opened his mouth after mentally preparing himself. "If some of our employees don't answer you properly, or run away, or avoid answering... That doesn't mean they're bad people. They're just a little bit timid." "..." "Anyone would be scared of a large, unidentified person wearing a black cloak who suddenly appeared at dawn when no one should be around?" Yoo Seong-woon deliberately described Geo as if he were an ordinary person. Geo thought of himself as an ordinary person, so it didn't seem like anything good would come of revealing his soul or his true nature. "Of course, it might feel rude to you. But I'm not saying that they were intentionally rude to you, but that it might have been a little burdensome for them because they're so timid." Soon a calm voice was heard. “I understand what you mean.” “Okay? Then thank you.” As a curator and gardener, Yoo Seong-woon couldn’t help but be worried. ‘It’s natural for a rabbit to shrink in front of a wolf, but if you judge that as rude and evil, things will get quite difficult. If you’re not careful, innocent people could end up dying.’ Human standards are meaningless to the being of origin. In particular, ‘Portrait of Geo’ is a being sensitive to good and evil and manners, and the problem was that its standards could be clearly different from those of humans. Even if a person is not particularly wrong or a good person from a human’s perspective, from Geo’s perspective as the being of origin, he could be a terrible evil person. It was creepy to think about Geo, who had repeatedly said that he hated rude and evil people. ‘When I found out that there was someone who didn’t receive a gift at all, it really sent shivers down my spine.’ Doesn’t that mean that Geo ‘distinguished’ humans? “You, right. You said that the leader of the Bisabyeol guild wasn't a bad person?" "Yes, that's right." "All the employees of this company were personally selected by him. He didn't simply post a notice and select them through a large-scale interview, but he meticulously scouted them one by one." "It must have taken a lot of time and effort, but it's amazing." "I wanted to say that our guild employees are capable and good people, even if they're not good people." In this world, where can you find someone who hasn't committed a crime, but those personally selected by Bisabyeol weren't people who could be called evil. "They may not have great personalities, but they're just ordinary people." "Yes." "…Would it be too rude to hope that you don't think badly of them?" I don't know how Geo distinguishes between good and evil in humans. 'However, just like humans have emotional skills… Geo also has a standard for judgment. Otherwise, there's no way he would have concluded that the leader of the Bisabyeol guild, who he hadn't even talked to, wasn't a bad person.' Contrary to Yoo Seong-woon's thoughts, Geo had no way of knowing the other person's 'safety' beyond the frame, unless they were inside the portrait. The reason why some people received gifts this time and some didn't was because Geo gave them as a reward whenever he thought, 'Oh, thank you' or 'Oh, I'm sorry.' There was no particular value judgment. However, Yoo Seong-woon, who didn't know about such circumstances, couldn't help but doubt Geo's emotional skills. 'I hope the skill standards aren't too harsh.' Bisabal said that this ghost story commotion was a kind of vaccination. It was to give Geo's portrait, a natural disaster that could never be dealt with or controlled, a chance to adapt to this world and respect its members, and for the humans of this world to understand and care for him. So Yoo Seong-woon had no choice but to try various methods. "What do you think?" "……." Fortunately, or perhaps naturally, Geo answered with his usual blunt face. "I didn't think of those people as bad." "I did?" "The only reason I didn't give them gifts was because I thought they didn't need it, and some ran away before I could do anything. I didn't think they were evil." "……." "I just thought they didn't need to give them gifts.” That was a really good story. ‘At least I didn’t think they were rude and evil. There was a reason why there were no injuries despite the increasing number of sightings.’ Just as I was about to feel relieved, Geo continued. “I do have a little resentment toward those who ignored me or ran away without answering my questions.” “Oh.” “But I understand. As you said, a man in a mysterious black cloak who suddenly appeared in a deserted hallway can be quite terrifying. I’d be lying if I said I wasn’t offended, but I don’t mean to get angry.” Geo added an explanation. “But I’m also human, so I can’t help but feel negative emotions.” “Oh, right.” “I tried to have a polite conversation, but it hurts when this keeps happening. I really hope the staff here don’t ignore or avoid ‘Black Cloak’ like this.” “I’ll talk to the guild master about that.” Yoo Seong-woon tried to suppress his embarrassment. ‘… I guess I’m still angry.’ It was just at the level of ‘not a bad person,’ not ‘not rude.’ Even a normal person would get angry if those around them rejected them, but Geo was a being who thought of himself as a human. Even if he thought he was a human, there was no way he wouldn’t get angry at those who went against the clear rules he had. ‘No matter what… I won’t be able to completely put the fear of ghost stories to rest. Since the level of the soul is so high, it’s natural for people to be intimidated when they stand before it. In that case, should I at least create new rules within the building to regulate the behavior of the employees?’ Yoo Seong-woon nodded after thinking for a moment. “… We have a close relationship centered around the guild master. Since the guild master personally brings each and every one of us, the employees have a lot of affection for him.” “Yes.” “I will tell the guild master and do my best to improve things so that the inconvenience you felt does not continue. I think the other employees will be convinced if the guild master insists strongly.” “I would appreciate it if you would do so.” As Geo said that, he was holding a glass bottle that he had never seen before. “…….” No, no. Wait a minute. A ‘jar?’ It was not a bottle, but a jar. It was big enough that he had to hold it with one arm instead of one. “…What is that?” “I will say that this is a thank you gift for listening to my complaints and requests.” “I haven’t finished the cookies I gave you last time either?” “Why did you do that?” “Ah…” “I’m not angry. I was wondering why there was still so little left. Could you answer me?” If he were a normal person, he would have thought, ‘Are you being sarcastic and angry?’, but Geo was clearly the source of the problem. It seemed like a genuine question, so Yoo Seong-woon answered with an apologetic face. “I’m sorry. I was saving it because it was so effective when I ate it when I was tired. It wasn’t that I was uncomfortable with your gift or that it didn’t suit my taste, so I kept it.” “You have no reason to apologize to me. I gave you the gift, and it’s now yours. You don’t need to make excuses to me. I’m just happy that you gave me strength when I was tired.” “I feel embarrassed when you say that…” Yoo Seong-woon looked at the glass jar in the portrait. “So, what’s that?” Geo took off his hand that was wrapping around the jar and showed it to him. “It’s fruit syrup.” “…That?” “Anyone can tell that it’s fruit syrup.” “Oh, right…” It’s not fruit syrup, no matter how you look at it. ‘…That’s fruit syrup?’ Even though fruits and sugar were expensive ingredients and not common foods, Yoo Seong-woon was a capable hunter. With his considerable income, there was no way he hadn’t tried the fruit syrup that even second-class citizens bought. ‘But it’s different from the fruit syrup I know…’ It was the color of twilight. Should I say it was a crimson color close to orange? The transparent and clean liquid had a sheen like the surface of a jewel, and inside it, reminiscent of the sunset, a deep color was sleeping. 'There's something fruity sinking in it, but...' The color was so enchanting that I didn't think I could eat it. "This is ice that's good to eat together." "...It looks just like a pearl." "The name is Ice Pearl. It seems that Mr. Yoo Seong-woon has the insight to guess the name right away." "Oh, right. Insight..." "It's ice that doesn't melt unless it's hot, so if you want to consume it, I recommend dissolving it in hot tea." "...." Wow. I can feel it. 'I don't think I can handle this.' The cookie I received in exchange for the seeds after receiving the tea leaves from Geo and asking him to 'hold back a little'.

That wasn't ordinary either. The fact that I couldn't eat it all at once because of the great fatigue recovery effect was exactly the current situation. 'But this time, there's a lot.' He said he enjoyed cooking, but his hands were quite large. Perhaps this being of origin did not know how small a human stomach was. “Take this.” “…Isn’t that too much?” “Eat a lot. It would be better for Yoo Seong-un to gain more weight than he is now.” “I’m on the healthy side.” Although he had never seen his body in person, judging from the outline of his cloak, Yoo Seong-un had more muscle mass than Geo. But he was going to gain more weight here? Yoo Seong-un had a hard time understanding. ‘…Wait a minute, do you mean fat by ‘fat’? Was Geo a cannibalistic monster? “I don’t taste good.” “That’s a funny joke.” “I meant it.” Fortunately, it didn’t seem to be a symbol of a candy store witch who gains weight before eating humans. ‘It’s not for humans to judge what aesthetic preferences the being of origin has.’ Perhaps Geo liked slightly plumper humans for aesthetic reasons. It was a bit odd that he liked people who looked fat, even though he himself had such a perfectly balanced body. I don’t know what kind of origin this is. ‘… Now that I think about it, if you give me a gift, I’ll usually eat it all, and when I’m bored, I cook or eat. I guess I really like food in many ways. I like seeing people with fat… My hands are strangely big… I like giving gifts… .’ This kid, is he a grandmother? “…….” “What are you thinking about?” “Oh, sorry. I was just thinking about something else for a moment.” “I see.” Fortunately, Geo didn’t ask any more questions. “This is a gift for your kindness, so I don’t need anything in return. More importantly, the newly mixed fruit syrup looks delicious and ripe, so I wanted to share it with you all.” “Hmm… I see.” Yoo Seong-woon nodded calmly, but thought to himself. ‘… Do you know that you’re bound by the rules?’ Geo’s words just now seemed to be based on the premise that ‘If I’m going to give you a gift, I have to receive something in return.’ Maybe Geo himself didn’t make the one-on-one rule. 'Or maybe I made it myself and forgot about it.' If only the memories of a 29-year-old youth existed in that class, it was a plausible hypothesis.

"...Since you're giving it to me, I'll take it...." Yoo Seong-woon used his emotion skill while looking at the fruit syrup. [Honey of the Water Vein] [Rank: -] A fruit syrup made from the goby fruit and drought-resistant berries that grow in the water vein of destiny. It has a reddish hue and a sweet and sour, deep savory flavor. It is processed directly by Geo, the master of the forest, so even the human body can accept it. If you dilute it in water and drink it, it restores human physical abilities to their limits. It is especially excellent for malnutrition. If you add ice pearls that grow in the glacier under Geo's hut, it has an excellent effect in restoring physical and mental functions. "..." "Doesn't it smell good?" "You're really good at cooking." I think it could be a little less good. Oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (22)

Episode 22

Yoo Seong-un asked the guild leader for help.

"help."

“Hey, what is it?”

“I came to practice sharing.”

“Am I a neighborhood bookworm?”

As soon as 9 o'clock in the morning, Yoo Seong-un went to Bisabal and was holding a large glass jar in his hand. The jar was so large that even Bisabal, who had been visited out of nowhere, was immediately drawn to it.

“You have unique tastes, Curator Yoo Seong-un. This is a rare item.”

“Ah, you already know everything, so please don’t stab me and help me.”

“Is that so?”

Visabal immediately realized that the jar was filled with fruit syrup, despite the sealed entrance, and that Geo had given it to him.

“Have you tried feeling it?”

“I did it as soon as I got it from Geo.”

“What’s the grade?”

“It is still unknown.”

“Oh, like that.”

Moon.

Bisabal stared at the fruit juice placed on the table.

“…….”

“Can you see anything?”

“It’s very good for your health.”

“I don’t think it’ll be that good, but I guess I’ll take it.”

“Didn’t you say you couldn’t finish the cookies last time either?”

“If you eat too much, you won’t be able to sleep. No matter how much of a cog in the wheel of a capitalist society you are, slaves are also human and need to sleep.”

“It would be a great reputation if you gave it to employees who work overtime or guards who come in the early morning.”

“Then we’ll be taken over by our portrait society. No matter how tight-lipped they are, information can still leak out.”

“I know, I’m just trying to control myself.”

Visabal laughed heartily.

“Above all, Geo should not be treated as an item dispenser.”

“That part….”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been chewing on Bisabal’s words, soon nodded in satisfaction.

“I’m glad you’re paying attention.”

It was a 'Portrait of Geo' whose identity is still unknown.

It would be a way to extend the lifespan of humans to be as alert and conscious as possible, without being overly afraid.

“Even if the effect is secondary, the appearance itself looks divine, so it would be well-received if you donated it to the temple.”

“Yes, well, I heard it’s especially good for malnutrition. I don’t know how it feels since I’m not in that condition.”

“If you talk about nutrition, I would especially like the Temple of the Sun. At this level, even the poor on the verge of mummification could be saved.”

“Since it is welcomed by the Sun Church, I can tell that it is definitely an item that gives off warm energy. Is it really that effective?”

“It’s a concentrate, so wouldn’t it be a great help to the dungeon exploration team if we each took just one spoonful?”

The exploration team is not sent to conquer the dungeon, but rather to find missing people or figure out the dungeon's structure. Since it is impossible to escape in a short period of time, a lot of food is consumed.

The problem is that, because the dungeon environment is what it is, you can't take too much. Because of that, it was common to take mostly tasteless nutritional food or potions.

“It looks delicious, and since it’s a concentrate, a small amount is enough, and since it’s in the form of a fruit tea, it’s easy to consume like a potion.”

“…….”

“It’s a burden to enjoy privately, to the point that the government would impose regulations if it were to become known to the world.”

“I see.”

“But unfortunately, on a global scale, we will have to enjoy it in private.”

Visabal laughed like a foolish young man.

“You can’t sell it, right?”

“Oh, absolutely not.”

It is a gift from the source of existence. If he finds out that it is being sold at auction without permission, the hatred and resentment that Yoo Seong-un will have to endure will be more than he can bear.

That was the 'rule'.

“I think this every time, but the government is too lax in its vigilance about the root cause.”

It's been 31 years since the catastrophe. It wasn't a short time, but it wasn't that long either.

Unlike dungeons where it is easy to detect abnormalities, it may be inevitable that the government's understanding of the source of the indifference towards humans is significantly low.

“This president is quite concerned, and there are probably people who don’t know about this source… but in reality, it is not reflected in society.”

Yoo Seong-un let out a frustrated sigh.

“It would be good if safety precautions were implemented not only in the dungeon but also in the direction of the source. It’s very sad to see people or their bereaved families die without knowing the cause of death from the source’s children. There’s also a limit to what the gardeners can do.”

“It’s not even been properly revealed yet, and for now, isn’t the dungeon on the surface the biggest threat? It can’t be helped that we’re more concerned about the dungeon that causes trouble than the source that doesn’t cause any trouble if left alone. And we’re short on manpower.”

“Even though it’s like only eating the rind of a watermelon.”

“The fact that there are few people who can detect the source may also play a role.”

Unlike dungeons that can be seen and recognized by anyone, and the monsters that call them home, the so-called 'Children of Origin' are difficult for most people to detect.

There have been many theories so far, but the most widely supported theory is that it is because it is a 'realm that cannot be perceived by the human body'. That is why only a small number of humans who have evolved or changed as the Earth's environment changes can see the 'children of the origin'.

“I think it was said that even if you are a suitable person, you cannot see all the children of the origin.”

“Yes, this is also a kind of talent. Just as everyone has different hearing abilities, there are children that everyone with aptitude can see, while there are also children that everyone cannot see.”

“Your story is always fascinating to hear.”

“There is also a hypothesis that the fewer children who can see, the closer they are to the source. There must be a child somewhere that even I cannot see.”

“It’s certainly a creepy story when there’s danger right around the corner and no one can see it.”

“If you can’t see or sense it, you can’t even touch it in the first place, and if you don’t touch it, it won’t get angry….”

Yoo Seong-un sighed.

“I was whining in frustration, but honestly, I don’t think it would matter if the citizens still don’t know about the source. They don’t care about humans.”

“Didn’t you say last time that there are exceptions?”

“Yes, of course there are exceptions… but since they’re not as aggressive as monsters, the damage they take is probably less.”

This rarity was also one of the reasons why the children of the origin were unknown until now.

“Well, anyway.”

"yes."

“I guess I have to eat this.”

“Yes.”

“It’s a thick concentrate and there’s a lot of it, so it’s a bit much for us to just eat it by ourselves.”

“…Are you planning to call another scapegoat?”

“I guess I’ll have to call the HR team.”

The HR team is made up of the most vocal people in the guild, just like the secretary team. This is because they have to take care of everything from the overall guild members to carrying out secret orders from the guild leader, Bisabal.

“At least it won’t spread to other teams.”

“That may be true, but….”

“I’ve been working overtime lately and I’m feeling a bit out of it.”

“You even cracked my cookies.”

“I’ll lie and say that this is an item I purchased separately.”

“Thank you for that. I don’t know if it’s an excuse that will work with those smart people though.”

“Hey, everyone is aware of this, so they’ll just keep quiet. They’re employees who hate extra work more than dying.”

“Well, that’s because I only gathered those kinds of people….”

Yoo Seong-un breathed a sigh of relief.

‘… I don’t think Geo would mind that much, that he shared it with his colleagues.’

Of course, the rules of origin are not something that can be passed over in this way. There were often cases where it became poisonous when consumed by someone other than the designated person.

‘But in the first place, Geo… .’

I definitely want to share this with 'you all'.

'That's what I said.'

This was meant for all the staff of this guild.

“…….”

“I hope there won’t be any problems?”

“Yes, I recalled it, but it is a gift for all employees, including me.”

“Well, I guess that’s why they gave you such a large jar. It’s too much for you to eat alone, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“Actually, I think I just gave it to him without thinking about that part….”

Because he has such big hands.

“It’s funny how we know what the right amount of source is for human beings.”

“But didn’t Curator Yoo Seong-un say that he has memories from when he was human?”

“I have it, but I don’t expect it to be perfect.”

Employees who met the so-called 'Black Cloak' testified that Geo introduced himself as 'Sergio'.

Geo, a young man who died at the age of 29 or was set to die that way. Perhaps that is the memory that 'Portrait of Geo' holds.

“But the thing to think about here is, then, why is the portrait defined as ‘geo’?”

It wasn't built by humans.

“It’s a name defined by the source.”

The skills used by the Awakened, or Hunters, are all aided by the Source. This time around, it was the same.

The source, which could be considered a kind of god or a dimensional system, gave that name to a portrait located in the basement of a building, in a country, on a planet.

“So the name of the portrait is ‘Gio’ and not ‘Sergio’. Then, isn’t that different from your claim?”

“Perhaps… it means that what the source judged and Geo’s memories do not match?”

“That’s right. The names we’re talking about here aren’t ones we gave ourselves or other humans to other humans. They’re names for our essence.”

This could soon be called the 'true name' given by the parents, the origin.

“In other words, the name displayed in the system is the essence of the object evaluated by the source, so it is not something that can be easily ignored by mere humans.”

“So that name is right there for Geo?”

“It’s written so that anyone can interpret it. Whether it’s a low-level emotion skill or a high-level emotion skill like the guild master, they’re all names that can be recognized….”

“The problem is that we can’t find out more than that.”

"you're right."

Yoo Seong-un waved his hands as if he was cutting something with scissors.

“The source blocked it, saying, ‘You shouldn’t read this.’ It only revealed one thing: the name ‘Geo.’”

“It’s almost like a story about God.”

“They say that anyone who receives the gaze of God goes mad.”

Yoo Seong-un did not deny it.

“The source is generally friendly to humans. No, it is friendly to everything it contains. That is why it sometimes appears indifferent.”

“…….”

“If he had only been kind to humans, one of his children, Dungeon, would never have been born. However, he helps all his children fight equally.”

Such a distant arrogance is certainly worthy of being called a 'god', although the gods of today's generation are far from being omnipotent.

“It is a portrait of the self that defines the source of such danger, which should not be delved into directly.”

“…….”

“…it could really be God. Or it could be something more than that. Something that humans simply cannot define.”

It is something that is deluding itself into thinking it is human.

“…….”

“…I wonder how surprising it would be to have something with the characteristics of a god in a world like today, but anyway….”

Yoo Seong-un let out a deep sigh.

“It’s just a guess. It’s not a monster, it’s not an item, and it doesn’t seem to be one of the children of the Origin, so all sorts of strange hypotheses can come to mind.”

“I thought it was a realistic hypothesis. Priests already worship gods, and there are gods in this world who enjoy playing. It is possible that there are gods who enjoy interacting with humans."

"If that's true, then let's stop because the Earth is in danger. The moment Geo realizes that he's not human, a miracle beyond disaster… a disaster like disaster will occur."

"Hmm, is that so?"

"It would be better for us to think of Geo as an ordinary human being. Since the source is a 'living story,' the level of danger changes depending on how people perceive the subject."

"That's really amazing."

The visa versa was very interesting.

"Don't these kinds of children of origins appear mostly in Japan? Is it because there are so many gods in the country? There are so many children of origins that influence reality. What kind of changes would occur if we started believing in a god called Geo?"

"That's why I'm telling you not to think like that. Don't pour the fearsome oil of the story of God on an already dangerous guy."

"As expected, a living story is scary. But the moment you learn more about it or add additional settings, it becomes even scarier… Accidents are especially frequent in cultures that like mythology, right?"

"Don't think strangely. What kind of disaster is this guy trying to cause…."

Yoo Seong-un muttered with a tired face and returned to his usual indifferent expression.

"Anyway, I think Geo's memories are incomplete. His essence related to the origin is something or other… Aside from that, the fact that he thinks he's human and yet has no change in his own state or abilities proves it.”

No, Geo just didn't have any thoughts.

However, the ridiculous indifference that he gave to his own transformation as something like 'I was a human, but I died and came back to life after 31 years, so I evolved into a portrait' supported Yoo Seong-un's claim. People usually don't act that insensitive to their own bodies.

“If he had been a proper human being, he would have felt fear at his own condition. He had become a portrait from a human being, so it would have been impossible not to feel strange or disgusted by that. Furthermore, it would have been impossible for him not to have been intoxicated by the omnipotence of being able to create everything except humans… That would have been absurd for a human being.”

And that ridiculous story actually happened. Geo's miraculous insensibility shone through in such an absurd way.

“It’s a situation that cannot exist with human sensibility.”

“It’s definitely not ordinary.”

“Well, I don’t know much about the origin. I’m not sure if he was a human who belonged to the origin, or if some being from the origin took on human form.”

"hmm…."

“But Geo, apart from answering questions obediently, is not good at telling his own story.”

Again, Geo had no idea. He wasn't the type of person to dwell on the past, and along similar lines, it didn't even occur to him that Yoo Seong-un would be curious about his past.

“Although he calls himself a human, Geo accepts quite naturally the things that humans cannot do.”

This is also a misunderstanding. I am just living so thoughtlessly that I have not yet fully grasped the situation. Geo, who is enjoying his life like a hurricane, does not have any headaches. He is busy just enjoying his life.

Of course, even if he had figured out the situation, Geo would have been shocked for about 5 seconds and then immediately thought about what to eat for lunch. He was a man of this era who would not allow anyone to pour cold water on his refreshing and soft brain.

“Usually I’m not that calm.”

“That’s right.”

“Isn’t it strange that he has the power to commit mass genocide and cause natural disasters right now and doesn’t care?”

I keep repeating the same story, but I just haven't thought about it that far. For Geo, the trials and tribulations of life were just the menu for his three meals a day.

Geo originally thought that his superhuman abilities were just the power to 'make food with pictures'. He never even thought that this power was a threat to humanity.

Geo was a great man who could say, 'Why would you do something like that when you could make sweet potatoes with this?'

“I don’t think humans are such great creatures.”

It was that big. Geo's clear-headed way of thinking, which never let in anything bad, had the talent of only letting in 'information' among 'serious information'.

Geo didn't really care about anything other than the fact that he had evolved into a portrait and that he could make a living by doing so. He was just living a bumbling life.

Of course, it was an unimaginable situation for ordinary people, so they were still serious.

“There is a lot of information that we as humans do not know.”

“…….”

“Then, in many ways, there must be a gap between your thoughts and reality….”

“And yet Geo claims that he is human?”

“It may be that he knows the reality but is trying to deny it.”

It was just that I wasn't fully adapted to the world I live in now, 31 years later. Just like a 90-year-old might stutter when using a kiosk.

But Yoo Seong-un came to his own conclusion.

“In that case, it would be a hint at the level of self-brainwashing, so it would not be good for us to be the first to ask about Geo’s identity.”

“It’s still interesting.”

He looked at the meteor cloud as if he was jealous of the visa. He spoke in a sly tone like a child who wanted to eat more ice cream from the freezer.

“I’d like to have a conversation too….”

"okay."

“Please help me arrange this.”

“I guess it’s a bit too much.”

“Oh, why?”

“Geo hates it.”

“You don’t hate me, do you?”

“I’m stressed.”

Yoo Seong-un shook his head firmly.

“It was the guild master who entrusted Geo to me. I have a duty to protect Geo’s condition. Geo needs sufficient care as long as he considers himself human.”

“Are you saying that I am not a person fit for that care?”

“Then will it suit you?”

“As expected, Curator Yoo Seong-un. He never spits out nonsense.”

"…under…."

In the end, he himself doesn't refute it.

'It's fortunate that you have some conscience.'

Yoo Seong-un smiled bitterly.

“As before, we need to know more about Geo. We don’t know what he is, or his exact way of thinking, or if there are any other rules.”

“First of all, since he is someone I brought here, please treat him well. All I wish is for ‘Portrait of Geo’ to be satisfied with the service provided by my gallery.”

Visabal nodded.

“Please help me continue to think of myself as a human being.”

“It is a great burden, but I will try my best for the peace of mankind.”

That's why Yoo Seong-un had an idea.

“…I plan to take Geo on a trip outside the company soon.”

The portrait where Geo was staying was a space too alien to be inhabited by humans.

Geo says that he doesn't want to break away from his human image, and that he just 'remains a portrait'... but if he continues to stay in it, he will eventually realize his true nature.

“We are very lucky that Geo still thinks he is human. We need to keep him in that delusion if possible. To do that, we need to put Geo among humans.”

“If you want to hide a tree, go into the forest?”

“…Isn’t it a little different? Anyway, if a humane environment is created, that illusion will last a long time. In that sense, I plan to show Geo around the inside of the city.”

“What is the risk?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un averted his eyes.

“…We have to be careful.”

“Is that okay?”

“What can I do? Rather than waiting for Geo to realize his true nature and explode, it would be better to try something.”

“It’s such a bold choice that I can’t believe it was made by Curator Yoo Seong-un. Of course, I agree.”

“I also realize that I am taking a risky gamble. I just decided it was necessary.”

I don't know because I haven't seen a meteor cloud properly yet, but isn't it a portrait that can make people faint just by making eye contact?

“Geo is very considerate of people. He is gentlemanly and polite. Among the employees I’ve encountered so far, no one has died… In reality, there are few hunters who are as intimidating as Geo.”

“If an S-class suddenly appears, it’ll be a headache if it’s revealed to the media. These days, with celebrities and idols, the rivalry between hunters has gotten stronger, so once word gets out, it’ll spread like wildfire.”

“That might be better. It would be easier to disguise yourself as a hunter. After all, you could fit Geo into human standards.”

“…….”

“The risk of a child of the origin varies depending on the size of the story they are carrying. If Geo’s ‘story’ is reduced to a human level, the safety increases.”

Yoo Seong-un sighed.

“…That is, if Geo had given his permission.”

“What do you think?”

“Oh, I don’t know. Don’t ask. My head is about to explode.”

“That’s why I gave you extra money.”

“It’s like a fucking capitalist society.”

Yoo Seong-woon said after thinking for a moment.

“Can you please tell your employees not to be so afraid of Geo?”

“Would that work? Is my brain melting from caffeine? Is it canned and not functioning?”

“Why are you being so harsh? I was asking you to at least make some rules.”

He looked embarrassed.

“Geo felt uncomfortable because everyone he met stiffened so much. He judged them to be rude.”

“…….”

“There is a limit to how much we can do to tell Geo not to be offended, so we humans should also try our best to be ‘polite’ towards him.”

"…hmm…."

Visabal nodded.

“If it’s just about regulating behavior, I guess it’ll work out somehow.”

“Is it possible?”

“There is nothing I can’t do.”

This is a collector's country. There is nothing he cannot do.

This is the power that a guild leader in modern society can enjoy.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (23)

Episode 23

Meanwhile, Geo was lost in deep thought. Really, really lost in thought.

“…….”

Since coming to this world, he has never painted a landscape.

'No, there has never been one.'

Come to think of it, I once created a lake for Honey and her fellow water birds, but that was all. Strictly speaking, it was just adding one more accessory to this world, not a proper landscape painting.

Then one question arose.

“Fruits, buildings, animals….”

I could draw them all.

“Then what about the scenery?”

What will happen to the world I draw?

“…….”

Geo continued to draw while still harboring doubts.

For now, about three.

* * *

'The Breathing Sea'

Searching… .

…….

….

…….

The existence of that dimension

Accessible

…….

Check the suitability

Synchronization possible

'Animal Kingdom'

Searching… .

…….

….

…….

The existence of that dimension

Accessible

…….

Check the suitability

Synchronization possible

'The City of Emptiness'

…….

….

…….

That dimension does not exist.

Would you like to register?

* * *

You have 3 unconfirmed notifications.

“What is this?”

Check for new notifications.

“…….”

Geo felt it.

'A premonition of joy.'

After finishing farming, new content appeared at a ghostly timing.

Night painting is a sacred act that symbolizes the artist's companion and free spirit. Geo, who painted all night, completed a total of three landscape paintings.

"hmm."

Judging from the three notifications, I can guess. He felt happy, as if he had received a Christmas present that had arrived by mistake on Chuseok.

“Good adults are always rewarded someday.”

“Khuuuung?”

“Where in the world is there anyone as kind as Dad?”

“Gurrrr….”

“The trust between the rich and the poor is so absurd. It’s a shame.”

Geo checked the system's notifications with a serious face and a deft babble.

“…….”

And asked.

“Where can I find help?”

Yes, I couldn't interpret it.

'I see that it has something to do with the three drawings I finished yesterday.'

Geo first painted a seascape, second a wilderness landscape, and lastly a city landscape with no people.

'Breathing Sea, Animal Kingdom, City of Void... I've never given it names like that.'

I thought maybe the system had just added it for me.

“The system must have noticed my naming skills and wasted my chance to name the piece… But even so, what does ‘existence from that dimension’ mean?”

A direct translation would be that it sounded like there was an actual dimension that matched the landscapes Geo had painted.

“I wonder what it would be like for a human to have the ability to discover a dimension.”

Of course, this could have happened to Newzio, who had newly evolved into a portrait. Now that humans have evolved into paintings, the standards of being human can be left to Andromeda for a while.

“Taran.”

Geo, who had finished rationalizing amazingly, continued his deduction that was on par with Sherlock Holmes.

“Since you said it’s possible to enter… I guess there’s a real dimension in the pictures I drew, and I can enter it directly.”

This kind of large-scale update was unexpected. It seems that human life has never had such a conscientious management team, so it was a very encouraging change.

“Good.”

A refreshing soul from Gangwon-do who doesn't take the same path as others. Geo affirmed and cheered on his unique challenge that he took on on his own without even thinking about it.

“But there’s something I still don’t understand….”

I could never understand the words 'suitability' and 'synchronization'.

“…….”

“…….”

“What is suitable and what does it harmonize with?”

“Kung?”

It's cute, but don't be fooled. That didn't mean "Is that so?" It meant "How would I know that?"

"okay."

Geo nodded.

Judging from his impure gaze, he must have entered puberty, but seeing that he always responded to his father's words, I could tell how much of a devoted son Honey was.

There are bad paints in the world, but no bad paintings. That's what Honey did.

'What a wonderful thing.'

Geo, who was checking the system window, soon discovered a new list.

List of suitable candidates

Anyone could see that it was the correct answer.

“Where should I look?”

Breathing Sea_Giovanni

Fairy tale rate 0%

Animal Kingdom_Argio

Fairy tale rate 0%

What is it?

“…….”

Description: Suitable person

“You have a conscience.”

Suitable person

A method to understand unfamiliar dimensions more conveniently. Among the existing beings in the indicated dimension, those corresponding to 'Geo' are named 'Suitable Persons'. If you obtain the consent of a suitable person, you can easily understand and travel through the dimension by borrowing their soul and body.

“If you still can’t understand, what are you going to do? I wonder how you’ll react.”

But I understood.

“If there is a ‘suitable person’ among the existing dimensions, is it possible to travel around in that person’s body…?”

This house is well-built. I don't know what the person who made the decision is thinking, but from the user's perspective, it was a very considerate structure.

“I wouldn’t know about the culture of that dimension, and more than anything, there might be bacteria there that don’t fit with my current body. Even if you can breathe air on Earth, you might have to breathe gases like nitrogen in other places.”

In that sense, getting help from a ‘suitable person’ would have been a convenient choice.

“The standard for finding that suitable person would be that the other person is ‘Geo’….”

Looking at the names on the list, I got a rough idea.

Breathing Sea_Giovanni

Fairy tale rate 0%

Animal Kingdom_Argio

Fairy tale rate 0%

“Maybe these people were also called ‘Geo’.”

Anyway, is it okay if the name includes 'Geo'?

“…No, if that was the case, I wouldn’t have used the word ‘suitable person’. There must have been other conditions, so they would have been treated as important enough to make a list and manage it.”

I think he probably checked the synchronization rate and adaptability with Geo himself.

“That’s fun.”

I really liked it.

“I guess I’ll never be bored in my entire life.”

The amount of updated data is so huge that I don't know if I'll be able to enjoy it all in my lifetime.

“Dimensional updates.”

It was truly amazing.

“…….”

But even after all this lengthy explanation and analysis, there is still one step left.

“What is the City of Emptiness?”

'The City of Emptiness'

That dimension does not exist.

Would you like to register?

“Am I creating a new dimension?”

That was absolutely crazy.

“I can hear the sound of my life becoming more glamorous from here.”

It was very good.

Geo never thought deeply. This time was no exception.

Of course, if it was a matter of world peace, friendship, and love, I would think deeply about it with the pure heart of a young man from the mountains, but this did not really motivate me.

Geo looks like he only drinks espresso every morning, and he has the taste of an elementary school student who spits out bitter drinks and swallows sweet drinks.

"hmm."

His ultimate positive mind was not limited to merely creating dimensions.

“Just because I created a new dimension doesn’t mean every random nuclear power plant on Earth will explode one second later.”

Then it's done.

“Honey, do you agree?”

“Kururuk!”

“Then it really happened.”

Now that I had my family's consent, there was nothing more to hesitate about.

Although it was a scale he had never experienced before, such trivial information could not stop the growth of the deep-rooted tree called Geo. Geo was a portrait of conviction.

“Life is amazing.”

As we live, new content is always created.

“If I don’t enjoy this content right now, I’m not human.”

“…….”

“I don’t know what part you were silent about, but honey, trust me.”

Geo was confident.

I am very confident that I will enjoy it.

“Life is a hurricane.”

Geo, who was freely using his tongue, chose [Giovanni] as the most suitable person on the list. It was a name often used in Italy on Earth, so it felt familiar.

And Geo….

-Bye.

“…….”

'Phew?'

I was left alone in an operating room.

“…….”

There was no honey that should have been on my shoulder. Sadness came over me.

'I'm lonely.'

No, what kind of cases are these?

Geo muttered to himself as he ended up in an operating room that looked like something straight out of 18th century Europe due to the system's trickery.

'It feels like it wasn't even 30 minutes ago that I was amazed by the system's divine operational skills and vast content, and yet, what on earth is this inconsiderate delivery service?'

He was hurt by the inconsiderate behavior of the system. He should have asked Geo's opinion again and then kindly informed him that the move was in progress.

Geo, who was wondering which customer satisfaction center he should file a claim to in this case, stopped brooding when he saw someone standing in front of him.

“…….”

"…ah."

Geo covered his face for a moment at the sudden noise. He didn't know who it was, but his stealth skills were on par with those of Senior 0○7.

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

"…hello?"

While Geo was lost in the strange thought of '101 Dal○sians giving amazing self-introductions', the first to speak was a man in his early 30s who appeared to be the owner of the operating room.

“Nice to meet you, my name is Giovanni of the Batlan family.”

“…This is Geo.”

“Yes, I know. You can call me Geo, sir.”

He looked remarkably like Geo, with a kind and trustworthy smile that suited him so well. If Geo were a Westerner and a little older, he would probably look just like him.

And Geo bravely refused to hold back on the question.

“You look a lot like me.”

“I think a lot of it will be similar.”

“I can’t smile as kindly as you. I’m not good at smiling, so I’ve been misunderstood a lot.”

“It’s a cute and honest worry, just like the students I used to teach. It’s okay, from now on you’ll be able to laugh like me.”

'Giovanni', who had said something meaningful, soon laughed awkwardly. He was an adult who looked much more cheerful than Gio.

“Professor Sergio seems like a very direct and affectionate person.”

“I think the same goes for Mr. Giovanni. Judging from the compliments he gave me when we first met, I can tell that he is a person with a good way of thinking.”

“It is my duty as a priest of the sun to affirm the light that others have. It is a good thing.”

“…Priest….”

Priest?

“…This looks like a hospital. Aren’t you a doctor?”

“I am also a doctor. Just because I am a priest of the sun, it does not mean that I have to memorize the scriptures inside the temple. There are many priests who work outside like me.”

Giovanni, who had said so, soon let out a sigh.

“No… there were a lot.”

"okay."

“My world was covered by sea water and destroyed.”

Oh, suddenly?

“Isn’t the fact that Mr. Giovanni’s hometown was destroyed too profound for someone like me who is meeting him for the first time…?”

“Listen.”

“Yes, I will listen.”

“Now, all that’s left in that world are the mermaids hiding in the ocean. Our planet has been reduced and regularized like a game board.”

“Like a game board?”

“I think it would have been something like a dungeon battle….”

“Do you know the dungeon?”

“It was a concept that didn’t exist in our world originally, so I didn’t know about it until I died.”

Judging from the way he spoke, it seemed that 'Giovanni' was already dead.

“But, Sergio, the moment you called me, I knew.”

“…….”

“We are the same ‘Geo’.”

He said, still smiling kindly.

“But they are never the same person.”

“Can I think of you as me from a parallel world?”

“No, that’s not true. We’re just two completely different people who miraculously have a lot in common.”

“…….”

“Similar faces, similar voices, similar dexterity… but our souls are never the same color.”

Geo thought for a moment and then asked.

“Do you like drawing? Since you say this, I wonder if your tastes are really similar to mine.”

“It’s one of my secret hobbies. I really like drawing the sea, like mermaids.”

“A sea that resembles a mermaid….”

We also shared the same taste in drawing. That alone made Geo acknowledge that we were the same 'Geo'.

“I miss you.”

“You will see it soon.”

A voice full of affectionate confidence. Geo was filled with doubt at that gentle voice that would not be easily broken.

“I know you are taking my soul and body away from me. Don’t you fear or resent me? I am just taking everything from you to explore a new dimension.”

“This is not robbery. I was already dead in the first place, my soul returned to the sun, and my body turned to dust and was buried in the ground… Well, I couldn’t turn to dust or be buried in the ground. Even that land must have been flooded by seawater now.”

“Isn’t this some kind of black joke where old people say they won’t buy you expensive things because you’re going to die soon? You might not care, but I don’t. You seem to have forgotten that we’ve just met.”

"ha ha ha…."

"It wasn't funny at all," said Giovanni, who laughed as if he had told a really funny joke.

“My soul will become one with Mr. Geo’s. It will be a kind of resurrection, a reincarnation. I will seep into you, spend more time with you, build memories, and live in the source.”

"…source?"

“It might still be an unfamiliar concept to you.”

He smiled gently.

“But you already live there.”

“Is the place I’m staying the ‘origin’? I heard it from a new acquaintance I made recently.”

“Actually, even that is just a name given by the Earthlings. I don’t know what its actual name is, or what rules it has, or what form it has. As a mere soul, I simply respond to your call and respond to you.”

Then, 'Giovanni' opened his mouth as if he was sorry.

“If possible, please take care of the sun god. To be precise, the sun god of the world I was in.”

“I can’t believe that the cry for God’s care came from a mere soul. You’re telling another very funny joke. Actually, it’s not that funny.”

“I thought the same way when I was alive, but even a god without a believer is eventually forgotten unless he is the source. The sun will not disappear, but as his son, I can’t help but worry.”

“How can I care for God? I am just an ordinary human being.”

“Remember him, talk to him often, or borrow his strength. I swear on my honorable soul as a priest born of the sun that it will not be too much of a burden to you.”

Geo nodded.

'You said it was God, but to summarize, it feels like visiting elderly people who live alone.'

Geo, who was an art teacher, often volunteered since his college days. Among them, there were quite a few elderly people who were growing old alone and had sad stories.

Thinking about it this way, Geo was a career person. He regained his confidence, which had been discouraged by the word god.

“I’m good at that.”

“Haha, that’s good. Please help me.”

“Is there anything else you would like?”

“Don’t you feel burdened just by asking God to look after you?”

“It was burdensome until just now, but not anymore.”

In a village deep in the mountains of Gangwon-do, which was a very, very aging society, Geo was the only child. He was confident in at least showing off his talents to the elderly.

Feeling that confidence, 'Giovanni' opened his mouth hesitantly.

"…aria…."

"aria?"

“This is my student’s name.”

“…….”

“The story has become too long.”

The tone is still soft, but there is a hint of sadness in it.

“Give her the end.”

That moment.

"…ah…."

Geo returned to his bed in the cabin.

“…….”

“…….”

“Gurrrr….”

"…okay…."

Breathing Sea_'Giovanni'

"are you okay."

Giovanni's Quest

“It’s okay, Dad.”

Communication with the Sun God (0/1)

The ending to the Little Mermaid (0/1)

"really…."

Fairy tale rate 1%

"it's okay."

“…….”

“No problem.”

It felt strange.

With the cold running through his body and the pain tearing through his bones, and even more so with the sadness, Giovanni wept without even knowing why.

I couldn't remember anything.

“…….”

“…….”

And so I cried until the moon set and a new sun rose… .

“…I don’t regret it.”

He smiled with sad eyes.

I was happy.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (24)

Episode 24

『New Employee Notification』

Recently, there has been an unpleasant commotion related to a ghost story within the guild. As the internal confusion continues unabated, I would like to make this announcement so that all staff members will be aware of it and avoid causing any more confusion.

…….

“What should I write?”

Visabal sat in front of the monitor and thought for a long time.

“…Let’s go and have fun.”

He soon started waving his hands.

The man in the black cloak's name is Geo.

Geo is a member of the early morning shift. Don't ask for his identity.

…….

* * *

“Geo.”

As expected, Yoo Seong-un called out to Geo in the portrait.

“Are you awake?”

“Yes, I am awake.”

“Well then, I’d like to make a suggestion.”

While maintaining a calm demeanor, Yoo Seong-un carefully observed his opponent. He was now proposing something to the being of origin. He needed to know the weight of it.

'And I know very well.'

Those who originally lived in the source could not communicate with humans. A sneeze from afar could be a terrible insult to the other person, and a laugh during a conversation could make the other person sad.

The beings of the origin had their own rules. Their rules were extremely irrational and irregular when viewed by humans, and they were never supposed to treat others from a human perspective.

“Don’t you want to come out? I’m saying this under the assumption that you want to….”

Constantly observing and analyzing was the only way to survive.

“I guess you don’t know much about the outside world. Like the seed-related incident last time.”

“What Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is right. I don’t know much.”

“That’s why I asked if you were interested in going on a tour. I’ll pay for all the necessary items and expenses, and of course I’ll be there to guide you.”

“Are you guiding me?”

“Yeah, you’re literally in a situation where you just need to come with your body.”

To smuggle out the existence of an unidentified source. Although he was proceeding with the permission of the Bisabal, even for a Yoo Seong-un who always does what he does, this was a bold gamble.

'... But you don't have to worry about buying it. If anything happens, I'll just say that I'm a new hunter outside the city.'

If Geo continued to maintain a gentlemanly attitude, there wouldn't have been any major problems.

Of course, since we don't know Geo's true identity, he might interact with something in reality regardless of his intentions, but that didn't matter either. If it was going to happen anyway, it was wise to find out in advance.

'Even if there is a little damage.'

As Yoo Seong-yoon waited for an answer, the gloomy and noble-looking portrait soon opened its mouth.

“It’s tourism.”

I thought I had become quite used to it, but it still gave me goosebumps. The tone of the portrait was still eerily blunt.

"great."

"…okay?"

“When would be a good time?”

That was a pretty quick response.

'I thought he might attack me, trying to drag me out.'

Geo was a portrait. It might have felt like an insult to him to try to bring the painting into reality.

Fortunately, Geo didn't seem to care about that.

‘Is it because it came out on its own a few times before? If so, it would have been fortunate that measures had been taken in advance to allow Geo to move freely.’

Yoo Seong-un, who had stopped thinking, answered.

“Let’s do it on Tuesday morning, two days later.”

“Could you please call me then? I need help because time here seems to flow a little differently than outside.”

“That’s not difficult. I’ll call you in two days, so take your time preparing and come out then….”

After thinking for a moment, Yoo Seong-un took out a small timer.

“I’ll put it on the floor here, so you can check it like this. I’ll set it to ring three times at 8 AM in two days. It’ll be easier to check the time whenever you want, right?”

"thank you."

“What are you doing with something like this?”

Yoo Seong-un swallowed a sigh of relief inside.

'... I'll gladly accept the offer itself. Compared to other beings of the same origin, Geo is capable of communication. Of course, since he's not human, there are times when things go wrong... but for the most part, he'll be safe.'

The portrait closed its eyes, perhaps thinking its business was over.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un also didn't hold on to Geo any longer.

Anyway, we would have to be together all day for the next two days, so how could we get tired of each other already? Besides, Yoo Seong-un had a lot to prepare for his sightseeing schedule with Geo.

'I guess I should make a reservation at one of the hotels exclusively for trainers. I don't intend to treat Geo like a contracted person, but I think hotels of that type are better prepared for emergencies.'

This was a pretty dangerous task, so thorough preparation was needed without Geo getting offended.

“…But when wasn’t that the case?”

Visabal's position was firm.

Even if there is some damage, as long as it doesn't result in the massacre of more than 50 people, it will be covered up, so check to see what kind of reaction the 'Portrait of Geo' will have among humans.

'That's a wise decision.'

Geo could come out of the portrait whenever he wanted, without any restrictions or conditions. If something was going to happen anyway, it would be better for Yoo Seong-woon, the curator and gardener, to watch from the side.

“…….”

But I'm not tired of the world today where human lives are treated like insects.

'... Even if they're people from the city, not from outside, the Bisabal Guild Master said he can deal with them. If there are less than 50 casualties, it doesn't matter, and even if that happens, as long as it's not leaked to the media, it's okay.'

Of course, it would be much better if we could finish the tour without anyone dying.

“I guess we can only expect a gentlemanly response from Geo in this regard.”

Yoo Seong-un muttered softly and left the guild. Even if Geo is a being with reactions quite similar to a human, he still can’t rest assured.

Even humans can pretend to be fine and then start throwing a tantrum at the lunch table the next day, so there's no guarantee that the being of origin won't be free of such duplicity.

'The hotel is definitely in that line… I think it would be a good idea to set the tourist route to a place where you can recover in case of an emergency. Gyeongbokgung Palace is in this area, so it's not like there's nothing to see.'

Since he was using the name 'Sergio', I thought it wouldn't be a bad idea to show his Korean side.

'I think the night market at Gyeongbokgung Palace usually opens after 6 o'clock. Since it's a tourist attraction in Jongno, there will be a lot of hunters wandering around. If something happens, it'll be a good idea to borrow the name of the Bisabal Guild Leader and ask for help.'

I've been feeling a little dizzy lately, either because I've been working overtime a lot lately or because I'm just worried too much.

‘I’ll have to think hard about how to introduce Geo then…’

When the incident broke out, it seemed like it would be better to voluntarily report it to the association. Since the association president was aiming for it, they probably knew about the ‘Portrait of Geo’.

“…Phew….”

The meteor cloud that came outside let out a deep sigh.

“My head hurts.”

The breath did not come out.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un muttered pointlessly.

“…Hey, this is why I like big companies.”

He scratched the back of his head and started walking again. He was sure to have to work overtime, but he had enough stamina.

'I need to get ready quickly.'

I hope everything goes smoothly.

* * *

Geo returns to the bedroom after finishing his conversation with Yoo Seong-un.

“…….”

Yeah, it was Geo.

Fortunately, Geo reverted from his previous state as 'Giovanni' and regained his original personality.

“Hmm….”

The state of being 'Giovanni' didn't last long. He was just confused by the change he was experiencing for the first time, but once he learned the trick, he was able to return to his usual personality.

“It’s not difficult.”

If I put my mind to it, I could get back to Geo.

“It feels like blowing your nose.”

That's how Geo was able to realize this new rule.

“Is it okay to meet the right person, ask for their consent, and then proceed with the quest while traveling through that world?”

And one more thing, 'fairy tale'.

This part wasn't that difficult either.

“It’s much faster when you have Giovanni’s personality, but even if you don’t necessarily identify with the personality, the assimilation rate itself slowly increases.”

Occasionally, I become Giovanni without realizing it, but apart from that… .

“Once you start a fairy tale, you can’t stop it, I guess.”

I've never experienced it before, but it felt like I was remembering a past life I had forgotten. Although he clearly said that he was a different person, Gio didn't feel like he and Giovanni were separate people.

That's how Geo organized his thoughts in a few days.

“I will never have such a wonderful experience again in my life.”

“Crunch?”

“It’s rare to have an experience that makes you feel like your left and right brain are working separately.”

He could now be both 'Gio' and 'Giovanni' at the same time, and it was not difficult for him to change his personality depending on the situation and his mood.

He felt Giovanni's feelings.

'My memory isn't perfect, though.'

Perhaps because of the low assimilation rate, Geo couldn't recall all of Giovanni's memories. It felt like he was following Giovanni, who had lost all his previous memories due to amnesia, but just from that alone, he could tell what kind of person he was.

Giovanni is a very warm and affectionate person with a soft charisma that can comfort and lead people. He has an ambition for peace, but he values everyday life with the people around him more.

That was 'Batlan Giovanni'.

"……."

After two blinks, Geo muttered in a small voice.

"Is this okay?"

Yoo Seong-un suggested tourism.

"You were afraid of me."

Even though he didn't think about it, Geo wasn't ignorant.

'People can't be afraid of me simply because they're afraid of dark men.'

It seemed like Yoo Seong-un was deliberately explaining it indirectly to avoid shocking Geo, but Geo knew it too. The current Geo must have been a bit too scary for ordinary people.

'I guess there will be a problem with the resolution when traveling around the world in a portrait body.'

Or maybe that's the real power of the haunted portrait: the power to make the innocuous seem malevolent, to transform a genre into a horror thriller by its mere presence.

“People outside seemed scared of me.”

“Kung.”

“It’s embarrassing, but don’t worry, it’s not a very unpleasant feeling.”

I didn't mean to do that at all, but it felt like I was doing a spy camera horror show. I'm sorry, but to be honest, it was more ridiculous and funny than unpleasant.

But there has to be a limit to that.

“It would be a problem if there was a disruption to tourism.”

It wasn't just a solo tour, but a tour that was enjoyed together, relying solely on other people's money and guidance. It was a nuisance to Yoo Seong-woon, who was accompanying me, because it seemed so harmful and hopeless.

“This is a tour you can enjoy with a reliable guide like Mr. Yoo Seong-un. It’s not common to have an experience like this with someone else’s money.”

“…….”

“You don’t know that money comes from digging the ground. I’m sure prices have gone up even more now. My father has no money.”

Oh, dear. If you whine to your child about not having money, will it have a negative impact on his development? Geo added belatedly.

“Of course, this dad can buy anything Honey asks for.”

“Kung?”

“You shouldn’t waste it, but if you buy it and enjoy it, there’s no harm in it.”

Besides, it seemed like you could get money by digging the ground here. If you draw a picture, you can get sweet potatoes, so wouldn't you get money by digging the ground?

“Anyway, it’s not like that outside the frame. Honey, listen carefully. If someone offers you something delicious, you’re the one who runs over and eats it right away. That’s what it means to be a true pig.”

Personally, I wish Honey had grown that much plump.

“…….”

“…….”

If I were chubby… .

“…Kkuung… Kkurruk… Kkurruk….”

“Isn’t there anything to be angry about?”

“Kurrrr….”

I think he doesn't like it.

'What a pity.'

A plump bird is a symbol of cuteness, but the water bird, faithful to its self-care, seemed to have no such intention.

'Why does the way you adorn yourself with jewels look so unusual? This picky kid.'

Anyway, that was what Geo was concerned about. He had to make a more harmless impression.

“I want to be harmless enough to look like a normal pedestrian, but I’m already harmless enough to be a talking potato, so I don’t know what else I can do here. I’m sure my harmlessness has reached its limit.”

Although he was alive and never actually died, during his time as a teacher, Geo was often said to have a 'scary appearance', but he never had an atmosphere that would make you cry or sniffle.

“Well, I’m a corpse if you take away my talent for growing up healthy no matter where I am placed.”

But now Geo was being treated like a ghost story, like the Red Mask. I didn't hear that evaluation openly, but I had a rough idea because I saw that everyone I met was scared.

“Seeing as everyone is having a hard time even recognizing me, it seems like… it’s a resolution issue.”

“Gurr.”

“I think there might be some problems that arise when a picture becomes reality, but I’m not an engineer….”

And Geo had already received a solution for it from the system.

tip.

Resolution solution

Apply 'Geo'

“This must mean a suitable person.”

Is 'Giovanni', who is undergoing synchronization, still being treated as a human and not a portrait?

When he actually activated Giovanni's personality, he felt a little heavier. He needed to go to the bathroom, was hungry, and needed regular sleep.

“So what I’m saying is, if you go outside as Giovanni, people won’t be scared.”

“…….”

Geo nodded, feeling Honey's lukewarm gaze.

“They call it split personality.”

First, I had to make it harmless.

“…….”

“…….”

Geo acknowledged his excessiveness at Honey's gaze that was staring at him.

“…Yeah, I think the split personality thing was a bit far-fetched.”

“Crunch.”

“To make an excuse, I really didn’t mean to be rude.”

It was a tour that Yoo Seong-un kindly suggested. It was a trip that I would enjoy with his help, and I would be going around with him, so I didn't want to cause any unnecessary inconvenience.

“You don’t have to act like ‘Giovanni’ to use it, as long as the synchronization is in progress. You can act like you normally would and people won’t be so scared.”

“Kur?”

“Of course, you have to be careful. If you leave it alone, even if it’s syncing, the resolution problem seems to come up again. But this alone is a huge harvest.”

This was a fact confirmed with the help of the dawn patrol guards within the guild.

“We’re trying hard here and there, so I don’t think Yoo Seong-woon will be in that much trouble.”

For example, a situation where a companion suddenly develops a split personality.

“…Well, anyway….”

Geo, who had been lying on the bed, sat up.

“…Then it’s time to prepare our elders’ meal. Honey, let’s go.”

“Gurrrr!”

Honey nodded in enthusiastic agreement. A small bird flew down and landed on Geo's shoulder.

Geo moved to the studio carrying 77 colorful sandwiches that he had prepared in advance in the kitchen. His footsteps stopped right in front of the 'Breathing Sea', a landscape painting of the sea.

Now it was time to open this tightly closed door.

“Let’s make a snowman….”

“Kkuk.”

"okay."

After all, copyright is important.

Geo, who recalled his childhood innocence while thinking of his hometown of the heart, the 'Kingdom of Gyeo○', calmed his mind. When he woke up, it was possible that the Republic of Korea, which had already been 31 years, had turned into a land of high spirits.

Geo, who had been talking nonsense and clearing his throat, soon prepared to have dinner with his family.

“…….”

“…….”

A moment of silence.

The jet-black hair is gradually becoming lighter.

Blink your water-colored eyes twice.

“…….”

Giovanni was there.

“…Can I come in?”

The door opened.

"thank you."

“ ”

“Yes, this priest is very late.”

“ ”

“Please understand.”

A world submerged in the sea.

“The weather is nice, so I feel sluggish.”

The sun was barely breathing.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (25)

Episode 25

8 o'clock in the morning.

Looking at the black cloak in front of the revealed picture frame, Yoo Seong-un blinked his mint colored eyes.

“…….”

Oh, my.

'It feels a little different.'

It wasn't my imagination. The pitch-black figure standing in front of the portrait didn't have the same strange atmosphere as before.

It's as if he had transformed from a monster to a human.

“Geo.”

“Are you here?”

“Am I too late?”

“No, I left early.”

"okay?"

Yoo Seong-un answered indifferently and thought to himself.

‘…Your voice is different than usual.’

Unlike before, when he spoke in a tone that felt strangely neat, Geo now didn't feel strange, even if he did think, 'He's a bit too polite.' It was an atmosphere that made you think that someone with an innocent personality could act like this.

'The level may be different depending on whether you are inside or outside the portrait… .'

But then the testimonies of the witnesses we have received so far come into question.

"……."

Yoo Seong-un rolled his eyes for a moment and asked with a smile.

"Are you feeling well?"

"Yes, that's fine."

"Hmm… The atmosphere seems lighter than usual."

"I was always light-hearted."

"Then let's say that's true."

As expected, it's different from usual.

'I don't really feel any pressure.'

Although Yoo Seong-un only saw the back of Geo, he knew how fearsome Geo was outside of the portrait.

It wasn't easy to feel that kind of feeling of being out of breath and dizzy even though there was no sense of hostility or murderous intent.

'Even if this world is filled with humans, monsters, and various types of monsters.'

I heard that the feeling gets worse when you see Geo from the front, but it was really strange. Right now, Geo just felt like a normal human being.

“…….”

“…….”

Geo was the first to speak, perhaps because he had such doubts.

“Action has been taken.”

"action?"

“I tried to adjust the resolution so that other people wouldn’t be surprised when they saw me. Judging from Yoo Seong-un’s reaction, I think my attempt wasn’t too bad.”

“Oh, I see. Somehow.”

It seemed quite human.

Although he nodded nonchalantly, he could not tell what Yoo Seong-un was really thinking.

'Does that mean… you can control the level of your soul on your own?'

In the past, Geo's status was so twisted that it could not be expressed in human terms, but now his status could be considered that of an A-class hunter.

Being able to control the level of your soul at will sounded like a really bad joke.

“… Are you feeling unwell?”

If you were to forcibly lower your level, the fatigue would be enormous.

'It's like putting a curse on yourself.'

It was like asking, 'Isn't it too much?' by purifying it, and adjusting the level in this way would be more painful than tiring.

At Yoo Seong-un's question, Geo looked down at his hands and then shook his head.

"it's okay."

“Well then, that’s fortunate….”

How can someone be so calm after doing such a crazy thing? Yoo Seong-un was quietly appalled.

'You're so calm for someone who's committed suicide. If you want to pretend to be normal, you should be more thorough.'

Even a 10-year-old would understand the gravity of the situation. To use a civilian analogy, it would be like cutting off all of their limbs and gouging out both of their eyes.

‘It’s no different than putting a leash around the neck of a person crawling on their torso and putting a weight on them…’

Of course, Geo had no idea.

'hungry.'

To begin with, he was a person who felt like an ordinary human being until recently.

It was certainly comfortable to have a body that was neither thirsty nor sleepy, neither hungry nor full… but that didn’t mean I felt any discomfort with my current state.

I used to live like this, so what kind of rejection is it? Rather, I got used to it.

“…….”

“So where should we go now?”

“…Oh, right.”

Yoo Seong-un tried to keep a calm expression as he answered. It would be rude to show concern to a guy who came out to have fun. He had to be careful about even this kind of reaction to the being of origin.

“Since it’s morning, I’m going to try eating.”

“What kind is it?”

“The place I recommend is Baekban House.”

Geo, who once referred to himself as 'Sergio' in the Korean way, I don't know if that's really the Korean way, but since Geo knows Korea well in many ways, he chose a restaurant with a set meal for breakfast.

But just in case, I added an explanation.

“It’s a meal served as a set meal with side dishes, rice, and soup. You can also order fish or pork.”

“…….”

“Overall, it may not be that exciting, but since it’s morning, I looked for a restaurant that would be comfortable.”

“It sounds good.”

Although Geo was a good eater, he grew up under his grandmother who always prepared a meal for him, so he liked comfort food like this. It was comforting for both his body and mind.

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“That’s good. Then shall we move?”

Geo followed suit.

‘…I hear footsteps.’

Previously, he seemed to have been barefoot, but now Geo was wearing shoes. However, Yoo Seong-un was a little surprised to hear the sound of footsteps that contained the weight of a person.

'You really lowered your status to human level? I still can't believe it.'

I started to wonder how that was even possible, and why on earth he would do such a horrible thing.

‘Maybe he did this on purpose to be considerate of other humans… .’

Even before Yoo Seong-un felt embarrassed, he felt a strange sense of guilt as he pondered how to make excuses if any damage was done. It was difficult to bear this ridiculous favor that was like cutting off his own limbs and soul.

It makes me feel even more inhumane to give such an outrageous favor so casually.

"hmm…."

Yoo Seong-un, who had come to his senses, led Geo to the elevator.

"batter."

“I think this is the first time.”

“What is this elevator?”

“Because I usually move through pictures.”

“So you moved to the picture.”

As I had already guessed, this was the moment that explained the mysterious portrait in the hallway that the night guards often found.

Even so, the ghost story of the 'Black Cloak' has taken root in this guild.

“I gave you an access card, so why didn’t you take the elevator?”

“I thought it would be awkward if I ran into other people in this small space.”

“…I see.”

I thought that just meeting them in that wide hallway would have been enough to give the guards a break, but in such a narrow space, I thought they might have collapsed and foamed at the mouth.

However, Geo did not mean it in that sense.

'I know what kind of people the staff here are, so I'll be with them in a small space.'

Geo, who knows how to act when he has to, was scared. The 31 years of fantasy were enough to make even his hometown feel an unknown fear.

'It's dangerous to rush into a haunted portrait when you don't know how much the culture has changed. It's also faster to move to a painting.'

So, in many ways, it was a choice made with consideration to one’s own convenience… .

“…….”

It couldn't help but be interpreted a little differently for Yoo Seong-un.

‘… Isn’t this too kind? Am I worrying about the wrong thing?’

I'm starting to get a little worried.

'I'm worried that other people will be crushed by the level, so I travel through paintings instead of elevators, and I cut off my own level because I'm worried that something unpleasant will happen during the trip... .'

There were other suspicious circumstances.

'Now that I think about it, liking giving gifts so much is actually a disturbing trait.'

It was a tour prepared with the concern that the portrait would cause an accident, but if Geo were to be harmed by humans, it would be an accident in another sense.

'I think I picked the wrong target to watch out for. Instead of worrying about Geo's gentlemanly impulsive behavior, I should have been worried about someone approaching who might provoke these guys… .'

Yoo Seong-un couldn't help but wonder if this was really the right thing to worry about.

“…Okay, let’s get off.”

“It takes quite a while.”

“Because it’s a gallery deep underground.”

Yoo Seong-un explained with a small smile.

“The works in the guild master’s gallery come from all over the world. Some are purchased directly by the guild master, some are purchased and delivered by guild members, and some are so dangerous that they are entrusted to be stored…”

You could say it's a den.

“The gallery’s access control is partly to prevent theft, but also because if you're not careful, a dozen people could easily die. The collector's gallery, where all sorts of bizarrely-shaped works of art are sold, is a famous story. When ghost stories come about, the gallery is usually the source."

"okay."

"That's why the gallery is intentionally located so deep that it seems excessive. It's designed so that if an unknown bomb were to explode down there, it would be easier to clean up, or… to minimize the damage."

After saying that, Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo.

"Um, yeah."

"…Is there a problem?"

"I'm still wearing the hood."

Although the level was lowered and the intimidation was somewhat removed, it was not at an absolutely harmless level, and above all, Geo's face was too assertive. If he went around like that, he would get involved in all sorts of troublesome things.

'If you cover your face, you can say you're an unofficial hunter. There are a lot of unofficial hunters in the collection, so other people won't be suspicious.'

The staff at the lobby entrance on the first floor greeted Yoo Seong-woon.

"Are you leaving work right away?"

"No way, I'm on a business trip. I just got home, so there's no way I'm already off work."

"I almost envied you, but this is fortunate. Let's suffer together."

The guard who was joking cheerfully looked at Geo standing behind the meteor cloud.

“This side….”

“Guild leader’s guest.”

“Are you going to be joining us soon as a new employee?”

“That could be the case.”

It seemed like he was friendly, and even though it was his first time seeing Geo, the guard spoke to him as if he knew him.

“Then I guess it’s okay if I change the color of the cloak a bit. There’s a new ghost story in our guild these days, and as you know… we’re the kind of people who get swayed by such ghost stories often.”

Yoo Seong-un asked him.

“Are there still people these days who are surprised by the story of the Black Cloak?”

“There are so many witnesses, so what can we do? It seems like it really exists, so everyone is on their guard to some extent.”

“Hey, this is difficult.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded, smiling blandly and muttering.

“Then I guess I’ll see you in a few days.”

“Is this a long-term business trip?”

“Well, I guess I’ll have to go and find out….”

“Then, thank you for your hard work.”

The guard, who greeted them politely, quickly turned his attention away from Yoo Seong-un and Geo.

The large glass doors in the lobby opened. Yoo Seong-un, who had emerged from the Collectors' Guild, opened his mouth.

“As you can see, rumors about you have spread. I have already told the guild leader about the inconveniences you are experiencing, but it will probably take some time for it to be reflected….”

Yoo Seong-un spoke as if making an excuse.

“I’ll tell them that you’re the guild leader’s guest. What do you think?”

“I understand.”

“Do you have any other questions?”

“I wonder why the guard was so sure I would become his comrade.”

“Oh, that.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“It’s the guild leader’s habit to pick up people from somewhere.”

“Are you picking it up? You seem to be an uncommon believer, guild leader.”

“Even the subcontractors who came to assassinate him tried to scout him.”

“How bold of you to embrace even the person who tried to kill you. You seem to have great tolerance.”

“Because your tastes are so unique, if there’s someone you’ve never seen before in the guild, there’s a high chance that they’re the guild master’s guests. There have been more than a few instances where he’s invited you to the guild to try to seduce you.”

“…….”

It's not the first or second time that you've packaged something nicely.

Geo, unaware that such packaging only makes him look more inhuman, quietly resigned himself to the endless series of strange incidents.

'It is a gigantic presence that I, with the limited physical strength allowed by the gods of heaven and earth, cannot handle.'

He didn't seem like a bad person, but he was the number one type of person I absolutely didn't want to talk to because I couldn't predict where he would go.

'If we ever become close, he'll drag me out of the corner of the room, put me in the middle of a gathering of popular kids, and offer me up as a sacrifice at a party...'

It was terrible.

“Then I guess I’ll have to take the subway now. Is that okay?”

“…Jisangcheol?”

Not the subway?

Yoo Seong-un, who was able to understand Geo's question more clearly thanks to lowering his level, quickly explained.

“Well, it’s a train that runs above ground. It has a set route like a bus, but it’s a little faster and runs at a considerably higher altitude.”

As he said that, Yoo Seong-un raised his finger and pointed to the sky.

“See over there?”

A rail that passes through or between tall buildings. The rail is not visible in its entirety, but only in part.

It seemed as if some parts had been made transparent, perhaps to provide a view of the city. This stimulated Geo's SF sensibility.

“It’s pretty tall.”

“If we compare it to the building, it operates on approximately the 60th floor.”

Geo nodded inwardly.

'They say even mountains and rivers change in 10 years, but the world has changed in 30 years.'

Perhaps because it is a metropolitan area, this tendency is stronger, but even considering that, the buildings and facilities have developed a lot. Now, Geo really felt like he had become an ancestor.

The buildings were basically over 30 stories tall, and the subway that ran between the buildings looked just like a roller coaster.

'It may not be as intense as the rail route or the speed… .'

Geo felt romantic about the futuristic design.

“Geo, this way.”

“…….”

People's fashions were also quite different from before. Some people wore armor, carried large swords on their backs, and some even had wings or tails.

They say trends come and go, but it was clear that an ecosystem-disrupting species had entered the picture. Everyone had their own unique personality, so much so that Geo, wearing a cloak, seemed normal.

Here and there, people were even seen exchanging jewels and weapons. Jewels aside, weapons with sharp edges were a bit too much…

"……."

Oh.

Geo could find himself constantly chewing on the grilled pork belly.

'It's a funny sight, seeing myself worrying that a haunted portrait might look harmful.'

Contrary to his thoughts, some quick-witted people were glancing at Geo.

'The aura is heavy… Is he a hunter? Judging by the restraint in his movements, he's a knight… or a priest?'

'It must be at least A-class. Since it's my first time seeing it, there's a high chance that it's an unofficial hunter.'

'It's all black. There might be a skill that values color, or it might be a set item...'

Yoo Seong-un was also aware of the gaze of some of those people.

'Please don't just talk to me.'

As expected, but with Geo's help, it was getting less attention.

I was talking to Geo, who had just come out into human society, and praying earnestly that nothing bad would happen.

"This is the subway entrance."

Yoo Seong-un was careful not to let Geo's gaze reach anyone else.

“See here? You can pay the toll by tapping your card here.”

“Do you pay your fare at the elevator?”

Geo, with his luggage on his back as if it were his habit, looked at the entrance to the subway with interest.

It was like an elevator that you can see in subways or some overpasses. It wasn't hidden inside the building, but it was protruding and stretched out high, and it was connected to the subway line.

'Isn't there a separate station?'

Looking at the bare rails without any buildings, it seemed like there were no stations, and what little space there was that looked like a bus stop was visible here and there. It seemed like they were really being used as buses.

“I’ll give you my card. If you want to buy anything, you can use this. There’s no limit.”

“…….”

Geo was scared.

'I don't know how many times I've gotten nervous today.'

It was dangerous outside the blanket.

'Why are you giving me a card with no limit?'

Since I'm scared, I'll just call you hyung for now.

Of course, Geo, who was a selective introvert, never called Yoo Seong-un, who he had only known for a few months, “hyung.” Geo still maintained his manners and used his card to ride the subway elevator.

“…….”

"what's the matter?"

“I have a question.”

Geo asked.

“I don’t understand why there is only one elevator when the elevator is not very fast. If there are a lot of people, wouldn’t it be delayed?”

"ah…."

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“I guess they only installed one since there aren’t many people riding it anyway.”

“It looks like a useful means of transportation, so why aren’t many people using it?”

How can we leave such an interesting new creation alone?

“It’s not a particularly great reason.”

Yoo Seong-un told me the reality.

“Because it’s expensive.”

“…….”

aha.

'I see.'

If it was a capitalist society, Geo was a guy who knew very well.

'But is he still alive?'

Are you living a long life?

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (26)

Episode 26

The station where we arrived at the subway station was at a fairly high altitude.

“…….”

“Why, what’s going on?”

“It’s been a long time since I’ve been this high up.”

“I guess that’s true.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

'I guess the portrait will never go up this high.'

But since he said 'long time no see', it seemed like he had come out of the portrait and climbed up on his own.

'Or have you ever climbed a mountain or a cliff in your memories as a human?'

Since he is a guy who can move on his own, there are probably many cases. Maybe he moved while still in a portrait.

Geo, unaware of Yoo Seong-un's thoughts, was looking at the subway station.

'... I didn't know it when I looked at it from below, but it's covered with a transparent film. It seems to be to prevent falls or to block strong winds from high places, but what is the exact material? It looks much more transparent and stronger than glass or plastic.'

Geo was very interested in growing and creating this new material that seemed like it came straight out of a science fiction movie, and he couldn't help but ask questions.

“What is this wall made of?”

“Huh? A wall?”

“Yes, it’s blocked by a wall so transparent that you wouldn’t know it unless you touched it.”

“I don’t know much about this stuff, but… it’s probably an intangible crystal.”

“Intangible decision?”

“I know it’s an ingredient extracted from a monster that appears frequently.”

Even Yoo Seong-un didn't know what name that monster was. Unless it was particularly threatening or unique, it wasn't worth remembering.

“I heard that most transparent windows installed in cities use this.”

"okay."

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un became serious.

“You can’t take it. It’s public property.”

“I know.”

“That’s not the reaction of someone I know right now.”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“…If you want it, I’ll get it for you later, so just bear with it.”

Although intangible crystals are a material used in various industries, they are not expensive compared to their versatility. This is because the monsters that can extract crystals are not that rare, and the amount of crystals that can be extracted from each individual is also large.

“What on earth would you use something like this for?”

“It was an interesting object, so I wanted to observe it and try using it.”

“Your curiosity is truly amazing….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled with a subtle feeling. It was a typical characteristic of the beings of the original world to show interest in rules or objects created by humans.

While we were chatting away, the subway arrived soon.

“We’re the only ones in this room.”

As Yoo Seong-un said, there were only the two of them in the space marked 'No. 6'.

Geo thought quietly.

'There really aren't any people riding it.'

It was a bit of a shame.

'I can't believe I can't afford such a wonderful new product because it's too expensive.'

Even if you tap your card in front of the elevator on the first floor, only a green light will appear indicating that you can enter, and there is no information on how much was charged. So I didn't know the exact price of the subway, but I felt strangely bitter.

'I feel like the gap between the rich and the poor has gotten wider over the past 31 years. Is it just me?'

Geo asked.

“Are there usually this few people?”

“Oh, that’s not it.”

Yoo Seong-un shook his head.

“I usually ride more than this. There were at least 10 people in each car, but today, I don’t see anyone. I don’t know if it’s because I ride during peak work hours, but… It’s been a long time since I’ve ridden at this time.”

“…….”

wait for a sec.

Something was strange.

“Is it time to get to work?”

“Well, it’s 8:38 now.”

Yoo Seong-un checked his watch and continued speaking.

“It may be a little different for each company, but the average start time is 7 o’clock.”

“…….”

“Geo?”

“Is 7am the time to start work?”

“Most of them are like that?”

Are they usually free of human rights?

'If I remember correctly, the typical work start time for office workers was 9 AM.'

Geo suddenly lost his confidence in living in this harsh reality. Seeing that his patriotism, which he had never had before, was also disappearing, it seemed that portrait painting was the right fit for him.

“…….”

Why on earth did this country end up like this? He soon came up with a reasonable reason. It was a reason that he could think of because of the 31-year gap between Geo and him.

“Is it because most people wake up early in the morning due to genetic or cultural reasons?”

“Uh… That’s not it. If you don’t set a specific time, there will be many people who sleep until lunchtime. This is just a rule that people agree on among themselves.”

"okay."

It was a neat answer, but it felt uncomfortable. Geo looked at Yoo Seong-un intently.

'Doesn't this person sometimes not see me as a human being?'

It was like a butler explaining human society to a talking cat.

“…….”

“Huh? Why?”

“I am an ordinary human being.”

“Uh… okay.”

Even if I searched and searched like a high school senior analyzing the college entrance exam passages, I didn't get a particularly believable response.

'... Even if I were in Yoo Seong-un's shoes, I wouldn't feel like the possessed portrait was the same person. Let's be thankful that we aren't treated like monsters in this world.'

And thanks to this kind of monster treatment, there were many benefits to being treated like this. Even if you had no money and lacked common sense, it seemed like they just let it go, saying, "Well, that's okay because he's not human."

Although I felt like my pride as a human being was slightly crushed, I still thought that it would be better for my body and mind to live as a portrait rather than return to being a faithful slave to capitalist society.

Geo asked quietly.

“Don’t you think I’m rude and ill-mannered?”

“What are you talking about all of a sudden?”

“I will be careful not to cause any inconvenience to Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“…I don’t know how to answer, but, yeah, thank you….”

"thank you."

As expected, Yoo Seong-un was a trustworthy and considerate person.

Geo sat down next to Yoo Seong-un and looked at the subway door that was still not closed.

“It’s been open for quite some time.”

“The subway and buses close much earlier than this.”

After briefly explaining basic common sense, Yoo Seong-un continued his story about the subway.

“Since the subway takes a long time to get on the elevator, and there aren’t that many platforms, they keep them open longer for people who are a little late.”

“Even though it’s winter.”

“Well, it’s fortunate that the cold is blocked automatically.”

Yes, it was midwinter now.

“Oh, come to think of it… If you’re lucky, you might find some street food while you’re walking around.”

Geo's heart raced at Yoo Seong-un's words. He was true to his instincts.

“If it’s street food, is it something like bungeoppang?”

“Yeah, or maybe something like octopus bread or egg bread or fish cake.”

“I want to eat.”

“I’ll try my best to find it, but don’t expect too much. There aren’t many places that sell that kind of stuff.”

“Why? Warm street food would be quite popular on a cold day.”

“There aren’t many people who want to do it because of complaints that it’s not aesthetically pleasing. Once complaints are filed, it also causes problems when entering or leaving the city or doing business.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders as he said that.

“And to begin with, city people don’t really want to do things like sell street food. But isn’t it inconvenient for people from far away places to come here and sell food?”

“…….”

Oh, my.

Geo was embarrassed.

“It seems like there is a clear distinction between city people and country people.”

“Huh? Um, uh… I guess so?”

“Why is that?”

“…Uh uh….”

Yoo Seong-un let out a deep sigh.

“I don’t know how to explain this, but it’s just the way people live. I know it’s embarrassing, but we classify each other and differentiate ourselves.”

“What kind of grades are there?”

“For example, someone like me who lives in the city and works as both a Hunter and a Curator is a 1st class citizen. As far as I know, Hunters above B class are almost always 1st class citizens, unless they are Red Hunters who have committed crimes.”

Yoo Seong-un took out his ID card and showed the words '1st Class' next to his name, then pointed to the gaping window of the subway and said.

“People who live in the city, even though their income and job are not that great, are second-class.”

“…….”

“In the case of the people from the provinces I just mentioned, they are usually classified as Class 3. And some of the poor people living between the provinces and the city, that is, those who cannot even obtain identification cards, are implicitly classified as Class 4.”

“…Is there also a 5th grade?”

“From there, they are criminals. Unlike the 4th class citizens whose names are not even recorded, they are recorded in administrative records, but they are literally just recorded and are not treated as human beings. If they encounter them, they can be killed at any time.”

How can you not want to live like this?

Geo, a sensitive person, was close to tears at the incredible development of his hometown.

‘… I always thought that the caste system would be revived someday since the lifespan of the Earth is longer than that of humans, but I never thought I would experience it in my lifetime.’

Geo asked again, looking at the door that was still not closed.

“Is there a reason to make such a distinction?”

“Perhaps it is because there is a big difference in infrastructure between cities and rural areas.”

Yoo Seong-un kindly answered, as if he would be faithful to his role as a guide.

“I’m talking about various facilities and benefits available within the region, but the cultural and administrative gap between cities and provinces is huge. In provinces, people farm and earn a living, while city residents tend to buy food ingredients delivered from there….”

“…….”

“I would say it’s almost a century of difference. If you go to the countryside, it’ll be hard to find a two-story building, let alone an above-ground railway. Few people have cars. There’s at least one local railway running… But that might be the reason they don’t buy cars.”

Since you have a means of transportation anyway, there’s no need to spend money on your own. Yoo Seong-un muttered quietly and continued.

“Well… the biggest difference among them is the defense line.”

“What does the defensive line mean?”

“In reality, there is a large wall on the outskirts of the city that can be defended like a castle, and secondarily, there are separate safety experts who manage the safety of the city, and above all, there are already many Hunters within the city… so even if an incident were to occur within the city, it would be quickly dealt with.”

Yoo Seong-un rubbed the back of his neck.

“In a word, it’s a survival benefit. Most of the fourth-class citizens cannot live outside the city even if they have to live as poor people, and in the same context, there are many who want to come into the city… but not all the people can live here. The resources and land area are limited, right?”

“So you divided it into grades?”

“The only people who can live in the city are second-class citizens. Third-class citizens can visit the city and find work, but those who live there on their own are treated more harshly.”

“How does it get worse….”

“What should I say? Well, first of all, since your ID is destroyed, you can’t get a job… Even if you’re not treated as a 5th-grade citizen, you should say you’re treated as something less than human. People who settle down in the city because they don’t want to die from monsters in the countryside end up as 4th-grade citizens, the poor.”

In short, is it a dystopia?

'I'm hearing a story that sounds like something out of a movie, but at this point it's starting to feel less real.'

It was a difficult world for Geo, who loved friendship, love, and peace. Up until 31 years ago, he had been able to feel human emotions to some extent, but now he felt that something was very twisted.

Although Geo started to act grandiosely, using his blunt poker face as a weapon, Yoo Seong-un, who hoped that Geo knew human society well, continued his explanation.

“In the first place, you never know where the dungeon itself will explode, and even if it’s not from a dungeon, there are many monsters that have already settled on Earth. In the city, these native monsters are better managed, but in the countryside, there’s a lack of manpower and equipment, so if you take your eyes off them for a second, you’ll often end up dead.”

“That sounds scary.”

“That’s why, if you live in a rural town, they tell you not to go outside after 5pm. Or, in many cases, the town is run mainly by Hunters who are C-rank or lower. Even if they are weak, Awakened ones are much more trustworthy than ordinary people.”

At that time, the doors of the subway finally closed.

“…….”

“It’s moving slowly.”

“No one else rode.”

“Well, it’s not even lunch time….”

“It is morning time.”

“What kind of office worker eats breakfast?”

It's a way of saying that eating breakfast is not a given. Perhaps in today's world, the phrase 'three meals a day' has long since disappeared.

'Right now, we're probably moving to eat three meals a day.'

Geo, who listened to the horrific reality of modern society with one ear and let it out the other, slowly admired the subway structure that was similar to the subway he knew. What impressed him the most were the transparent walls and ceiling.

“Are these walls and ceilings also made using intangible crystals?”

“Probably so. Its durability and transparency are incomparable to Earth’s traditional materials, so it provides some level of defense against monster attacks.”

"okay."

“I heard that in the past, they made windows like this out of glass or plastic… I wonder how they could possibly have used such weak materials.”

“…….”

In that way, Geo was instantly reduced to an ancestor. From a young blood in the education field to an ancestor. The exponential difference was dizzying.

“Aren’t glass or plastic used?”

“It is useful, but glass… isn’t it usually used for decorations? It’s much easier to shape than amorphous crystals, and you can mix colors. Even though it can be made artificially, it’s a type of gem, so it’s a bit expensive.”

“Plastic?”

“Plastic? I guess I’ll hardly use it. It’s not recyclable and it doesn’t decompose easily.”

It seems that Earthlings have evolved in the past 31 years, considering the health of the planet. I thought they were busy evolving into a dystopia, but they are quite advanced.

'I guess the lifespan of the Earth has increased a bit.'

Geo turned his gaze and looked at the subway again.

The back of the chair was covered with soft fabric and leather like a sofa, but the window and ceiling above the shoulder line were as clean as if there was nothing there.

The gleaming walls of the building and the clear sky beyond gave me a strange thrill.

'A gentlemanly roller coaster… .'

There was no sense of speed or bumps, but this absurdly high-altitude rail stimulated Geo's romanticism. It was like a scene from a science fiction movie.

“Oh, Geo. We’ll be getting off soon.”

“Is that so?”

“The restaurant and hotel I made a reservation at are near this stop.”

“I am looking forward to it.”

“You can look forward to it, I’ve got everything in a good place.”

While listening to Yoo Seong-un's words, he felt intrigued, and Geo had a vague intuition.

'The Earth is no longer a place where harmless creatures like me can live.'

Geo, who was weak and didn't even have a white belt in Taekwondo that everyone else had, didn't have the strength to overcome this terrifying world. He was going to have to spend his entire life locked in a portrait to ensure his own safety.

If Yoo Seong-un had heard about it, I think he would have trembled in shock.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (27)

Episode 27

The restaurant led by Yoo Seong-un had all of its employees wearing hanbok.

“I made a reservation for two with Yoo Seong-un.”

“Customer Yoo Seong-un, I have confirmed it. Please take off your shoes so we can take you inside.”

Geo looked at the restaurant from a distance, seeing Yoo Seong-un receiving service from the staff without hesitation.

The restaurant he guided me to was a Hanok with a strong antique atmosphere, as if it had been drawn with ink. The pillars had curves that brought out the natural beauty of the wood, and the soft, refreshing scent of cypress and the high ceiling made me feel at ease.

What was visible was not a noisy crowd of guests, but a quiet and neatly organized wooden hallway. Each room visible between the hallways had a particularly strong individualistic aspect.

“…….”

Is this… a restaurant with rice and side dishes?

'It is clear that the definition of a restaurant that I know has changed over the past 31 years.'

Where did my bustling and comfortable restaurant where I used to sit cross-legged and eat rice cakes go?

“Geo, let’s go in.”

“Do you eat here?”

"ah."

Yoo Seong-un made excuses as if he was wondering what the heck he was caring about.

“Ignore the sounds of people. But at this level, I think I’ve blocked out all sounds and sounds pretty well.”

“…….”

“If it’s too inconvenient, should we move to another restaurant? There are places where we can have an entire building to ourselves.”

Hey, this guy?

'Are you really treating me like a walking nuclear power plant?'

I don't know how sensitive you see me.

“It’s not uncomfortable.”

“Really? That’s good.”

“Are the rooms separated?”

“Yeah, the room isn’t that small, so you’ll be able to eat comfortably.”

"okay."

Geo wasn't the type of person to turn down a free meal unless it was really something special.

'Anyway, it looks delicious, so it's fine.'

It felt complicated and subtle that the world had changed so much in the past 31 years, but with the permission of his hungry stomach, Geo threw away his worries and followed Yoo Seong-un.

“If you have finished selecting your menu, please ring the bell.”

"yes."

“Have a nice time.”

The employee, wearing a hanbok with soft colors that looked like it was dyed with flower petals, quietly left the room. Geo, who had been waiting for a moment while feeling the footsteps of the people moving away, asked.

“Is this a restaurant serving white rice?”

“…Oh, right.”

Although the tea wasn't very strong, Yoo Seong-un had a resentful reaction.

Geo's question was simply, 'Is this flashy place really a restaurant serving baekban?', but Yoo Seong-woon seemed to have understood it as, 'So, what exactly is a restaurant serving baekban?'

“A meal consisting of rice, soup, and side dishes is called baekban.”

“……”

Because of my pride as a teacher, I wanted to refute Geo the moment he said that, but it didn't seem like the misunderstanding would be resolved even if I did, so I decided to just keep my mouth shut and listen to the explanation. I'm proud to say that it was a mature decision.

“The rice is always the same, and the soup changes every day, but today… I think it’s seaweed soup.”

Yoo Seong-un asked with a curious expression after hearing what he had said so far.

“Do you eat seaweed?”

“There is no food I cannot eat or dislike.”

“That’s good to hear.”

Yoo Seong-un opened the menu that was placed on the edge of the table.

“The side dishes are all the same, and we choose the main menu. It’s usually divided into meat and fish, but which one do you like more?”

“I’m more drawn to meat these days.”

The soft-hearted Geo couldn't hunt forest animals. Not only did he not know how to hunt them in the first place, but even if he did hunt the cute, round animals, the yield would clearly be low.

Geo, who is happy no matter what he eats, isn't a picky eater, but since he was already out, he wanted to eat meat.

'You have to eat it when it comes out.'

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“Then let’s have Gwangyang Bulgogi.”

He pressed the number pad on the edge of the table. It seemed like there was a system where you input the corresponding menu number here and then the kitchen would take it and prepare it right away.

Finally, Yoo Seong-un pressed the red button, the bell, and looked at Geo again.

“Of all the restaurants I’ve been to, this one seems to be the most delicious. They don’t even use monster meat.”

“Do you usually use monster meat?”

“You eat it often, right? But it’s a bit strange to come to a restaurant and eat monster meat.”

“…….”

It seemed like Geo was giving a higher rating to the place called ‘restaurant’ than he knew. Geo, whose ancestor had been hibernating for 31 years, was wondering how to ask this question so that it wouldn’t sound strange.

“Why, do you have any questions?”

“…Is the restaurant a different kind of establishment compared to other establishments?”

“Hmm? Aren’t most people like that?”

Yoo Seong-un rubbed the back of his neck as if it was an unexpected question.

“You don’t have to eat at home, so you have to ask someone else to help you eat. In my case, it’s not that burdensome, but for second-class citizens and above, it’s a bit more difficult.”

“Are all restaurants like this?”

“Generally speaking, yes. In the first place, restaurants are places to eat, but more importantly, they are places to receive service. There are many people who come to restaurants to eat like me, but there are even more who come to be treated.”

It felt a little different from the definition of a restaurant that Geo knew.

‘Compared to what I knew, it seems similar to fine dining or omakase. Does that mean all restaurants have become more upscale?’

Wait a minute, what about delivery?

“Don’t you use delivery?”

Yoo Seong-un had an expression on his face that said he didn’t expect the word ‘delivery’ to come out of Geo’s mouth. He began to doubt whether he was really seeing him as his ancestor, but Geo, who didn’t want to bother explaining, kept his mouth shut.

“Delivery is also… a frequently used method. But it’s more expensive.”

“Is that so?”

“If we encounter a monster on the way, it’ll be a major accident. It’ll be a hassle to avoid it.”

What kind of monster is being treated like a stray cat? The level of damage was definitely not at the level of a stray cat, which made it even more absurd.

“That’s why I don’t usually order delivery unless I’m having a party. I do the same.”

“…….”

If the delivery was enough to accommodate a party, I wondered if it wasn't just catering.

“…So most of you cook your own meals at home?”

“Usually, that’s true. It costs money to buy groceries, so how can you afford to get service? Going to a restaurant isn’t that common.”

What kind of world was destroyed once and then rebuilt?

“But don’t we have a restaurant?”

“I told you I’d take you on a tour….”

"aha."

It seemed like he meant to give her a great treat. Geo was seriously concerned that even simple communication was causing errors.

'... Should I take social education again? It's hard to get compulsory education at my age? Should I re-enroll in college even now?'

The world has changed so much in just 31 years. If things continued this way, Geo would be treated like an alien from Sirius whenever he spoke to someone.

'Or else you're treated like a cornered person who lives isolated from society.'

Oh my god, the latter statement is not wrong, which makes it even more creepy.

‘Is this the state of mind of the elderly who cannot keep up with the changing society?’

Grandma, I finally understand how you feel. It really is hard to keep up with the rapidly evolving times.

Geo looked deeply as if he was watching the meal prepared by the staff.

“It’s hot, so please step back a little.”

The employee who said so dropped a spark into the middle of the table.

Then, a fire blazed up and took the shape of a gas range, and the employee placed a grill on top of the circular fire. Then, he placed a few pieces of bulgogi on it and left the room.

“…….”

The light came on even though there was nothing.

'It's a table made of wood, so it doesn't burn.'

Correction: Geo needed to re-enter kindergarten, not college.

Judging from Yoo Seong-un's expression, this seemed like a very natural thing to do, but Geo, who was exactly 31 years removed from society, was simply surprised.

“Hmm, I think it’s beef.”

“…what kind of meat is there if not beef?”

“As I said before, there’s a high chance that it’s monster meat. It’s cheaper than cow or sheep.”

“Isn’t it tasty?”

“That’s not it….”

Chewing gum—.

Yoo Seong-un, who was stirring the meat, continued speaking.

“It’s just the general social atmosphere. There’s a lot of meat that we wouldn’t mind eating, except for the special parts that are toxic, but monsters attack people… and most of them are disgusting looking. It’s hard to welcome the meat of monsters that eat people.”

“I understand when you say it like that.”

“But it’s also a meat that’s commonly used at home. It’s cheap and a lot of protein, so it can’t be unpopular. But I heard that it’s a bit strange to eat monster meat even in a restaurant like this where people come to be treated.”

“Isn’t it dangerous?”

“Not all monsters have poison in their bodies?”

Yoo Seong-un smiled brightly.

“Well, I heard that until about 20 years ago, the public was wondering how anyone could eat something so dangerous. I was young back then, so I’m not sure about now.”

“It may not seem like 20 years was that long ago, but people’s perceptions seem to have changed rapidly.”

“I guess it’s because I’ve done a lot of work in the government and associations….”

A government that is good enough to change Koreans' perception of the meat they put in their mouths in 20 years?

'Why has so much changed in 31 years?'

It was a more surprising story than Geo himself evolving into a portrait in flames. Yoo Seong-un's opinion may be a bit different, but Geo himself said so.

“The government seems competent.”

“Well, if you don’t want to get your neck cut off, you have to be competent.”

“…….”

“We’ve already been through a few rounds so only the capable ones remain.”

Geo was scared. Hyung says things like that before eating meat.

'... Well, Hunters are said to be living weapons of war, so I wonder if there's anything that politicians can't touch.'

Geo quickly understood and started stirring the meat together.

“Can I eat this?”

“Oh, it looks like it’s fully ripe.”

"thank you for this food."

“I hope it suits your taste.”

“I think so.”

Korean bulgogi is divided into three representative types.

First, Seoul-style. Second, Gwangyang-style. Third, Unyang-style. Of all of them, Geo's favorite was this Gwangyang-style bulgogi.

The commonly known bulgogi marinated in broth and sauce is Seoul-style bulgogi, but unlike Seoul-style bulgogi, which is eaten like a stew, Gwangyang-style bulgogi is grilled dry on a hot plate. It varies slightly from household to household, but most do not marinate it in seasoning for very long.

'So the taste of the meat is much more alive.'

Beef that has been pounded and thinned several times to soften the meat texture. When it is grilled once on a hot plate, the outside is crispy, the inside is moist, and the juicy Gwangyang-style bulgogi is complete.

“…….”

A piece of bulgogi taken off the grill.

Without sauce or rice, Geo put a whole piece of bulgogi in his mouth.

“…….”

“How is it? Is it delicious?”

“It’s very delicious.”

It must have been a private room, but if I had been there alone, it would have been so delicious that I would have given a standing ovation.

“It seems like they use good meat. The meat flavor is rich and not fishy, and the meat quality is also quite good. It seems like they pounded it a lot during the tenderization process, but since it doesn’t tear at all despite its thickness, I guess that means the chef is also very skilled.”

“You… you talk a lot when you eat delicious food.”

“Excuse me.”

It's so delicious, I can't stop.

“But it really is delicious.”

“Yeah, I see.”

“It’s a flavor I want to try making.”

The outer layer, which was grilled as if fried over charcoal, had a brief bitter taste typical of charred meat, but it added a variation to the sweetness of the moderately charred meat.

The right amount of fat embedded in the meat gave it a rich stock-like flavor, and that alone was enough to tell you the quality of the meat.

“The seasoning is just right.”

The mellow sweetness mixed deep into the meat was probably pear. It seemed like the meat had been tenderized by adding ground pear. I wonder if some kind of alcohol was added to it, and a refined bitterness was also felt, doubling the sophistication of the taste.

“It goes well with garlic. It has just the right amount of flavor without being too strong.”

The pungent aroma of garlic was embedded deep in the meat, piercing the inside of the tongue, but once grilled over charcoal, the toxicity melted away gently. The sesame oil used was also good, so it had a fresh aroma.

“…….”

“Huh? Why?”

“It looks like you make your own soy sauce.”

“Are you a gourmet? How did you know that?”

“Is that right?”

“Uh… I heard that from the owner here.”

Geo nodded.

“I was wondering why the pepper flavor was so strong.”

“You like eating for a reason. You have a sensitive tongue.”

“The dipping sauce… is delicious too.”

Perhaps the ingredients themselves were similar to the seasoning for bulgogi, but this strangely sweet and sour taste. The rich plum flavor permeated the sauce without being awkward, adding flavor.

‘It’s not plum extract… .’

I thought it might be vinegar made from plums.

“…….”

Dip the meat in a slightly brown sauce with hints of garlic, but not too much, and eat it with steaming, fluffy white rice… .

“…….”

“Is it good?”

"yes."

“I see.”

As expected, rice was delicious when you filled your mouth with it.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (28)

Episode 28

After finishing his meal, Yoo Seong-un led Geo to Cheonggyecheon.

“…….”

But, as expected, it was quite different from the Cheonggyecheon in Seoul that Geo remembered.

“Okay, this is Cheonggyecheon.”

“It’s a truly natural sight.”

"yes?"

“It’s winter, but flowers are blooming.”

Are you crazy?

'Is the Earth finally starting to break down because it can no longer withstand humans?'

Fortunately, Yoo Seong-un added an explanation.

“I don’t know what they were thinking, but they just took special measures to make it like a greenhouse.”

“What action is being taken?”

“There is a separate department in charge of urban landscaping in the city. They make sure that a certain amount of vegetation remains when the city is being built.”

“Are you going to keep it as a greenhouse even in the winter?”

“That’s right, look. Isn’t the air very mild?”

The meteor cloud waved in the air and pointed to Cheonggyecheon.

“It’s magically treated, so anyone except for level 5 citizens, criminals, or threatening monsters can enter. It’s a real greenhouse-like system that blocks out the cold winter air and lets in only sunlight.”

“…….”

“Wasn’t it pretty warm in front of our company? In the case of companies that handle a lot of money or public places where people often gather, this kind of magical treatment is done. In the former case, the company owner installs it privately, and in the latter case, the government pays for it and installs it….”

Geo, who was chewing on Yoo Seong-un's words, asked.

“If you say a threatening monster… can a non-threatening monster enter?”

"ah…."

Yoo Seong-un nodded after thinking for a moment.

“I guess that’s the way it can be. Even if they’re monsters, they’re already part of the Earth’s ecosystem and play a part in the natural cycle, so we can’t just reject them.”

From those words, Geo could tell that even monsters were treated like half-stray cats or half-pigeons.

“I guess monsters can only be seen when the dungeon is destroyed.”

“Huh? Ah, no matter what, humans aren’t that capable.”

Yoo Seong-un continued his explanation.

“When I was young, there were many who argued that all monsters had to be dealt with. However, no matter how many Hunters there are, they are not enough to protect all of humanity, and even if there were a very strong Hunter, it would be inhumane for that one person to chase down and deal with all the monsters.”

He shrugged.

“More than anything, how can you handle it if such a strong hunter causes terrorism due to stress? It’s the same even if you’re not a strong hunter. Hunters are people too, so how can they just work?”

"okay."

“They say that most of the native monsters that have settled on Earth now are the result of not being dealt with in the early stages of the catastrophe.”

“At the beginning?”

“Back then, the hunters were much weaker than they are now, the system was weaker, and there weren’t many people with pursuit skills, so that’s only natural.”

“Then the monsters that were left behind and couldn’t be killed….”

“You have become a part of the Earth.”

As he said that, Yoo Seong-un winked at the stream with clear water flowing.

“Like that guy.”

Purrururuk—.

In the middle of the river, a round bird was preening its feathers.

“That guy is a monster too.”

“…….”

It was definitely a bird Geo didn't know about.

But the system knew.

Cotton bud

It was named by Koreans because it resembles cotton. It is a spherical shape with no distinction between wings, torso, head, and neck, but its actual body structure is similar to that of a normal bird, except that its feathers are puffed up. If you boil cotton-boiled eggs and pull out the thread, you can make a bandage.

“…….”

Silkworm cocoon?

'It looks almost like a ball.'

Anyway, Geo was convinced.

“The cotton bollworm is not a threat.”

“…Do you know that guy?”

“I just found out.”

The system explained that it was almost like a silkworm cocoon in the shape of a bird, but it was calming to see the slightly larger cotton balls preening their feathers in the river.

Yoo Seong-un, who had been staring at Geo, soon continued speaking.

“…Um, yeah, those guys. They’re numerous and small, but most of them are considered to have no significant negative impact on humans or the ecosystem, so they’ve become native monsters to Earth.”

“It’s cute.”

“It doesn’t look like that at all, but you like that kind of stuff?”

“Isn’t it great that they’re small and round and look surprisingly harmless?”

“Somehow your water bird is also round….”

Yoo Seong-un laughed hollowly.

“Even so, the current native monsters are already part of the cycle, so we’re leaving them alone, but we’re dealing with all the recently introduced alien species. To begin with, monsters really hate Earthlings.”

“Is that so?”

“Usually, yes. Even if they are not hostile, they can still pose a sufficient threat to humans. The remaining native monsters are ones that have already passed safety inspections by the association and are managed at the government level.”

Yoo Seong-un pointed at the cotton ball once more.

“Those guys have adapted after living on Earth for a long time, so their hostility toward humans has softened to the level of normal wild animals. They were said to be dangerous monsters that would eat human flesh at the beginning of the Great Calamity, but now they’re as harmless as pigeons.”

"aha."

“Since they are monsters, it is illegal to touch them or raise them personally, but… it means that they can coexist. Dungeons and Earth are inseparable, so I think they decided that this would be better than unconditional rejection.”

Coexistence with monsters? It seems that Earthlings have become considerably tougher in the meantime.

“That’s all for the explanation. Would you like to take a quick look around? The water quality is thoroughly managed, so there shouldn’t be any harm. The monsters and animals here are all relatively harmless.”

“…….”

Geo, who was looking at the clear, flowing river, soon moved his feet.

'Clear as liquid glass.'

The river seen up close was even more beautiful when the sunlight broke through.

In the mild weather like spring, large trees, vines, and flowers filled the place like a large greenhouse. Pastel-colored butterflies sat on the flower petals, and creatures that resembled squirrels ate the fruit from the trees.

Why do sparrow-like birds peck at the flowers on trees? They may do it for fun, or they may want to eat the nectar inside the flowers.

“…If people change the seasons like this at will, isn’t there any problem with the ecosystem?”

“There was a time when there was a lot of talk about it, but now they say they’ve adjusted everything somehow. In particular, there are many cases where seasons are intentionally created to prevent the Earth’s native animals from becoming extinct due to monsters.”

"okay."

In many ways, it is different from when Geo lived.

“If you don’t mind, try dipping your feet in.”

“Is that okay?”

“There are rules about not picking fruit or pulling flowers, but there are no specific regulations in that regard. In the summer, when there are a lot of people, many people come here to play in the water.”

“Despite that, there’s no one here today.”

“Who would want to play in the water during the peak work hours, when it’s not a vacation or holiday? In the first place, there are many people who don’t want to get their bodies wet in the winter.”

“What Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is correct.”

Geo takes off his shoes and socks and leaves them there.

I soaked my feet in running water.

“…….”

It was cool.

'Soft.'

It smells sweet.

It is unknown whether it is the scent of flowers, trees, or the scent of a monster living in this water. Perhaps the water of the river has evolved from the colorless and odorless water of the past.

But, like a valley in summer, the pebbles roll down the water… .

“…….”

Tiny creatures moving around little by little.

It made Giovanni happy.

“…It’s pretty water.”

His black eyes were watery.

“It’s clear and deep.”

“…….”

“It’s deeper than I thought.”

“…….”

“Why does it smell like the sea here?”

Yoo Seong-un sensed something had changed.

“…Geo?”

“It smells like the sea. A little bitter like the surface of iron, cool like pine needles, and like the strong wind that blows the sand away….”

“Geo.”

“It looks like that place.”

A soft, yet indifferent voice.

“The color of the sea.”

That moment.

“…….”

“The color of a mermaid.”

At Giovanni's feet, all kinds of aquatic creatures gathered silently.

“The deep sea takes care of….”

Before he knew it, his feet had turned a transparent water color… .

“—Geo.”

“…….”

The voice of 'friend'.

I blinked twice.

"…yes."

"…you…."

“Did you call?”

Geo looked back at the meteor cloud.

“…….”

“…….”

“…Sergio, right?”

"you're right."

He nodded.

“My name is Geo.”

Yoo Seong-un's face was strangely distorted.

* * *

After some time, in front of the hotel room.

Yoo Seong-un handed Geo a card key with '4501' written on it.

“Okay, this is yours.”

"thank you."

“I’ll be in the room next door, so call me if you need me.”

"yes."

“Since our dinner reservation is at 6:30… we can meet at 6.”

Geo asked him.

“What’s for dinner?”

“French. It’s a restaurant with a set menu, so you just have to go and eat.”

“I understand.”

“Then get some rest.”

Yoo Seong-un went into the room alone.

“…….”

I was sweating coldly.

“…Obviously, earlier….”

When I was at Cheonggyecheon.

“…That wasn’t ‘Geo.’”

Something has changed.

Whether he was aware of himself in Korea or not, Geo usually introduced himself as 'Sergio'. Even though Yoo Seong-woon pointed that out, he defined himself as 'Geo' at Cheonggyecheon.

'So what exactly changed?'

Yoo Seong-un still remembers the black cloak at Cheonggyecheon.

It started the moment Geo's bare feet touched the river water. An indescribable sense of discomfort came over him, then something rippled strangely, and Geo's eyes, which had been plain black the whole time, changed to the color of the sea.

When Yoo Seong-un spoke to him, Geo, who had been smiling slowly, seemed as if his personality had changed.

'What color was her hair…? Was it silver? Or maybe platinum blonde? I couldn't tell because it was hidden by the hood.'

It slowly began to turn red here and there, and soon his body was transformed to the point where it was impossible to distinguish between water and feet. The shape was the same, but it was clear that it was not a human foot, but water.

Even when he saw the pyramid naturally climbing up the transparent ankle, Yoo Seong-un couldn't help but call Geo.

that.

“…….”

It wasn't human.

It didn't seem alive, but I could tell it wasn't dead either. It just wasn't breathing, but it had life in it.

The sight of something that had been a tangible, conversational human being just a few minutes ago, turning into something more… natural, was not something I could bear with my sanity.

"…ha…."

How stupid.

'Did you let your guard down because the level had been lowered?'

The being of origin could never be human, especially not a monster like Geo.

'No matter how much you make it look like a human, it can never be the same as us.'

However, Geo was too human and kind to be wary.

“I need to come to my senses.”

This will result in the loss of your gardener's license.

“…Well, still, it went much smoother than I expected.”

I exhale for no reason.

Yoo Seong-un threw his bag containing basic necessities on the bed and sat down next to it. Then he reviewed the day from the beginning to just now.

“…….”

There was no problem.

'... There were a few awkward points, but perhaps it's because he has human memories, Geo is also adept at the rules of human society. He's on a level that can't be compared to other monsters.'

Even if a normal monster has high intelligence, it would not be able to understand why it has to pay a set price to get something.

'Actually, that's normal. When a human visits an anthill, he digs it up while being considerate of the ants.'

It was the same logic. From the monster's perspective, all they had to do was take the food or necessities that were out in the open.

Even if it doesn't exist, you wouldn't know, but it exists, so there's no need to go back and take it. That's their natural routine and rule.

So, from Geo's perspective, Yoo Seong-un's behavior of paying for a meal would have been incomprehensible.

“But seeing as it went through without a hitch, I guess he’s trying to imitate a human in his own way….”

In fact, if we are to be exact, there were many immature aspects to it.

“You can tell right away that you’re curious.”

Things that humans would already know or would just roughly understand and move on. Geo asked Yoo Seong-un about each of those things.

What is this, what is that, can I have this, how was that made… .

“It would be difficult to call Geo a monster, but in this respect, he is certainly similar to humanoid monsters.”

They have always been curious about human things and rules.

“…Well, maybe being too light for a human is one of those things.”

Although he had been lowered to almost human level, it did not seem like his body itself had become completely human. On the way to the hotel, Geo was almost blown away by the wind.

'Even if it was just a brief moment of shock, it's unbelievable for someone of that height and build.'

Geo was already so light that you couldn't hear him walking. Today, he seemed to have become a bit heavier than a human, but his shoes and clothes only added to his weight, and he still seemed excessively light for a human.

“…….”

The wind was blowing a bit hard, but I remember Geo almost flying away for a moment… .

Honestly, it was a bit creepy.

“…You really aren’t human.”

Geo wasn't human.

'It's the same with the usual light weight, and also in Cheonggyecheon.'

Humans could not be that light.

There is the weight of the clothes you are wearing, the weight of your internal organs and bones, and the weight of the blood flowing inside. If you are a human, you cannot help but make a sound like a leaf that has been left lying down like Geo.

And the tiny pyramid couldn't climb inside that body.

“…….”

The sight of pale skin slowly changing into clear water as soon as the feet touched the water.

The sight of fish and air bubbles burrowing inside was a mysterious and bizarre moment that was difficult for the brain to perceive.

“But that’s not even a monster….”

Nature imitating humans.

“…….”

That would be more correct.

“…It’s scary.”

The existence of the source is classified as nature with a self, but for some reason, Geo seems to be different from that, so I felt an unfounded fear.

I felt like I was receiving favor from someone who shouldn't exist.

* * *

Geo at that time.

“It’s the 45th floor.”

“Gulp!”

He was enjoying the top floor of a five-star hotel with honey he had smuggled in secretly.

Yes, I have no thoughts at all.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (29)

Episode 29

Dinner was taken on board a boat.

“This is the ship we will be taking.”

"oh."

The romantic young Geo's heart raced.

‘You have to go to the restaurant by waterway… .’

It felt like I was in Venice.

“It’s a unique sight, with roads and waterways together.”

“Is that so? Well, it is said that there were almost no waterways in South Korea before the great disaster.”

“Why did it happen?”

Bam.

Geo asked as they rode on a water taxi following the meteor shower.

“It would take a lot of water to build a waterway.”

“It was against it from the beginning. They didn’t draw water to make a waterway, they just made a waterway to control the amount of water that was there.”

“Are you saying there was that much water?”

“Because the water level is quite high compared to the height of the country.”

It was to the point where it couldn't be endured without building a waterway. Where on earth is this hellish Republic of Korea headed?

Yoo Seong-un continued his explanation.

“Although most of the area is still unexplored by humans, there are so many dungeons and monsters that appear in the ocean. I’ve heard that the water level has risen because the volume inside the ocean has physically increased.”

“At that level, it would be difficult with just one or two monsters.”

Just how many and how big of monsters must have settled on Earth for it to be unbearable without creating waterways?

Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth after understanding Geo's question.

“There are many underwater monsters that are easily larger than a building.”

"okay."

“Since there aren’t just one monster, but several of different kinds, the water level must have risen compared to before the catastrophe. In fact, I heard that our country wasn’t originally a place where the sea water rose this much….”

“How do local governments manage the seawater that rises?”

“I know that they dug the waterways so that they wouldn’t have a big negative impact on farming and other aspects of life. They say they built the paths in various ways to prevent the salt water from seeping into the land, but since they don’t have as much capital as the city…

they probably can’t farm near the waterways, right?”

“…….”

“So, I heard that areas where seawater flows in excessively have been fishing instead of farming from the beginning. Some fish from famous areas are even imported to the city.”

Even in this situation, it seems like everyone has found a way to survive.

'Human adaptability is amazing.'

Anyway, Geo was scared.

'I have to get stuck into the portrait.'

Now, the Earth has become a world where it is difficult to survive with only romance, passion, and hope without actual force.

How strong must one be to live in this tough world, paying rent every month? It was definitely a state that Geo couldn't even dream of.

“I think you said that the restaurant itself is floating on water.”

“Actually, rather than floating, it’s more like a restaurant built on a small island….”

“I heard it’s a place inside the Han River.”

Geo asked as he sat down in the taxi seat.

“Was there an island there originally?”

I know that there was a small island like Nodeul Island 31 years ago. However, as Yoo Seong-un said, there was only one restaurant there without any other land, so I wondered how that location came about.

Yoo Seong-un answered without difficulty.

“That’s because that’s where the original fixed dungeon was.”

“…Fixed dungeon?”

“…Ah, you don’t know much about dungeons?”

Judging from his bewildered face, he seemed to have assumed that Geo would naturally know. But unfortunately, that wasn't the case.

Geo became his ancestor 31 years ago in the blink of an eye and was eliminated for failing to evolve with the changing times.

'How did I, who instilled sociality in the young children of the Republic of Korea, end up like this?'

Kids, I miss you, teacher.

Fortunately, Yoo Seong-un quickly returned to his original indifferent expression and began explaining.

“Dungeons are usually divided into fixed and mobile types. There are dungeons that are literally fixed in one place and dungeons that move according to their own rules. In the case of fixed dungeons, they sometimes create terrain that didn’t exist in that place before.”

“So, is the restaurant we’re going to now also built on topography like that?”

“Oh, that was a restaurant theme to begin with. The dungeon there was related to cooking, and it was a dungeon that was cleared because the food of a non-hunter who was dragged there by chance was impressive… That’s the kind of dungeon it was.”

"aha."

The narrative was very moving.

“In that location where the conquest was completed, a grand restaurant was left behind, and the chef who participated in the conquest at that time is said to have taken over and run the restaurant. He is now 92 years old, but he is still active in the field.”

“92 years old?”

“Do you think you live a long life for a human?”

Yoo Seong-un smiled once and continued speaking.

“He was a person who awakened as a cook after clearing the dungeon, so he would have been less affected by age. He would also have the help of skills and items. If you look at him in person, he would probably look like he’s in his 50s.”

“…….”

“He often participates in national-level attacks and is responsible for providing meals for his teammates. That means his basic combat skills are not bad. I’ve never seen it myself, but I heard his main weapon is a baseball bat with nails.”

“Baseball bat….”

“Unexpected? I knew how to use a kitchen knife. But I was interviewed and asked how I could use a knife used for cooking to cut monsters. I guess chefs have a different mindset.”

"oh."

I think I know what he's thinking, but anyway, Geo was scared. Humanity has become stronger.

“Do the Awakened age more slowly?”

“As far as I know, most people are like that. At least if they’re C-class or higher hunters.”

“Is the standard for a good hunter divided into C-class and above…?”

“The average reality or perception itself is like that.”

It was a truly scary world.

'There is nothing wrong with what my grandmother said. Let us always live humbly and politely.'

I didn't want to be exorcised by a haunted portrait while still alive.

Geo was worried.

'I also need to come up with a good survival strategy. If the portrait burns down, who knows what will happen to my cabin, and I can't prevent all misfortunes just by being honest...'

But I didn't want to pass as a human and live on Earth again.

“What are you thinking about?”

“I was thinking that Earth is a scary place.”

"uh…?"

It was really scary.

“Why are you suddenly scared? You’re not even a target for subjugation.”

“That's true.”

But conversely, this means that if you become a target of subjugation, your limbs may be torn off.

'I like things the way they are now.'

Is there a way to maintain the ghostly portrait treatment without being criticized and attacked by people?

Geo decided to think about his own comfortable survival.

“…….”

First, eat some rice.

“…it smells good.”

“Yeah, I can’t even see the restaurant. Isn’t that strange?”

“Is this smell only found in this canal?”

“I think I’ve heard that it’s some kind of publicity strategy.”

“I understand.”

It was amazing that the waterway gave off a pleasant, yet not unpleasant, ecstatic smell from afar, but what was even more amazing was that the scent of the sea and the scent of food were separated.

‘… The scent of the sea in the middle of the city… .’

When I lowered my head a little, all I could smell was the scent of the sea. It was the scent of the seawater, a refreshing scent that stabbed my brain.

I felt nostalgic.

“…….”

Geo leaned closer to the surface.

“Geo, it seems dangerous.”

“I liked the scent of the sea, so I took a sniff.”

Geo's voice became much gentler as he reminisced about old memories.

“It’s amazing that it smells like the sea even though it’s a waterway connected to the Han River.”

“Well, unless it’s a mountain, all the rivers and waterways in places like this are heavily mixed with seawater….”

“Is that so?”

Giovanni liked this scent.

The scent of the sea.

“…….”

The scent of a mermaid.

"…once…."

Enough to make me want to dive deep into it.

It was heartbreaking.

“Geo, stop.”

“…….”

“…The knight is also confused.”

At those words, Geo looked at the water taxi driver.

“…….”

He was looking at Geo with a very bewildered expression, and a little bit scared.

"…okay."

Geo admitted that he had been rude.

“I’m sorry, this is my first time on a waterway like this, so I was curious.”

“I was just worried you might get hurt, I’m not angry, so it’s okay.”

“Thank you for your understanding.”

The meteor was 'worried', but the knight's face looked closer to 'fear', but Geo decided to just ignore it without thinking. It was natural to be scared when the passenger you were carrying was about to fall into the water.

‘Like a customer who suddenly opens the door and jumps out onto the highway… .’

Geo was successfully convinced.

'If that's not it, then I must have been giving off a strange vibe or something.'

As I often did in Yoo Seong-un's company without knowing it.

Geo sat down again quietly. He was reflecting on the trouble he had caused while being distracted by the mysterious waterway.

Yoo Seong-woon, who had been observing him, hesitated with an expression on his face as if to say, 'Can I ask this?' and then asked cautiously.

“Do you like the sea?”

"…yes?"

No? Not really?

“I don’t like it very much.”

“But just now, at Cheonggyecheon and in the waterway, I think you particularly like the smell of the sea. Of course, I’m sorry if I was mistaken.”

“There’s nothing to be sorry about. I don’t hate the sea, but I don’t like it either….”

Geo, who had said that, soon changed his words.

“…Now that I think about it, that might be possible.”

"huh?"

“I think I’m ordinary, but I like it.”

It was a strange sound, but it wasn't wrong. 'Gio' doesn't have much feelings for the sea, but 'Giovanni' doesn't.

So, when asked, "Do you like the sea?", Geo could only say "Nenio." Since both were his thoughts, it was difficult to deny either one.

But then suddenly this thought occurred to me.

“Are there mermaids here too?”

“…a mermaid.”

Meanwhile, Yoo Seong-un sensed the strange phenomenon he had felt at Cheonggyecheon once again.

'Here too, of course,' he said.

Geo seemed to have some kind of connection with mermaids.

"hmm…."

Yoo Seong-un, who had been thinking for a moment, slowly nodded his head.

“Sometimes, monsters of that kind pop up. Even if they’re not monsters… there are beings that have that kind of appearance.”

“…….”

“In a world where idolatry, legends, and myths can create real monsters, mermaid-related monsters pop up all over the world.”

“Is that so?”

“The story of the Little Mermaid, written by a very old author, is a famous fairy tale.”

The Little Mermaid.

The familiar word made Geo think again. It was about Giovanni's request.

'Come to think of it, I think there was something related to the Mermaid Princess during the quest.'

But for now, I decided to leave it alone.

“I think we’re almost there. What a fancy restaurant.”

“Oh, I see.”

“I am looking forward to it, it is a wonderful building beyond my imagination.”

I originally said that you shouldn't worry about things at the dinner table.

* * *

A luxurious restaurant that appears to be made of a mixture of ivory and marble.

Although it was beautifully decorated as if it were a castle, the structure was inefficient, with rooms, staircases, and lobbies jumbled together to the point where it felt like it had not been built by humans.

But ironically, that strangeness solidified the restaurant's concept.

“…….”

White, pink, lime green, and sky blue.

The soft pastel tones spread out like a patchwork quilt based on ivory color made people feel hazy as if they were in a dream.

It was breathtakingly beautiful.

“There’s something I forgot to ask earlier….”

And in the meantime, Yoo Seong-un and Geo's group took over the cream-colored table.

Geo asked as he sat down.

“Didn’t you say that this place was made from the remains of a fixed dungeon?”

“Huh? Right.”

“Then, does a fixed dungeon leave behind terrain and buildings like this even after it has been conquered? Is it that dungeon that left behind this land and restaurant?”

“Ahhh… Oh, right. That’s what it feels like.”

Perhaps he thought it would be best to clear up all the doubts before the main meal was served, as Yoo Seong-woon explained with his characteristically indifferent smile.

“There are various types of dungeons, both fixed and mobile. They are usually divided into virtual dungeons, villa dungeons, and entry dungeons.”

“Are there three?”

“Actually, there are more than that, but these three are the representative dungeons.”

Yoo Seong-un continued his explanation while folding his fingers.

“In the case of virtual dungeons, the game progresses in a virtual world by eating people who meet arbitrary conditions without clear boundaries. For example, the game progresses on a game board that is implemented similarly to a convenience store, with the condition of 10 men in their 30s who stop by a convenience store at 9 p.m. sharp.”

“It sounds utterly unreasonable.”

“That’s right, other hunters are also very troubled by this part. How many of those men in their 30s are suitable for clearing dungeons? Virtual dungeons appear quite rarely, but they are difficult to detect and cause a lot of damage, so they are one of the concerns of modern people.”

I think it's a bit creepy that this kind of world is called 'modern people's worry'.

Yoo Seong-un, who didn't know Geo was scared to his heart's content due to his atrophied facial muscles, continued his explanation calmly.

“Next up is the villa dungeon. Some random terrain and rules appear on Earth.”

“Is that the case for this restaurant?”

“I think you understand. As you said, this restaurant building was created as part of the villa dungeon. In the middle of the Han River, where there was originally nothing, a restaurant suddenly appeared.”

Yoo Seong-un rolled his eyes as if recalling a memory.

“As far as I know, this restaurant isn’t just a restaurant that was built on top of a newly-created piece of land. It’s an overly long restaurant with a basement that’s deep enough to reach the bottom of the river. However, the only part of the restaurant that’s visible above the water’s surface is the restaurant, so it’s called a ‘restaurant on the water’….”

He nodded and continued.

“In this way, the villa dungeon is like an extraterrestrial villa suddenly being built on Earth. Since it has already been replaced with such terrain, it cannot be restored. That’s why most villa dungeons, once they appear, remain as they are, even after the strategy is completed, with only the rules gone. It’s up to the Earthlings to decide how to deal with and utilize them.”

“…….”

“Is the last one an entry dungeon? It’s similar to a game. I wonder what kind of game you know and what it has….”

Yoo Seong-un said, waving his last finger.

“A virtual dungeon with no physical boundaries at all, unlike a villa dungeon where the boundaries themselves exist but are vague. It’s a case where an entrance just appears and you can proceed with conquering another dimension by entering it.”

"aha…."

It certainly looked like a dimensional gate that you often see in games. It was a game where there was just a gate, but when you entered it, you could move to another map. Geo completely understood.

As always, Yoo Seong-un continued speaking in a calm and kind manner.

“But there are few cases of using the remains of a dungeon as a restaurant like this one.”

“It’s unusual and seems good, but it’s unexpected. Why don’t we use it this way?”

“Humans are fearful creatures.”

Bro, are you going to keep treating me like a haunted portrait?

“If you bring in ordinary people, there could be problems, and there aren’t many people with the means to live there and utilize the dungeon’s remains, and on top of that, the remaining remains are quite selective… Usually, it’s better to demolish it somehow.”

“Are you looking for a person?”

“If someone you don’t like comes in, it makes you feel chills?”

“It’s like a haunted house.”

"The haunted portrait said.

“…….”

Yes, Geo actually acknowledged his own identity deep down.

'Well, humans don't usually live inside portraits, building huts and receiving healing.'

Geo, who had no intention of making a strong statement about being human anyway, made an excuse.

“…I don’t give you the chills.”

“Yeah, yeah, because Geo is a human. Right?”

“Yes.”

I was so grateful that I cried because he kept saying "yes, yes" like a 4-year-old cousin.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (30)

Episode 30

‘I’ve been to a few French restaurants before…’

Geo looked around the restaurant once more.

'The concept here is really well done.'

Geo, who is more romantic than fearful, was not discouraged by the words, "This is a restaurant that was turned into a dungeon where dozens of people died."

'Why should I be afraid when delicious food is available?'

To Geo, even the air in this restaurant, 'Istua', felt sweet.

“…….”

“Do you like it here?”

“The atmosphere is good.”

It was fun to watch.

It is chaotic yet clean, dreamy yet neat. The color temperature that feels cool yet affectionate is probably the result of the designer's ability to appropriately mix white and pastel tones.

It was a bizarre and fantastic design, as if it were the embodiment of one person's beautiful dream.

'It's highly likely that this building wasn't designed by a human… .'

The complex and beautiful buildings that seemed to embody dreams, and the sweet air that made my mouth water as if it were the embodiment of fantasy. I felt as if I had come to an amusement park because of the unique experience I had never had in my life.

Originally, there was something called immersive dining on Earth. It refers to a restaurant where you can watch a performance in a theater designed with one concept and eat a meal that is in sync with it. You could call it an interactive theater where you can enjoy a meal.

'Besides, this is a restaurant that has a story related to a dimension called a dungeon. Unlike a pure play that could be said to be a lie, it is a story that actually existed. The chef here even said that he was the main character of the story.'

This restaurant is quite tall, but its center is open, so you can see straight up to the ceiling even from the first floor.

It wasn't a circular, hollow center. It was a round lobby without railings and had stairs that were connected in layers. Guests could dine there.

People sitting in the public lobby enjoying their meal were positioned in a great viewing position, as if they had been chosen as the main characters of this play.

“…….”

The seats where Geo and Yoo Seong-un were sitting were at the edge of the fifth floor.

“…….”

"hmm…."

Yoo Seong-un asked with a curious expression.

“Maybe you wanted to sit in the lobby? It’s a popular seat because that’s where the dungeon story took place.”

"no."

“Oh, you answered quickly. I thought that was better since you kept looking at the public lobby.”

“I was admiring the structure of the building and liked it. It was a pleasure to look at.”

I couldn't refuse out of respect, but I absolutely did not want to eat in a public lobby.

'Being under that much attention would be a very difficult experience for someone with a delicate heart like me.'

When I think of immersive dining, I can say that it is also part of the play, but I didn't want to eat in a space like that where I would be stared at by strangers I didn't even know. Geo covered his face.

“I just admired it.”

“Then that’s good.”

Yoo Seong-un inwardly sighed in relief at Geo's clear yet firm voice.

‘… I can’t show Geo in such a public place.’

Geo continued to wear the hood as he wished, but that didn't mean he could hide his physique and atmosphere.

No matter how much you imitate humans and lower their status, where will their essence go?

'There are about 19 people watching... 11 of them are hunters. There are about 4 people who are on guard and preparing for any situation. There's 1 C-class, 2 B-class, and 1 A-class.'

Istua is a unique restaurant that utilizes the remains of a past dungeon, and most ordinary people who have not awakened at all tend to avoid entering. The hurdles are too high to come here just to enjoy a meal.

The price is the price, but more than anything, it's an out because it's a place where a lot of people died in the past.

'There were many people who said that eating in a place like this would give them nightmares.'

Since it was a daily routine for hunters to see people die, more than 70% of Istua's customers were hunters.

But even among them, people's reactions are divided.

'Because the influence of the remnants still remains.'

The building of Estua caused hallucinations, auditory hallucinations, and even schizophrenia in severe cases.

It's probably not easy to get to that point without causing a ruckus in the restaurant, but there were many customers who couldn't stand the subtle pressure emanating from the building itself.

“…….”

Geo you bastard.

'If you're going to imitate a human, you might as well do it right.'

If you were to enjoy the restaurant so casually, it would naturally attract the attention of the customers. In a space that seemed increasingly strange the more you looked, you were openly showing off your inhumanity.

'…furthermore….'

Even without that creepy vibe or behavior, Geo had a noble side.

'It looks really noble, so it seems to fit better in a French restaurant like this.'

Should I say it was elegant or overbearing? It wasn't really his intention, and he was actually trying to lower himself, but there was an air of elegance that came out of every action he took.

'Before, I didn't really notice it because I only talked to them in portrait form, but now that I'm outside, the atmosphere is definitely more refined. There's also a strong sense of neatness, like priests in a temple.'

Do you really think that the word 'ordinary person' is suitable when you have this kind of atmosphere?

‘There aren’t many people like this among humans…’

Although Geo had a high level of respect and understanding for humans, he still showed some shortcomings here and there. Judging from the lack of detail, it seemed that he was not human after all.

“…….”

Of course, Geo had no idea.

'It's been a long time since I've been to a restaurant like this.'

As Giovanni, I thought about it for a moment.

In fact, all the dignity and attitude he had shown up until now came from 'Giovanni', who was a nobleman, a doctor, and a priest. He just wasn't aware of the habits and atmosphere that came out naturally.

“It’s bread before a meal.”

"thank you."

Geo's heart pounded.

'It's bread.'

It had been a long time since I had seen a lump of flour, and I couldn't be happier. It made me feel even better as I remembered the meals I had shared with my disciples when I was living as Giovanni.

It seemed like Yoo Seong-un had guessed Geo's feelings as well.

"Do you like bread?"

"Don't worry, I don't eat anything and I'm not a picky eater."

"You really like to eat…."

"Yes."

Geo tore off a small piece of bread and placed it on his plate.

'It's small and round.'

Then, instead of eating it all at once, he broke it into pieces and ate it little by little. Yoo Seong-un stared at Giovanni's actions.

"……."

Yoo Seong-un was secretly convinced.

'Nobility... or perhaps a similar class.'

Let's look at the manners with which each and every bite is eaten.

'It wasn't particularly noticeable in the restaurant. Was it because of its connection to France? Or maybe it was just something related to Western food, separate from that… .'

Geo continued his meal, leaving Yoo Seong-un in his thoughts.

“The bread is delicious.”

“Really? It does smell good, after all.”

“It’s light and savory.”

The surface of the bread was dry to the point where it seemed to be dry, but it wasn't hard or chewy like a bad crust of bread.

The crust was crispy like a layer of pastry, and inside was a fluffy, steamy interior.

'It definitely doesn't feel like toast or morning bread, and if I had to guess the closest thing to it, it would be ciabatta. But even for something like that, it's incredibly soft and different from what I know... .'

I could feel the soft, chewy texture between the fluffy, textured meringue.

There was a chewy taste with variations such as crispy skin, soft and fluffy texture, and chewy texture that seeps into the mouth.

The bread itself had a simple and savory flavor that brought out the natural aroma of the grains, and the subtle woody aroma from the oven was also excellent.

'Not excessive and overall harmonious.'

I want to kidnap the person who created it.

“This oil smells good too.”

“Oh, right? It’s called a mixture of olive and mushroom oil.”

“Olives and mushrooms?”

“Both are improved versions of the dungeon variety. Perhaps this one will suit your taste better.”

“I like it because it’s definitely a unique attempt. I think it’s good.”

Usually, the oil used to dip bread in this way before a meal is often paired with balsamic.

Balsamic vinegar, which can be called sticky grape vinegar, had an excellent sour and rich flavor, but strangely, this oil contained salt instead.

'It feels like I'm eating raw fish.'

Geo suddenly thought of the blue-haired mermaid. She was a proud and sensitive child.

‘… Aria hated strong flavors so she liked to dip her bread in oil without vinegar, but I didn’t think it would have been okay to add salt like this…’

In fact, salt was expensive back then, so it was difficult to stock up on it. Even if you lived in a seaside town, salt was a precious food item.

“…….”

It definitely looks like raw fish.

A bread that is chewy while still retaining the texture of the flesh. Just like eating tuna belly with dense fat dipped in oil, the bread with a lively feel also gave that feeling.

'... Since the oil and salt are added together, the fragrance is amplified and the sweetness of the grains is more prominent. It's definitely an attempt that goes well with the texture of freshly baked bread.'

While I was slowly eating the bread, the second course came out.

“Onion soup with three kinds of cheese.”

Unlike most people's creamy soups, this is a brown, transparent soup made solely based on the sweetness and savory flavor of onions.

“…….”

The deep yellow and orange cheese, spread so widely that you couldn't see inside, had melted to just the right color.

Geo slurped the soup gently.

'The cheese isn't that thick.'

Unlike the crispy outer layer of the cheese, the inside was soft and tender. Perhaps because it was in contact with the onion soup, it had the rich, savory flavor of well-fried onions.

'The texture of the onion is still intact. Even though it's cooked so well that you can mash it with your tongue, the original shape of the onion is still visible, so it must have been made very meticulously. It must have taken quite a while.'

Cheese on top of onion soup. It was a natural combination, but Geo didn't like the thick cheese on top. Personally, I didn't like the cheese that became rubbery when the soup and bowl cooled.

'Some might say that it's like a soup or meat, or that it adds a rich texture... but that's not me. I want to eat soup.'

But the bowl of this soup stayed warm, and the cheese was not too thin, but not too thick either, making it easy to scoop up. Thanks to this, the natural flavor of the onion seemed to stand out even more.

“…….”

"good?"

“It feels good, my body is getting warmer.”

“Onion soup definitely has a bit of a nutritious feel to it.”

“I think similarly.”

The process of frying hard, white onions until they turn a deep caramel color. This process is the most important part of onion soup, but if you burn the onions or fry them too little, you will end up drinking bland onion soup instead of flavorful soup.

But this soup, which squeezed every last drop of the sweetness and savory flavor of the onion, could be called a tonic. No amount of effort and time would be able to bring out all the flavor of the onion to this extent.

'hijacking.'

Let's kidnap the chef.

“Cheese Flower Salad with Amra Puree.”

Soon after, Geo naturally turned to look at Yoo Seong-un at the new dish and unfamiliar words.

A beautiful salad with flower-shaped cheese slices topped with a light yellow sauce and surrounded by neatly trimmed flower petals.

“…….”

“…….”

An explanation was needed.

“…….”

“Ah… I wonder what the ingredients are?”

“If you don’t mind, may I ask what Amra is?”

“It’s one of the representative fruits that was successfully bred by bringing it from the dungeon. Do you know about avocados?”

“I know.”

“It has a similarly soft flesh, but it has a strong, nutty flavor. The flesh contains a tremendous amount of oil, and that oil doesn’t burn even at high temperatures, so I know it’s often used in Chinese cuisine.”

“Then the flesh itself….”

“Yes, this is my first time seeing a place that uses amra as puree. They even had a fruit salad last season. The menu at Estua changes every four months, so it’s fun to look around.”

"okay."

The fruit, called amra, was pale yellow, lighter than a chick.

‘…It has a similar level of richness to peanuts or walnuts.’

It didn't immediately remind me of nuts. Strictly speaking, it was more like the nutty and sweet taste you get when you chew rice for a long time.

Then, at the end, a sweetness as thick as honey and a sourness unique to fruit hit, giving a variation in taste.

‘It’s definitely oily. It’s like the marbling of beef… .’

This sweet oiliness, reminiscent of a skeleton, went very well with the refreshingly spread out flower petals. Geo's gaze naturally fell on the cheese flower, which had a shape similar to an azalea.

“…….”

Let's slightly cut open the cheese flower and see that it is a 'flower' that has grown like this from the beginning.

“…Cheese flower….”

“Are you interested? Should I get you some seedlings later?”

“Please.”

“Okay, then. I’ll buy it for you on my way back from the trip.”

"thank you."

A flower that grows from cheese. It was a story that brought out all the childlike innocence in us and made us excited. It was like something out of a fairy tale book we read as children.

'It's quite an attractive flower when you think about the cumbersome process that humans go through to make cheese.'

What is cheese in the first place? Isn't it a symbol of the effort required to obtain a small amount by rolling and rolling milk?

I couldn't help but be surprised to see such a processed product come out as a flower. The petals were thin and beautiful, like a work of art.

‘What’s the principle? The taste itself seems similar to Tet de Muan…
.’

A semi-hard cheese that maintains its shape but crumbles when hit lightly. It has the softness and richness unique to milk, while boasting a strong nutty flavor and a tangy spicy taste.

The cheese flower had a slightly stronger spiciness on the tip of the tongue, but it wasn't unpleasant. It was just enough to remind me of the oily taste of the amra puree and the greasiness of the cheese.

'Harmony is an art, but is the chef an intangible cultural asset?'

Above all, the cheese flower, which was twice as sweet and rich as the Tet de Muan, also had a honey flavor. It was a soft sweetness like the kind you can eat when you turn over an azalea flower and suck on it.

It went so freaking well with this flower salad that Geo was excited to go back to the cabin and plant it.

“You look really happy.”

"yes."

What an obvious statement.

“Humans are originally happiest when they eat.”

“Uh… really?”

“Well, that’s me for now.”

It's been like this since I started eating potatoes that my grandmother baked in the stove. I couldn't get away from this extremely peripheral pleasure.

Then came the fantastic course: truffle-flavored gratin and French fries topped with a hint of cheese. Slow-cooked at low temperatures, wood-scented scallions and crispy garlic chips.

Even though French cuisine is famous for being oily, it was a course with exquisite harmony that I never got tired of.

“Was it okay?”

“It wasn’t just okay, it was really good.”

“I’m glad you look happy….”

If you're going to imitate a human, why not at least pretend to care about your surroundings?

‘Humans are more social creatures than you think… .’

Yoo Seong-woon, who had to bear the brunt of the attention on Geo asking, “What on earth is that?” smiled bitterly.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (31)

Episode 31

“Then shall we go to Gyeongbokgung Palace now?”

“…….”

It's Gyeongbokgung Palace.

'I've taken my class on experiential learning trips a few times. The kids hated it because it was boring, though...'

Geo asked, recalling the bustling times.

“You said there was a night market?”

“That’s right, there’s no better place to feel the Korean atmosphere.”

“It sounds fun.”

“Do you want to go and try on a hanbok?”

“Hanbok….”

Memories from not so long ago came flooding back.

I've never really been there unless the school sent me there, but it was still fun to dress the kids in hanbok and take pictures at Gyeongbokgung Palace.

'Especially, the last class I was in charge of showed the palace struggle in real time.'

Geo was lost in memories. The bloody battle between the Queen Mother and the eunuch was the best.

Thanks to being in charge of cute and noisy students, Geo has many good memories of Gyeongbokgung Palace. Although he has never tried wearing a hanbok because he had to lead them, he did not dislike the experience of wearing it.

"great."

"okay?"

Yoo Seong-un sighed in relief at the sight of Geo.

'I thought that since it was essentially a portrait, it might be unpleasant to change the outfit.'

Fortunately, Geo seemed to have no great aversion to trying new experiences.

“Okay, I know a good house.”

“Are you talking about renting a hanbok?”

“There aren’t many people there, so it’ll be okay to go slowly.”

“I'm looking forward to it.”

“Then let’s get on the subway. We’ll be arriving at the stop soon.”

“Is there a set time for arrival?”

“It’s not a very frequent means of transportation….”

Yoo Seong-un, who was leading Geo to the bus stop, was lost in a strange sentiment.

'I thought he was imitating Korean culture when he introduced himself as Geo, but wasn't it Korea that he was imitating?'

The table manners that Geo showed at the restaurant were too vague to be considered Korean.

No matter how I looked at it, it was closer to Western style, but it was a unique thing when I thought back to Geo's remarks, who seemed to know a lot about Korea.

"…hmm."

But now it didn't matter.

“How was the restaurant?”

“It was delicious.”

“It’s a reaction that makes the guide feel proud.”

When the level was so high, it was hard to tell what kind of expression Geo was making on his face, but now he could tell that he was enjoying the situation in his own way.

'Thanks to you, the guidance went smoothly.'

Yoo Seong-un continued his thoughts.

'He's acting quite human, so as long as the other hunters don't pick a fight with him, there shouldn't be any problems. According to the Bisabal Guild Leader, Geo is the type to avoid friction as much as possible...'

Geo expressed his feelings.

“The subway is going through the building.”

“Wouldn’t it be easier to get to work that way? It would be easier if you could just drop me off inside the building.”

“That’s true.”

“If you go two more stops, you will reach a stop that goes through the department store.”

“Are there any noise problems?”

“Well, it’s been soundproofed. The Ministry of Magic knows exactly what it is, but….”

Seeing him enjoying everything he was guided through, it seemed like Geo liked the world of these humans.

'If a man who is close to 190cm were to do something like that, he would probably look immature.'

Things like the line of the neck when the head is turned or the fingers gently touching the window, strangely enough, did not seem difficult.

Although he was quite happy, he felt more like a pitiful bystander than a child's genuine admiration.

'Is it because the atmosphere is so heavy?'

Instead of smiling from an equal footing, he put his hands behind his back and looked down somewhere… .

“Are you getting off soon?”

“Oh, right.”

Yoo Seong-un got off at Gyeongbokgung Station with Geo. He pointed down the station and said.

“This is Gyeongbokgung Palace.”

One of the advantages of the subway was that it offered a clear view of the city.

The lanterns floating at a not-too-high altitude swayed as if they were alive, and beneath them were Gyeongbokgung Palace and a Hanok village.

Perhaps because it uses fire rather than electricity to illuminate the night, the entire place was filled with a gentle light.

People who stopped by after work or came for sightseeing bought food at the night markets lined up inside and outside Gyeongbokgung Palace. Hanbok costumes worn according to their desired role fluttered in the winter wind.

Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth after waiting until Geo had taken in the entire view.

“If you come to Seoul, you must visit Gyeongbokgung Palace. It’s a world-class tourist attraction.”

“…….”

“Why? Is it crowded because there are too many people?”

“No, I just didn’t think the atmosphere would be this good.”

“I’m glad you don’t seem to hate it. Then let’s enjoy it too.”

Yoo Seong-un took the direct elevator down and led Geo to the Hanok Village. In every narrow alley, people wearing and not wearing Hanbok were loitering around.

All of the winter hanbok that rental shops rent are insulated. That's probably why people's clothing isn't that thick even in the middle of winter.

“Come here, let’s change clothes first.”

“Are you going to a place that rents hanbok?”

“Yes, to enjoy it properly, you need to prepare this and that.”

Gyeongbokgung Village is a place where hanoks are tangled here and there, and beginners are likely to get lost, but since I had been there several times before, it was easy to find. This tourist attraction with many ‘stories’ was full of things for Yoo Seong-un to do.

‘… Are you a bit excited today? It doesn’t seem like you’ll cause an accident, but you’re a bit more energetic than usual… .’

I noticed 'stories' of people pretending to clear snow from the roof of a Hanok or imitating scholars or court ladies while wearing Hanbok.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un, who had confirmed that it was wearing a wooden mask, turned his gaze. Although they usually didn’t attack first, the ones at Gyeongbokgung Palace were ones that wouldn’t benefit from long-term eye contact.

A yard full of silks and softly colored lanterns hanging from the eaves. Yoo Seong-un dragged Geo, who was silently admiring the surroundings, inside the Hanok.

"president."

“Oh my, it’s Seong-un.”

A middle-aged woman dressed in a flower-dyed hanbok greeted him.

“It’s been a while. Are you treating me as a guest again?”

“I have to be more careful since they are company guests.”

“Then our hanbok is perfect.”

The woman looked back at Geo with an elegant smile.

“Are you a guest?”

“I’ll be going around the night market more than playing, so please choose comfortable clothes.”

“Why, you don’t enjoy playing. You’re having a lot of fun this time.”

“I feel really exhausted after walking around all day.”

“Then I should dress you up like a scholar, right? If the clothes are too thick or heavy, it will be uncomfortable, so let’s wear light scholar’s clothes.”

“That would be nice.”

Yoo Seong-un said to Geo.

“What do you want to do about your face? Do you want to keep it covered, or…?”

“I wish it was covered.”

Please ensure the anonymity of the portrait.

Geo was more nervous than expected because of the large crowd. Always wanting to stay away from people's attention, Geo wanted to cover his face to block people's gaze.

Although he didn’t know why he was so timid, Yoo Seong-un guessed that Geo wouldn’t like noisy and crowded situations. He understood and asked the president.

“Do you have a mask?”

“Can you give me enough?”

“Would that be easier? Yes, please.”

“Then let’s start by choosing clothes.”

The president looked at Geo and asked.

“Can you take off your cloak? It’s okay to keep wearing it later, but I need to look at your body type when choosing a hanbok.”

"All right."

Geo took off his cloak obediently and put it on his arm. After listening attentively, Geo looked at the boss with satisfaction.

“…….”

“…….”

"…president."

Yoo Seong-un called the president who had become a stone statue.

“The customer will run away if this continues.”

“…Oh my, I made a fool of myself.”

Only then did the boss react.

“The customer was so handsome that it took my breath away for a moment.”

“Don’t say weird things to my guests.”

“The hanger is nice, so it’s nice to pick out such a handsome customer. Just wait a moment.”

Soon, the owner came out with two young women pushing two types of hangers with hanbok on them. One side had hanbok in a cool blue hue, while the other side had mostly neutral colors.

“Both are silks spun by our own silkworms. They are shiny and do not irritate the skin.”

“Blue is mine, right? Isn’t it a rough, cold color to wear in the winter?”

“I just brought the clothes that best suit you. Who else but Seong-un would wear colors like these in the winter?”

“I don’t know if I’m being taken advantage of….”

“While you’re out and about wearing it, if you could promote it a bit, that would be great. Anyway, hunters love hangers, right?”

The president looked back at Geo.

“You must be a hunter, seeing as you’re wearing thin clothes in this winter. Don’t worry, our hanbok is made to be strong and light enough for hunters to move around in without any problems.”

“I wasn’t worried.”

To begin with, Geo wasn't even a hunter.

'Is it strange to say no now?'

The boss laughed, swinging his fan.

“Hunters don’t like bulky clothes, so I guess you’re worried about them. Judging from the unfamiliar face, you must be an unofficial person or have only recently obtained your license.”

“…….”

“If you don’t want to talk, you don’t have to. Judging from the fact that you’re going to keep your face covered, it seems like you really hate having your personal information exposed, so I’ll hide it very stylishly.”

Your identity has been revealed?

'Is it common for hunters to have their personal information stolen?'

Is there such a scary world out there?

Deciding to ask Mr. Yoo Seong-un later, Geo wore the black hanbok recommended by the boss, with his hair tied up with a stylish hairpin. He wore a black turban and a gray do-po. The waist belt was a clean white.

“If you’re going to Gyeongbokgung Palace, you should wear a hat. Yes, it goes well with you. It would look great even if you put on a bunch of norigae. This one is made of coral. Let’s put one on.”

"thank you."

“This is a scarf. Oh my, the white color goes so well with it. It’s pretty because your skin is so clean. This is a pouch to put coins in. Make sure you tie it well so it doesn’t fall out.”

“…….”

“Okay, and you.”

Geo was a little taken aback by the puffy, black fabric. He knew what a shawl was, but he had never used one before.

“…How do I wear this?”

“I need to help you. Mr. Danwoo, please cover our handsome guest with a veil.”

“Yes, sir.”

A young woman wearing a pink ribbon approached and wrapped a black cloth around Geo's hat. Strangely, he was able to see clearly in front of him, as if nothing was obscuring him.

“You said you’ll be going around mostly to night markets. So you’ll be eating out often, but it’ll be uncomfortable to cover your mouth with a mask. For people who don’t want to reveal their identities, a long scarf like this is perfect.”

“…….”

“The guests might not be able to tell who they are because of the atmosphere, but the clothes are so flashy and there are so many things hanging on them, so who would look at their faces in such detail?”

"okay."

“The scarf is so thick that it almost covers the lower part of your body, so this covers everything you need to cover. Enjoy your time in our village in peace, sir.”

On one side, Yoo Seong-un, dressed in a blue hanbok, asked the president.

“We’re thinking of buying some too.”

“Oh my, this is really good. Which back do you like?”

“I haven’t really thought about anything. What’s selling the best these days?”

“Well, young ladies do like the moon and such.”

“Uh… what about men? We’re not ladies.”

“Do you know that it’s common for two guys to come over and play like you, Seong-un?”

The president, who had been thinking for a moment, soon called over a man with a ponytail.

“Mr. Hongyeon, can you bring me a water tank?”

“Yes, sir.”

The woman called Hongyeon soon pushed a large glass box. Inside, several lanterns made of Korean paper were moving as if alive, bathed in light. The owner scooped up two small fish from among them.

It was flapping around so gently that it looked like a real fish.

“How about a goldfish? They’re small and gentle, so they wouldn’t be difficult to carry around.”

“That’s fine.”

Geo experienced culture shock.

'Is the back alive?'

When Yoo Seong-un said 'light', I thought of a sky lantern that you can hold in your hand or a hanging lantern.

However, the goldfish that Yoo Seong-un had purchased flew through the air, and soon one of them landed next to Geo's face.

“…….”

The back of the tail wagging did not hurt my eyes even when I looked at it directly.

“Then play carefully.”

The president waved his hand and saw them off.

As we left the yard where silk was hung here and there, we were able to stand on the bustling village road again. Yoo Seong-un called out to Geo, who was looking around the village with interest.

“How is it? Isn’t it uncomfortable?”

“It’s very comfortable.”

“If you want to look around the village before entering Gyeongbokgung Palace, then let’s do that.”

“The village?”

“The village market closes earlier than Gyeongbokgung Palace. When you come out of the night market, the village lights will probably be turned off.”

“Then can I take a walk around the village?”

"of course."

Yoo Seong-un took Geo, who seemed unfamiliar with this environment, to a fan shop.

“……?”

Geo blinked twice at the sight of a group of figures wearing crude wooden masks, standing blankly next to the store. Their actions were not stiff, but uniform, like machines receiving commands.

It didn't look like a person. As Geo tilted his head, unable to tell who it was, Yoo Seong-un spoke to the store owner.

“Boss, show me this fan.”

“Oh my, what wonderful gentlemen have come. What shall I show them?”

“I wish he was a solid guy….”

“Then this is the best.”

Geo turned his gaze away from the crowd of masks milling about, then looked around the village market with curiosity.

'All the merchants are wearing hanbok.'

Traditional hanbok, or modified hanbok. Or, there were merchants who wore modern hanbok on the inside but only wore a durumagi on the outside. They mainly dealt with tourists walking around in hanbok and played along to the rhythm.

Yoo Seong-un soon gave Geo a black fan as a gift.

“Here, take this. Since it’s a scholar’s outfit, you should have at least a fan.”

“…Is it essential for a scholar to have a fan?”

“Maybe so, maybe not. It’s just a meaningless souvenir.”

“Souvenirs from tourist attractions are special.”

The fan made of black bamboo and cloth was quite luxurious. I was worried that if even the fan was black, it would look too much like the grim reaper, but Geo, who liked black anyway, accepted it obediently.

“Most of Gyeongbokgung Village sells souvenirs. Or food. They sell meat in chunks or agricultural and marine products grown on site. They are much fresher than products distributed from the provinces, so many people visit these stores on purpose.”

Geo nodded.

“The atmosphere is really good.”

"yes?"

After wandering around the town for a while, the two soon entered Gyeongbokgung Palace.

“Wait a minute, I have to go and change some money.”

"money?"

“The boss gave you a coin wallet. It’s a basic service that they give you to keep coins in. Since you can only use coins inside Gyeongbokgung Palace, it’s better to keep enough change.”

“What if there is leftover?”

“You can take it as a souvenir, or you can return it at the exchange.”

The meteor cloud soon came with a thick layer of armor.

“They say it’s a coin that was intentionally made lighter, but it’s still a bit heavy.”

“Don’t people find this method cumbersome?”

“Well? If you look for it, there are probably people like that, but that’s the kind of atmosphere they come to enjoy. The Gyeongbokgung Palace merchants also like it when they receive money in coins, because they can get more than the listed price.”

“How can I get more?”

“The government should support merchants.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled faintly.

“Then I will use the coins more actively.”

"okay."

“Here, take this. This is your identity card.”

“……?”

Do you have a pad?

I can understand that coins are used as currency, but what purpose would an identity card serve? When Geo saw the meteor cloud, he shrugged.

“Free pass.”

"aha."

It was very good.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (32)

Episode 32 Geo inhaling the food at the night market. “…….” “Do you have any questions?” “No, you eat well.” “Yes, that’s right.” Geo was a big eater. “Aren’t you full?” “I’m already a big eater, so it’s fine.” “It’s amazing.” “If it didn’t taste good, I would have done it in moderation, but it was all delicious.” “Of course, people come only if it’s delicious.” It’s true, but if all the restaurants and food were delicious, no store would have failed. ‘Anyway, the tourist attractions have become quite substantial in 31 years. When I visited with my classmates, we almost walked into history. It took a lot of effort to appease the bored kids.’ Geo roughly removed his clothes and chewed on rice cakes grilled over charcoal and coated with soy sauce. This was Korean tang-hoo-ru. ‘Gyeongbokgung Palace used to be a typical cultural heritage… It had that kind of old-fashioned feel.’ It was a place with many memories, but what made those memories was not Gyeongbokgung Palace itself, but the communication with the students who were wandering around in search of their own identity while wearing hanbok. 'I wonder what happened to our idol trainee who said he was the king of Joseon in his past life because he was crying for no reason. I wonder if everyone is doing well.' If it weren't for the students who were faithful to their nonsense like high school students who couldn't live in their right minds, Geo wouldn't have enjoyed Gyeongbokgung Palace that much. The hanoks are beautiful and old-fashioned, but there were a few students who protested when they had to come here, especially in the summer. 'But Gyeongbokgung Palace has become more practical now. There's definitely a lot to enjoy.' The people wearing hanbok enjoyed role-playing, and often exchanged the kind of lanterns they bought with others. They all looked happy. "....." If there was one thing I was curious about. 'What's that?' I saw something like a transparent shadow waving around in hanbok. 'It was like that in the fan shop, and in the alleys of the hanok village... I saw similar things walking around.' There may be exceptions, but all of the ones Geo saw were wearing masks. A bunch of shadows that looked like shaggy corpses swaying on ropes with lanterns, a bunch of children with ponytails jumping around and passing through the crowd, a bunch of civil servants coming and going from the palace with restricted access… "… Mr. Yoo Seong-woon." "Huh?" "What are they called?" "What are they… Ah." Yoo Seong-woon said as if he thought Geo would know. "Fairy tales, living stories. Is this the first time you've seen them in a place like this?" "……." "They usually like places without people, so it's rare to see them in a noisy tourist spot like this. But they're one of the proper children of Geonwon." He'd heard that before. "You told me something similar last time." "What? Are you talking about Geonwon's children?" "Yes, can you explain a little more?" "… Oh, is that so?" Yoo Seong-woon scratched the back of his neck and continued. "I think I said something vague when I explained the gardener last time… but it was a bit vague back then. It's hard to summarize, but I'll explain it to you." "……." "There is a transcendent being that we humans define as the 'source', the god of gods. It is a kind of system that manages balance and creates various rules throughout the universe and dimensions." "A system." "And this source usually creates other children. They are called 'children of the source'. They are beings that can be categorized as one nature, like waves or wind, or animals and humans." "……." "These children of the source can be categorized into several types…" Yoo Seong-un pointed to the figures of civil servants moving inside the palace. Their faces were hidden by large hats and veils, and their sleeves were strangely long, making it impossible to identify any part of their bodies. Their movements as they moved in groups had a sharp and attractive angle that drew attention, as if they were watching a military dance, but because of that, they didn't seem like living beings. It was as if shadows were wearing clothes and imitating people. "Those guys are called 'Donghwa'." "What kind of beings are they?" "Like most children of the origin, they are not interested in humans and do not harm them. 'Donghwa' are living stories and at the same time, they are beings that resemble humans in form." "Then aren't their minds close to humans?" "They don't really think like humans, they simply imitate traces. Children of the origin are good at decorating their appearances. It's not like they learned it later, it's just their inherent nature." Yoo Seong-woon took a sip of persimmon juice and continued. "Donghwas, no matter what kind, all wear masks, but they don't have faces on the other side. They don't have human bodies or the ability to think like humans, they just imitate their appearances." "……." "Just because you draw someone doesn't mean that the drawing becomes an actual human. Oh, of course, I don't know about you, but… Usually, there's a limit to the dimensions." "I understand." A portrait like mine wouldn't be common in the world. When Geo agreed, Yoo Seong-woon continued. "They have their own stories, and when those stories are over, they disappear. Gyeongbokgung Palace is a place with many people, but strangely enough, it's a place where many fairy tales like that live." Geo, who was observing the people, asked. "Don't people see those children of the origin?" "Not many people do." Yoo Seong-woon nodded. "Ordinary people can't detect the frequencies that dolphins or bats use. It's similar. The children of the origin exist in the world, but not many people can detect them. It's not like they're hiding." "Ghosts?" "Uh… You could see them as similar, but the fact that they don't understand humans at all is a bit different. No matter how much they look like humans, they're empty inside. Their roots are different." He said as if something had occurred to him. "Ah, that's right. In the past, no one could see the children of the origin. They say that because the Earth was greatly influenced by the origin, dungeons were created… and the Awakened were born… and the ecosystem itself changed, they were able to see them." It was a mysterious story, like a fairy tale. “As you can see, I am one of the few people who can perceive the origin.” “I guess so.” “Hmm, I guess so.” Although he tried to hide it, Yoo Seong-un looked a little awkward. It was probably because he thought of me as something other than a human. ‘Anyway, Yoo Seong-un will know that I am a harmless being that cannot kill even an ant, whether I am human or not, so it doesn’t matter.’ Fearing that he would be dragged out of the portrait, Geo did not bother to correct him, and instead looked back at the view of Gyeongbokgung Palace. ‘The Earth and humanity have become stronger.’ He had definitely been eliminated. Geo, who only knows how to eat, sleep, and draw, lost confidence in his ability to survive in this harsh world. “How many people can see the existence of the origin?” “Are you asking about the percentage of all humans? Well, not many.” “I see.” If something is special, it’s bound to get hurt. Geo once again vows to dedicate his life to portraits. “…….” Geo, who was sitting blankly on the bench, soon noticed a small commotion. “I hear the sound of a fight.” “That’s rare, in a tourist spot like this.” Yoo Seong-un, who was leaning against his chair, leaned forward. “The security guards will arrest him soon, but…” As expected, the guards wearing thick hanbok caught the man who was yelling. It was a middle-aged man, but he was making a fuss about rushing at a rather handsome man wearing a scholar’s uniform. The scholar, who had been grabbed by the collar, looked embarrassed as he straightened his shirt. “…….” He was definitely a young man with a kind face, but… Let’s make a frame and determine the safety level (0/1) Reward: Seal Geo had a hunch. “Geo?” “…….” A frame. Geo raised both hands, made them into the shape of a camera, and held them up to his eyes. Danger ★★★★★ Five stars. 'Very dangerous?' It seemed like the guards had caught the wrong person to drag out. Would you like to check the history? [Yes/No] Do I really need to do that? “…….” The eyes of the young man in the scholar’s uniform met Geo’s. ‘I was staring at you too intently.’ Yoo Seong-woon seemed to find Geo’s sudden behavior strange, but he didn’t say anything. The scholar looked Geo up and down with his eyes as if he was checking him out, then nodded and walked away. His expression seemed to indicate that he thought he had picked a fight. “Knock knock.” “Oh, surprise.” Yoo Seong-woon was startled by Honey’s sudden appearance. “…Huh? A water bird? Wait a minute, Geo, you showed me this guy last time…” “It’s Honey.” “You can take this guy out?” “I’ve never tried with other birds, so I’m not sure.” “Um, yeah, uh… I see.” Yoo Seong-woon had a somewhat liberated expression. “It’s almost time for the Earth to end.” “It seems to be holding up well, so I don’t know why you’re suddenly saying such nonsense.” “It was clear that it was a sand castle that would collapse if I hit it lightly...” Yoo Seong-un, who had been smiling with a resigned face, soon returned to his usual expression and asked. “So, why is that guy? Are you concerned?” “He looked dangerous.” “… Really?” “It seemed like he didn’t like me.” A scary person. “I didn’t want to pick a fight.” I had momentarily forgotten that if you make eye contact for more than 3 seconds, you have to choose between ‘Does that guy like me?’ or ‘Does that guy want to fight me?’. ‘I should have spoken politely and kindly before the 3 seconds passed, but his resume was too impressive, so I missed the timing to act friendly. Sergio, who was called the 21st century’s Pokémon trainer, must have lost all his intuition.’ They say that if you make eye contact, it’s a battle. Whether it’s for good or bad. ‘I think that guy just interpreted it in a bad way.’ In this tough era where businessmen in suits fight monsters, what would you do if you picked on a five-star danger lord? 'No, shouldn't the danger level of a passerby be this high?' Geo said sincerely, resenting this crazy hellish Republic of Korea. "It's scary." "Even if you say it's scary, it's hard to take it seriously... Are you being sarcastic?" "We should go back to the hotel." "If that's what you want." Geo left Gyeongbokgung Palace after gently putting Honey, who was trying to peek out from between his scarf, inside. He must have liked the shiny fish, because he had already put it in his stomach. And then he passed out on the hotel bed and woke up at 3:32 in the morning. "....." Geo confirmed that Honey was gone. "Please." Can't you just leave me in peace? I might cry. * * * "....." A dark, deserted alley in a slum. "...So what the hell was that bastard earlier?" Now, the man who had taken off his scholar's uniform roughly ran his hand through his hair. "It felt strange." It was a man wearing a pitch-black hanbok. He was wrapped so tightly that his face could not be seen. He seemed to be about 190cm tall, but it was difficult to guess who he was based on his gender and height alone. "It feels weird." If it had been normal, I would have just passed him by as some weird kid picking a fight. But. "At that time, what was that hand gesture..." His hand gesture seemed to imitate something like a picture frame. For a moment, it felt like every single part of his identity was being revealed. "……." The man scratched his head. "…This won't work, damn it, this is strange. That kid must have been an awakened one, right?" The person sitting next to him was Hunter Yoo Seong-un. The curator of Bisabal was standing next to him, personally guiding him, so he must have been a rich young master who had recently awakened. "Because he had an unlucky manner ingrained in him." But it was difficult. 'If what I'm planning gets known...' He wouldn't simply be demoted to a 5th-grade citizen. There were more Awakened people than you could imagine who possessed the skill to freely check someone's thoughts or memories, or to glimpse into that person's past. It's not that rare of a skill, but everyone else is worried about getting stabbed somewhere, so they don't talk about it. So the pitch-black man I saw at the Gyeongbokgung night market might have used that kind of skill to spy on his thoughts. Considering that sudden hand gesture, it was a very reasonable conclusion. "...." Hoo... I sighed. "The event will start soon, what the hell is going on?" If I thought about the consequences, I couldn't let this go. That's how dangerous what he was doing right now was, and it was a betrayal of humanity. I've never felt any guilt, but I couldn't help but get caught and get in trouble. No matter how much I thought about it, it was still the same. "I have to kill him." How much time and effort had he put into securing a spot in the Temple of the Sun? Now, I couldn't just ignore the risk factor because it left a bad aftertaste. It was when I had made up my mind to trace the traces of the man I saw at Gyeongbokgung Palace. “…….” “…….” “…What is it?” A squishy bird was sitting on a pipe. Inside, fish and other tourist attractions were swimming, making it quite bright. It was so dark that I wondered why I only noticed it now in this dark alley. “…….” It was strange. ‘…This is the first time I’ve seen a city monster like this.’ Furthermore, monsters that took the form of birds in general, especially small ones like this, usually traveled in groups. That’s because all beasts or monsters that traveled alone were capable of defending themselves. So how likely was it that this insignificant-looking bird was an ordinary monster? “…This, damn it, no way….” Was it a surveillance monster attached by the bastard I saw at Gyeongbokgung Palace? ‘It was a trainer?’ I didn’t know it was a professional hunter. Somehow, that sinister bastard Yoo Seong-un treated it so kindly. Does that mean it was an Awakened who was worth it? The man gripped his staff tightly. “…Well, is it okay?” After all, the owner of this bird seemed to be a rookie. Didn’t he sense his master’s scent from the bird? It seemed like he hadn’t thought that he would be caught when he sent the spy. The man forced a smile. “If you noticed something strange, you should have told Yoo Seong-un right away.” He didn’t feel threatened by this bird that was just blankly staring at him. It really seemed to be a surveillance camera, and if that was the case, it would be easier to track it down. ‘You weren’t sure enough to tell Yoo Seong-un?’ Not reporting your suspicions to your superiors in advance. It was a mistake that rookie hunters often made. ‘How stupid.’ He didn’t know exactly what this bird was, but he had to deal with it now. Thinking so, the man reached out and grabbed a bird that was barely big enough to fit a bite… . —Crack. “…….” “…….” “Huh?” The hand. Disappeared. “…….” His hand was visible inside the bird’s transparent body. The flailing fish back wrapped around his dismembered hand. Soon, the two of them slowly melted away. “… Ah.” “Kkuck.” “Fuck.” The man was not incompetent. “Guruk?” “This, this fucking shit…” “Gurururururuk?” “…That’s ridiculous.” “Gurukguruk.”

As a priest of the sun and a rank that was by no means easy, he was in a position where he could be proud. However, all of this was a situation where things that could not have happened in common sense overlapped like a disaster rather than a miracle. It was not a difficulty that a single individual could do anything about. The small bird's body began to swell strangely. "Fuck, fuck, fuck." "Guruk?" Feathers that glittered with a light that was indistinguishable from the moon or the sun. Strong claws and long legs that resembled hooks. And, a large beak. "No…!" Gulp—. The sound of running water could be heard. "Uwuk, woof…!" And then the sound of stirring could be heard. "…! …!!!" "……." "……!!" "……." "……." Soon, silence flowed. "……." The man was nowhere to be seen. "Kuruk." Only a very small bird was flying leisurely. * * * "Honey." Geo liked small and harmless things. However, the children of Geunwon were good at making things up. "Where have you been?" "Kuruk." "It's cute, that's enough." Then. What could its true nature be? "There's a bungeoppang over there." "Kuk!!" "You are my son after all." "Kururung?" "Tell me something delicious." Even the children of Geunwon themselves wouldn't know that.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (33)

Episode 33

I've seen strange things since I was a child.

“What? People?”

“Yeah, over there. Can’t you see it?”

“…What are you talking about, it’s just an empty lot.”

“…….”

“Have you seen any monsters?”

“It’s not a monster….”

It sometimes took on a human-like form.

“…Sorry, I think I misunderstood.”

“Are you sure it’s okay, oppa?”

“Is it because I’m not fully awake?”

Like a squirrel or a stray cat, its tail hangs long in the bushes, or it stands tall like a tree and emits a strange scent, or it seems to float leisurely high in the sky like a cloud… .

I knew it was something fundamentally different from any plant or animal I knew. At times it was quite similar, but at other times it was strangely crude.

“You might be overdoing it these days. Why don’t you take a break?”

“It’s still doable.”

Like most wild animals, they didn't acknowledge me.

“You should do it while you can.”

So Cha Eun-hyuk also pretended not to see it.

'Can't anyone else see it besides me?'

I've been thinking hard about their identity.

'... Are they ghosts? But if they were ghosts, they would usually look like people, but they definitely look like animals. Sometimes they only imitate parts like ears or tails. So are they hallucinations? They leave traces, so it's hard to call them hallucinations. Are they monsters? But monsters don't usually show indifference to people like that.'

They sometimes danced, sang, admired flowers, or floated on the water. Cha Eun-hyeok had a feeling that as long as he didn’t touch them, they wouldn’t harm him.

But very occasionally, dangerous guys do show up.

“There was a fire at home.”

“Somehow, the lady of that house has been forgetting things a lot lately….”

“The whole family burned to death in that house.”

The townspeople blamed a housewife with dementia for the fire. That may have been true, but Cha Eun-hyeok knew that there was something else at stake.

“…….”

That thing used to follow the lady of that house around carrying a bundle.

'Oh, I see.'

That must have killed the lady.

I don't know exactly what that did, but since then, Cha Eun-hyeok has realized that there could be dangerous guys among them.

Although I didn't sense any ill will towards them, their mere presence could be threatening to humans.

'I wonder if it's some kind of monster.'

Cha Eun-hyeok defined it like this.

“Brother, are you going to keep selling bungeoppang?”

“It sells pretty well.”

“What do city people say? In places like that, the discrimination between citizen classes is particularly severe….”

“Everyone is so friendly. I haven’t heard anyone say anything about being a third-class citizen yet.”

In fact, I didn't have the time or energy to worry about monsters or anything of the unknown.

“Of course, there are people who are paying attention, but it’s time for the youngest to have his initiation ceremony too.”

“…….”

“You have to buy a priest’s robe, pay for the dormitory, and give them some money to spend while living there.”

“…Why did he awaken as a priest?”

“I have two hunters at home, so it’s really nice and secure.”

His two younger brothers were both Awakened.

My younger sister was an F-rank, the lowest rank, so the only job she could do was as a porter. Not only was the pay not very good, but she also had to buy equipment that would increase her chances of survival when entering dungeons.

The youngest brother awakened as a 'priest', but it was a useless profession unless he made a contract with a god. However, it was said that it was nearly impossible to serve the god on his own, and that he could only receive grace with the help of the temple.

“But we were lucky. The youngest was called by the Sun Church in Seoul.”

“…….”

“Our youngest will soon become a second-class citizen. What’s the point of me taking a break when you’re working too? I have to save face as the eldest son.”

“Well, I’m an Awakened One… and I have better stamina than you, right?”

“Okay, I get it, so don’t worry and just rest.”

“…Should I go work with you? If the people in Seoul try to hack you, I can stop them….”

“I need someone to look after the youngest at home.”

I was short on money.

"don't worry."

So there is no time to worry about unknown guys.

'There's no danger if you don't keep it close anyway.'

Those guys probably had their own lives. Just as you don't get hurt by a poisonous toad on the side of the road if you don't touch it, those guys who were playing around on their own were harmless as long as you didn't cause trouble.

'It's not like I can't avoid them because I can't see them, and there's no way I'll get into trouble since they're all visible to me. It's okay, so it's okay.'

However, if there is a problem.

"……."

"……."

There comes a moment when avoidance is no longer enough.

I didn't know that it would be when I was trying to sell all the bungeoppang and close the store.

"……."

What should I do?

'I've been looking at bungeoppang all this time.'

The 'thing' that came at an unexpected time was a man wearing a pitch-black cloak.

He was very tall, and the clothes he was wearing were luxurious. However, because he was all black, he looked like a guest at a funeral. The air around him became heavy and dead, sending a chill down my spine.

It didn't feel like a grim reaper or something. It seemed like something much closer to nature than those soul-collecting beings with egos.

I could definitely tell it was 'it'.

“…….”

Should I bring this up or not?

'I've never seen anything good come from meddling with these guys.'

But I was afraid that if I ignored it, it would have its own set of consequences, even though it was so obvious.

'I miss the youngest.'

I tried to act calm, not wanting to provoke her, but cold sweat was running down my back.

Cha Eun-hyeok had guessed that these were some kind of monster. They were generally more docile than the ones he saw.

But sometimes, it was unsettling to see someone being harmed so carelessly and without any ill intentions.

‘… I just keep looking at the bungeoppang… .’

If I give this to you, will it disappear?

That was when.

“How much for one bag?”

“…….”

Speak?

'A monster?'

I was surprised, even though I didn't show it.

We have seen creatures in human form many times. They often imitate human life, but their actions are not only ineffective, but there has never been a single one that actually speaks.

'And you asked how much it was?'

Are you really trying to imitate a human being to this extent?

"ah…."

But I couldn't ignore the question.

“Five thousand won for ten.”

“Do you only accept cash?”

“Cash would be nice, though.”

“…….”

The black cloaked man, who had been silent while carrying his luggage on his back, put his hand inside his hood. I wondered what he was doing, but soon I saw that he was holding a jewel in his hand that was shining with a transparent light.

Even Cha Eun-hyeok, a local resident, knew that the beautifully crafted thing was worth more than ten bungeoppang.

“Is this not enough?”

“…….”

It was scary to think that he was doing such an outrageous thing, as if he was imitating a human being quite convincingly. It was to the point where I began to resent him.

'Who gives a jewel to someone who buys bungeoppang?'

Cha Eun-hyuk felt a chill down his spine.

It's the same when you try to barter, and when you don't know the conventional value of the item you want to get, and no matter how much the other person imitates a human, it just feels uncomfortable.

'But I'm even more upset because I still think it's definitely human.'

I barely managed to answer.

“…That’s too much.”

“There is no other item besides this.”

“You don’t have a card….”

“Is this a card?”

“Uh… yes.”

"okay."

I was skeptical, but he really did hand me his card.

“…….”

“…….”

“…I was just cleaning up, so I need to bake some more. Is that okay?”

"it's okay."

“It will take some time.”

Eunhyuk Cha, who quickly gave up, started making bungeoppang.

'There is no such thing as a disaster.'

Because business was so good today, I couldn't get to the terminal until the last train left.

I got permission in advance so I don't have to worry about getting caught. I was planning on sleeping out today, but then I got a new guest.

That too, an unidentified monster guest.

"……."

Dalgrak.

The hand that closed the fish-shaped bread mold shook a little.

'… I don't think he'll kill me all of a sudden.'

As with most monsters, most of these guys seemed to have their own rules.

Open your eyes only when the sun is up, spend your whole life with a blind person, and walk only on white stones.

Many of these rules were childish, but some of them were threatening to humans.

'But it's the first time I've seen someone who can talk, so I can't tell.'

This is the first time I've seen someone imitate a human so well.

The problem is that there is a sense of discomfort here and there, but aside from the strangely cold atmosphere, their speech and actions are quite similar to those of humans.

'There's even a card.'

Suddenly, Cha Eun-hyuk realized.

‘… If you didn’t steal it, then someone else must have lent it to you.’

Well then, isn't there a guardian for this guy somewhere?

“…Is there anyone else in your group?”

“It used to be there, but it’s not there anymore.”

“…….”

“He must be asleep by now.”

I thought it meant he was killed for a moment.

'This is the first time I've felt this resentful toward someone I don't even know.'

In a world where you can't even take a dog for a walk without a leash, how can you just let a dangerous creature like this, no matter how much it resembles a human, out on the loose?

“…….”

No, wait a minute.

'If he gave me the card, I guess he thought I could use it.'

There was no way a monster that was invisible to other people could use a card.

So, is the opponent in front of you a human rather than a monster?

“…in Seoul….”

Cha Eun-hyeok opened his mouth cautiously.

“Is this your first time?”

“It’s not the first time, but it’s true that I’m a tourist.”

“Oh, sightseeing. Did you go to Gyeongbokgung Palace?”

“Yes, it was fun because there was a variety of food.”

Although the conversation was a bit choppy, I got enough information.

'Other people can see it too?'

So does that really mean he's just an ordinary guy with an eerie vibe?

Or maybe it’s a humanoid monster that’s supposedly introduced in textbooks… .

“…….”

“Crunch.”

Cha Eun-hyuk was startled.

'bird?'

It was because a faintly glowing bird jumped out from between the hood of the black cloak.

“Honey, come in.”

“Gurrung….”

“I’ll give it to you later, so stay inside.”

“Kkukkung.”

"okay."

The sight of him giving orders to a small monster was the image of a 'trainer' commonly known to the world, but strangely, Eunhyuk Cha did not think that the black cloak and the bird in front of him were a pair of a human and a monster.

The feeling of strangeness became more evident the moment the bird's eyes met mine.

“…….”

“Gulp.”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyuk lowered his head, unable to meet her gaze.

‘… It’s dangerous.’

My hands and feet felt cold, to the point where I was sweating profusely.

'That guy is really dangerous.'

The bird, with its sweet color and dainty body, would be considered pretty and cute by anyone who saw it. However, to Cha Eun-hyeok, who could vaguely sense its true nature, it was no different from a ridiculous deception.

Perhaps it was the name given by the owner, but the nature of the bird called 'Honey' was like a storm-like wave. It was spontaneous, rough, and strong. But the reason it took on that fragile form was probably because the owner wanted it to.

“…….”

So then, what kind of being is the master, Black Cloak?

'Damn, I didn't know it would turn out like this.'

Among the guys that only Cha Eun-hyeok could see, there were definitely some who were interested in human food. They savored the rice that the townspeople had left for the ghosts to eat, and even stole side dishes from the restaurant one by one.

But none of them were so blatant in ordering food. Most of them were just imitating everyday life in human form, and they didn't really try to interact with humans like this.

'I let my guard down.'

I should have been more careful.

‘That bird doesn’t even seem to like me that much… .’

The bird watching me from deep within the hood of my black cloak was intimidating.

“…Here, there are 10 bungeoppang.”

"thank you."

The black cloak that received the bungeoppang paused for a moment.

“…….”

“It's a gift.”

"yes?"

“Thank you for your hard work this morning.”

“No, wait a minute….”

Black Cloak continued speaking to Cha Eun-hyeok, who was trying to refuse.

“I’m sorry if I scared you. I came here because it smelled like bungeoppang, but I stopped cleaning up and made a mess again, so I want to apologize and thank you.”

“It’s okay.”

“Thank you.”

He leisurely disappeared, leaving behind one of the blue gems he had just seen.

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok, who had been staring at the black cloak until its back was out of sight, soon collapsed when even the end of the cloak could not be seen.

"…ha ha ha…."

What the fuck.

Lived.

'I thought I was going to die.'

From the moment I discovered that I could see things that others could not, I had a feeling that this would be the end. I would die in such a strange way that others would not even be able to guess the cause of death. That was what I had thought.

But even so, I won't die selling bungeoppang.

"and…."

Cha Eun-hyeok wiped his face with both hands.

“I was so shocked.”

The identity of the black cloak is still unknown.

If others can see it, is it a person? But its essence is too distant and vicious to be that. Then is it the same kind as the ones I usually see? But the communication is too smooth to be that. Humanoid monster?

There is no dungeon nearby.

If it's neither this nor that, then maybe it's some kind of monster I don't know about.

“…….”

And either way it was horrible.

'Can you survive after meeting a humanoid monster?'

That's when I thought so.

“Crunch?”

“…….”

I heard that before.

“Crunch….”

“…….”

“Gulp, gurgle, gurgle gurgle gurgle.”

"…uh…."

“Cur.”

When I raised my head, I saw a large beak. I could see a lot of teeth beyond the Adam's apple. I could see a pitch-black tongue.

“Kung.”

A beak as hard as metal half-swallowed Cha Eun-hyeok's head.

“…….”

Knock, knock.

He pretends to bite it a few times and then spits it out.

“Kkurung.”

“…What, what….”

“Kkuk.”

When I regained my sight, 'Honey' was the same compact figure I had seen before.

“…….”

That seemed like such a disgusting, disgusting pretense.

“What the heck?”

The bird flew away.

“What the heck was it….”

I really don't know anything, but one thing I know for sure is that I almost died just now.

The bird, sweet as honey in color, seemed to be saying this.

'This much is okay.'

Said.

“…….”

It seemed like he was saying, "I passed."

I got goosebumps.

“…I have to move tomorrow….”

I hope we never meet again.

* * *

And then at 2pm the next day.

“Do you sell bungeoppang?”

Cha Eun-hyeok met the ghostly black cloak again.

"…yes…."

“Please give me 10.”

"All right."

What should we do if the world is this small?

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (34)

Episode 34

“Oh.”

Yoo Seong-un made a delighted expression when he saw the face of the fish-shaped bread young man.

“Aren’t you the person who was doing business in front of the collection center last time?”

“Ah… that’s right.”

“I haven’t seen you recently. I guess you moved.”

“If you stay in the same spot all the time, you’ll get caught.”

Street food such as bungeoppang was not subject to such strict controls. However, it was not possible to remain in the city without a citizen's ID.

Moreover, since he was advised to immediately demolish the building if there was even a complaint, Cha Eun-hyeok moved frequently. It was wise for Cha Eun-hyeok himself to be careful when he was getting off easy.

“There haven’t been any complaints recently.”

“It’s a shame that if we stay in the same place, word of mouth will spread better.”

“There’s nothing I can do, it’s not an officially licensed store.”

“Well, they don’t really give permission to the bungeoppang carts.”

“Still, I was allowed to stay for a few days.”

In general, if you stayed for more than ten days without a city ID, you would be fined.

But how thoroughly can you cut off people in the world they live in? If you apply under various pretexts, you can stay in the city for about a week, even if you are not staying at a lodging facility.

“…and, um, rather than that….”

Cha Eun-hyeok's gaze fell on the black cloak next to Yoo Seong-woon.

“…….”

"…huh?"

“…No, that….”

That thing isn't human.

‘… What, doesn’t this guy also know the exact identity of the Black Cloak?’

The figure of a man staring intently at the bungeoppang with his face covered by a pitch-black hood. It was definitely the black cloak I had seen at dawn, but it was less intimidating than before, and the customer's reaction was too indifferent.

‘Was he really just a human…? They say that even among hunters, there are those whose energy is hard to control. Maybe he was just one of those types… .’

As Eunhyuk Cha thought so, a honey-colored bird came into view from deep inside the hood.

“…….”

“Uh, is there a problem?”

“…Just out of curiosity….”

Eunhyuk Cha, who was trying to brush it off as he didn't want to get into trouble, hesitated and asked.

“…Is the person next to you a trainer?”

If we understand it logically, the most likely explanation would be a trainer.

“Because you bring a monster with you.”

“…That’s right, I’m a trainer. I have permission to take it outside, so don’t worry.”

“Oh, I see.”

Anyway, I feel relieved now that I have received permission.

'Now, if someone dies, it's not my fault for watching.'

The identity of the black cloak is still unclear, but no, didn't that white-haired hunter give me permission with his own mouth?

'He also said trainer.'

Then I didn't want to delve any further into it. With family members to take responsibility for, it was only natural that I didn't want to be interested in 'something' that could put my life at risk if I got involved even a little bit.

But Black Cloak didn't seem to have any such intentions.

“I was grateful for the dawn.”

“…….”

“Huh? Dawn?”

Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo in surprise.

“You went out at dawn?”

Cha Eun-hyeok felt his stomach start to ache again at the startled reaction. It seemed that the white-haired guest had not expected the black cloak to wander the streets alone at dawn.

‘In other words, it is a being that should not be allowed to act individually… .’

If a first-class citizen who goes to a respectable guild is paying this much attention, then how dangerous does it mean that he is?

“Yes, Honey disappeared so I went out to look for her.”

“If you want to leave, just tell me.”

“I found it right away.”

“That’s not the problem….”

The white-haired guest, who was about to say something, soon calmed down.

“…Yeah, I can’t do anything about natural disasters.”

“I am not a natural disaster.”

“Maybe the typhoon thinks so too.”

Yoo Seong-un felt warm. How can he not be so objective about himself?

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un took a deep breath and asked the Bungeoppang young man.

“What happened in the morning?”

“…You bought some bungeoppang.”

“What else is there…?”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok, who had been hesitating, answered.

“That bird….”

“Oh, yes.”

“He chewed my head twice and left.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was speechless.

"…yes?"

“Oh, it wasn’t really chewed, it was just nibbling like cats playfully….”

"oh."

A speechless Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo.

"what do you think about it."

"…sorry."

“Speak sincerely.”

“I am truly sorry.”

It may not seem like it, since his facial muscles had all died a long time ago, but Geo was quite surprised by the words of the fish-shaped bread young man.

This is dizzy that my parrot is said to be called 'fucking baby'.

“Are you hurt?”

“Oh, yes. I bit it without hurting anyone and it didn’t hurt.”

“I’m still sorry. My son….”

Perhaps it was a side effect of sleeping for 31 years, but he suddenly started talking in front of people he was meeting for the first time. Geo regained his social skills and corrected his speech.

“Our pet bird is causing trouble.”

I thought it was because he always joked around the cabin saying, "Oh my son" and "Kuruk guruk guruk", but to Yoo Seong-woon and Cha Eun-hyeok, it was an unusual sound.

'Son…? I heard that you drew them in pictures, but do you think that those guys you created are your own children? We need to be careful about this.'

‘… You just said son. If you naturally said son when the species itself looks different, does that mean he’s not really human as you see him… .’

Although Geo didn't know what they were thinking, he felt that their expressions had become subtle, but he ignored them.

'I can be Honey and Daddy's son, why are you like that?'

Even 31 years ago, there were quite a few people who would suck on their pet dogs and cats, calling them “my little pup” and “my daughter”. I could be proud to say that Geo was one of those people.

“…….”

“Is it okay if I look at your forehead for a moment?”

“I’m not hurt.”

“I am a doctor, so I know how to see wounds. I am doing this because I feel sorry, so if you could show me just once, I would be grateful.”

Yoo Seong-un stayed still and was hit on the back of the head again.

"doctor?"

"yes."

“Oh… I see.”

Where on earth do you think you're a doctor?

‘… Even if he had human memories, I didn’t think he was a doctor. If he’s a doctor with such a heavy atmosphere, how many patients would mistake him for a grim reaper… .’

But surprisingly, and shockingly, Geo was right.

“Excuse me.”

And he was a priest.

“It’s a little warm.”

“Huh? Uh, uh….”

“I purified it just in case.”

"purification?"

“Your scalp was scratched a little bit… If you get sick, it’ll be a big problem.”

Looking at the young man with a bewildered expression and the portrait imitating the young man's appearance, Yoo Seong-woon just gave up.

'Will the day ever come when I fully learn Geo's true identity?'

There were no onions at all.

“…That, ten fish-shaped breads.”

"thank you."

“No, and I’m okay with what my pet bird did….”

"ah."

Geo rummaged through his cloak with a face that said, 'Oh, right.'

“It’s a reward.”

“…….”

“…Is this a gift?”

“The purpose of giving is not the problem.”

What kind of jewels are you giving me when I haven't even shed any blood?

“This is too much for me. The jewels you gave me yesterday were too much for me, and I was already in trouble.”

“But it is a fair price.”

"that is…."

At the sight of Cha Eun-hyeok trying to refute something, Yoo Seong-woon shook his head behind Geo.

“…….”

"that is?"

“…No, I will gladly accept it.”

Eunhyuk Cha realized this as Seongwoon Yoo nodded with a relieved expression.

‘If I don’t accept this, I’ll be at a disadvantage… .’

He didn't know how misfortune would come, but he couldn't ignore it since he saw a face that desperately wanted to save someone. Cha Eun-hyeok gratefully accepted Yoo Seong-woon's earnest advice.

But it wasn't as scary as before.

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyuk, who had been fiddling with the sparkling tangerine-colored jewel, raised his head.

“I heard you were sightseeing.”

“Oh, right. Is there anywhere you would recommend?”

“There will be an event at the square in a few weeks.”

“If you say event….”

“It’s an initiation ceremony.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded as if he understood.

“Ah, I guess it’s about time to start.”

“Because it’s usually done a lot in the middle of winter.”

“Which temple is this an initiation ceremony for? If it’s a ceremony held nearby, the moon? Or the sun?”

“The temple of the sun.”

Cha Eun-hyeok looked back at the black cloak without realizing it.

“…I didn’t know you were a believer. Usually, trainers don’t worship God very well….”

He had sorted things out in his own way.

'You must have been a very high-ranking hunter, to the point where you could be mistaken for a monster.'

When the black cloak swept my forehead and infused me with energy, I felt a warm sensation similar to what I had felt at the Temple of the Sun. If I could even perform the purification ritual on my own, I must be a very devout believer.

'You said you were a trainer, so you're not a priest, are you?'

The Awakened One can only have one job at most. The white-haired guest clearly said he was a trainer, so it couldn't be a priest, which was a bit disappointing. If he had that much talent, it would have been good to manifest as a priest.

There was no way someone who could use such warm energy could be bad. Above all, I had never heard of a monster using holy power.

'I guess I was scared because it was my first time seeing a Hunter of such a strong rank. Priests tend to not control their energy, and their energy itself is said to be very different from that of humans…'

It was clear that Cha Eun-hyeok himself was frightened by the spirit of God.

Cha Eun-hyeok, who was very sensitive to the aura of others and had never seen ordinary priests or high-ranking hunters, made that judgment. It was a relief born of ignorance.

“The youngest in my family has awakened to become a priest and is having an initiation ceremony this time.”

“Oh, you have a job. Of all jobs, being a priest is amazing.”

“I’m also worried about how I will make a living if God doesn’t choose me.”

“If you awaken as a priest, you will have a higher affinity for the divine, so you will be able to work as a temple clerk.”

“That would be great.”

Perhaps because he thought that everything was his own mistake, Cha Eun-hyeok let out a little bit of tension and smiled.

“It seems like they’re going to do something pretty grand this time, so it’ll be fun if you come and see.”

“I really need to stop by. Thanks for letting me know. It’s hard to know the schedule for the initiation ceremony unless you’re an official….”

“I think it would be better if there were more people at my brother’s induction ceremony.”

Just as it is easier for humans to see ants gathered together than scattered ants, the more people gather together, the easier it is to receive the gaze of God. The more exposed you are, the higher the probability of receiving God's grace.

"bon appetite."

“See you again at the induction ceremony.”

"thank you."

When they got a little further away, Yoo Seong-un asked Geo.

“Was nothing really happening yesterday morning?”

“As you heard, Honey had an accident.”

“Any other thoughts?”

“I don’t know.”

A crying sound was heard from inside the hood.

“Gulp.”

“I claim to be innocent.”

“Yeah… I see.”

I don't know if the 'innocence' that the original being speaks of is the same as that of a human being.

'Geo is particularly sensitive to good and evil and manners, so he's worried.'

Honey was a being created by Geo and was his son. If so, Geo's personality must have had a big influence on him. When he said that he flew around on his own while Geo's eyes were closed, my heart sank.

'He might have gone around killing people he thought were evil.'

Judging from the fact that there hasn't been any fuss so far, I guess there hasn't been any major accidents, so I can only hope.

“And, um, the jewels….”

"yes."

“How about exchanging it for a different type of gift?”

No matter how sorry I was, it was absurd for a human being to give away a jewel right away.

“Usually people don’t exchange gifts like that.”

“…Isn’t that right?”

“I don’t know what you were thinking, but it’s probably not that.”

“…….”

Geo was shocked.

'In this macho world that seems to be a manifestation of hell, you don't have that much toughness?'

Is it strange that in a world where office workers catch monsters, flowers made of cheese bloom from the ground, railroads fly overhead, and streams come alive with spring in winter, it's exchanged for money in jewels?

“I thought it would be okay because there were people who walked around with jewelry all over their bodies like crows.”

“It’s just a personality thing. Or maybe it’s an artifact that’s meant to add to your abilities or a type of armor.”

“I understand what you mean.”

Geo, realizing that he had gotten too far ahead of himself, decided to reflect.

'I might have thought too much of Giovanni's sense because of the synchronization.'

In Giovanni's world, this kind of cash payment was popular. He, who was gradually regaining his memories as Giovanni, thought he had to keep his balance.

Maybe it's because I've been in the cabin for so long that my modern senses have become dull. Sometimes, that's how I react to certain situations...

"…ah."

“What, is there a problem? Or is there somewhere you want to go?”

“What is a trainer and what is a priest?”

“…Uh… Okay….”

Yoo Seong-un had a face that seemed determined to make something.

“I guess I have no choice but to call you a hunter.”

“Am I a hunter now?”

“While we’re at it, I’ll tell you about the Hunter system and ranks. Do you know anything about it?”

"no."

“I knew it.”

“…….”

I felt a little sorry for Geo, who had been lost in his paintings for 31 years.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (35)

Episode 35

“There are three main factors that determine a Hunter’s rank.”

Yoo Seong-woon, who came to the Chinese restaurant with all the doors closed, explained to Geo.

“Occupation, Aptitude Skills, and Level.”

“…….”

“The Hunter rank I have been talking about is awarded by comprehensively evaluating these three.”

“Are the grades evaluated by people like an administrative examination?”

“No, the ‘system’ that is supposedly aided by the source evaluates. That’s why there are times when an Awakened who appears incompetent to humans manifests as an A-class.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled faintly.

“Back when there was no system and there was a lack of common sense about hunters, there were people who manipulated the ranks. However, since the ranks themselves are not something that can be given by humans, those who manipulated them were quickly caught….”

“I guess I was criticized.”

“It didn’t end with criticism. At that time, hunters were like powerful people who couldn’t be easily confronted. In a time when force was much closer to law than it is now, people with superpowers who could even defeat monsters were treated in various ways.”

He lied about his rank and tried to get treated well by himself when everyone was having a hard time.

“There was no way it could have ended well.”

Yoo Seong-un returned to the main topic.

“Grades are usually indicated in the alphabet.”

“Is there a reason?”

“I think it might have been a hassle to unify by country. Then wouldn’t the numbers be much more consistent worldwide? But apart from that, it has been confirmed that the first Awakened person came from the United States….”

“It was tailored to the American perspective.”

“That doesn’t mean the entire system is in English. Anyway, the lowest grade is F, and from there it goes up to D, C, B, A, and the highest grade is S.”

Yoo Seong-un rolled his eyes for a moment after saying that.

“…Well, that doesn’t mean that’s all, according to current scholars. In the case of Class F, they are already a bit stronger than the average person, so what’s the point of lowering them any further? But it’s only been 31 years since the Great Disaster.”

“I guess it’s too early to tell.”

“Yes, there are rumors that the president of the Korean association is actually hiding a higher rank.”

Even Yoo Seong-un, who was the research team leader of the association, did not know the exact truth.

“Surprisingly, there aren’t that many S-rank hunters. That’s why there are rumors that they’ve hidden higher ranks. Anyone can see that that S-rank is much better than that S-rank, but they’re listed as the same rank.”

These ratings also affect social perception.

“First of all, there is a law that states that S-class hunters must become public figures.”

“If you are a public figure… do you reveal your personal information?”

“They’re not exactly celebrities, but since they’re mostly known for their looks and appear on TV shows, you could say they’re kind of celebrities. Since S-class people can turn a country into ashes if they want to, they’re restricted in many ways.”

“It will be uncomfortable.”

“There are many people who enjoy that popularity.”

As Geo said, there are many hunters who feel uncomfortable.

“That’s enough about the levels. Now, should I explain the occupation you asked about earlier?”

“The priest and trainer that the student I saw earlier mentioned are classified by their profession.”

"yes."

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“It is not essential that this profession be realized.”

“Then are there people who get jobs and people who don’t?”

“That’s right. Not everyone can have it, but it does have a significant impact on rank, so a culture has developed where hunters with a job are given preferential treatment whenever possible.”

“It’s amazing.”

“Because Awakened people with jobs have the influence to change the rules of the world. To a mere human, they seem very attractive.”

Even if it is not necessarily a matter of rank, 'occupation' has a major image that comes with it.

“There are a total of 10 occupations.”

“It’s less than I thought.”

“I think this is a lot… If there were more, it would be hard to tell them apart.”

Doctor, priest, knight, teacher, spy, architect, artist, magician, cook, trainer.

“After hearing it, doesn’t it seem like a lot?”

“If you look at the jobs that actually exist in the world, there aren’t that many….”

“That’s true, but this is very different from that job.”

“That's true.”

“The priest and trainer you heard about earlier are not very common professions.”

Priests use the power of the gods to influence reality, while trainers exert influence over intelligent beings. Both are considered difficult professions because they require the help of the contracting party to fully function.

“The more successful you become, the more praise you receive.”

Priests in particular have a strong tendency to do so.

“A trainer can train his opponents as much as he wants if he develops his abilities, but a priest cannot do that. He must wait patiently until God looks upon him and grants him grace. He does not have the initiative.”

“But didn’t you say that a priest who does not serve God cannot carry out his duties in earnest?”

“It’s a job that has such unreasonable aspects. However, it’s a job that involves exercising the power of an alien god on Earth, so I think that this frustrating aspect is actually a blessing for humanity. If we’re not careful, it could end up being a disaster.”

Of course, those who awaken as priests will be a little upset.

“However, once you manifest as a priest, your divine affinity increases. Even though you cannot exercise the influence of a god, you can use the power of the god as a believer.”

“It’s the power of the Holy Spirit.”

“The Bungeoppang youth I saw earlier also mistook you for a ‘trainer believer’, right? A trainer is the only profession that can strut around the streets with monsters so openly, and even if you’re not a priest, you can still use your holy power if you become a devout believer. That’s why you made that mistake.”

“Then, it’s not necessarily the job that’s the only thing that’s valid.”

“That’s right, there’s no need to evaluate a Hunter based on that alone. In the first place, a profession is something that is innate when awakened, but it can also be acquired through effort, so it’s rather fluid.”

The remaining professions also had their own rules.

“With this profession alone, the Awakened can exert influence over the rules of the world. To put it simply, a priest gains a greater affinity for the divine, while a trainer gains an affinity for things other than humans.”

“Is it all affinity?”

“Unlike skills, awakening a job doesn’t suddenly give you new abilities. However, you gain latent abilities that normal people wouldn’t be able to have. Shouldn’t we usually call this affinity?”

Yoo Seong-un moved on to the next topic.

“But aptitude skills aren’t like that.”

“In what sense is it not so?”

“This is something you basically get when you awaken, and it doesn’t increase with individual effort. It’s only natural that your proficiency will increase as you use and understand it….”

However, there are no awakened characters who have no aptitude skills or more than two aptitude skills.

“At least for now? I don’t know if there will be any exceptions in the future, but even if there are, this rule is fairly common among the Awakened.”

The aptitude skill was a kind of stone grabber. The Awakened had no choice, but with just that one skill, it was possible to roughly predict what the Awakened's future life would be like.

“Just with that skill, you can roughly tell the tendencies and abilities of that Awakened person.”

“Can you also know the future?”

“Isn’t it roughly similar? Once you manifest aptitude skills, you have to keep them for the rest of your life, so it’s inevitable that the awakened person’s life will be affected.”

Most people who have awakened study this aptitude skill first. If you are lucky, you are born with a job, but aptitude skills become an inseparable community of destiny.

“There are many people who cry and say that this doesn’t suit their aptitude.”

If you wake up and the skill you have is to pick up trash, how absurd would that be?

"yes?"

“…Do such skills actually exist?”

“Such a skill does exist, and in some cases it is even an aptitude skill. I heard he is currently working as a city beautification worker, but I don’t know the details.”

“Still, you’ve made good use of your aptitude skills.”

“He is a positive gentleman.”

For reference, skills are divided into 'aptitude skills' that are innate with awakening and 'general skills' that are innate through acquired efforts. The content of the skills themselves is not that different from each other, but... .

“Of course, I tend to value aptitude skills more.”

“The content is the same, so why are you rating one side higher?”

“There’s nothing we can do about aptitude skills, since they are the criteria for evaluating a person’s soul and qualities.”

For example, there are Hunters 1 and 2, and they have the same skill called A. Even though they have the same A skill, 1 is an innate aptitude skill, while 2 is a general skill learned later in life.

“Then the starting point was different from the beginning.”

"okay."

“First of all, there is no level for aptitude skills. You can use the skill with the highest level of proficiency from the moment it is activated, but in fact, proficiency increases the more you use it. Even with the same skill, it is inevitable that there will be a big difference depending on who uses it.”

And here is the petty side of humanity.

‘It’s kind of like a class system… .’

Is it because they were born with it that they tickle a corner of people's hearts? Those who have awakened with high utility or rare aptitude skills are arrogant and people tend to look up to them.

'I don't really want to tell you this.'

Although he seemed noble and intimidating, I didn't want to tarnish Geo's innocent side, like a child who believed in Santa Claus in a fairy tale.

For the sake of the peace of mankind, it would have been better for Geo to have known a little less about the ugliness of humanity.

“You can learn general skills by going to the center and applying. Even if you are an Awakened person without a job or with poor aptitude skills, you can still raise your level through acquired efforts.”

“It’s flexible.”

“And as I’ve been saying here and there since a while ago, the ‘level’ is a visible indicator that evaluates your proficiency in all of these things.”

Levels evaluate your occupation, skills, and physical abilities.

“The lowest level is 1, and the highest level is 10. I wonder why they didn’t write it in alphabets… but I think that level could be written down to decimal points, so it didn’t need that much detail.”

“Is it displayed up to the decimal point?”

“Well, 2.8. 4.9. Something like that….”

“Is that the case for you too, Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

"uh…."

Yoo Seong-un added after hesitating for a moment.

“The level is okay, but for your information, people usually don’t ask each other about the specifics of the system.”

“Is that so?”

“Because there is a strong perception that it is polite.”

“…….”

Although his expression was still blunt and cold, Yoo Seong-un felt that Geo seemed a little shocked.

"…sorry."

As expected, he soon apologized. As expected, Geo had a side that valued manners.

“I apologize for not knowing much about this stuff.”

“It’s okay. I didn’t do it knowingly. It’s not like we’ll curse each other if we ask.”

There was no real damage done, but it was just a kind of culture.

“Just like I didn’t ask what color underwear you were wearing today….”

“I am truly sorry.”

“I’m being a bit harsh, so don’t try to give me a bail by shaking me out. Put me down, honey. Oh, it’s crushing. I don’t think it’s very normal to try to give me a bail every time I do something wrong.”

Only then did Geo gently put down the little bit of honey that he had been shaking. Honey was already picking at the jewels that had fallen off one by one and swallowing them. It was so natural that it was dizzying.

“If you act like that, Honey will get upset.”

“Sometimes I play like this….”

“How on earth do you guys play?”

Honey had a rather satisfied expression on her face, as if it wasn't a lie.

'Where did I find satisfaction in that round face?'

Both of them were expressionless, but their expressions were very clear. They could truly be called father and son. Looking at this, I guess you could say that they were children born from the heart. To be exact, they were children created with a brush.

‘… but definitely, much more than when I was inside the portrait… .’

It was human-like.

“…Anyway, they don’t usually ask about things related to the Hunter’s system. It’s more like asking for exact figures like height or weight. Since it’s personal information, they don’t usually reveal it out loud.”

“I’ll be more careful next time.”

“Oh, then I’m grateful.”

It was more than a joy to have such a cooperative source, it was like a miracle. As a gardener, it warmed my heart.

“Since you seem curious, I don’t have a job. My aptitude skill is ‘Emotion’, and I’ve learned several general skills. My proficiency in general skills is maxed out. My overall grade is A.”

“Can you tell me?”

“What does it matter if I say it myself?”

"okay."

“Well, it’s not easy to tell. Since the job is so obvious, such a cautious culture doesn’t apply, but if someone tells you about their rank, it’s a huge favor.”

To explain it roughly, it is like this.

“I trust you. You are my friend, my lover, my family….”

“…….”

“Well, I guess that’s what it means.”

“It’s romantic.”

“You like this kind of thing.”

He was a guy with a really pure side.

“Did Mr. Yoo Seong-un say the same thing?”

“Then, as a gesture of goodwill and trust, you told me about my system.”

And the fact that the other person wasn't human also had a big impact on being able to open up to them without any burden. Since they were beings who were ignorant of human culture, I guess you could say that they didn't feel awkward telling me anything.

Rather, it is more awkward if you are awkward when dealing with humans.

“If you have any further questions, I can get you a separate book. There is a textbook used at the Awakened Education Center. There is also a textbook for beginners who have just awakened, so let me know if you need it.”

“I think it will be okay thanks to Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s good explanation.”

“Well then… um.”

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“Are you thinking of going back to portraits soon?”

"yes."

Geo nodded as if it was obvious.

“Outside, there are a lot of people, a lot of fun toys, and a lot to see and feel….”

“…….”

“I don’t think this is the place for me.”

Yoo Seong-un understood what he meant.

'It's amazing that he's been able to maintain that condition for so long.'

If I were a normal Awakened person, I wouldn't have been able to endure it for even a second.

Geo's status could not be compared to that of a human. At least in the picture, a being with god-like powers was walking around the noisy world of humans with his status suppressed, his limbs cut off, and weights tied to his torso.

That was absolutely horrible.

“Of course it was fun.”

“Thank you for that. Do you have any plans to attend the initiation ceremony that the Bungeoppang youth told me about?”

“Yes, I would like to see it.”

“I’ll let you know when the time comes, so in the meantime, just rest in the portrait.”

So Geo went back to the portrait.

* * *

Geo returned to the cabin and slept all day.

“It’s dangerous outside the blanket.”

“Kyurrrrung.”

Geo, who was exhausted, needed some time to himself.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (36)

Episode 36

It's not that he dislikes playing, but Geo's energy was limited.

“…….”

“…….”

“…Honey, if Dad gets upset, you should at least scold him.”

“…Kungkungkungkung….”

“If we are both spread out, there is no answer.”

The busy modern society that we met again has drained Geo's stamina.

'Even if a vampire sucked my blood, I wouldn't be this tired.'

I don't think it was originally such a peaceful and gentle country. But after 31 years, South Korea had become a hellish Republic of Korea. The weak Geo was scared.

Geo, sprawled on the bed like a 29-year-old rag, groped the honey that had spread out like a liquid monster.

“As far as I know… I’m still in sync with Giovanni.”

“Crunch?”

“It feels much less when I’m inside than when I’m outside.”

“Gurr?”

“The synchronization speed has also slowed down.”

Fairness rate 14.8%

“When I dipped my feet in Cheonggyecheon, it was almost 6% full.”

“Kkuk.”

“When I took the waterway to the restaurant, it was almost 4%….”

They had one thing in common: they were all water-related actions.

“Is it because I have a lot of connection with water?”

It was Giovanni's story.

Anyway, the speed of synchronization was much faster when in reality than when still in a picture.

“It must be the characteristics of the world inside the portrait.”

“Gurrrr….”

During the synchronization, I felt like I was going back to my old lifestyle. I would get hungry at the right time, I would have to sleep after working hard, and my body, which had been strangely light, would become heavy…

But after returning from my tour of Seoul, I felt that the feeling inside the portrait had become a bit duller.

“It might be because, even though I’m in sync, I’m still treated as a painting, not a human, inside the portrait. When I’m here, even the emotions I feel are treated as ‘paintings.’”

When Geo is the subject, even if the object is something intangible, it seems to be judged as a 'picture'.

Just like in the past, if you felt grateful to Yoo Seong-un and gave him fruit juice as a gift, it wouldn't have been a problem in the 1:1 system.

“…….”

After syncing, does it go back to 'portrait'?

“What would it be like for a human being to become nothing more than a portrait if he did not assimilate into other people?”

“…….”

“That’s really annoying.”

“Curr….”

“There is no portrait like mine anywhere in the world. I will have confidence.”

Today, Geo's self-esteem soared to new heights.

“I am truly amazing.”

Geo's humanity was not swayed by his identity as a mere portrait possessed by a ghost. Geo's self-assertion was too strong to allow such a trivial matter to cause confusion in his self-identity.

“Let’s eat.”

“Gulp.”

The conversation between the two eventually turned to food. There was no pig.

“Shut up.”

Geo finally got out of bed when exactly 29 hours and 36 minutes had passed.

Honey was still spread out, not thinking about it. She was a precious young master who knew very well that Geo would take care of it.

“If you were really like that, wouldn’t you be so unlucky and cute?”

“Kung.”

“Do you think that cuteness is everything? That’s right, that’s all there is to the world.”

“Gurrrr.”

“You’ve already served your purpose as cuteness.”

When Geo thought about it, there seemed to be no emotion that brought peace to humanity more than cuteness.

“I will take care of dinner today.”

It's always been like that.

“Should I go to the garden after a long time and check how much it has grown?”

“Kung kung kung….”

“You find it too bothersome to fly there? Your bothersomeness has reached the sky. Just stay still and I’ll put it in the basket for you.”

“Kuuuungkururur!”

“Where are you going to send me off alone? Oh, my. Sigh. No, go with me. Dad, it’s lonely.”

Geo swept the sloshing liquid monster into the basket. Honey slurped and slurped, and Geo left the cabin with the basket with a satisfied look on his face.

And I witnessed Mother Nature.

“What is this?”

Where did my humble garden go and the Amazon came in?

“Where on earth did my precious little garden go?”

“Kku, kkuru….”

“My garden wasn’t like this.”

I thought there would be at most some sprouts, but instead of any cute sprouts, only cherry tomatoes had grown to about 3m tall.

“No, can a 3m long cherry tomato be called a ‘cherry’ tomato?”

no.

“Was it really a tomato in the first place?”

The tomatoes I know aren't as big as small watermelons?

Geo, who had tried all kinds of farming at least once, was confused by the results he had never experienced before. Not only had he not left his garden for that long, but he had clearly planted ordinary seeds and seedlings, so how did a monster garden emerge instead of a garden?

“The condition of the lettuce is….”

“…….”

“It is the incarnation of Cthulhu.”

“Gulp?”

“There is something like that.”

There is an octopus monster god that drives even sane people crazy enough to buy a fish-shaped bread for 5,000 won.

“It looks exactly like that.”

And Geo knew that was where he had planted the lettuce.

“I planted octopus instead of lettuce.”

“Crunch.”

“Don’t be so positive, honey. Daddy gets hurt easily.”

The lettuce, with leaves thicker than those of autumn cabbage, towered high into the sky. Its appearance was so majestic that Geo felt like he had been rejected even though he hadn't confessed.

“This is a reality I could never have imagined.”

And corn.

“…….”

“…….”

"fearful."

Geo was scared.

“Is it a tree?”

The stem was so thick, and the eggs were even thicker. It was very scary.

The potatoes and sweet potatoes that were hidden underground were even more terrifying. Even though they hadn't revealed their true form, the stems that were crawling out of the ground were like watching a horror movie.

“This strong vitality… It’s alive.”

“Crunch.”

“Don’t break the birth canal, Honey. Even Daddy knows that much.”

“Huh?”

“I meant that it seemed like it would soon learn to crawl on its own. It wasn’t supposed to be like that.”

If this isn't a horror movie, then what is?

“Peas….”

“…….”

“…Even a zombie crawling out of hell wouldn’t be that obsessed.”

The pea stems, which clung to the plants growing nearby as if they were parasites, were long and thin, which made them even more bizarre. They looked as if they would soon eat bugs. Like spiders.

“So what the heck is this?”

What have I done?

“I am truly amazing.”

No, that's not it.

“It’s funny at this point.”

“…Kkuk?”

“Yeah, that’s what I wanted to say.”

It was just fun when such an unexpected situation arose.

“Surely the taste has changed.”

Okay then.

“It soon became a sturdy garden that seemed like it could even have a conversation with me….”

“…….”

“But let’s call this place a garden. I feel embarrassed saying it, but we, who know its humble beginnings, must preserve its identity.”

“Cur…?”

“Honey, think carefully. Those guys are going to start moving soon, so we need to make ourselves visible before they do so we don’t get eaten.”

It was half joking and half serious.

'In a world where even humans evolve into portraits, wouldn't it be normal for a plant to have an ego?'

My grandmother used to say that we should always live humbly and wisely because we cannot know when disaster will strike.

Today, Geo became a good grandson and faithfully followed the wisdom of his elders.

“…….”

But when an accident happens, it is human nature to want to blame someone else.

“…Could it be that Mr. Yoo Seong-un gave us the monster seed from the beginning?”

“Kung.”

“Yes, the seed itself looked ordinary when I saw it. It seems to be the problem of this world.”

So I was really curious to see if it would taste good.

“Let’s have a taste….”

“…….”

“…….”

“……?”

Geo, who entered the monster field, doubted his eyes.

'Are you getting presbyopia?'

Or is it a hallucination?

“If this is real, isn’t our safety at risk, honey?”

“…Gurrrr….”

“Why is there a dead deer here?”

Geo was very scared.

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.”

Please take care of this poor portrait.

“So why are you really here?”

“Gulp, gurgle, gurgle.”

“You can do it too? No, don’t compete. Who the hell caught this? Where did the deer come from in the first place? Dad, I’m so confused right now, so please, Honey, come out of the basket and stop promoting yourself….”

The monster field was so overgrown that I couldn't see it very well, but when I went inside, I saw a deer that was clearly dead, lying there in a very fresh state.

The deer's appearance was very sturdy and solid, so it wasn't originally from Geo's cabin forest. The animals here were cute and suited his taste.

“…….”

Wood deer

A herbivore that camouflages itself by growing flowers or fallen leaves on its horns according to the season. It usually avoids fighting with other animals, but if its camouflage is discovered, it becomes extremely excited and causes a commotion. Its metallic horns, teeth, and hooves can easily break animal bones. As part of its camouflage, it emits the scent of nuts, flowers, or fruits.

Processed meats: Dried in the sun after being rubbed with fat, provide a strong feeling of fullness and eliminate minor abrasions.

Habitat: The Destructed Avilas Rainforest_Animal Kingdom

Geo was thrilled.

“I ended up causing an accident.”

Our lives are so unpredictable that we can't even see an inch of the future. We expected that if we continued to live without thinking, the end would come someday, but the end came sooner than we expected.

“The day of destruction will come soon.”

“Kung?”

“An alien species is coming in.”

It was clear that Geo, whose only means of self-defense was his drawing ability to draw potatoes, would not be able to endure it.

“Gulp, gurgle, gurgle.”

"honey?"

“Knock knock knock. Knock, knock.”

“…….”

Geo, who was observing the situation closely, realized something as he saw Honey's appearance, as if she wanted to tell him something.

"…this…."

“Kkuk!”

“There’s a hole in your forehead.”

And then I noticed blood on a nearby sweet potato stem.

“…….”

“Gulp?”

“Are you trying to tell me that a sweet potato stem just came to life and pierced the forehead of an alien species that emerged from the dimensional gate I created, killing it instantly?”

“Kkuk.”

“I see.”

Geo was worried.

'Which one should I be afraid of?'

A violent alien species flowing in from an unknown dimension

VS

A sweet potato that moves and can pierce even a solid skull in one breath

“Oh my god, heaven and earth.”

They were both scared. Geo got scared for the third time today.

“Honey, can a fragile being like me survive in this wild?”

“…….”

“Don’t be serious, Dad. I’m too weak to survive in this great outdoors.”

“Kung.”

“Where else can you find someone as pitiful and worthless as your father?”

After a long conversation, Geo was assured that all creatures in the Monster Field would be friendly to him. Just as all the plants and animals in the forest were friendly to Geo, so were the crops he grew.

It was a story with no concrete basis, but… .

“Okay then.”

Geo's ultimate positive mind freed him from the same fears.

First of all, I was just about to prepare a meal.

“There’s meat.”

“Gulp.”

"meat…."

By the way, in the recipe, it says 'processed meat'.

“…Good.”

That's how today's content was decided.

By the way, Geo has learned how to slaughter.

* * *

Again, again… .

“…….”

widely.

“…That’s strange.”

A quiet alley in a slum.

A woman with blue hair that swayed leisurely like the deep sea muttered.

“The traces end here.”

I was very worried when my dear human assistant's energy was cut off, but what the heck is this?

“There is no sign of battle.”

I carefully selected and put the appropriate ones under the sun.

He must have had decent infiltration and combat skills, but if there are no traces of combat, let alone escape, it is hard to believe.

But it doesn't deny what has already happened.

“Did you get hit?”

I don't know who did it.

“That needs to be investigated further.”

The woman hummed and sang.

“It seems like the temple is in trouble, it wasn’t reported in the media, and it happened in a slum, but no one knows what happened. What a ridiculous situation….”

I understand the shrine's position.

“Where would the caution of those who like to keep things hidden from the beginning go? They are so sinister.”

It was about time for the event to take place, so it was understandable that it would be difficult.

“I was trying to ruin the Festival of the Sun.”

“…….”

“The person who was going to ruin it is gone.”

The woman said to the child.

“Isser, the only galaxy by my side.”

"yes."

“You have to do the work.”

“I won’t disappoint you.”

“Don’t be like that.”

The woman laughed, revealing her shark-like teeth.

“Something we all do to have fun together.”

A dress that resembles the sea flutters in the wind.

“…….”

In the meantime, only one child with blue hair remained.

The child was smiling affectionately.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (37)

Episode 37

Why did you learn how to slaughter?

“I had a friend who lived in Majang-dong.”

“Gurr?”

“After drinking a few times, I learned some skills.”

I have never actually dissected a complete beast.

He used to say that you shouldn't leave knife skills to just anyone, so he just told me how to carve it into pieces if I ever had to buy a large piece of raw meat at home.

The point is, I've never really done a proper slaughter before.

“But even if you’ve never done it yourself, you know how to do it.”

Geo had good learning abilities.

“It seems like he hasn’t been dead for long since his body wasn’t cold. He’s like a hot stone.”

“Crunch?”

“That’s because we have to drain blood. It’s hard to drain blood after a considerable amount of time has passed since death.”

The blood flowing from its forehead seemed to have soaked into the ground for a long time, but Geo was a little nervous about the soft body of the deer. It seemed that this world, where food does not rot or spoil easily, had some effect.

Yeah, I mean 'something to eat'.

“…Is it even okay to eat a dead deer?”

Geo himself is also attempting slaughter.

'Anyway, it would be much easier if my body wasn't stiff.'

Geo, who was dragging a deer as big as a house, hung it on a tree of an appropriate height. He then made a hole in its neck to allow the blood to drain.

"honey."

“Huh?”

“It’s clear that Dad has evolved.”

“Gurr.”

“I thought it had evolved into a portrait, but I didn’t know it would become so strong.”

It was hard to tell if it was because the laws of physics were less applicable in the world of paintings, or if Geo himself had gotten stronger, since he could hang a deer bigger than him on a tree without any effort.

“Then, while the blood drains, shall we take out some of the intestines?”

“Gurrrr.”

“…Honey, don’t drink the blood from below. I’ll support you.”

The sight of a tiny bird drinking the flowing blood was horrifying.

“Dad, I was scared.”

“Kung.”

“It’s not a lie.”

Trust between the rich was absurdly low.

“…….”

It's okay because it's funny.

'You have to take out the insides before they get hurt.'

According to the laws of the world of painting, it doesn't seem like it would spoil easily, but I have had the experience of a goji berry that was exposed to the sun for a long time becoming hard like a mineral.

It's better to do what you can when you can, because you never know what problems might arise.

“The leather is thick.”

There was also a considerable amount of fat under the skin.

“The system says this deer came from the rainforest, but isn’t the rainforest usually hot? I don’t understand why its fur is so thick and full of fat.”

“Cur.”

“Stop drinking blood, honey. Daddy said it was creepy.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“Don’t look at me like I’m cute.”

I had no intention of getting along with the smelly bird.

“Kung.”

Honey grumbled and grumbled, then spat something out.

“…….”

“Gurrrr.”

"jewel…?"

It was a sparkling jewel that Honey loved so much, but it didn't seem like a coincidence that after Honey vomited out the red jewel, it returned to its original color.

“Did you make blood into jewels?”

“Crunch.”

“As expected, our son is extraordinary.”

Geo decided to turn off his nerves.

“Dad, can I draw a picture with that later?”

“Gurrrr!”

“Thank you for allowing me to drink more, I won’t say anything.”

“Crunch!”

“You thought about it too.”

Drinking the blood of a hunted animal might not have been such a strange thing. As a human, Geo would have thought, 'What the hell is that?' But honey is a bird, isn't it? It was natural for animals to have such habits.

'I really don't care as long as I can get back to how I was.'

Even though he was a child born of paint, it was not the parent's job to suppress his animal instincts. As long as he drank some deer blood, he wouldn't die.

“I’m going to cut open your stomach soon, so be careful not to spill your intestines.”

“Cur.”

“Okay, let’s see….”

Geo focused his nerves on the tips of his fingers and felt the deer's belly.

“I heard that this kind of thing is easier to split if you start from the anus.”

It was quite a cruel story for a living creature to start cutting from the anus, but that's how the food chain works.

“Shut up.”

Although the knife had never been sharpened, it was so sharp that it easily split the pear.

When the abdomen of the deer hanging upside down was cut open and its internal organs were revealed, Geo witnessed something strange.

“……?”

Why are there jewels here too?

'It seems much bigger than the jewel that Honey spat out.'

In terms of location, it was around the heart.

“…Isn’t that a little funny…?”

A jewel heart, common sense was being destroyed.

“How did they purify and create blood with something like this?”

“Gurrrr.”

“Come down and I’ll make sure your dad is safe later.”

Anyway, Honey, who couldn't stand anything shiny, made a fuss, but Geo shook his head. No matter what, it felt too strange to give the beast's intestines.

“Let’s just dismantle it.”

Geo cut open the stomach from the anus to the ribs. This was the first time he had done this kind of dissection, but fortunately, no unfortunate incident occurred where the internal organs were ruptured.

“The blood needs to drain properly.”

“Huh?”

“If you don’t drain the blood in time, the blood will seep into the flesh. Then, the flesh itself will easily deteriorate, and it will become too tender… If possible, you should drain the blood right after slaughtering the animal.”

The remaining internal organs were carefully taken out so as not to burst.

“If it explodes, it will be a disaster.”

You will see hell.

The leather should start from the hind legs, which are easy to reach.

“I’m not sure if I can use the leather, there’s too much fat.”

“Honeyy ...

“It needs to be dry enough to be made into something with leather, but it’s still pretty fluffy, so if you make it into a cloak, it’ll be useful when you get back to reality.”

“Kkuk.”

“I can’t keep relying on you.”

The day before the tour, Honey helped Geo, who was thinking about drawing a picture because he didn't have any winter clothes. Just holding Honey warmed up his whole body, so he didn't need any separate winter clothes.

But that couldn't happen every time.

“I guess I’ll have to trim the leather.”

Anyway, it was a good thing that quite a bit of fat was coming out.

“The meaty flavor is pretty good. The fat also has a savory smell. Don’t throw away this fat, but refine it and save it so that you can use it later when you make a stir-fry. The flavor will be doubled.”

“…….”

“Eating fat as it is isn’t as tasty as you think.”

Geo's heart warmed at the sight of Honey staring intently at the province.

It's like looking at a mirror or an album. This is family. It was clear that Honey was a big eater, just like me.

“Are you thinking of gaining more weight while you’re eating?”

“Kung.”

“If you don’t like it, then don’t say anything.”

The thick hide was cut off. I slowly peeled off the deer's fur while checking the deer's muscle fibers. Fortunately, the hide was not that hard compared to the abundance of fur, so I was able to work without much difficulty.

“Starting from the hind legs… to the torso….”

The hind legs, where the bones are directly connected without flesh, were stripped of their hide starting from the ankle bone area in humans. Next came the torso, forelegs, and then the skin was completely removed along with the deer head.

Surprisingly, the leather was quite intact thanks to the separation without any mistakes.

“Let’s separate the fat.”

“Gulp.”

“…Just have a taste.”

Geo gave permission for Honey, who coveted the fat, to taste it, and Honey, who tasted the fat with her father's permission, writhe in pain.

“I told you it won’t taste good right now.”

“Ku, ku… kururu….”

“Trust me, Dad. I know damn well that food is tasteless.”

“Kurururururur….”

“Is it worth crying?”

Honey was shocked by the tastelessness of the fat compared to the exquisite aroma and cried in sorrow. Geo put Honey, who was unable to recover from the shock of the monster, into the hood of his cloak.

“Now we need to start dismantling in earnest.”

Now that the entrails, skin, and fat were all removed, it was time to remove the meat.

'The scent is definitely as good as the system described.'

They say that wild animal meat is tough and has a gamey smell, but this didn't look like that at all.

Since Geo enjoyed cooking quite a bit, he knew very well what raw meat smelled like. No matter how well-raised the veal was, it had a peculiar, fishy smell.

But this deer didn't have that unpleasant smell.

“…It smells a bit like nuts.”

Strictly speaking, the scent was closer to walnuts than peanuts.

“That’s funny.”

This was the first time I smelled this kind of scent from meat, so I was a little taken aback, but it wasn't a strange feeling like mint-flavored potato chips. Rather, the scent was quite harmonious, so I felt a different kind of pleasure.

“It’s definitely a different world.”

“Crunch?”

Even though they appear to be similar ingredients, they differ slightly in flavor and taste from those on Earth.

“Actually, it’s a bit of a shame that the heart is such a jewel. The heart of a freshly slaughtered animal is a pretty good ingredient for cooking, so I was thinking of roasting it… but I think it might be a bit questionable to eat it in this condition.”

“Gurrrr.”

“Yeah, I don’t know, but you can eat it. Dad will cook it for you.”

It won't taste good in this state.

“…But there’s quite a bit more than I expected….”

Remove the soft flesh buried deep inside the back, the old man. Dismantle the legs and peel off the hard flesh.

"hmm."

This part seemed like it needed to be cooked slowly. The meat on the upper leg was soft enough to eat.

Besides that, if you remove all the ribs and sirloin… .

“Taran.”

“…….”

“A mountain of meat has formed.”

“Kung.”

“Are there a lot of sheep?”

“Cur.”

“I see.”

It wasn't for nothing that the system told us to dry processed meat in the sun. With so much meat in such quantities, it seemed best to store most of it by salting or drying it.

“It won’t spoil if you put it in the ice storage… but I think it’s better to make it if you can.”

First of all, beef jerky and sausage came to mind.

“Should I have the jerky first?”

Sausages take much longer, you know.

“Let’s get rid of some of the blood first.”

“Gulp?”

“Even if you hang it upside down and drain the blood, not all of it will come out. It wasn’t hung up for that long, so to properly remove the odor, you need to soak it in water and drain the remaining blood.”

Geo soon came out of the cabin carrying a large basin.

“Honey, put the meat in.”

“Crunch!”

Honey, who was held hostage with a delicious jewel heart, was a good worker.

The two of them put the meat for jerky in a large basin and poured plenty of water from the stream that flowed leisurely around the cabin. The streams scattered here and there in the forest were very useful even in normal times.

“If it was made on Earth, I would have put some Cheongju in it too….”

There was no problem because there was only wine as alcohol and the meat itself had almost no gamey smell.

“I should make some seasoning before the blood runs out.”

“Crunch?”

“The crops in the garden have all grown, so shouldn’t we make use of them now?”

After washing his hands that were stained with the deer's blood, Geo picked some crops from the monster field and returned to the cabin. Fortunately, the monster field did not get angry at Geo for taking some of the crops.

“It’s clear that you know who your father is. It was worth raising you with sunlight and water.”

Geo, standing in the kitchen, took some powders off the shelf.

“And let’s use some Cheongdo.”

I took out the dried goji berries that I had kept in the corner of the kitchen. I had saved them before giving them to Yoo Seong-un.

“You have to add something like this to make it sweeter.”

“Kururu….”

“It may seem strange, but it’s surprisingly delicious.”

The sweet and salty taste was an unchanging truth wherever you went.

Geo checked the materials.

“Raw onions. Since there’s a lot of meat, about 10… The garlic and ginger powder are already here. I’ll add some sugar as well. I think it’ll be fine if I add a little bit of dried pollack….”

Making jerky wasn't that difficult.

Finely chop the cleaned onions and make them into a paste, then mix in various powders that are spicy and pungent and remove the strong smell. Add a little bit of cilantro to add sweetness and a little bit of sugar to remove the rough taste, and the jerky seasoning is complete.

“I think the blood is slowly draining.”

After I put the seasoning on a plate and washed the cutting board and knife, quite some time had passed.

Geo left the cabin, looking at the sky between the leaves that was already starting to get dark. Honey, who shined like soft moonlight at night, helped him not to stumble in the darkness.

“Ah… I think this is about right.”

“Gurrrr?”

“This is just water with blood in it. I’ll give you something else later.”

Geo returned to the kitchen after placing the moist meat on a plate.

“I should hurry up and go to sleep too.”

The rest was now simple.

Lightly shake off the moisture from the meat, and when it feels dry enough, season it thoroughly with the previously prepared seasoning sauce. After letting the seasoning soak deep into the meat, Geo washed his hands.

“It’s over….”

“…….”

“…Honey, why do you keep coveting my guts?”

Even though he was my son, his tastes were incomprehensible.

In the end, the deer's intestines were deliciously shared by Honey and her waterfowl friends. There was something mysterious and bizarre about the golden waterfowl lake with bloody intestines floating around.

“Oh, except for this.”

“Kung.”

“I’m going to make sausages.”

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (38)

Episode 38

When Geo, who had successfully completed the jerky content, fell asleep.

The world outside the frame was busy with work hours.

“That’s why you called me.”

“Hey kid, let’s talk, why do you have such a scary face?”

“If you think that I am only in charge of ‘Portrait of Geo’, you are very mistaken….”

“I’ll give you an incentive.”

“Fucking capitalist society.”

Yoo Seong-un was summoned by the guild leader.

“Didn’t I tell you that I would organize the report and upload it soon?”

“How can I wait until then?”

“Why can’t I wait for this?”

“I know.”

“I don’t know.”

“You have to look a person in the face and talk to him.”

“What an extreme insult to our highly developed modern society.”

“The world these days is so heartless. Our employees are even more so.”

“I don’t know what kind of affection this shitty world expects, and I don’t know why you ask that of me.”

“Everyone is so immersed.”

“You’re saying something that doesn’t make sense, even though it’s your taste.”

Bisabal smiled brightly and poured some fruit juice for Yoo Seong-un, who had a very tired face.

“Would you like to drink some to cheer yourself up?”

“Is it poison?”

“Oh my, this is a gift from our precious portrait master, but it’s poison?”

“Please give me some poison. I’ll take it and lie down….”

No matter how gentle 'Portrait of Geo' was, it was the original existence, and if we look at it simply, it was a monster. It was difficult enough to deal with a precious humanoid monster, but that was not the only task assigned to Yoo Seong-un.

“I heard that the sea has been very noisy lately, so I was called out again.”

Yoo Seong-un was also taking on external requests.

“I looked into it and the movements of the children of the origin were strange. I will submit a report on that part soon. Probably tomorrow or the day after….”

“You can report that later. It wasn’t my request either.”

“Are you stupid?”

“So, can you tell me about Geo now?”

“I knew this would happen.”

By the way, Visabal hasn't been able to talk to Geo yet.

“Since you act so burdensome, isn’t that why Geo avoids talking to you?”

“No, what did I do?”

“There are many employees who have seen the black cloak, but the guild leader has never spoken to them even once. This is dereliction of duty.”

“I told you I was trying to talk?”

“I meant to suggest that we change our approach a bit.”

It was a problem related to Geo's characteristics.

“Doesn’t Geo hate rude people?”

“I don’t hate you.”

“That’s true, but….”

There are two things I dislike about 'Portrait of Geo'.

Rude, mean, or rude.

‘… but even though I dislike rude people, I don’t view them in a completely negative light.’

Aren't there people who like dogs and cats but hate reptiles?

That's roughly how Geo disliked rude people. He didn't disparage their existence, but he didn't enjoy dealing with them.

“That kind of indifferent side is quite similar to the child of the origin.”

“I guess so. Even if they claim to be human, they can’t be like humans in every way. They might be trying hard to ignore the fact that they’re not human….”

Actually, Geo just didn't have any thoughts about it.

“Well, I guess criminals don’t have that kind of indifference.”

While he would think, "That could happen," when faced with rude opponents, Geo showed clear disgust when faced with malice. Although he had never actually encountered a criminal, this was something that could already be known from his usual words and actions.

“Either way, you have to be careful. Guild leader, you have to be careful too.”

“I will try to control myself.”

“I guess I’ll just keep saying this. Anyway, so….”

The reason why Bisabal called Yoo Seong-un was obvious.

“Are you curious about what Geo looked like while touring Seoul?”

“Of course I’m curious. A being of unknown origin roamed the human world. And it even returned safely without causing any major trouble?”

"you're right."

Of course, there was one uncomfortable fact.

“Has one of the priests of the sun gone missing?”

“Hey, that’s about it. When I looked into it, it didn’t look that clean.”

“So it seems like they are keeping quiet internally as well.”

“Since the induction ceremony is coming up soon, I guess you don’t want to make it public anymore.”

“…It seems like Geo may have had something to do with the missing person case.”

A hunter who is good enough to be a curator must have more than ordinary observation and memory skills. Yoo Seong-un remembers a man in scholar's clothing he encountered at Gyeongbokgung Palace, and the priest who went missing this time was that man.

“That day, Geo made a hand gesture in the shape of a camera and looked at the man.”

“If we consider the camera as a portrait of Geo, wouldn’t it be closer to a picture frame?”

“That could be true. Anyway, after I made eye contact with the man, I suggested that we leave Gyeongbokgung Palace, but he didn’t seem to be in a very good mood.”

“Are you feeling bad because you met a bad person who doesn’t suit your taste?”

“I think that is highly likely.”

“Geo, you’re so good at empathizing with people. That’s good information.”

When confirmed with Bisabal’s information power, he was already a priest with a dirty back. Yoo Seong-un trusted Bisabal, and the two of them did not even consider the possibility that the priest Geo dealt with was not a villain.

“But the fact that he handled it quietly shows how much understanding Geo has of human society. He probably didn’t want it to become a fuss.”

No. It was just Honey's independent action while Geo was sleeping. It's not that Honey didn't want to cause a commotion, but rather, she sensed the threat to her father, dealt with it, and then went back.

However, Geo didn't seem to be that thoughtless. Rather, he seemed like a quiet person because he knew a lot, and the two continued their conversation under the assumption that Geo already knew all of this.

“In this case, I wonder what would happen if I confronted the criminal head-on.”

“Why are you curious about something like that? Don’t be so curious.”

“It’s a buried car.”

“…….”

Do you want to be like that at that age?

'I shouldn't grow old like that.'

Yoo Seong-un ignored Bisabal, who pretended to be pitiful.

“The most surprising thing about this tour and observation is that Geo lowered himself to the level of a human.”

“…Lower your level?”

Visabal looked surprised for the first time in a long time.

“Geo? Are you saying that you have lowered yourself to the level of a human?”

“Yes, it’s amazing.”

“Before it was surprising….”

Visabal considered his words for a moment. He soon found the right words.

“It’s gross.”

As expected, Geo wasn't human.

“You dig up my flesh so nonchalantly.”

“I was also shocked when I first saw it. If Geo were human, he would never have made such a judgment.”

“I can’t sympathize even more if it’s just to avoid causing a fuss.”

Although Bisabal had never talked to Geo, he had 'seen' him many times. The level of Geo that Bisabal knew was incomparable to that of a mere human.

“But the fact that you brought yourself down to the point where you felt like a human being….”

It was no different from torture, like being torn to pieces alive.

“Do you look healthy?”

“There was nothing unusual that I could see, and he had the same blank expression as usual.”

"okay."

Geoya was originally human, so the feeling wasn't strange. However, to other people, it was an act of more eccentricity than gouging out one's own eyes, cutting off one's limbs, and taking out one's internal organs.

“Was there anything else unusual?”

"uh…."

Yoo Seong-un chose a light topic.

“I heard you like to eat.”

“Why do you keep giving me food as gifts?”

“You seemed interested in both eating and cooking.”

So there was something I was worried about.

“I was afraid I might get caught if I wasn’t careful.”

“Oh my.”

That was a bit of a problem.

“I told you I already told you about that part, right?”

“I don’t know if you understood.”

“Rather, the presence of benevolent sources is much more difficult to deal with.”

If it were a normal monster, it could be dealt with normally, but since it requires constant interaction between the two, there were more things to worry about. It was like protecting was more difficult than attacking.

“Still, it’s fortunate that the will to cooperate seems strong.”

“I guess he’s a good guy after all….”

Geo was definitely a nice guy, except for the creepiness of the situation.

“It’s a threat just by existing.”

“Until then, there’s nothing we can do about it, right?”

“I know, I know.”

But regardless of Geo's sincerity, constant vigilance seemed necessary.

"…ah."

“What else is there?”

“It’s a story about Geo’s personality.”

“Personality is already interesting.”

“Geo, who had lowered his level, really looked human.”

This one needed a little explanation.

“It was to the point where he seemed like a completely different being from the usual Geo.”

“If that’s the case, then it’s not just a matter of high or low status, right?”

“It has been confirmed that it also has some effect on personality.”

“Is this a side effect of lowering the level?”

“Isn’t that more likely? It’s better for us since this is more harmless, but….”

There was something eerie about Geo, who was often seen wandering around the building at dawn, or in the paintings. He was almost like a grim reaper.

'No, it would be closer to death itself, without will or emotion.'

He wears a pitch-black cloak, his footsteps are barely audible, he always carries his luggage on his back, and he walks neatly like a nobleman, looking at the world with curious eyes. Nevertheless, his expressionless, gloomy face has a coldness to it.

That low temperature didn't mean that Geo's personality was cold. It just seemed to say that his very existence couldn't contain warmth.

“Geo, who did not lower his status, was very polite, neat, and serious. Even among those who did not necessarily talk to Geo and only saw his portrait, many commented that it looked like he was painting someone’s deathbed.”

Geo felt like a being that embodied a funeral.

And that farawayness.

“You can never call him human.”

“But is it really something that should be discussed to the extent of personality change?”

“We have confirmed that it definitely has an impact.”

Geo, who had lowered his class, seemed like a really ordinary person.

“A person who is a bit blunt and polite.”

But the usual Geo was different.

“A little more arrogant.”

“Hmm?”

“No, the word arrogant sounds a bit weird… how should I put it….”

It's difficult to express.

“…as if he were a high person….”

Geo looked down at the humans.

As someone who has a hobby of keeping insects might see the curious ants carrying loads, or find them cute.

“In fact, Geo gave gifts to people several times. It was a concept of compensation, but it was clearly in the form of a sergeant. He said he was an ordinary 29-year-old human being, but he evaluated and praised employees who were much older than him.”

The scribe asked him.

“But Geo, who lowered his level, was different?”

“Yes, he really seemed like an ordinary young man back then.”

The 'Geo' confirmed by Yoo Seong-un was a 29-year-old man of good manners and few words.

“That’s a bit too much… There were times when I was overly curious, or when I tried to pay the price with bail….”

“He’s not a real human, so there’s nothing he can do about his unique characteristics. But despite that, I find it really amazing that he behaves like a normal young man.”

“He said he took separate measures, so that must have had an impact.”

There were also some concerns.

“I normally wouldn’t think of doing anything because of his high status, but since he looks like an ordinary 29-year-old young man, I was suspicious that he might have fallen for some strange scam.”

“…Is that about it? But I also have emotional skills….”

“When he was transformed into a human, not only was his personality much more gentle, but his abilities also seemed to be limited. Even his emotional skills could only be confirmed by making hand gestures in the form of a frame.”

And one more thing.

“The longer I was out, the weaker I became.”

It was just that he had been exposed to modern society for the first time in a long time and had lost some of his energy, but as a meteor who cared deeply about each and every one of Geo's conditions, he had no choice but to give it a wider range of meanings.

“I’m worried that other people might touch it.”

“That would definitely be a problem.”

“Right?”

“Geo too, but that’s….”

The visage brushed my chin.

“Lowering the level doesn’t change the essence.”

Let's say we compress one of two large pieces of metal into a very small size.

If that were the case, one side would obviously be bigger and the other smaller, but the weight would be the same. In fact, because it was smaller, it would be easier to hurt humans.

A similar example is a bomb. Even if you make a bomb into a small and cute shape, it will still explode the moment you light it. In fact, the more compressed it is, the more violent the explosion may be.

“It’s just a guess since there’s no exact analysis… but Geo thinks of himself as a human, so if you poke at his true nature, the backlash will be much greater. There’s no need to cause such a disaster.”

“I think so too.”

“What if the entire nation didn’t agree to commit suicide together?”

So, when Geo became a 'human', it seemed that he needed certain protection.

“I guess I’ll have to get a hunter’s license.”

“If only that were there, there would definitely be less trouble.”

In this world, hunters were a kind of powerful people and celebrities. When a dispute arose, most conflicts were resolved simply by showing the hunter ID. This was because the association thoroughly prevented fights between hunters.

“And one more thing.”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking.

“This is also a personality issue.”

“What other problems could there be here?”

“When he was human, Geo could be defined as a 29-year-old young man named ‘Sergio’. Right?”

But I definitely witnessed the meteor shower.

“When Geo stepped into Cheonggyecheon….”

“…….”

“And when I took the water taxi.”

A change has occurred in Geo.

“I was looking at the water as if I was looking at someone else.”

Those eyes did not belong to Geo, a blunt and reserved 29-year-old youth.

Rather, he seemed to have more experience, had more distinct emotions, and had a clear sense of distance, but he was not cold, but rather gentle like a beloved model student. There was even a light and cheerful part to his smile that was engraved in his mind like a cool sea breeze.

In many ways, it was different from the previous 'Sergio' or 'Portrait'.

“There was also a change in appearance. The hair turned white and the eyes became watery.”

“Oh, that’s pretty similar to the meteor curator, isn’t it?”

“It felt a little different for me. It’s true that we’re in a similar category, but….”

The color was much warmer.

Like the summer sun, or the surface of the sea.

“…….”

It wasn't certain.

“Let’s find out more.”

“Let’s do that.”

I knew too little about Geo.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (39)

Episode 39

The last piece of jerky hung in the yard.

“…….”

Geo clapped his hands.

“There is no separate meat field.”

“Gulp.”

“This dad agrees, it’s a beautiful sight.”

However, not all meat was made into jerky. Some raw meat was kept in the ice storage, believing that the forest would not spoil the ingredients, and… .

“We should either make the leftover meat into sausages or store it.”

The system said that 'processed meat dried in the sun' would be effective. So, I first marinated the minced meat and spread it like dried fish, but I intentionally used only the soft parts so that it would be easy to eat later.

It was time to deal with the leftover meat from making jerky.

“I intentionally separated the intestines and stomach to remove any unpleasant odor, so you can start using it soon.”

They didn't give all the deer's entrails to the waterfowl. They left out the long, rope-like intestines and the stomach, which was clearly full of traces of having eaten a lot.

Since you've removed all the smelly stuff and soaked apples, lemons, and onions in water, you won't have any more headaches from weird smells.

“As far as I know, there was plenty of meat left.”

“Gurrrr.”

“I’m still not very good at slaughtering… There’s a lot of broken pieces of meat, so I think it’ll be suitable for making sausages.”

It wouldn't be bad to use it for national defense, but if the system wanted to increase the effectiveness of the tree antler deer, didn't it tell you to produce it in the form of 'processed meat dried in the sun'?

It seemed more effective to roll up the meat into sausages and spread them out than to dry the pieces individually. It's also a great way to store scrap meat.

“Let’s make soup with the remaining bones and meat later.”

“Gurrrr!”

I thought it might be okay to make the bone broth in advance.

“Then the important question now is how to season it.”

Honey was delighted.

"honey."

"pig?"

“Cur.”

"okay."

I felt like I had finally accepted my own identity.

“Since I’m here, I’d like to try some different spices….”

Even a cursory glance would tell that this forest of cabins was quite large.

The places Geo went to were always the same, and there were many places and fruits he had yet to see.

“Shall we go exploring for the first time in a while?”

“Knock knock knock.”

“Of course I’ll take you.”

When I recalled the sight of them eating deer entrails in a combative manner, I felt very sturdy.

'The animals of this forest may be friendly to me, but... there's no rule that says animals from other dimensions should be friendly. I'm scared, so I have to take Honey with me.'

Yes, Geo was nervous.

“No matter how much I think about it, the invasive species were severe.”

“Ugh…?”

“If a deer with metal horns and hooves were to run wild, I would be confident I would die in 10 seconds.”

“Kungkung….”

“Protect your weak father.”

So now where do you go to find some spices?

“Once you start moving your body, won’t you start to find things you want to do?”

Geo, who had come to a clear conclusion, took out his cloak and put it on. Even though he wore it whenever he felt like going out for a little distance, the cloak was still neat.

'I'll have to upgrade this later too.'

I think I've thought about it more than 50 times already. Usually, people don't touch it.

“…….”

“Curr….”

“I will do it someday.”

As usual, Geo, who also brought a basket, set his top priority.

“I wish I could find some new spices or sauces. There must be some unique ingredients that can only be found in this fantasy world. Like lulupus or goby berries….”

For example, things like pepper, salt, and sugar.

“There is a limit to living in a shack.”

The basic food and spices in the cabin cupboard or storeroom are fully stocked, but it is not known how long they will last, and they may be automatically replenished when they are used up.

“It’s better to prepare in advance rather than drawing everything one by one later and having the hassle of doing it.”

“Gurr.”

“Especially things like salt are essential for survival….”

The water in the lake was salty, so if we evaporated it somehow, salt might come out.

'I haven't tried it yet, but I don't think it's impossible.'

Suddenly Geo muttered.

“It seems like it would be okay if a cow or a chicken fell somewhere.”

He even wished for livestock.

“Then you can get milk and eggs anytime.”

“Gurrrr?”

“You… weren’t you a male?”

I thought it was a male, but I have no evidence to support this. Can it lay eggs?

“Was it a daughter or a son?”

“Kung.”

“Oh, that’s not it.”

“Kung-kung.”

"…oh…."

I guess it seems like there is no gender.

“That’s amazing.”

Indeed, looking at the lake birds that divide their eggs like amoebas and are called water birds, there does not seem to be any particular need for a process such as mating.

Geo nodded.

“I don’t want to bother thinking about it too deeply, so let’s just say he’s my son. Do you agree?”

“Kuruk.”

“Okay.”

Geo was momentarily scared by his limitless powers, but then realized that all he could do with them was make baked potatoes and he relaxed again.

“There’s no way a harmless person like me could be a creature that poses a threat to world peace.”

“…….”

“Just be positive, honey. Your dad is a harmless creature.”

Honey did not give her approval until the end.

“Be firm.”

It was a honey that could say that it wasn't not.

The forest cabin was very cool. A cool breeze blew when they entered the shade, and when they were in the sun, the warm air enveloped them like a blanket spread out in spring.

There was a pleasant elegance to wandering around without any particular purpose, like going on a picnic.

"ah."

Geo, who had been going on a blind path like that, finally reaped a decent harvest.

“I think this is edible.”

“Gulp.”

“Right? The scent is unique too….”

It was a plant with a structure in which small, transparent, tetrahedral fruits hung in clusters like bell flowers.

Milky Way Mary

A flower characterized by transparent fruit and black stems. It was named 'Mary the Milky Way' after the first discoverer, Mary, and its unique appearance. Each plant produces 11 fruits. It is slightly toxic when eaten raw, but when dried and hardened, it can be used as a spice with a spicy and spicy flavor.

“…….”

Who discovered it first?

'There was a first discoverer named Mary?'

This was information that greatly expanded my worldview. Doesn't it mean that the plants and even animals that grow here might exist in another dimension?

“It wasn’t an ecosystem created solely by my imagination.”

“Crunch?”

“No, I don’t feel bad.”

The only thing that was a bit funny was the strangely broad worldview setting.

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.”

Where on earth did I fall?

“Life is a roller coaster after all.”

Method of preparation: If you soak it in the sap of the common tree, the toxicity will be neutralized and drying will stop. If you store it in canned form and grind it with the wings of a forest butterfly and make it into small pills, it will be a good fatigue recovery agent. Store it in a dark place where sunlight does not reach.

The system also taught him the recipe, but he wasn't very interested. Geo only focused on the taste and aroma.

“So it’s called pepper?”

I didn't see any signs of fatigue recovery or anything like that.

Geo, glad to find spices after a long time, quickly picked the fruit of the 'Milky Way Mary'. Since the fruit was already fully ripe, it fell off as soon as he hit it.

“I must remember that.”

Geo muttered, stretching his back as he gathered more than a handful of berries.

“I guess this is the Milky Way galaxy.”

The flower garden, full of small, transparent fruits, was too beautiful to be seen alone. Perhaps because the forest was so dark, the transparency of the fruits stood out even more, so much so that it looked like the Milky Way.

“It would be even prettier if you saw it at night.”

“Gurrrr….”

“Anyway, the pepper has been taken care of.”

Sniff sniff, I tried to smell it, but now there was no smell.

“…Is it a structure that gives off a scent when dried?”

Like the goji berry.

'What kind of spiciness is it?'

It was said to have a spicy and tangy scent, but I couldn't tell exactly what it was.

“It might not be pepper, but more like a small, hot chili pepper.”

“Gurr?”

“Or maybe it’s similar to the prickly ash berry? But prickly ash is more on the tingly side than spicy… I guess I’ll have to dry it myself to find out what kind of dishes it can be used in.”

The small fruit sparkled like transparent beads, but it felt fragile and rustling, as if it were made of thin plastic. Inside, it felt like there was firm flesh rather than a rind… but it seemed like it could be easily crushed.

“If you dry this, it will become hard.”

It was a strange plant that seemed to come out of a fairy tale. It even looked like it came from a fairy tale.

“I should try it sometime when I grill meat.”

Geo felt the worth of life and held the basket in his arms.

In the past, pepper was treated almost like gold on Earth, and that was exactly how Geo felt right now.

“Are there any other spices?”

“Kur?”

“No matter what, it’s too boring to just make it with pepper.”

“Kkuk.”

“Let’s go in a little further.”

Sausages can be made in a variety of ways.

“First of all, meat and fat are the basic preparations.”

This part was already prepared by dividing it into parts. To prevent it from spoiling, I placed it in a cool warehouse and covered it with a large cloth. When all the other preparations were gathered, I planned to start working on the minced meat.

The meat I slaughtered this time didn't have any gamey smell, but I needed other spices to enhance the flavor. It wasn't fun to just make sausages with salt, pepper, and meat.

“Any sausage should have a deep aroma and flavor.”

Luckily, we have already found 'Milky Way Mary' who can do both chili and pepper.

“But this alone is not enough.”

The fun part about making sausages is that the taste and aroma can change dramatically depending on what herbs and spices you add to the filling.

Even just the Milky Way Mary, which is supposedly a mixture of chili peppers and peppers, would make a decent sausage… .

“Let’s keep going for now.”

“Gurrrr.”

“You have to let us know if a dangerous animal jumps out.”

Geo, who could be called Honey's father, instinctively knew that this round water bird was not weak at all. Although Honey was small and precious, she was acting as a strong bodyguard.

Geo continued talking as they walked through the forest.

“There are important conditions for making delicious salted meat.”

First, adjust the amount of salt according to the storage period and climate.

“It may sound like useless talk in a forest like this where the food itself doesn’t rot….”

“Huh?”

“If there is too much salt in the salted meat, it can be stored for a long time, but it becomes difficult to use in cooking. However, if there is too little salt, the salting itself will not proceed properly and the meat will spoil.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“Yeah, it’s a hassle.”

And that's the funny thing. All the tricky recipes in the world had a fatal charm that stimulated Geo's spirit of challenge.

“The temperature in this forest is moderately mild, but I think it’s great because you don’t have to worry about the meat spoiling as long as it’s salted well. I don’t like overly salty jerky or sausages anyway.”

“Gulp….”

“If it’s too salty, you can’t eat much. You’ll get full quickly.”

“Kkuk.”

“I thought you would agree with me.”

The rich confirmed their trust in each other.

“And second. Dry it for its intended use.”

“Hmm?”

The reaction was something along the lines of, 'Is there a use for salted meat?'

“Not all sausages are the same.”

I was really happy because I didn't have to worry about anything alone since I had a son by my side. That's why people need friends.

“It’s natural that the meat becomes tougher the longer it’s dried, so there are many different types.”

“Kururu….”

“Of course you’ll eat anything, but think about the people’s position too.”

There are more types of cooking in the world than there are people.

“There are sausages that you eat while they are still fresh, and there are sausages that you cook and eat after they are completely hardened.”

The former is mainly eaten boiled or grilled, while the latter is eaten boiled like a raw sausage or steamed.

“If you heat up a raw sausage, the juices will overflow, but a completely dried sausage won’t. No one wants to chew on a hard sausage, so they try to fill in the moisture that’s lacking in it somehow… I think that’s what it’s like.”

And thirdly.

“This is the most important thing. Taste and aroma.”

“Gurrrr.”

Honey agreed vehemently.

“You look like a gourmet.”

In fact, I think 99.9% of the conditions for a great sausage are based on this.

“This dad doesn’t like things that don’t taste good.”

“Ugh.”

This time, Honey agreed vehemently.

“So, since I’m making it, I want to make it well this time too.”

Depending on the type of sausage, the form of the ingredients that go in also slightly differs.

“There are endless ways to make sausage. If you want a mild meat, just add a little salt and a little spice to remove the gamey smell. If you want a spicy side dish, add some spices that will give it a spicy flavor and make your tongue tingle.”

“Ugh….”

“If you want to experience a wider variety of flavors, you can add vegetables as well as spices. Of course, that’s a bit difficult if the vegetables produce too much water… In my experience, if you salt them and drain them before adding them, it’s good because it prevents water or mold from forming inside the sausage.”

Geo rolled his eyes and imagined the sausage he would make.

“I’m starting to want to eat something spicy, so I’d like to find some spices or vegetables that can warm my tongue. When making sausages like that, if you add some ingredients that give it a slightly bitter taste, the flavor will be richer. Of course, if you add too much, you’ll end up with a weird meal….”

Geo's self-esteem was too high to be anxious about such things.

“There’s no way I, with the soul of an accomplished artist, would make such a mistake. Just trust me.”

“Gulp?”

“…Are you worried that spicy food might not suit your taste? Well, it might be too spicy for a bird.”

Geo nodded.

“Then I guess I’ll have to make a mild sausage too. The same goes for making sausages. If you want to make it taste richer, you can add ingredients that have a mild, fragrant flavor. Things like herbs with a mild flavor would be good.”

“…….”

“But I still want to eat something spicy. How about making one spicy one and one really salty sausage? It would be nice to have some ingredients that go well with spices like Milky Way Mary or ginger.”

“…….”

Geo nodded confidently at Honey's bright gaze that said, 'Can you really do that?'

“There’s nothing this dad can’t do.”

Geo was confident that he would do anything to eat something delicious.

Then something nice caught his eye.

Crying hem

The unrefined weeping buds are dark blue-green in color and have a spicy taste and aroma. Their toxicity can be removed by washing them in water mixed with sugar and sap from the Chinese juniper tree.

“That’s a perfect explanation.”

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (40)

Episode 40

'Spicy taste and aroma.'

It couldn't be anything other than what Geo was looking for.

“…….”

Of course, there was more to the explanation of the crying hem.

… a herb that grows like a concave bell, and when dried in the sun for more than a month, it turns pink and its leaves become plump. The pink weeping buds that have been purified in this way have a sweetness that is strong enough to tear your tongue. The rurufu petals pickled in its essence are very helpful in the recovery of the optic nerve.

Method of preparation: Dry the weeping leaves in the sun for more than a month. When they are dark pink and the leaves are about 3cm thick, it is the right time. Squeeze the sap from the leaves that have absorbed moisture from the air and become plump. This is an excellent painkiller, and if you put the petals of the lulupu in it and store it in a cool place, you can make a medicine that is good for optic nerve recovery within 3 days.

“…….”

But it was too long.

I just passed it over.

'I need spices, not medicine.'

What he eventually noticed was only the 'spicy taste and aroma' part. He was talking about recovering the optic nerve and was just saying that he wanted to eat the sausage deliciously, so he didn't need medicine.

“Does it look like a morning glory?”

Although not exactly the same, it was quite similar in form, with leaves that fluttered like lace and a vine that wrapped around trees. However, the leaves were much larger than those of the trumpet vine… .

“It’s almost as big as my hand.”

“Gurrrr?”

“Yeah, it’s pretty big.”

Even though Geo's hands were not small, the size of his tears was just enough to overflow his hands.

“It’s also unusual that the vines are a deep white color.”

The leaves, called 'weeping leaves', boasted a gradation of green that became darker towards the tip. The vines connected to the leaves were an opaque white, which would really stand out when seen in the evening.

"anyway…."

Got the pepper.

'I should try making red pepper powder with this.'

I really liked it.

“Let me check the condition.”

I tore open the hem of the tear and sniffed it, and indeed, the savory and spicy scent was exquisite.

It wasn't exactly the same as the peppers on Earth, but it was similar, and it had a strangely soft flavor that I thought would go well with the nutty flavor of this meat. The complex flavor seemed to be confusing.

'Is it a scent with a bit of chili pepper and mala? It also has a soft, sweet scent similar to pandan leaves. Since the meat smells like walnuts or hazelnuts, if I cook it well, I can make a tantanmyeon-flavored sausage in no time.'

Geo muttered after thinking that far.

"but…."

There was a problem.

“I think this will become burdensome if I use it too much.”

As a person who eats everything well, I would have liked the pepper flavor to be strong, but the flavors of mara, star anise, and pandan leaves were a little strong.

Even if you just pass over the sweet and sour taste of the pandan leaves, which are only fleeting, star anise,

“This is a bit too strong.”

“Gurrrr….”

“…….”

It was even more so when I tore it into small pieces and put it in my mouth.

“Yeah, it’s so strong.”

The scent was so strong that it went beyond my nose and pierced my brain.

“Assassination?”

Technically it could be considered suicide, but it was an extremely strong scent.

Star anise is a spice mainly used to remove the off-flavor of pork, and is characterized by a savory yet somewhat bittersweet aroma.

The problem was that the 'sweet' part combined with the mysterious sweetness of the pandan leaves gave it an overly heavy feel.

“I guess I shouldn’t use this too much.”

I saw the explanation earlier that this guy can be completely addicted if you do something about it, and seeing the strange sweet smell mixed in here and there, I vaguely understood. If you do something well, it could become that addictive.

“But it’s not bad.”

“Curr….”

“Don’t worry, honey, I won’t give it to you to eat raw.”

They were all going to end up in sausages anyway.

“…….”

“…….”

It was a thought that suddenly occurred to me around that time.

“…Are all the ingredients that go in medicinal herbs?”

“Kkuk.”

“What kind of sausage am I going to make?”

Anyway, if there are too many, the remaining ones will be thrown into the meteor shower.

* * *

After a long adventure.

Geo returned to the cabin and declared proudly.

“I did it.”

I found ginger.

“It’s very different from the ginger I know, but the scent and taste are similar, so let’s call it a ginger.”

“Kung-kung.”

“It’s not that I’m trying to gloss over it, it’s that they’re really similar.”

Arum

It has a light brown skin and a light pink color. The flesh is dark red. It contains a lot of starch, so it is efficient when dried into powder. It can be eaten without a separate refining process. A ginger plant characterized by a pungent aroma.

Method of preparation: If you cut it thinly and dry it, it is good for headaches. If you make it into powder and dry it in the sun, it is good for the digestive system and excellent for restoring immunity.

"right?"

“Kururu….”

After all, there isn't just one type of ginger on Earth.

“There’s something called galangal. It has a more complex aroma and milder flavor than the ginger we mostly use back home….”

“…….”

“It’s okay to say you’re bored if you’re bored.”

“Kkuk.”

“Okay, then.”

The 'Arum' that he found this time really caught Geo's eye.

The taste was quite spicy, but closer to a hot sensation than a tingling sensation. The scent was strong enough to be similar to the ginger commonly used in Korea, and if used well, it seemed like it could be used as a spicy and tangy spice.

“Taran.”

There were many other things I discovered this time.

“This is nutmeg….”

Lavender Walnut

The skin is red, the flesh is white, and the seeds are black. Mainly… .

“Teacher, am I not speaking now?”

… The part that is utilized is the seed, which can be used raw or dried. It is mainly used as a spice characterized by a soft and deep flavor. The peel and flesh can be made into medicine.

Method of preparation: The seeds can be steamed and eaten while soft after peeling off the pulp, or they can be chopped finely or dried hard and used as a spice. If the peel is dried in the sun for more than a day, it becomes a good medicine for joints. If the pulp is squeezed and hardened, it becomes an ointment good for wound healing.

“You are a very stubborn friend.”

“Gurrrr….”

“I’m glad you agree.”

Honey seemed to admit it too.

Anyway, I found a nutmeg called Lavender Walnut. It was a popular spice on Earth because it was not too spicy, but it removed unpleasant odors and made dishes more sophisticated.

And the biggest income.

“Discovering vinegar was truly a great discovery.”

Wow, the wonders of nature!

“It’s not that it’s not, it’s really vinegar created directly by nature….”

“Kururuk?”

“I think it’s a bad habit to eat everything you see as soon as you can, my son. If you do that, you might end up eating something strange and get a stomachache, so let’s learn to control ourselves.”

“Gurrrr….”

“Yes, vinegar is not something that is naturally produced in nature.”

Life is really interesting.

“I was already thinking about making vinegar or alcohol from the goji berries.”

There are many different ingredients that can be used to make vinegar.

“You can make vinegar from grains like rice, barley, and wheat… You can make it from fruits like jujubes and peaches, flowers like lotus and roses, and even honey.”

But the method of making it took quite a bit of effort.

“That’s the way it is with all fermented foods.”

The important thing about fermentation is that if you do it wrong, it will just turn into spoiled porridge. You have to maintain the right temperature and volume and grow the right bacteria to make a proper fermented food.

And as I've thought about it several times, this place is a chef's paradise.

“Vinegar comes out of a large tree on its own.”

It was a rather unusual looking tree.

There were trees with round, bead-like bulges near the roots, and among them, there was one that was particularly hard and had a dark red color.

I smelled a sour scent, so I approached and saw vinegar slowly leaking out from the swollen pillar.

“It was an amazing sight.”

Geo had to call out to the gods once again.

candy trap tree

A tree with a round, swollen base like a candy. It is a monoecious plant, with leaves on the outside, but the fruit grows inside the swollen trunk. If the fruit of the candy trap tree, which has a strong sweet and bitter taste, is not removed in time, it will start to rot from the inside, and depending on various conditions, this fruit mixes with the tree's sap to become vinegar, juice, or fruit wine.

Method: If you take out the fruit before fermentation and soak it in the sap of the common aloe tree, it can be used as an excellent nutritional supplement.

'I should also look for trees that produce juice or fruit wine.'

Anyway, all those miscellaneous materials.

“The time has come.”

Ready to make the sausages.

“This is true content.”

“Kung?”

“You have served your purpose with cuteness. Take a look.”

Geo washed his hands.

“I wonder what the condition of the intestines that were pickled in advance are like.”

Geo approached the basin where the deer's entrails had been stored.

Modern sausages usually use collagen casings, which would be much easier to make, but since this is a forest far from the modern world, Geo had no choice but to stick to the classic method.

“No matter how much I searched, I couldn’t find the casing in the cabin.”

“Huh?”

“Drawing the casing is a bit difficult.”

The casing was made of paint, so I felt like it would tear easily and it was just unsettling. I also thought that it would be a hassle to draw the thin, transparent casing one by one.

Honey, who was looking at the intestines, started to cry. It seemed as if she was saying that it was a different form from what she knew.

“It’s been cleaned, so it’ll be a little different from what you know. All the fat and foreign substances that filled the inside were removed, leaving only the shell, so the shape is a little different from the first one.”

The intestines pickled in sour fruit had no gamey smell.

“Is it because the meat didn’t have a musty smell to begin with?”

After checking the intestines that had been washed and deodorized, Geo lifted the basin containing the intestines. He was now planning to go down to the kitchen and start the work of chopping the meat.

“When making sausages, it’s best to use tough, flavorful cuts. Depending on your taste, deciding how much tough meat to use and what cut to mix it with is one of the joys of cooking.”

“Gurrrr….”

“You shouldn’t eat now, so should we step back a bit?”

He immediately chopped the meat.

“If this continues, everything will be taken away by pigs.”

I had to hurry and make some sausages.

“I think it would be okay to put a little more into this part.”

“Kung?”

“That way it tastes better.”

How you mince the meat also has a big impact on the texture of the sausage.

If you cut the eggs into thick pieces, they won't stick together easily, but will have a bumpy, lumpy texture. If you chop them finely, they will have a soft texture that will slowly fall apart in your mouth.

“It’s better if you mix it moderately.”

On Earth, due to issues with drying, the size of the minced meat is fixed, but here, it was a picture full of the mystery of nature. Thanks to this, Geo was able to plan a sausage with a unique texture.

Slightly coarsely chopped, or completely chopped.

'If you do it this way, the texture will be good, and since the shell will be filled in without any gaps, the appearance will also be good.'

Geo, who had minced all the meat, brought the ingredients to be mixed into the minced meat.

'Milky Way Mary', which adds the flavor of pepper and chili pepper, 'Uleum Jarak', which is in charge of a strong and stimulating taste and flavor, and 'Arum', which is definitely spicy like chili pepper and has a sharp flavor, from the ginger family.

‘Raven walnut’ gently removes fishy smell and adds a luxurious flavor, and ‘sugar trap tree vinegar’ with a sweet and sour taste adds variation to the taste… .

“…….”

I'm excited.

“Good.”

I couldn't contain this excitement.

“Who can have this experience?”

Mysterious ingredients from deep, quiet forests where no human being can be found. An experience of cooking with ingredients that have a flavor you’ve never imagined, while taking in the refreshing phytoncide.

Geo produced about 10 kilograms of sausages that day.

“…….”

“…….”

I guess I was a little over excited.

“Admit your mistakes.”

He nodded.

“You don’t have to worry, it’s okay.”

“Kung.”

“We have Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“Gulp.”

The two agreed on the issue of bad inventory.

* * *

“Geo, are you here?”

Yoo Seong-un went to give Geo some bungeoppang for the first time in a long time.

“The student I met last time was selling bungeoppang, so I bought a bag.”

“I see. Thank you for your kindness.”

“It’s nothing special, so take it. If you really must return the favor, please give me something simple like before.”

“We have just the right food.”

“Oh, really? That’s good, I was out and about.”

How much time has passed?

“…….”

He came out of the gallery carrying a paper bag full of sausages.

“…It’s not appropriate at all.”

I know it's a completely different case, but I felt a little cheated.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (41)

Episode 41 [Forest Guts] [Rating: -] Sausage made from the meat of deer horns and herbs and fruits that grow in the veins of destiny. It is processed by Geo, the master of the forest, and can be accepted by the human body. This sausage, which gives a deep sense of fullness, is excellent for some injuries and restoring immunity. “Help.” “Oh, that’s surprising.” “Please help me.” “Would you stop coming to me every time you receive a gift that is difficult to handle, Curator Yoo Seong-un?” “This is mine, so I can’t share it with anyone else.” Bisabal cheerfully replied to Yoo Seong-un’s sudden appearance. “Then why don’t you ask if I can share it?” “I guess that’s the only way.” “Have you tried this gift?” “I ate about three at home.” Yoo Seong-un nodded. “It was delicious.” “Oh, now that you say it, I suddenly feel drawn to it.” “Wait until I ask Geo and come back.” “If you’re not going to let me eat it, then why did you bring it to me?” “It’s obvious that if someone else sees it, my position will be in trouble.” “Ah, for the safe…” Bisabal smiled bitterly. “As expected, our employees are too cynical.” “Didn’t you say that you collected all those people?” “No matter what, most people use the guild leader as a safe. They don’t treat me very well.” “Who created this atmosphere and are you joking now?” “So what are the effects?” “You’re changing the subject.” Yoo Seong-woon thought for a moment and rubbed the back of his neck. “They say it’s excellent for recovering from injuries and immunity, but I haven’t seen any effects yet because I don’t have any injuries like that. However…” “However?” “I do feel like my eyes are a little clearer.” “Are my eyes clearer?” Even in this world, medical technology related to eyesight has been slow to develop. Worn-out optic nerves tend to recover even less as time passes. In that sense, the effects Yoo Seong-woon mentioned sounded quite interesting. “Is it a definite effect?” “That’s what I feel. If other people eat it too, we’ll have a comparison group, so we can analyze the effects in more detail.” “Then I guess I’ll have to get Geo’s permission first. Ask him when you receive the gift. I don’t think Geo would outright refuse.” “Not only should we not assume the existence of the source like that, but I was out of my mind at the time after working up an all-nighter. I saw the bungeoppang, so I went to give it to him, but did I know that I would receive this gift?” “If you’re really tired, how about eating the cookies I received last time?” “It’s been a while since I finished eating.” Yoo Seong-un was a slave to caffeine again. “The fruit syrup I received before… It didn’t look like anything, but anyway, what did the other employees think of the fruit syrup?” “The response was very good. And he seemed confused. First of all, the biggest advantage of Sumac’s honey is that it ‘restores human physical abilities to their limits’…” “Even if you didn’t see the explanation, you would feel it with your body, so you would be suspicious.” Bisabal asked with a smile. “Would you like a cup of fruit tea before you go?” “…Please.” Yoo Seong-un, who was on the verge of death from overwork, needed to recover. Yoo Seong-un let out a small sigh after drinking the fruit tea that had a rich, savory flavor like soup. It was really delicious, but he felt a sense of doubt that he was consuming such an enormous amount of something just to recover from fatigue. “It would be a great help if you took it into the dungeon. It would also have a significant effect on the mortality rate.” “That’s true.” “But that doesn’t mean there’d be another uproar if you really took it.” “That’s true.” “…It’s also a problem if the source’s existence is too friendly.” It was a new realization. “So the employees weren’t suspicious? They must have felt something was strange?” “They were all curious about the source of the fruit tea, but they didn’t ask me again. I told them that I bought it at an auction, but most of them didn’t understand it.” “So what did you say?” “What do you mean, what do you say? No one asked, so I didn’t say anything. Our employees really hate getting involved in complicated matters." "No one likes to work overtime." "Anyway, they're all just squandering." Bisabal said, drinking her share of fruit tea. "Still, it seemed like not many people guessed that it was a 'piece of art.'" "A piece of art" is a kind of idiom used within the collection, referring to objects, blessings, or curses given to curators by works locked in Bisabal's gallery. "No matter what, there are almost no people who would think that there would be works that give food as gifts…" "I guess so." Among the works gathered in Bisabal's gallery, there were quite a few beings with egos. Depending on how sophisticated the ego was, a high-level curator would be in charge, and the curator would take care of the bond between the works and himself. So very, very rarely, very exceptionally, a curator would receive a 'piece' like this. "Usually, they give things." "Food is an object, after all." "Rather, I'd give you accessories, paintings, or weapons." "Yes, most of them." There couldn't be any other works that were as delicious as Geo's. "Is cooking your only hobby?" "No, as I said before, I also enjoy drawing." "Those kinds of drawings can become passages or living creatures." "That's right." "Then what would happen if you painted a landscape?" "……." Yoo Seong-un's face crumpled like a crumpled piece of foil. "I'm resting right now, so don't make me nervous." "It wasn't that big of a story." "It was a story that I had a rough idea of, but I don't want to think about it right now." "Poor thing…." "If you say your boss is pitiful, it's just sarcasm, right?" Bisabal nodded with a smile at the sight of his exhausted subordinate. "I'm just curious. Geo can create anything with his drawings, so I'm just curious about what would happen if he painted a landscape." "Maybe it could create another world." "Like a dungeon?" "……." "Wonderful." Bisabal said, rubbing his chin. "Quite a few night guards have witnessed Geo moving through some kind of landscape painting." "That's a little different from what I've heard. Is it a landscape painting instead of a portrait?" "It seems like it's a portrait when Geo is inside, and a landscape painting when he's out. Doesn't it seem convenient?" "That's really annoying..." "They say that the artwork hanging in the hallway disappears around sunrise, so it seems certain that it can be used for transportation.” “But wasn’t that something you already guessed?” “So what I’m curious about is, if Geo can move to an existing place through a painting...” Then. “Can Geo move to another dungeon?” “…….” “I’m curious.” “That...” Yoo Seong-un frowned. “It seems a bit dangerous.” “Is that what you heard?” “I don’t know exactly what the guild master saw in Geo, but from my perspective, where my eyesight isn’t that great, that’s what I think.” “Geo has already been on a tour outside under the guidance of Curator Yoo Seong-un.” “I agree, but what you’re saying now is to expand Geo’s scope of activity.” I felt uncomfortable. “The fact that I show Geo more favor than his work… Of course, I have nothing to say. But this is the nature of gardeners. It’s something engraved in their souls.” Gardeners are like that. They don’t feel threats as threats, and they don’t think of cruelty as cruelty. For them, who tend to the garden, the existence of the source was something they had to take care of. “As I said when I signed the employment contract at the guild master’s suggestion, and as I’ve said many times before, gardeners are not on the side of humans.” They were born as humans and have been tending the garden, so they want both to coexist. It was inevitable that Yoo Seong-un would be captivated by Geo, who seemed very close to the source. Because they couldn’t survive as gardeners without being crazy about the source. It is an age-old taste that cannot and should not change. “But isn’t the guild master a complete human being? If I am not thorough as a curator, you should point it out and fix it.” “…….” “The guild master allows too… much to his work. It wouldn’t be strange if he were worried about that.” Bisabal laughed. “Wasn’t it the same reason that Yoo Seong-woon could use me as a safe?” “…I know that I am not in a position to say anything because I have received help in many ways, big and small, thanks to the guild master’s favoritism.” All of the guild members of the collector’s guild were Bisabal’s collection. His pathetic weakness and excessive favor were all due to Bisabal’s irrational desire to collect. Bisabal loved all of his collections. “No matter what, I think using the world as a testing ground for one's work will have huge repercussions later on." "Repercussions." "Whenever a work outside the standard like Geo appears, the guild master acts like this." "How did I act?" "No matter how the world was ruined, no matter how many people died, as long as they could understand and appreciate my work, it didn't matter." "You saw it well." Bisabal nodded. "That's why I hired curators to take care of it for me, who was busy appreciating it." "……." It was a dirty, irresponsible thing to say, but it wasn't wrong either. Yoo Seong-woon sighed. "If I, a gardener, am taking the side of humans like this, it's really serious." "I thought I was restraining myself, but if Yoo Seong-woon says that, I think I went too far." Bisabal's eyes widened sharply. "But aren't you curious?" Those were the eyes of someone who had no intention of hiding their greed. "I'm curious about what kind of being my work is. I'm really curious about how much of a good young man Geo is, whether he can kill someone, and how much and how he'll kill them if he does." "……." "Geo is a painter. He is also a portrait artist. He is a person who avoids friction. He sees himself as a 29-year-old young man. I wonder how he will fit in with people? How will he react when he experiences unpleasant things? How will he change when he realizes that he is a work of art?" "……." "To be honest, I don't care what happens to the world because of Geo. It makes me angry when my works get damaged because of stupid people, but I'm not afraid when my works get hurt and burn while fighting each other." That was Bisabal's honest greed. "Have you ever heard that the higher your rank, the more you become less human?" "…It's a famous story. Stories about how inhuman S-class Hunters are are popular." "It's embarrassing to say this with such a pitiful physical ability, but I hope you understand that I am also an S-class." He was close to being inhuman. "I wish this world was beautiful and sophisticated enough for me to cherish. Isn't that right?" "……." Yoo Seong-woon's face twisted in fatigue as he heard such absurd words right in front of him. "…Ordinary people don't necessarily consider the possibility of mass murder, even if the world isn't beautiful or ingenious, Guild Leader…" "That's because they have a narrow view of the world. To put it more bluntly, even if the world were to be destroyed because of my work, it would have happened anyway." "The Association President should have heard this. Isn't Bisabal's gallery the only one that the Association, which has strict regulations on dangerous items, trusts?" "I know you said that, but he doesn't really trust me either. It's just that the Association President doesn't have enough time and resources to manage everything himself, and I was the only lesser evil who could take on the increasingly dangerous works." The reason being that he shared half of the government and the Association's work. For that reason alone, Bisabal gained autonomy as a gallery. "So the Association President doesn't trust me. He just needed the space and manpower to consistently manage the minimum." "…Even with such distrust, the association has not taken away the artwork. When I think back, as a researcher there, it was clear that the association coveted the guild leader's gallery…" "That's why life is all about timing. If I had opened this gallery 10 years later, would the association have been so generous?" Bisabal's face brightened as if he had heard a funny joke. "Bisabal's gallery is very famous in the world now. It is much more performative, stimulating, and easily exposed to the public than the association, which quietly conducts research, analysis, and control." "……." "Even the gallery is what I manage. Customers may come, and those customers may buy the artwork. The association cannot suppress this gallery with its long history, where there are customers who support me." Bisabal's face dramatically filled with sadness. "Oh, really… When I think of the artworks that are trapped inside the association, tears well up in my eyes. How harshly they must have been treated to survive." "…That…" "In addition, when I think about the humiliation and pain my precious and delicate works will endure at the association's research institute, I absolutely cannot hand them over. There is a soul in the works." "Oh, yes…" For Yoo Seong-woon, who was once the association's research team leader, this was truly outrageous, but since he was now working under him and receiving convenience, he decided to let it go for now. “So you have no intention of restraining yourself?” “I am restraining myself sufficiently, but I don’t know what more I should restrain myself from.” “This is the Demon King’s Castle.” There was no way to know what kind of catastrophe would occur if it exploded. “If an accident happens, it will really explode. You know that, right?” “That’s why we give curators life insurance, right?” “I wasn’t asking if they knew that. Korea could be erased from the map.” “That would be really scary. I believe that our curators will take care of it before that happens.” “Have you ever seen such an irresponsible director? I hope you realize that this is your gallery.” The gallery in Bisabal was more stimulating and open than the association’s research institute, but it was less safe. 'If we have to safely manage those dangerous and sensitive works in the first place... a little stronger control would be needed.' This place really had a lot of supplies under minimal control. It was the complete opposite of the association's research institute. Bisabal loved my works and managed them with love. One of the basic requirements for the curators here was 'building a strong bond with the works.' "....." As expected, the current Earth was maintained too precariously. 'It's a situation where all systems collapsed and are being rebuilt, so it can't be helped...' Everything was going on solely by the mercy of a small number of powerful people on Earth. 'If just one person had gone astray, there would have been chaos, but fortunately, no such unfortunate incidents have occurred yet.' It seemed like they were holding on. "...We will work harder. In terms of Geo." "In that sense, don't you plan on helping Geo make new friends? He'd be lonely alone." “Aren’t you even thinking of wrapping it up in a big way now? It’s clear that everything I just said went in one ear and out the other.” At this point, it seemed fate that Geo had been sold to Bisabal instead of the association president. “…….” Well, as a gardener, Yoo Seong-woon himself was quite funny for welcoming Bisabal’s art-friendly opinion. He nodded. “I’ll ask him something.” He was planning to go talk to Geo this early in the morning anyway. One question or two would probably be fine. * * * At that moment, Geo. “I made a few.” “Kung?” How many? “Yeah, it’s a lot.” “Kung?” A little? “Yeah, Dad was being a jerk. He was so excited that I couldn’t handle it myself.” “Knock.” “I’ll reflect on it.” He handed Yoo Seong-woon about 5kg of sausages, but he still had 5kg left. “Since I dried them once in the sun, they won’t rot if I store them in an ice warehouse, but…” “Kurur?” “As I said earlier, I was so excited, and I also wanted to give them a present since I’ve neglected the waterfowl’s nest. It’s to share it with everyone instead of just eating it ourselves.” “Kurururururururuk.” “I knew you’d like it too.” The piled up sausages were so generous that they looked like small hills. They were smaller than all the waterfowl living in this forest, but what’s the point of that? The amount wasn’t much of a difference. But Geo was determined. “Try this first. I thought you wouldn’t like spicy food, so I made this light.” He was excited. It would have been fun even if he had made his own sausages with ordinary ingredients, but wasn’t this a dish made with fantasy ingredients? “This is a sausage made with arum, lavender, and vinegar. I also ground up a little Milky Way Mary. To be honest, it’s too light for my taste… but I thought you’d like it.” “Kurururuk.” “That doesn’t mean I won’t eat it.” After a long time, Geo set up a table outside the cabin and finished preparing a meal. The table was filled with freshly cooked rice in a cauldron, baibamenil, which had been seasoned like a vegetable with its toxicity removed, and hot homemade sausages that were baked in the oven and were full of meat juice. “I’ll bring them to the waterfowl nest later. I’ve prepared the table for us to taste first, so let’s eat slowly and stop by the nest later. Do you agree, son?” “Gurgling.” “You are my son after all.” Sergio nodded inwardly as he put the long sausages in his mouth without cutting them. ‘… People who like spicy flavors like me might find it a little bland. To be honest, it’s a little boring, but it’s seasoned just right, so it’s good to eat with rice.’ The sausages, which had been briefly dried in the sun, were very crispy on the outside, perhaps because they had been baked once. On the other hand, the skins, which were made by personally cleaning the intestines, were somehow savory and chewy, and yet soft enough not to resist the teeth. It was a texture that coexisted with crispiness, chewiness, and softness. “Mmm….” Crunch! “Ah, hot.” The contents inside were overflowing with meat juice. The scent of wood gently permeated the roof of my mouth. The sausage, freshly baked in the oven where the wood fire was blazing hot, was hot enough to be hot, and the sweet yet sticky meat juice tightly trapped inside the shell soaked my mouth. Warm. “…….” It was delicious. ‘… It’s made lightly, but it still has a good flavor.’ I reduced the amount of salt as much as possible to bring out the original flavor of the meat, and added various yet complex flavors to fully enhance the compatibility with the original meat. The result was the current sausage. The combination of the subtle nutty flavor of venison and the walnuts that went well with it unified the flavor of the sausage. In addition, the spicy aroma of arum hidden deep inside and the vinegar of the sugar trap fruit on top asserted themselves in a mild yet clear way. 'This tastes better than I thought, I thought it would be very boring.' The faint bitterness from the vinegar itself goes well with the deep smoky scent of the bonfire wood from which the sausage was roasted. The sausage and the cooking method were excellent. "I think they put in the vinegar well." "Kk?" "Is it because it's naturally fermented fruit vinegar? It has a subtle sweetness, but this sourness and bitterness that balances the greasiness without being too strong... It really goes well together." Next was the sausage made exclusively for Geo. Crunch! "..." The red sausage stimulated my taste buds as soon as I took a bite. 'My mouth feels hot.' There was a hotness that somehow clung to my tongue. 'The aftertaste isn't that long. It's a very soft and clean spicy flavor.' All the ingredients I found this time went into the sausage made exclusively for him. Milky Way Mary, which has a clean scent like a combination of chili pepper and pepper, and Ulreum Jarak, which has a strong spicy flavor but also a mysterious and heavy sweet scent. The ginger-scented arum that unifies the mixed scents into one, and the lavender walnut that lightly covers it with a deep, soft scent. Finally, the sugar trap vinegar that adds a sharp sourness here and there to vary the taste… . “…….” Was it a little too much? “But it tastes good.” “Kung.” “Don’t avoid it, it would be okay if you taste it once.” “Kung, kung, kung...” “If you don’t like it, there’s nothing I can do.” Honey’s opinion of avoiding spicy sausages suited Geo’s taste very well anyway. It felt like the empty insides were completely relieved. The feeling of having a shot of samgyetang or going straight to a steam room with a bowl of sikhye and slurping the sikhye with a straw while sweating profusely. This fullness that exactly fills in what is lacking. “Good.” Happiness is not far away. 'I was worried because it was the first time I used this ingredient, but it turned out better than I thought.' The sausage was based on the concept of spiciness, but the overall subtle sweetness and the oil covering the entire meat made the spiciness very clean. If spicy food is cleanly spicy, it should be considered a success more than 90% of the time. "It's worth getting a feel for cooking. This is when grandma's cooking is used." "Kung, kkung, kkung, kkung..." "It's not that my dad made it wrong, it's just that our tastes are a little different." This was a very delicious spicy taste. Sergio, who knows a lot about food, also enjoyed the chicken feet. Usually, when he had a hard time eating spicy chicken feet, he would dip them in oil sauce or drink a sweet drink with them. Then, he could eat it like an intellectual with a much calmer mind. The sausage he made this time was in the same vein. 'The taste and aroma itself are overall spicy and tangy, but the walnuts had a subtle sweetness to them from the beginning. In addition, the lavender walnuts also had a soft sweetness unique to nuts. The vinegar naturally produced by the sugar trap tree, which is said to bear extremely sweet fruit, goes without saying… .' If the spice flavor seemed too strong, the soft scent suppressed it. If it seemed too spicy, the deer fat that was added a little too much washed away the pain on the tongue like silk. If the fat felt too rich, the vinegar asserted its presence sourly and calmed the rumbling stomach. The overall balance was good. 'The arum plays a big role in tying together the complexly intertwined flavors and scents that could feel excessive. It works much better than I expected.' Geo thought of a new dish even though he had food in his mouth. "If you put arum in when you make a dish with various ingredients, the quality of the dish will definitely improve." "Kung...?" "I'll make it less spicy then. It seems like you have an aversion to spicy scents." The arum bound all the spices that showed off their individuality by jumping out in all directions in one place. The stickiness was so effective that he didn't feel burdened at all even though he felt such a complex flavor. 'Also, I paid attention to the texture of this sausage.' Geo nodded. "Doesn't it have its own chewy flavor?" "Gurgling." "Yeah, isn't it delicious? Certainly, the chewy flavor has become much more diverse since the size of the meat balls is different. I'll have to think about the texture the next time I make it." "Knock knock..." "I always think about it, but this forest is great because it doesn't get moldy." If not, he wouldn't have even dreamed of making this work. 'The casing was made from real intestines, which have high moisture content... If it doesn't rot while I'm working on it, that's a good thing.' If the meat balls are different, air is created inside the shell, and there's a high chance that mold will grow through those gaps. At least all the sausages Geo has made so far have gone through that process. 'You weak-willed bastards.' If you were real pork, you would have to endure mold with all your might. "Hmm." Anyway, thanks to that, even the texture of this sausage was excellent. The meat, which had already been mashed softly like porridge, pleased my tongue as it touched a corner of my mouth before I could even chew, and the bumpy pieces of meat gave a pleasant elasticity as they were chewed on my teeth. ‘The meat juice is flowing… and the texture of the intestines is surprisingly good.’ Maybe it was because the intestines were so plump, but it felt like I was chewing on thin tripe. The intestines that had been prepared in advance had no gamey smell at all, and they had the chewy texture and richness characteristic of intestines. Furthermore, the outer skin was crispy like a cookie because it was baked in an oven, but the inside of the skin was still sticky. I could also feel the faint bitterness characteristic of nuts. “……” Geo muttered. “It seems good.” I wanted to live like this for the rest of my life. In peace.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (42)

Episode 42

After finishing a hearty meal, Geo threw sausages to the water birds and returned to the cabin to rest. Perhaps because he had eaten a big meal, he wasn't hungry even when dinner came.

“Nurungji….”

“Gulp?”

“It’s a bit weird to eat it now, but let’s make some nurungji rice and eat it tomorrow. That’ll be delicious.”

“Kururururuk.”

“…….”

Sergio, lying on the bed, poked Honey, who was lying next to him.

“Kung.”

“…….”

“Kung, kung, kung.”

“It’s fluffy.”

“Kung!!!”

Honey rebelled fiercely, but that made her even cuter.

“This harmless guy.”

I thought that if it got a little bigger, I could use it as a pillow.

'Couldn't it be possible to create a material with a similar feel?'

Because I feel a little bad about sleeping on a live bird, I make a soft pillow that is not alive.

Geo blinked his eyes, daydreaming about this and that.

“…….”

I couldn't sleep at all.

“Phew….”

There were times like this sometimes.

“Is this the artist’s fate?”

“…Kung?”

Honey's reaction was something like, 'Why don't you stop talking nonsense and just go to sleep?', but it wasn't easy.

Geo rubbed his face a few times against the soft blanket that felt like it was full of feathers, then quickly got up from his bed.

“Honey, Daddy is going.”

“Crunch.”

“What a spicy guy.”

Leaving the tired Honey behind, he headed to a workshop filled with all kinds of materials.

“…….”

As such, his severe insomnia was due to his sudden interest in something.

“…I became curious about the scenery outside the company.”

By pinpointing the exact location and imagining it, Geo was able to visualize the scenery there.

At first, I thought it was just my imagination. No matter how much I imagined what the third floor of the 'Collector' company would look like, it was no different from what it actually looked like.

But as he continued to imagine and gradually completed the picture, at some point Geo was able to realize something.

'The scenery of the location I imagine is relatively similar to reality.'

I thought maybe it was one of the benefits of becoming a portrait artist.

“Outside is probably….”

Geo muttered.

“It looks like it’s going to be a dark dawn.”

It wasn't a place he had never seen before, and it wasn't difficult to draw a place he had already seen once. Geo stood on the wall of an alley and stroked his brush, recalling the sight he had seen.

Soon, a picture frame appeared in an alley in Seoul.

* * *

“Haaah….”

On a street at dawn, a woman tore through my hair.

“Where else should I cling to?”

The woman with short black hair, Cha Ara, couldn't hold back her sigh.

'As expected, there is no place that accepts F-class.'

Even if they are Awakened, F-class people are not treated better than porters.

Chaara's rank was F. Her main skill was 'Body Strengthening'. She had no other skills to learn, and of course, she had no job. She had the typical porter's status.

"……."

She was sitting on the bench today, helpless after being released from her original team.

"…Well, where would you use a porter with a broken leg?"

It was because I injured my leg in the dungeon I visited in the afternoon.

There were plenty of F-class people who wanted to be used as porters, so there was no reason to hire someone who limped.

'It was nice that only pretty normal people gathered together.'

It was a team made up of people who were not very interested in each other, even if they could not be called friendly. Although they ignored Cha Ara, who was just a porter in the F-class, as if she did not exist, the team itself had a tendency to be like that to each other.

Such indifference was one of the virtues of modern people that is hard to find.

"It was cut that easily though."

Chaara, who was considered useless, was kicked out, saying she could no longer be hired.

It was fortunate that I received all the money I was owed and was kicked out. I looked at the balance in my account on my phone for a long time.

All together, about 500 thousand won.

“…….”

This is not enough to pay the rent and buy the youngest son's priest's robe.

“The rent went up this time….”

Yeah.

Cha Ara groaned.

“…What do I do now?”

Chaara clicked her tongue as she looked at the sky where snow was starting to fall quietly.

“Like a dog.”

It's already freezing, so why is it snowing?

'... The terminal has probably been disconnected for a long time. Since my brother is still at home, the youngest will be okay. As long as he doesn't share his stuff like a fool somewhere else, that's fine.'

Cha Ara got up from the bench, sniffling inwardly at the loneliness that was building inside her.

“We need to find a place where our eyes don’t meet.”

The youngest, Cha Ara, tied the scarf she had made herself tighter and moved her feet.

I had originally planned to just take a nap on the bench, but if it snowed, I might not be able to open my eyes the next morning.

'It would be nice to be able to sleep near the history or the building.'

Public facilities with lots of people passing by or areas around companies that make money were covered in a warming spell.

If you could sleep nearby, you wouldn't have to worry about sleeping on the streets like this, but if you got caught doing something wrong, you could end up being demoted to a 4th class citizen at worst.

'I got a Hunter's ID so I could stay in the city for a few days, but that doesn't mean I can sleep anywhere. It'd be a pain if I got caught by the security guards…'

At times like this, I felt envious of my older brother, Cha Eun-hyuk.

“That guy can sleep even on a fish-shaped bread cart.”

Her brother, who sells bungeoppang, always moved his cart from the countryside to the city to make a living, because if he left it in the city, someone would steal it or tear it down.

“Ahh….”

So, even Cha Ara herself couldn't expect to fall asleep in his cart.

After walking aimlessly for a while, Cha Ara's footsteps reached a dark alley.

“…….”

…what is that?

'…portrait?'

It was a portrait of a man hanging on one wall of an alley.

“…What is this, it’s creepy….”

The man in the portrait was handsome, like a statue or a doll, but more than his handsome appearance, the stillness of his eyes quietly closed struck me first.

Chaara hesitated and left the place, feeling the gloomy atmosphere as if someone's corpse had been drawn there.

'Some crazy guy hung a picture here.'

It was probably the work of some crazy guy with a peculiar taste or a hunter with strange skills, so Chaara decided not to pay much attention to it. She had no intention of falling asleep in this place where the snow was falling right away anyway.

Cha Ara, who had been walking a little further, soon discovered a woman.

“…….”

I had been hit by the cold snow for so long that a soft white snow had already piled up on top of it.

Judging from the woman's behavior, curled up like a ball, she was clearly a fourth-class citizen living illegally in the city.

“…….”

“…….”

The slender body that seemed to be breathing was shaking, but it was not dead yet.

'It's pretty far out there.'

Usually the poor live in deeper alleys.

Cha Ara, who was trying to ignore the poor man and pass by, stood in front of him again with a very uncomfortable expression on her face after walking a few steps.

“…….”

Poor Min was either asleep or passed out from the cold, but he was still breathing, unable to come to his senses. He didn't even notice that Chaara was right in front of him.

“…C.”

Cha Ara took off her scarf, put it lightly around Binmin’s neck, and quickly left the place. She could faintly hear Binmin moving, so her pace became even faster.

'Fuck, this is so annoying. Fuck, fuck… .'

My neck was so cold that I felt a bit resentful.

“Why are you sleeping so pitifully and making a fuss…!”

I felt sad for no reason.

The poor man looked to be about my age or younger. So at best he couldn't have been more than 20 years old.

I couldn't just pass by a friend who was sleeping like he was about to die.

“Miss, it was the youngest one who knitted it… Youngest one….”

It was a scarf that was knitted with difficulty using fur from livestock and monsters caught in the village. The youngest's skills were not bad, so it was a pretty good scarf. I had been using it well all winter, but I stupidly lost it like this.

‘Fuck… I shouldn’t have said anything to oppa or Chaisol… .’

As Cha Ara was walking along the road, something strange caught her eye.

“…….”

Portrait of a man.

"…uh."

I saw it earlier.

'... What, what is it? I didn't see it here. Did I see it wrong? Or were there multiple frames?'

The frame was half-shadowed and the face was not clearly visible, but I could tell immediately that it was the same portrait I had just seen.

For some reason, it gave me goosebumps because it was so eerie, like watching a horror movie.

“Uh, uh uh….”

Even if it's an F-class, an awakened person is an awakened person. They can instinctively feel danger.

“Am I okay?”

In those vulgar words.

The portrait buried in the shadows opened its eyes.

“…….”

“…….”

The mouth of the portrait, not obscured by darkness, opened softly.

“Excuse me.”

Aristocratic tone.

Cha Ara blinked her eyes in a state of extreme discomfort.

“…….”

The picture frame was nowhere to be seen.

“…….”

What, woah, what.

'What is it?'

Cha Ara realized too late that she had collapsed.

“…Shit, shit….”

Save people.

Her hands trembled as they touched the snow-covered ground. Cha Ara knew, and the world knew, that it wasn't simply because of the cold.

It was nonsense, but I felt like I wouldn't be able to come to my senses if I didn't say something like this.

"crazy…."

Cha Ara realized this without even realizing it.

'I almost lost.'

In fact, it wasn't that dangerous of a situation, but Cha Ara knew that the strange portrait she had just seen was a very dangerous being.

Who knows, if that being had been just a little less polite, not feeling the need to apologize by saying, "Excuse me," Cha Ara might have turned into a corpse.

“…What, what is it? Seriously, what did I see?”

As Cha Ara struggled to get out of this place, something cold and hard caught her hand.

Chaara, who felt goosebumps all the way to the top of her head from the small, hard sensation, couldn't even scream and just opened her mouth.

“…….”

As she groped again, shivering, a cold grain soon entered her hand.

Let’s take a look with a very nervous mind… .

“…See, a jewel?”

It was a black and transparent colored jewel.

“…What is it….”

This is also something I felt instinctively.

Chaara realized that this was a gift from the portrait she had just seen.

“…….”

Before her parents died, they always told her that if she did good deeds, good things would come.

This whole situation seemed like a creepy fairy tale.

* * *

And here's another one that got creepy.

“Stalking is bad.”

Geo couldn't come to his senses at his own rudeness.

It was fine to draw the alley at dawn. However, after drawing the picture, I saw a woman moving inside the frame, and I was worried for a moment whether it was dangerous at this late hour.

As a result, Geo's gaze continued to follow him without him even realizing it… .

"In the end, it's stalking."

I ended up observing the other person without their consent.

"You must have been surprised."

Normally, he would just quietly look at the building inside the collection, or move around through the frame, so he didn't know. However, through this opportunity, Geo has definitely come to know.

'When I fix my gaze on something that moves, the frame of reality moves with it.'

That was the story of the living, moving portrait incident that followed Cha Ara.

"I hope the meaning of the apology was conveyed well…."

Because he was only blankly staring at the short-haired woman, he could see her handing over her scarf to the poor and her frightened expression upon seeing the picture frame. Only when the woman turned pale and collapsed did Geo come to his senses.

I felt admiration for the woman who still looked like she was in high school, worried about whether she was okay alone at this late hour, and sorry for startling her with my rudeness.

"……."

This deep feeling was recognized as an item of trade, and Geo gave Cha Ara a jewel as a gift.

“……?”

No, wait a minute.

“Are you rather scared?”

I was so shocked by my own rudeness that I couldn't think.

But if you were to give a gift to a high school student who was already terrified of a living, breathing portrait, who would pick it up and say, "Wow, it's a gem?"

"ah…."

I should have just given him something like a cookie.

'I happened to not have any baked cookies right now, so I ended up drawing a jewel without realizing it.'

If he had given her some worthless snacks, it might have been less frightening. Geo vaguely saw the back of the short-haired student running away in panic through the picture frame.

"sorry…."

At that point, Geo realized something.

“…….”

Do I sometimes change my personality?

It was finally the moment when I became aware of myself as the 'Black Cloak'.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (43)

Episode 43

In the morning, back in bed.

“…….”

“Crunch?”

“Hmm.”

Geo was lost in shallow thoughts.

It wasn't the first time I realized that my personality could change.

“There is also Giovanni’s case.”

But now that I think about it, Geo often seems to break away from his usual personality. This is mainly when he interacts with people outside in a 'portrait' state.

“If you think about it, praising employees or giving them gifts out of the blue isn’t a normal reaction.”

“Crunch?”

“There were people older than me, but for me, a healthy young man from the Land of Courtesy in the East, to act like that, honestly, considering my current situation, it’s not exactly normal.”

The problem is that Geo himself didn't feel any discomfort about the change.

“At that time, I just thought it was natural.”

It certainly seemed that the identity of 'portrait' was changing him.

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.”

“Kungkung….”

“When I stayed in the portrait, I didn’t feel anything strange because it was the same as usual.”

“Crunch?”

“No, it’s okay.”

Whether his personality changed or something else changed, Geo did not give in to this level of mystery.

“But I have to be careful not to be rude to other people.”

If things continued like this, it seemed like soon I would be able to naturally accept being patted on the head by a stranger I had never met.

“There’s no way I could do something so shameful.”

The act of patting someone's head was something that could only be done by a creative person or by a parent to a child. Even if they were lovers, such bold touches were avoided, so Geo felt the need to be careful with his behavior.

“Of course I’ve never had a lover.”

“…….”

“How can you look at your heavenly father with such eyes?”

I might not have a lover.

“Anyway, it’s not that unfamiliar that personality changes. When I went out to Seoul, there were times when my self-awareness as Giovanni grew… I think it’s in a similar context to the topic I’m thinking about now.”

However, it did not feel like the 'personality' itself was literally changing.

“If it was that much, I would have noticed it a long time ago.”

If I had to put it into words, it felt more like recalling a forgotten memory.

“I can’t say it’s Sergio, but if I’m right, it feels like that….”

“…Gulp?”

“It’s not a split personality. It’s a misunderstanding.”

In his previous life, he lived as the priest Giovanni, who had a compassionate smile, but in his current life, he lived as Sergio, who was often asked, “Do you not know how to smile?” It was similar to how, when he recalled his previous life later, he would sometimes recall habits he had forgotten.

“I never thought there would be a problem because of its identity as a portrait.”

Geo muttered.

“It seems to be a similar problem to the resolution. If you try to act like a human with the body of a portrait, there might be an error somewhere. The speech becomes stiffer, and the actions and thoughts become strange…”

I felt like I had to be careful.

“Let’s try harder to be more objective about ourselves in the future.”

“Kung.”

“You find it annoying? Honey, you should work on your social skills.”

At the sight of Honey grumbling, Geo placed the round water bird on his hand and rolled it around. Honey, rolling around like a water bag, didn't look too bad.

“Are you happy?”

“Gurrrr.”

"I see."

Geo, who was momentarily surprised by the change in personality, was able to calm his mind by seeing her peaceful appearance.

“Anyway, it’s fun, so it’s okay.”

Wouldn't it be stranger if this ever-changing life weren't fun?

“Then shall we eat first?”

“Gulp?”

Although Honey questioned him, Geo ignored her and got up from his seat.

“Even if you don’t have to make it right away, it’s a good idea to make the soup and side dishes in advance. Since you already have bones from the deer you butchered, you can clean them up and make bone broth, then store them in the icehouse and take them out whenever you need them.”

Bone broth can be a hearty meal all on its own. Geo nodded.

“Whenever I had diarrhea, my grandmother told me to drink the bone soup with a little green onion and salt.”

I don't know about other people, but when I was hungry, Geo felt much better about eating bone soup than porridge. It didn't have any side dishes, so it didn't fill his stomach, but it was oily, so he felt like he was eating something.

“If you add a little salt, green onions, and freshly cooked rice to the white broth and eat it, that’s gomtang. The rich beef bone broth has an incredible savory flavor. That’s why even a simple meal like that is filling.”

“Gurrrr…?”

“That’s not spicy.”

Honey, who had a strong aversion to spicy sausage last time, seemed to be wondering if Gomtang would be spicy. However, Gomtang will not taste spicy unless you mix it with red pepper powder or spicy seasoning.

“If you’re really bored, you can add meat, or you can put noodles instead of rice. Eating both together isn’t as bad as you might think. I think adding more seasoning or pepper to your liking is one of the charms of gomtang.”

There were many other places where bone broth was used.

“Even if you boil spicy ramen with broth instead of water, it tastes fantastic.”

“Crook! Crook! Crook!”

“But the broth itself makes the soup a bit milder… Okay, let’s skip this one.”

Honey, who hates spicy food, shouted out her opposition, and Geo, who was about to become a father, respected Honey's opinion. If there are people in the world who can eat anything, then somewhere there are weak water birds who can't eat even a little bit of spicy food.

“Then it would be okay to add some more vegetables and make a different soup. A representative example would be mandu soup.”

Geo muttered.

“Then tteokguk is good too. Budaejjigae, which is made by boiling various vegetables and ham all at once, isn’t bad either… Even soybean paste stew or seaweed soup tastes much better when you add bone broth to it.”

“Kung?”

“If it’s budaejjigae, I don’t think the rest will be spicy. Unless you add green chili peppers… By the way, did you know that when you cook rice, it tastes much better if you add broth instead of water?”

“Gurr.”

“Okay, let’s go make some broth.”

Honey, who had become the world's favorite rice bird after eating rice balls last time, could clearly see how delicious it would be to make rice balls out of bone broth and bake them.

Geo, who was going down to the ice storage where the bones were stored, suddenly became anxious.

“Come to think of it, isn’t bone broth usually made from beef bones?”

“…Kkuk?”

“Well, last time I trimmed and cleaned it, it was quite full of marrow. Since it was just slaughtered, the red border of the cross-section of the bone marrow was clear, so it probably won't be in bad condition. Since the deer is so big, the bones are thick and strong, so it'll be fun to boil the bones…."

"……."

"Since when have we been eating only Earth food?"

The bones used to make broth are usually from the legs of animals. If it was a cow, it would have been the ox foot, but Geo thought it might be different if it was a deer, so he cleaned them up first. He brought the bones out of the ice storage room and into the kitchen.

"I washed it once, but it still feels weird."

After cutting the bones so that the marrow could be clearly seen and washing them cleanly, I took out a large pot and dropped everything into it. I lit the firewood with the bellflower and the water boiled quickly.

"The blood was drained when it was first slaughtered, so there shouldn't be that many impurities. It should be pretty clean since it was drained for almost a day, but there are still foreign substances inside. We need to remove them to get good broth."

"……."

"As you can imagine, this is a filthy, time-consuming task."

"Kung kung kung…."

"I didn't even expect to be able to eat broth today anyway."

After the bones were blanched in boiling water and washed and completely clean, it was a battle of time and sincerity from then on. There was a reason why 'real' bone broth was expensive.

"You can keep boiling it in the pot like this, but don't boil it over too high a heat. Even if it takes a while, you should boil it over low heat so that the broth's savory flavor comes out better."

"……."

"The longer you boil it, the more oil and other impurities will continuously rise to the surface. It is said that the broth that is boiled for the first time is too oily and thick, making it difficult to eat, perhaps because the marrow has been completely removed. That is why you cannot eat the broth that comes out first…."

"Kung."

"You're going to eat it?"

"Crunch."

"Pig."

Honey protested loudly, but that didn't change the reality. This love that couldn't even give up the first broth that made her mouth greasy enough to make a slurp sound. This obsession.

"You are already a great pig."

"Gurrrr!!!"

"Accept reality."

If possible, I wish it was a bit more plump.

"Enough for me to lean on…."

To be exact, I wish it was plump enough to lie down on.

"……."

"……."

Geo nodded at the look of determination on his face.

“Are you in puberty?”

I felt a strong belief that she would somehow maintain her current cute and adorable appearance.

'You know you're cute.'

Even if he was born with paint, if he had the right beliefs, he should be supported. Geo decided to back down. Fat animals are cute, but if you force them to gain weight, it's animal abuse.

“Anyway, the skeleton won’t be completed right away. The impurities will also take some time to come up, so even if we stay right next to it, there’s nothing we can do.”

“Kururuk?”

“Okay, so we have to prepare another dish. Let’s give our generous friend some alone time.”

Geo looked at the pot, which wasn't even boiling yet because he had just added water.

“I’m not sure, but I’ve heard that eating too many bones can actually be bad for your health… I don’t know what to do with the legs of a deer.”

The skull of a wood deer

This is the bone corresponding to the leg part of the deer bone that has been cleaned. It is full of bone marrow and is oily, but if the bone is boiled for more than 3 days, it completely dissolves in the broth and becomes a health food. It is characterized by a strong meaty flavor that can be felt as nutty or salty.

Method of Regeneration: After cleaning, boil it on low heat for 3 days, and the marrow and bones will melt and become a tonic. The medicine made in this way can be used immediately, and when used on humans, all bone abnormalities will be recovered. The degree of recovery will vary depending on the amount taken and the individual's constitution.

“…….”

Geo nodded.

“You didn’t have to worry.”

What kind of realistic concerns were you having in this fantasy world?

“They say the marrow and bones will melt on their own, so we just have to wait while occasionally filtering out the impurities. Let’s stop worrying about those self-reliant guys and start worrying about our lunch.”

“Gulp.”

“Then it’s okay….”

Geo, who had been thinking for a moment, soon made up his mind.

“The day has finally come.”

“Crunch?”

“It’s time to go fishing.”

Shouldn't we refresh our stomachs after eating a lot of meat with some fish?

“That’s courtesy to my tongue and stomach.”

And Sergio was a true eater, having learned the term Engel's coefficient (the proportion of household spending on food) at the age of five. I still remember the warm voice of my grandmother, who would laugh heartily and say, "We have sweet potatoes at home."

So Geo thought about how to eat fish. There were many ways.

“The stream is narrow, but it is quite deep, so I have seen fish of all sizes as I went back and forth. In particular, the waterfowl nests are connected to the streams and springs so that various creatures can move… In fact, you can get good fish just by going to the nests.”

“…….”

Honey, who had been tilting her head at Geo's words, soon came up next to his ear and poked his cheek. It didn't hurt because the beak was so small and harmless that she didn't even know why it was running.

“What’s going on, honey?”

“Gurrrr.”

"…ah."

Come to think of it, Geo had another source of fish.

“There was a ‘breathing sea.’”

One of the dimensional gates Geo had previously created, the 'Breathing Sea', was literally a world submerged in the sea. Last time I saw it, it was definitely teeming with all sorts of creatures.

Geo took Honey's advice.

“You’re smart.”

“Crunch.”

Honey was so proud. She was so cute.

“No matter how cute you are, the only person you can conquer is your father.”

“Kung, kung, kung.”

“No matter where you go and act cute, do you think you can treat them as well as I do? Where in the world is there a butler as capable as me? You just stick close to your daddy.”

Today, too, we were a friendly family.

Geo went straight to the second floor, specifically the storage room where the completed works were stored. That was because the frame that could be moved to the 'Breathing Sea' was hanging there.

Geo, standing in front of a picture frame filled with blue light, slowly melted away.

“…….”

And then, within.

He was in the water.

“It’s been a while, Father.”

Giovanni entered the 'Breathing Sea'.

“It hasn’t been that long, has it?”

“ ”

“I went out to see the outside world for a bit.”

The one who was talking to Geo was none other than the sun god of the destroyed world. He was the lonely old man who had previously been asked by 'Giovanni'.

He asked why I visited today.

"ah."

And Geo was confident anytime, anywhere.

“I came to go fishing.”

Give me the fish.

“If it goes well, I’ll share it with you.”

“ ”

“I thought you’d like it.”

The sun god was delighted.

It was clear that only pigs had gathered there.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (44)

Episode 44

The so-called 'breathing sea' was literally a world submerged in water.

There was no one else but Geo. The water was so high up that even the sun seemed to be trapped under water, and even the traces of humans, such as brick houses and fences, were submerged.

Among them, Geo was sitting on the edge of a cliff.

“I’m completely underwater so I have no idea how to fish.”

“Kuuuurung.”

“Honey, stop drinking sea water. You’ll get too big and the fish will run away.”

There were a lot of underwater creatures visible here and there.

A creature that looked like a giant crab with a very large body moved awkwardly and clumsily across the red roof with its companions, and a gentle-looking snake that seemed to be a water snake repeatedly jumped out of the sand and hid.

In addition, there are large groups of whales floating in the high water sky, colorful seahorses dancing in pairs as if singing, and fish hiding in the crevices of seaweed growing between bricks… .

“Maybe I’m not good at fishing.”

“ ”

“Well, in this situation, a fishing rod seems to be of no use.”

“ ”

“A garden? That’s not bad either.”

I was looking at a dreamy sight, but I didn't catch a single fish.

“But it’s not like I’m a very good swimmer.”

'Giovanni's' world was so closely connected to the sea that 90% of humanity was good at swimming. 'Giovanni' was one of the 5% who were particularly bad at swimming.

“When I first met Aria, we had a connection because she threw me into the sea. From what I’ve seen, I can’t say Aria was a good child, but she was still a diligent student.”

“ ”

“I feel at ease since my father does not resent Aria.”

Geo, who had his signature kind smile on his face, soon took on an embarrassed expression.

“But… how do you catch fish?”

Giovanni was not a good swimmer, and Sergio, although a good swimmer, had never caught a fish like this before.

No matter which specialty I used, I didn't think I would be able to catch a fish that looked so nimble just by looking at it.

“…….”

“ ”

"yes?"

Geo turned to the bright yellow water bird, pointing to none other than the sun god, who was pointing to Honey. Like an actor on stage, Honey was shining brightly under the sun god's spotlight. There was no other revelation from the god.

"honey?"

"……."

"Honey, can you catch it?"

"…Kung…."

"Why are you avoiding Dad's gaze?"

Geo tilted his head at the look on his face that clearly said, 'I can do it, but I don't really want to do it.' If he just didn't want to do it, he wouldn't have made me do it, but it wasn't a reaction of disliking the work itself, so it was hard to interpret.

"Why do you say no?"

"Kung kung kung…."

"……??"

The sun god slyly told the truth to the rich man who had trouble communicating.

" "

"……."

" "

"…ah."

It was only then that Geo realized that his water bird was not ordinary.

No, of course, living water in a new form would never be ordinary, but anyway, Honey had much more powerful potential than Geo had expected.

“Our child can evolve?”

“…….”

“Oh, sun.”

Honey was very capable.

“You have to evolve to catch fish, but you don’t want to end up like that, so that’s why you’re acting like this now…? Really? Oh, my gosh, that’s so cool and ridiculous. You really have to maintain a cute appearance.”

It was clear that my son had prince syndrome.

“I thought I told you 30 minutes ago that no matter how cute and adorable you are, the only person you can conquer is your father. Why are you so helplessly cute?”

“ ”

“I’m sorry, I was a little reckless. But don’t you think your grandson is really cute?”

The sun god just laughed and said that the relationship between the family members was very good.

Although he had not heard a clear explanation, Geo decided to be satisfied with this. The most important thing now was to work together to overcome the difficulties in this situation where there was no answer, get the fish, and prepare a meal.

"…hmm…."

Geo, not wanting to force them to work, simply told them about the reality they were facing.

"honey."

“Kung.”

“Dad, I can’t swim.”

“…Kung?”

“So I can’t even catch fish.”

“…….”

“If you really don’t want to, I can’t help it, but if you don’t catch the fish for us, we’ll all starve. If you still refuse, we’ll have to grill the sausages we had last time for lunch today.”

At those words, Honey's pupils shook. I don't know where the pupils were in those watery eyes, but it was clear that Honey was shocked by the reality they were facing and was shaking.

Geo nodded solemnly, like a judge passing judgment.

“Yes, we are in a situation where we have to eat the same menu over and over again.”

It was a miserable reality that was difficult for them, as gourmets and big eaters, to accept.

“If you still don’t like it, I’ll try my best to prepare sausage stir-fry, sausage stir-fried rice, and sausage soup for lunch today.”

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

The sun god was horrified by the strange confrontation. Even he thought that the stir-fried sausages, fried rice with sausages, and sausage soup were a bit excessive.

The Sun God, who had recently become accustomed to the meals Geo had prepared for him, watched the situation with an anxious heart.

"…dream…."

The winner was Geo.

“Gulp.”

But there was a condition.

“Close your eyes?”

“Kkuk.”

“Why can’t Dad love his son no matter what he looks like?”

“Kkuk.”

“Puberty has come after all.”

Even if they were parents, everyone had secrets they wanted to hide. Although Geo had never been married or in a relationship, let alone had children, he knew that it was important to protect a child's space.

Geo nodded with his eyes closed.

“You don’t want to show me how much you’ve evolved? I’m really, really curious, but if it makes you feel better, I can close my eyes….”

“Gulp.”

“As expected, puberty isn’t easy for kids.”

I heard the sound of something large and splashing, followed by the sound of sea water crashing. It wasn't long before I listened to the sound.

“Kung gurgling.”

“……?”

Oh, already?

“Can you open your eyes, son?”

“Gulp.”

"okay."

And Geo saw.

"oh."

This is the sight of about 30 fish caught inside Honey's plump body filled with seawater.

“Isn’t that great?”

“Gulp, gurgle.”

“It’s like a great pig.”

“…….”

“It was a compliment.”

I had seen Honey grow this big ever since she came to the 'Breathing Sea', so this appearance could not be Honey's 'evolved' form.

'Perhaps it swallowed the fish in its evolved form and then returned to its original form.'

Anyway, it was funny and good.

"pig…."

“Kung.”

“A pig with fish in it….”

“Kung, kung, kung.”

“Good.”

Giovanni smiled brightly with his characteristically cheerful smile.

“It can be this sturdy.”

Geo had big hands.

* * *

Geo returned to the cabin and went straight to work on cleaning the fish.

“Exactly 33.”

Today was a number that meant Geo's hand would be tamed, but he decided not to care.

It was a great shame for a pig to show weakness in front of a mere 33 salmon-sized fish, as my grandmother acknowledged.

“Fortunately, they are all edible, so I can prepare them with confidence.”

“Gurrrr.”

“Honey, spit one out.”

“Kkuk.”

Phew.

Still the big honey spit out a fish.

“…….”

The moment Geo caught the fish while staggering, he felt dizzy.

'What kind of challenge have I been given?'

Anyway, it is time to prepare seafood, for which freshness is key.

Even though food doesn't rot in this world, it's unclear whether it would prevent already dead fish from becoming rancid over time.

Geo stabbed the first fish in the forehead with an awl and sent it to the Dragon Palace.

"hmm."

I am proud to say that it was a skill as nimble as the swordsmanship in a martial arts novel.

“It was worth cutting some fish.”

“Crunch?”

“There is nothing quite like cutting and eating freshly caught fish on a boat.”

Geo quickly moved his hands as he recalled the bittersweet past.

I cut off the wing part, scraped off the scales, and then inserted the knife at an appropriate depth to prevent the internal organs from bursting, and cut all the way to the excretory opening.

“It must be really fresh because there’s almost no fishy smell even from the intestines. Now, if we take out the intestines like this, next….”

“Kurungurungurung.”

“Honey, if you only eat intestines, one day you will become as ugly as intestines.”

Where on earth does that rascal come from who just grabs the intestines while dad is cooking?

‘… More than that, the way you separate and melt things is always amazing to see.’

They are water birds who enjoy decorating themselves by putting things in their bodies.

Honey, who loved jewels, was no different, but when it came to food rather than just decoration, it quickly melted inside Honey's body.

To be exact, rather than saying that it melts, it seems more correct to say that the nutrients that enter the body are also replaced by water. The food that is swallowed becomes more and more transparent and ripples until it soon becomes invisible to the eye.

“…….”

Whose son was born to be so funny?

'It's interesting.'

Judging from the fact that even the way he eats is funny, Honey is definitely Geo's son. It seems like even his breathing is great content.

“Uhm….”

“Kung?”

“I was just looking around to see when it would all be taken care of.”

If it were already prepared fish from the market, I would have no problem buying it in bulk, but preparing live fish myself was quite a labor-intensive task.

“Don’t continue.”

The fish had its intestines removed and its stomach emptied, and if it were a human, all the blood that had pooled inside the ribs had to be scraped out. Geo diligently washed the inside of the stomach and then proceeded to disassemble the fish.

“…….”

“…….”

And here's a surprising fact I found out.

“…Was it really salmon?”

“Crunch?”

“No, it’s not salmon.”

But the flesh inside was very peculiar.

“It has the texture of white fish, but the color is orange, like salmon or trout.”

When separated like sashimi, the visible flesh was crushed gently with just a little force, just like salmon.

However, the flesh was round and chewy, just like white-fleshed fish such as flounder or sea bream.

“…….”

well.

“…….”

The taste was similar to salmon. It had a refreshing watermelon flavor that made it seem like it was more like trout.

'The texture is much more springy and chewy than that….'

It felt very strange.

Even though it is a fantasy world, isn't it a bit funny how elements you know overlap with something else at the same time?

"uh…."

“Kung?”

“…It’s okay because it’s delicious.”

Because the meat was soft, it was easy to handle.

“I’ll cut some into pieces and prepare some more and fry them whole in oil.”

“Crunch?”

“It’s tastier than I thought. It’s fried in oil, so there’s no way it would taste bad. Honey, don’t worry and just wait for your fried fish.”

“Gurrrr….”

“It would be even more delicious if you added some spicy sauce.”

“Kung kung kung…!!!”

“Do you really need to hate it so much? There’s a lot of fish left. Don’t you think you can make one spicy fried for me, son?”

After finishing all the cooking, Geo half fainted.

“…….”

“Kururung.”

“It was a record-breaking day.”

It was concluded that 33 large fish were too many.

Stressful and repetitive work tires Geo out.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (45)

Episode 45

Geo was good at everything.

“So you’re also good at cooking.”

“ ”

“Please skip swimming.”

Giovanni shook his head politely but firmly in response to the sun god's question that poked at his weak point. How could a two-legged human born with the ability to breathe only out of water be good at swimming?

“But even so, I am breathing underwater right now….”

Is it because 'Giovanni' is already a dead character in this world, or is it because even though he is in a fairy tale, he is essentially a 'portrait'? Geo was able to breathe normally even in the 'breathing sea' filled with water.

“Is this water made so that humans can breathe?”

“ ”

“It has truly become a special sea. We should consider this as one of Aria’s accomplishments.”

Still, there was a sense of emptiness.

“I feel like I’m not bound by the rules of this world. Is it because I’m no longer a resident of this place? My physical condition right now doesn’t seem to be much different from when I was in the Forest of Pictures….”

“ ”

"okay."

The sun god also agreed.

“It’s a shame.”

Giovanni smiled his characteristically kind and light smile. It was a neat smile, just as before.

“I should say it feels like I’ve lost a part of my hometown.”

“ ”

“It’s a little sad, but it’ll get better in the future.”

Now was the time to eat rather than talk like that.

“I think my father doesn’t like spicy food either, so I prepared a special dish that is mainly light. I think he’d be upset if the food got wet, so please make some space this time too.”

To 'make space' was to create a big bubble of air in this water-filled world.

Although the sun god had lost all his followers except Giovanni and was weakened, he was still able to perform miracles like that for a short while.

“…….”

Using that miracle for a meal might seem a bit absurd to others.

“But still, people need to eat to live. Then, is there a rule that says God can’t eat?”

“ ”

“If anyone says anything like this, please hand that poor person over to my son. I will give him a severe punishment.”

“ ”

“It’s strange that people nag others about what they eat.”

The sun god was very happy. It was definitely the pig god.

'Can a believer gain weight?'

Geo suddenly had that thought, but soon shook his head internally. It seemed too unscrupulous to expect an intangible opponent with no substance or even a voice to gain weight just by eating.

Anyway, at first, the gentleman who had been so discouraged and withered that he even refused to eat was now setting out a table for me as if demanding that I serve him right away, which made me feel very good.

Giovanni smiled brightly in pleasure. As a priest of the sun, a warm light shone around him.

“Thanks to Honey’s hard work, we had a very satisfying meal today.”

At Geo's praise, Honey entered the air bubble and proudly puffed out her chest. It seemed like she wanted praise not only from Geo, but from the sun god as well.

“Gurrrr.”

“ ”

“Crunch crunch crunch!”

Soon, Honey's body glowed brightly for a brief moment.

“Thank you for your compliment.”

“Crunch.”

It resembled sunlight.

'Honey is an animal that evolved by drinking Lulupu's juice, so she especially likes the sun god.'

Rurupu, who grew up in the spring of the forest of pictures, was a flower that grew under the light of the moon and sunlight. Strictly speaking, it was a creature born from the sun and the moon, so it was understandable that it liked the sun god.

'He's just like a grandson showing off his skills in front of his grandfather.'

Anyway, it's cute so it's fine.

Geo looked at Honey cutely, wiggling her butt and flapping her wings following the halo of light that could be called the touch of the sun god.

Thanks to Honey's special aegyo, she was able to easily break down the Sun God's guard and be accepted by him again.

“…….”

Communication with the Sun God (1/1)

“Then I’ll go prepare some food.”

The food they brought did not get wet, thanks to the sun god evaporating some of the water with his heat.

What Geo made today was assorted sashimi, sushi, warm fish soup, rice to go with it, and fried fish to serve as a side dish.

The fried food was fried lightly and prepared so that each person could dip it in a sour or spicy sauce, so it was expected that there would be little resistance from the two spicy food lovers.

“It’s time to eat, I’m done preparing.”

“Kurururururur!!”

First, Honey flew in combatively, flapping her wings as big as my body. Then she stood in front of the fried fish that Geo had placed aside, but the fish was ten times as big as Honey.

“It’s big.”

To be honest, it was a bit of a funny sight.

“Then, Father, please come down too. It tastes better when you eat it while it’s warm.”

“ ”

The power of the sun god, who agreed with Geo's words, soon spread out to somewhere.

The warm glow reached a platinum-white teddy bear that was carefully placed near the picture frame that was Geo's entrance.

And soon, a teddy bear slightly smaller than a child began to move.

“Kyuu.”

“Welcome.”

The sun god has descended.

I said I was going to eat.

'Pigs.'

It was cute.

“Kkuu, kku….”

“Can I help you?”

"dream."

The teddy bear was flapping its wings instead of walking properly, perhaps because it had been placed in water. It seemed that the teddy bear's old and worn body was having a hard time escaping from the water pressure and resistance.

Geo readily put his hand on the teddy bear's side and lifted it up. Then he placed the teddy bear with the sun god in it in front of the bowl.

“Kyuu.”

“I’m glad you like it.”

He was very cute, but I felt a little sorry for his son, Giovanni.

'You've become so weak that you can't even fit into a doll.'

Of course, this is not a complete incarnation of the sun god, and only a portion that is edible is included.

However, since the ego of the sun god was expressed in the teddy bear, it seems likely that the doll was imbued with an important power that served as the heart or brain of the god.

However, the doll did not burst, and the sun god did not feel any discomfort. With only Giovanni as the believer, it seemed inevitable that his power would weaken compared to when it was at its peak.

“…….”

It is a miracle that the sun god was saved from extinction by just one person, Giovanni.

“Then let’s eat.”

“Kyuu.”

“Kururururuk.”

A human, a water bird, and a teddy bear all began eating without a second thought. The teddy bear, which must have only had cotton inside, opened its mouth wide and stuffed the fried fish into its mouth.

Geo was amazed once again.

'It's strange.'

I see it every time, but I couldn't figure out how to savor and digest it.

“Honey, is the taste okay? Is the fish cooked well?”

“Kururuk.”

“Yeah, just avoid this sauce. It might be a little spicy for you.”

Just in case, I put some hot sauce in the middle of the table, but I was sure no one would touch it. After all, this sauce was made exclusively for Geo.

“…….”

Let's see.

'I'll eat raw fish first.'

Honey had already eaten a lot of fresh intestines, so she went for the fried food first. And the sun god, who did not eat raw food according to the tastes of the humans who served him, was drinking rice and fish soup.

For some reason, I feel like trying things that others don't do.

'Raw fish tastes better when eaten fresh.'

Geo picked up a piece of raw fish right away.

"…hmm…."

I've seen it a lot while grooming, but it still has a unique appearance.

'It's amazing how it has the same color as salmon, is soft like salmon, and has a springy texture unlike salmon. Thanks to that, it doesn't feel as heavy as salmon when fried.'

When I dipped it in soy sauce and ate it, I could feel the chewy yet soft flesh melting in my mouth.

“Mahita.”

"honey."

"dream."

Seeing everyone's reactions of happiness on their own made Geo feel good too.

Honey, who wanted to finish the hunt quickly, caught a school of fish all at once, and all the fish she caught were flounders in salmon disguise.

But the taste and texture were so special that I couldn't get enough of it.

'It's not like it's not oily at all.'

What was unique about this fish was that it was oily when eaten raw, but when heated, such as by frying or boiling, all the oil came out.

Thanks to this, even fish soup with few ingredients could have a rich flavor.

“How about soup?”

“Kuuuk.”

“I am glad that you like it.”

Geo looked at Honey again.

“Honey, you….”

“Kuung.”

“Yeah, you’re eating well.”

Nice to see you pigs.

'I'll eat something cold first, and then eat something else.'

Considering that he would be eating dessert later, he thought that it would be better to eat cold jelly when his stomach was a little warm. Geo decided to try something else after finishing the sashimi and sushi he was eating.

The sashimi, which had a moderate amount of oiliness and oozing out like meat juice, went well with the sushi.

'The rice grains in the flounder sushi are separate.'

It's not that I don't like flounder sushi, but I thought the chewy flounder meat and the plump, rolling sushi roe were too strong.

So Sergio preferred salmon sushi, which was soft enough to slide down the throat with just a little chewing, rather than halibut sushi.

But this sushi was different. The airy sushi spread out like a net the moment I put it in my mouth, and the sashimi on top resisted my teeth for a moment before melting away smoothly.

The combination of rice marinated in sweet soy sauce and slightly oily raw fish was excellent.

"hmm."

Geo ate all of his share of sashimi and sushi. Any leftovers from the other family members would be all for Geo.

'Next is fried food.'

Thanks to the consideration of the sun god, it is kept dry, but no matter what, the fried food easily loses its crispiness. Geo chose fried fish as his next dish.

“…I didn’t coat it with batter because I was worried it would get too much. It’s already fried in oil, and the fish flesh is plump….”

Honey and the bear doll looked at Geo, who was making excuses that weren't excuses, as if to say, "What are you talking about when you're eating so well?" Geo, who was in charge of the cooking, felt his heart instantly relax.

'Nothing warms my heart more than a well-fed pig.'

They seem like gentlemen who would eat lye water as long as it tastes good. As someone who cooks, I couldn't help but feel happy about this situation.

“Sorry to bother you. Just eat.”

“Kyuuu.”

“Crunch crunch.”

“…….”

By the way, is the teddy bear's crying sound based on Honey?

'I've felt this way every time, but it's quite similar.'

I was too hungry to worry any more.

“Ah, it’s hot.”

Fortunately, the fried food was still warm and crispy. It was thanks to the consideration of the Sun God who had generously showered it with his blessings. I don't know if it was just because he wanted to enjoy it, but it was good anyway.

Basasak—!

"oh."

Indeed, the sun god does not tolerate even a single drop of moisture.

'The crispy fried skin and the juicy meat inside are exquisite.'

Since it was a hassle to prepare 33 fish one by one, they were fried whole, and thanks to that, the inside was juicy and tender.

The fat that was on the meat was drained away and stayed on the skin, so it felt like I was eating chicken.

‘Maybe it’s because it’s fried, but the meat has become much chewier.’

It wasn't so elastic that it was unpleasant, but it had a resistance that was just right for me. When I chewed without much force with my teeth, I could feel the texture of the food loosening up like silk threads.

“…….”

It's delicious even without any sauce?

'Is it because the shell is salty?'

This fish had seawater soaking into its skin. After draining the water, all that remained was saltiness. I don't know the principle behind it, but even after frying it once, the seasoning was exquisite.

'The flesh is almost sweet but juicy, and the skin is especially oily and crispy… it goes very well together.'

It was so delicious that I could eat rice in one go when dipped in the spicy sauce.

"……."

Slurp.

The fish soup, boiled like soybean paste stew, was also very good.

"…The fish is fresh, so they're doing this too."

"Kururuk."

"Yeah, this is better than I thought."

I didn't put in any fancy sauce. I just put well-prepared fish in water with some soybean paste dissolved in it, and topped it with some radish and green onions.

Nevertheless, the deep, savory fish soup tasted like drinking a long-boiled bone broth.

'If the fish was just a little bit fishy, it wouldn't have been possible to do it this way.'

That's why when you say fish stew, you usually think of spicy fish stew. There was no case where the fish wasn't fishy unless it was freshly caught.

Especially when boiled in soup, the fishy smell of seafood is further enhanced, so usually the fishy smell is covered up with spiciness.

But Geo, who had the ocean inside his cabin, didn't need to do that. The freshly caught fish was incredibly fresh, and he could make a soup with a deep flavor with just a little soybean paste.

“Hoooo….”

My stomach was so hot that I felt like I wouldn't be able to wake up until evening if I continued to sleep like this.

“Good.”

“Hold on?”

“Yes, I am full.”

Oh, right.

“I’m boiling the bones, I’ll come back when they’re done.”

“Kuuuu.”

“Yes, I guess this is your first time having bone soup, Father. It’s much more flavorful than this fish soup….”

Characteristics of gluttons.

Talk about eating while eating.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (46)

Episode 46

Geo returns to the cabin.

“…….”

He was now checking the reward he had received from the system after realizing the level of danger of the young man he had encountered at Gyeongbokgung Palace.

“I was busy.”

Reward: Seal

“I was busy eating.”

I know the system has no ego, but I made excuses for nothing.

“So I was wondering what the seal was….”

Geo looked at the stamp, which seemed to be carved out of marble.

“…….”

Geo held the stamp to his softly shining back. It was beautiful, shining so clearly like sunlight shining through a thin blanket.

It was similar to marble, but the quality of the light was different. Geo muttered as he looked down at the small pillar that seemed to be alive and breathing, and he could hear a faint beating.

“Where have I seen this?”

“Kururuk?”

“Don’t look at it with greedy eyes, honey. Even if you love gems, this is too much. If you really want marble, go to the spring where there are trees that grow from similar stone.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“You can’t pretend to be cute.”

This is a system that has evolved Sergio, who was an extremely ordinary person, into a portrait whose personality can change in an instant. There is no way that the seal given by such a guy would be ordinary, so I couldn't let Honey eat it.

"hmm…."

After looking around, Geo came up with an answer.

“Was it a sealing wax seal?”

Sealing wax, a sentimental item used to seal letter paper. It looked like a seal used to melt the wax, like candle wax, and press it to create a pretty and cool design. It was a type of seal.

In the era that Geo lived in, it was an item that chose sensibility over practicality, but that aside…

“I don’t have wax.”

“Huh?”

“There is no one to whom I can send a letter I have put so much care into.”

“…Kuru….”

“Tears are clouding my vision.”

I am a dung beetle.

“I don’t have any friends.”

“…….”

“…I wonder if it meant that I should try making a pen pal.”

I don't know why he gave me this seal, but since he didn't know anything, Geo interpreted it the way he wanted.

This was definitely a consideration from the system to encourage Geo, who had no friends, to make new connections.

“Then let’s try sending a letter to Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

The easiest opponent, Yoo Seong-un.

Today, Yoo Seong-un, a modern man who is so tired and exhausted, suffered misfortune again without any problems.

* * *

“…….”

When Yoo Seong-woon returned home from work, his heart almost stopped.

“…What, a letter….”

There is a letter on the living room table that I have never seen before.

“…….”

He looked around and muttered.

“There is no sign of intrusion.”

With the help of the leader of the Bisabal Guild, who was concerned about the safety of his employees, the security of the residence where Yoo Seong-un was staying was so tight that only S-class hunters could enter. It was surprising that a strange letter was left openly in such a house.

Yoo Seong-un sighed for a moment, then calmly collected his emotions and sat down on the table sofa.

“Let’s go and take a look.”

Rustle.

The letter sounded like dried grass.

“…….”

It's dried grass.

“…Geo?”

For some reason, I felt like I knew who the sender of the letter was.

'I'm not sure, but I have a feeling that's the case.'

The envelope felt similar to Korean paper, but it was much drier. Much softer. Yoo Seong-woon’s gaze, which was staring at the envelope that was as black as Geo’s eyes, soon fell on the wax sealing the letter.

A texture like a sparkling jewel.

"oh…."

It's definitely Geo's.

'… It looks like the crystal structure of the gem was melted like candle wax and stamped with a seal. I don't know how such an extraordinary feat could have happened, but it is dreamlike and beautiful, like something out of a fairy tale.'

This strange sense of presence was particularly felt by Geo. I guess you could say he had a strangely emotional side to him.

“It’s a seal….”

It was a pattern I was seeing for the first time.

“…Portrait, does it… look a little bit like it?”

The plants spread out around the rectangular frame, and the pattern inside the frame that looked like a star. It was a seal that somehow reminded me of the 'Portrait of Geo' hanging in the gallery of the Visabal.

“You really have a strong taste.”

The way he acted was like that, and Geo had a strong feeling of being a fantasy medieval noble.

'Should I say it has a fairy tale-like feel?'

I think he said that he lived in a hut, so I thought he was a very peaceful guy.

“Then let’s look at the contents.”

He carefully peeled off the seal that he felt was worth studying, taking care not to damage it, and saw the pure white letter paper inside. Yoo Seong-un took out the letter paper and read the pitch-black writing carefully.

“…….”

And then he let out a deep sigh.

“…I don’t understand….”

If you're going to send a letter, shouldn't you write it in Earth's language?

'… I thought you knew a lot about Korean culture, so I expected you to write the letter in Korean, but I guess it's hard to expect that much. Geo isn't really Korean, either.'

I read it again, wondering if I could interpret it, but it was still a language I had never seen before. It didn't even feel like there was any regularity to it, so Yoo Seong-un felt troubled.

"If it's something like a curse letter, it's going to be a headache."

It's unlikely that Geo would send something bad out of the blue, but the beings of the source weren't the kind of people who could be guessed at in that way. If it was an item that would cause a curse if not properly interpreted, it would be quite difficult.

"……."

The meteor cloud subsided a little, as it no longer felt that ominous.

"…Since I was planning to go see it tomorrow anyway, I might as well ask about this too."

It wouldn't have mattered much as long as it wasn't a bomb about to explode.

Yoo Seong-un carefully sealed the entrance again so as not to crumple the letter. The blue jewel seal, which had no adhesive at all, was cold and smooth, but perhaps because it had some weight, it did not float away and held the entrance in place.

"Anyway, I can't figure out its identity."

Should this also be considered a 'fragment of a work of art'?

"They say you have a knack for making people lose their minds…."

I don't know when we'll be able to find out Geo's true identity.

That point was a little bit distant.

* * *

“Geo.”

The next morning, Yoo Seong-un found Geo.

“Is this the letter you sent?”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“You were right.”

“…….”

The portrait still had an expressionless face, but it asked something as if it was curious.

“I wrote my name on the letter, but you didn’t check it?”

“Ah, that….”

Yoo Seong-un took out the letter with an embarrassed face.

“I feel sorry for you who took the time to send me a letter, but how can I read a letter written in a language I don’t know? If it’s not an Earth language, I can’t verify it.”

"…okay."

Geo paused for a moment and then continued speaking.

“But if I remember correctly, I sent you a letter in Korean.”

“Huh? Really?”

“Yes. I think there must have been some unexpected problem in the delivery of the letter. Just as you feel that the resolution of this portrait is off.”

“Oh… um, that’s… definitely….”

That could have been possible.

'The language of the letter also didn't seem to have any regularity at all.'

Geo's letters were written as if they had been typed on a broken typewriter; the outward appearance of the letters was neat and tidy, but the detailed language and rules were utterly confusing.

This part could certainly be what Geo said.

'If you're talking about resolution, it's probably about the level of Geo we talked about before... .'

Just like the great sense of oppression and fear felt from Geo outside the portrait.

'Looking at that, it certainly seems like the frame containing this portrait is acting as some kind of filter... Could it be a filter to contain Geo, a being that humans cannot handle?'

If the language was mixed and distorted in the process of going through the filter, then the current content is understandable. Geo's level is also a frame that is being distorted, so wouldn't language be distorted even more?

“It’s a bit of a shame for the person sending the letter.”

“I’m sorry if this made you feel embarrassed.”

“I guess it’s okay, but why did you send the letter?”

“It was just a simple thank you and greeting, nothing special.”

“…But didn’t you have your own rules?”

In response to the sudden doubt, Yoo Seong-un asked a light question.

“If you want to take something out of a painting, someone has to pay the price. But I don’t remember paying the price.”

“I thought about that too, but I think the seal helped me avoid being tied down by the rules.”

“A seal?”

“It’s a seal I obtained by chance. If I mark it with it and deliver it, it seems like I don’t need to charge anything in return.”

“Hmm, really?”

As expected, the 1:1 rule wasn't something Geo wanted.

'Because they figure out ways to get around the rules like that.'

If we look at it that way, Geo's rules are probably a kind of defensive line to prevent the huge scale from overflowing and destroying reality. As I thought before, I think it might be the result of the 'frame' acting as a filter.

'But if you think of a way to avoid that suppression, like a seal or something…'

It's a bit creepy from the perspective of a weak Earthling.

'… Even if Geo isn't the type of person who enjoys harassing others, someone of that caliber can unintentionally bring people down. If the rules given to this guy exist to protect Earthlings, then we should be careful of his tendency to casually ignore the rules.'

Anyway, I felt a little relieved. I had been losing sleep after receiving that strangely creepy letter, but as expected, it didn't seem to be a bomb scary enough to harm Yoo Seong-un.

“I was surprised. When I got home from work, there was a letter I didn’t know there….”

“I’m sorry. I didn’t expect the letter to be moved like that.”

“I guess you don’t usually send letters?”

“Yes, but….”

Geo rarely trailed off.

“I wanted to try making new friends.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un took a deep breath and asked in his usual tone.

“…New friend?”

“It’s embarrassing to say, but I only talk to Yoo Seong-un. Before we start a new relationship, I sent a letter to Yoo Seong-un first.”

“That’s… very good.”

Although Yoo Seong-un is a being of origin and has a calm and calm side, that doesn't mean he doesn't know how dangerous Geo is.

Since it was a meteor shower, it passed without a hitch, but if it was a normal person, they would have been shocked and fallen down upon seeing the strangely arousing letter. Especially if they were a civilian and not a hunter.

“I think it would be good if you paid a little more attention to that part because other people might be surprised.”

“I will be more careful next time.”

“I would appreciate it if you could do that.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was wearing a scarf around his neck, asked next.

“But how do you find that ‘new relationship’?”

How is Geo, who always appears in portraits, going to make 'new friends'?

If he were a normal person, he would move around and make friends through the Internet, but none of this was the case for Geo.

“Will that letter be delivered randomly to a random person?”

“No, the recipient must be correct so that what I am sending is delivered as intended.”

“That must have been my case.”

“I think I need to think a little more about how to make new friends.”

“Hmm….”

Is this the perfect timing?

Yoo Seong-un recalled the conversation he had with the leader of the Visabal Guild and asked Geo.

“Geo, is it possible to move to another dungeon?”

“Is it a dungeon, not just a simple portrait?”

"huh."

“…….”

Geo blinked twice as if he was thinking for a moment and then answered.

“In the case of the world I drew….”

"huh?"

The world drawn?

“The world you just drew….”

“Yes, in the world I’ve drawn, moving around is not difficult.”

"uh?"

“But the dungeon that Mr. Yoo Seong-un is talking about doesn’t seem to be the space I drew. Are you talking about a dungeon that already has an entrance on Earth and that Earthlings can visit?”

"…uh…."

Although he was a little confused, Yoo Seong-un answered while maintaining his composure as much as possible.

“Yes. I’m talking about a dungeon that already has an entrance on Earth that even a hunter like me can visit.”

Yoo Seong-un continued, thinking that he should increase Geo's risk level.

“You created portraits here and there and used them to travel around the company, right? Then I wondered if I could find your portrait in other dungeons. That means you can visit those dungeons too.”

“I haven’t tried that part yet.”

Geo, who had said so, added shortly.

“But it sounds like it would be fun.”

Geo showed interest.

'I'm glad I had that in mind.'

It is a portrait of Geo, who surprisingly pursues a life centered on interest.

If I asked this question, I had anticipated that Geo would be very interested and might try it right away.

'It's a bit difficult to figure out its behavioral patterns, perhaps because it has intelligence equivalent to a human or higher, but since it showed this much interest... If possible, it would be better to make suggestions within a manageable range.'

As Bisabal said, some humans like Yoo Seong-un cannot control Geo's actions. This was true even without selfish intentions.

There is no objective way to stop Geo, who considers himself human, from going out into society. He can go anywhere and create anything just by drawing pictures.

'Then it would be better to at least give them a direction. Even if I can't stop them from moving, I can at least recommend a place to go.'

Yoo Seong-un took out a piece of paper from his briefcase.

“Then what about places like these?”

“What is this?”

“I’ve picked out some dungeons that you can visit without causing any trouble.”

If possible, we chose a location with the least amount of casualties.

“The dungeons have low rewards and low recognition, so hunters don’t visit them often, and they’re not scary enough to put you in danger….”

“…….”

“If you want to experience an environment outside of the portrait, I thought you might want to try something like this. If you move around like this, you might meet other hunters when you visit the dungeon. Then, you’ll have a higher chance of making new friends.”

Geo nodded, wondering if Yoo Seong-un's suggestion didn't sound unpleasant.

"thank you."

“I hope this helps.”

“Yes, I have something to give you as a token of my appreciation.”

“Is it a gift?”

“The jerky I made earlier dried well.”

"…okay…."

I never knew you could even make beef jerky.

'This isn't ordinary jerky.'

I started to think that if I continued living like this, I wouldn't be able to live up to my name in another sense.

‘I don’t think I’ll become so healthy that I’ll live a long life or even become immortal…’

It was a meteor cloud that suddenly became eerie.

* * *

Geo, who successfully delivered the jerky to Yoo Seong-un, was troubled as he looked at the list of dungeons he had given him.

“Honey, let’s take a picture.”

“Kururuk.”

“Go to the dungeon where the jewel you spat out stopped.”

“Kukkurururuk.”

“I thought you’d like it too.”

The list of dungeons that Yoo Seong-un handed over also included photos of the interior. It seemed like the dungeons had already been investigated by people called Hunters.

Soon, Honey spat out the jewel.

“…….”

“…….”

“Here it is.”

vein of jewels

“…….”

jewel?

“A jewel?”

“Kururu.”

"…okay."

“Kurururururururururururu.”

“Okay, then stop….”

“Kurururururururur….”

"stop."

If it's shiny, I can't stand it.

'Does this kid know Korean?'

I began to have strong suspicions that it might not have been said intentionally.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (47)

Episode 47

“Fuck.”

F-class porter Cha Ara couldn't stop swearing for even a moment.

“How can life be like this? It really sucks… In my next life, I should be born as the youngest child in a harmonious, wealthy family….”

In a vast and complex anthill-shaped dungeon, Chaara was left alone and groaning.

“You little shits, you left me behind. I’ll fucking curse you.”

The place where she was abandoned was a dark cave filled with luminous gems.

You might wonder how it could be dark when it's filled with luminous gems, but it was home to light-eating, dust-like creatures.

There was a faint background visible right next to the brightly shining jewel, but other than that, nothing else was visible.

“…….”

Chaara was abandoned in such a dark dungeon.

“Fuck.”

As expected, it was like a dog.

“…You’ll stumble on the threshold and tear your nail, and it’ll bleed. You’ll trip and fall down on the side of the road, and you’ll get beaten up because it’s crowded. You’ll get drunk on your emotions at dawn and write stuff on the internet, and then wake up the next day and reflect on yourself….”

The reason it was abandoned was obvious.

It was good that I entered the dungeon with courage the size of an ant's tears, but I couldn't find a way out, food ran out without any results, the mood fell into the abyss, and I ended up using a return stone to escape the dungeon.

I understood up to that point.

'It's frustrating to waste money and time, but it's better to get out alive than to die.'

They say that even rolling in shit is better than this world. Even if it's a C-class dungeon, it's still a dungeon. You never know when someone might die, and especially in a dark dungeon like this, your mental power becomes noticeably weaker.

Since the blood had already been shed, it would have been wise to leave if there was a way out.

“…….”

But one return stone was missing.

“Fuck…!!”

The return stone itself was an expensive item, so even if there were enough, it might have been given to Cha Ara, who was an F-class porter. Maybe the fact that there was no return stone itself was a lie.

“Ah, you really are a bitch!! You got dumped on the day before your wedding and cried so much that you'll live the rest of your life as a bastard, you fucking bastards!!"

Cha Ara sniffled as she sat next to a jewel as big as her body.

This kind of thing wasn't common. No matter how cold-hearted the world is these days, it's not like they would abandon their porters so openly. Still, they're colleagues in a way.

"……."

However, it was an event that was secretly happening, but it was not widely known because the hunters kept it quiet.

'… It's more of a problem because it's not something that never happened.'

This wasn't the first time Cha Ara had been subjected to something like this.

'The biggest problem is that there are very few visitors to this dungeon.'

Even if you were left alone during that time, you could escape together with the hunters who came after you by bowing to them.

'Hunters have always had to pay attention to their image management.'

Since Hunters are a type of celebrity, they pay a lot of attention to controversies about their character, so unless they are a particularly ill-tempered Hunter, they would take in at least one poor porter who was left alone.

but.

"Oh really, no, this time, really, what should I do…."

This is the 'vein of jewels'.

It was a C-class dungeon with unusually few monsters and poor rewards, so it was not visited often by hunters.

“They say that if one team comes in a week, that’s a lot.”

The paths are intricately tangled, and because of the tiny creatures that absorb all light, whether it be lanterns or anything else, you could easily get trapped in this dark maze and die. Finding the exit is no easy task.

The reason why hunters occasionally visit this place is because of a monster that inhabits this dungeon.

“…….”

A small monster with a jewel body that glows softly like a mood light.

Also known as 'anti-cat'.

“…You idiots, ever since you said you were after that guy, I thought I was strong….”

Anticat was a cat-shaped monster the size of an adult male's palm or slightly larger.

Despite its cute appearance, it hates humans approaching and runs away. It also absorbs light like cave creatures, darkening its surroundings. This adds to its rarity.

'Even if you catch it like that, you shouldn't raise anti-cats.'

Raising monsters is not only subject to severe crackdowns on the country, but Anticat is a terrifying monster that, when angry, burns everything in its path with a blue light.

'Well, since it's such a monster, there are a lot of kids who are secretly crazy and want to buy more.'

Anyway, I shouldn't have joined this team. I should have jumped out from the moment I said I was going to 'Jewel's Vein'.

If only money weren't tight.

“…Really, what should I do….”

It had been less than 24 hours since I had been locked in the dungeon alone, but perhaps because of the darkness and silence that made even sound inaudible, I felt like my mind was being shaken. Although I was clearly in a large cave, it felt like I was trapped in a place where all sides were blocked.

I heard that in prisons, they sometimes lock in small, dark rooms on purpose to torment the prisoners, and it felt just like that. It wasn't as physically uncomfortable as being in a small prison, but it was mentally exhausting.

"eww…."

I was starting to get hungry.

'But it's not like I'm strong enough to clear this dungeon alone. I heard that the exit here appears under certain circumstances. It seems like it would require several people… .'

If we just wait for rescue, that is a situation with no answer.

“…….”

Cha Ara, who had her eyes tightly shut, quickly got up from her seat.

“…Let’s see if anything moves.”

It's easier said than done, but it was a long time when I was sober.

I was tired of just sitting still to extend my lifeline. If I continued like this, I would go crazy before rescue came, so I thought it would be better to move my body to avoid going crazy.

“Still, the vein of the jewel has fewer monsters. I can’t even dream of conquering it alone since I don’t have enough food, stamina, or skills, but if I just watch out for the ghost-like monsters that suddenly appear… I’ll be fine.”

The vein of the jewel is not mainly about fighting monsters.

The strategy is all about 'finding an escape route', but this place is as complex and dark as an ant hole. It's a dungeon that relies more on mental power than attack power, so even if you're a little bit sane, you can still get out without dying if you just keep your wits about you.

“…….”

But after about 3 hours, I felt like I was going crazy.

“Oh my gosh, this is driving me crazy.”

I was hungry, thirsty, sleepy, and my arms and legs were aching. The leg I had injured in the last raid had not yet recovered and I was limping.

If things continued like this, it was clear that I wouldn't be able to escape when a dangerous situation arose.

'But it's stupid to sleep peacefully in a place full of monsters that suck your life force away.'

I don't know much since I only heard about it and saw it myself without learning it separately, but I do know that all the monsters that live in the 'Jewel Vein' have a ghost-like appearance.

In the same vein, the monsters here attack by sucking the life out of the hunters. Although their physical attack power is not high, if you are not careful, your lifespan can be reduced by half.

‘Only when you’re awake can you come to your senses and kick them out… .’

It was when I was walking like that.

“…….”

In the distance, I saw something faintly glowing. It was a very faint light.

“…the jewel pillar….”

I don't think so.

Cha Ara squinted her eyes. Her eyesight wasn't bad, but she couldn't see very well how small the other person was.

'what?'

I could tell as soon as I saw it. It wasn't a glowing gem lying in a cave.

It is much smaller than that, has a round shape that catches the eye at first glance, and above all, it has four legs that move quickly and smoothly like a young lady from a wealthy family.

"uh."

Pointed ears and a bushy tail.

“Uh uh….”

Anti-Cat was a cute, jewel-like cat that fit in one hand, with a body as small as a kitten but with fur that rivaled that of any other long-haired cat.

“…Crazy, I get to see this.”

If the hunters who went out first find out, they will beat the ground and regret it.

'Just thinking about it makes my tired body and mind feel full. Everyone, eat well together.'

Chaara gained some energy and looked at Anticat.

‘… There’s no way I can catch an anti-cat, and I don’t even want to.’

Even though they say it's a world where you can just hush it up, it was illegal to begin with. If you didn't get caught, it would be fine, but if you did get caught, there was a high possibility that you would receive a severe punishment like a F-class porter with no one to look after you.

So what Cha Ara wanted wasn't the capture of Anti-Cat.

'There was talk that those guys were moving in the direction of the exit. It's not confirmed information, but still… .'

Anticat also noticed Chaara's presence and turned around.

"oh."

“…….”

“…….”

It is said that when an Anti-Cat detects a presence, it turns off its body's fire and absorbs all surrounding light before leisurely running away, but fortunately, the one in front of me did not do that.

Cha Ara inwardly sighed in relief.

‘… I, I lived.’

It was the first time I saw an anti-cat emitting such a soft light. No, it was the first time I heard of it. I learned that anti-cats usually hide in the darkness and avoid humans by consuming all the light around them.

The anti-cat, whose tail had been wagging, soon began to move its body in a brisk pace. It was a light and elegant gesture, like a soft balloon popping up or flower petals fluttering.

“…….”

I wonder if I can follow you.

'... As a monster, it probably doesn't have any intention of helping humans by turning on the light, but it doesn't seem to have any intention of attacking me. It's said that the monster's habits are quite similar to those of a cat, so if I just keep a reasonable distance, I won't be suddenly attacked... .'

Cha Ara, who was following Anticat so carefully, noticed something strange.

“…….”

“…….”

“……?”

Anti-Cat seemed to be checking to see if I was following him.

'…what.'

It could be said that it was a miracle of favor from the monster, but no matter how low the rank, she was a hunter named Cha-A. She knew very well that monsters would not like humans and would not show proper favor.

In particular, Anticat was a monster rumored to hate humans.

‘But that appearance definitely seems to be luring me… .’

wait for a sec.

“…….”

invitation?

It was when Cha Ara hesitated and tried to run away.

"hello."

“Ugh, huh ...

Crash!

Cha Ara's legs gave out and she collapsed.

“What, what what what, what what what….”

“…….”

“…Who, who are you….”

It took me a while to figure out what was going on.

Cha Ara, panting and catching her breath, realized that there was someone else in the darkness besides her.

It was a dungeon where nothing could be seen unless you were right next to the glowing jewel, so I never thought there would be anyone beyond where Anticat was heading.

'It's not a monster... right?'

Where in the world would you find a monster that speaks?

“Who, who are you….”

Even though she was hesitating to ask, Cha-Ara mustered up her courage and got up from her seat.

In the case of porters, even if the opponent is human, there are times when they get killed for fun in the dungeon. It is better to be careful about anything.

'Please calm down, kid.'

In the meantime, Anticat approached 'someone'. It was shining a little brighter than before, and the affection that Anticat held could be seen in the blue yet gentle light and the much softer gestures.

As the small body approached, all that was visible were pitch-black suit trousers and pale bare feet, and Anti-Cat was rubbing her body against those ankles and acting cute.

“…….”

It was a ridiculous scene.

“…Anti-cat….”

Aren't you an anti-cat who's famous for hating people?

“Oh, by the way, are you… a, a trainer? Uh….”

“…….”

“Which guild are you a hunter from…?”

I asked him, certain that someone at the level of a trainer would not work as a freelancer, but he still didn't answer.

An eerie silence followed.

‘…Why are you so silent?’

No, from the beginning.

Why didn't I feel any presence?

‘Even if I’m an incompetent hunter, I can tell if there’s a person at this distance…’

Cold sweat ran down Cha Ara's cheeks.

I instinctively sensed that something was wrong. By now, the pitch-black suit trousers and the pale bare feet beneath them were starting to feel eerie.

Yeah, that's right.

“…….”

There's no way a crazy kid would come into a rough cave like this barefoot.

“…….”

…let's think about it.

Anti-cats hate people.

'He said that even the trainer was no different.'

If this was a problem that could be solved by the trainer stepping in, anti-cat sentiment would have been more openly sold.

However, Anticats extremely abhor contact with humans, and the same goes for trainers who can make contracts with monsters. It's not for nothing that they have 'anti' in their name.

‘That anti-cat is acting so cute… .’

At that moment, the stranger bent down and hugged Anticat.

Even Chaara could see Anticat's small body fitting into a large hand. It gave itself over completely without any resistance.

“…….”

"hello."

"…yes yes."

Oh, really?

I was so out of it that I just let it go, but then Cha Ara remembered that she hadn't responded to the other person's greeting.

'Did you just scream?'

Chara nodded awkwardly, feeling strange.

“Hey, ah, hello….”

In this situation, he suddenly repeated the same thing. Maybe he was asking me again because I didn't respond to his previous greeting.

It was by no means an ordinary reaction.

'Are you a person obsessed with manners?'

Even as she thought that, Cha Ara hesitated and took a step back.

Her careful movements, hoping not to provoke the other person, showed that she had already determined that the man in front of her was a dangerous being.

‘… Something feels strange.’

The anti-cat, who hated people, was rubbing her cheek while being held in the man's pale hand.

Even if it was the result of a man's training, it was strange. Just because a monster made a contract with its master, it doesn't mean it naturally has affection for its master. Most of their relationships were very dry, or even connected by hatred.

'Besides, I've never heard of an Anticat emitting a soft light like that in a person's arms. It's such a rare sight that it's never even been photographed.'

The light was like a lantern luring prey in the deep sea.

“…….”

Although Anti-Cats do not like humans, it has often happened that monsters offer tribute to monsters stronger than them.

"…uh…."

Now that I think about it, there are talking monsters in the world. They are so rare and uncommon that I never dared think of them, but they definitely exist.

Humanoid monster.

“My name is Sergio.”

“…….”

“What is your name?”

A face locked in darkness, with nothing visible.

The hand holding the anti-cat and its chest were faintly visible.

A pitch-black shirt, a pitch-black suit, and an even blacker cloak. Big, thick fingers that were as pale as a corpse… .

“…….”

Cha Ara quietly took it in with her eyes.

Even though it was just hidden in the darkness and invisible, it felt like a human being without a face.

“…….”

And of course,

There is no human being in the world without a face.

“…I, I….”

“You seem nervous.”

“…….”

“Are you scared of me?”

“…….”

“I promise I won’t cause any harm.”

The voice was overly polite.

'…what's this.'

It was a creepy good voice.

It was neat and clear, like an announcer reporting the weather, and soft and firm, like a teacher teaching a student. Cha Ara suddenly felt that the voice was so perfect that it seemed strange.

It must have been quite a while since it had cleared up the confusion, but 'it' spoke to me again, as if it was not satisfied with the flowing silence.

“Don't be afraid.”

Cha Ara realized.

“…….”

ah.

That's it.

“I wonder what your name is.”

You're not human.

“…….”

“…….”

“Tea, tea… It’s tea.”

“Nice to meet you, Cha Ara.”

In the dark.

I saw darker eyes than that.

“Would you like to talk to me?”

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (48)

Episode 48

How did things end up like this?

“Let’s go, honey.”

“Gurrrr.”

“It’s a picnic.”

Nothing much. Geo and Honey were just having a picnic in the novel setting of a dungeon.

“Can I get that jewel?”

“Cur.”

“The one who pegs loses.”

The dungeon that was in the documents that Yoo Seong-un handed over, ‘Jewel Vein’.

Half unable to resist Honey's urge to go for the word jewel, and half unable to resist Geo himself enjoying this fantastic picnic, he made a passage using the information provided by Yoo Seong-un and visited this place right away.

“……?”

Then I discovered something peculiar.

“The assimilation rate doesn’t increase at all.”

“Gulp?”

“Well, I don’t really know why.”

It was the fairy tale rate of 'Giovanni' that went up even when he was still in the portrait. But when he suddenly stopped moving, I couldn't help but be concerned.

“Does the fairy tale temporarily stop when you come to a different dungeon? It doesn’t feel like it stops completely.”

“Gulp.”

"frame?"

“Kkuk.”

“It could be a problem with the passageway, as you said.”

Honey asked if the connection was lost because she came out through a passage she had created herself, not through 'Geo's Portrait'. For some reason, Geo felt like Honey was right.

“One thing is not important.”

People must live in the present to be happy.

“Even I, a portrait possessed by a ghost, am no different.”

“Crunch?”

“Portraits are people too.”

When Geo cried out, Honey didn't say anything anymore. I don't know if it was out of filial piety or because she was obsessed with the jewel, but either way, that's how it was.

Leaving the question as a question, Geo took a good look around the dungeon that Korean hunters often visit.

“Good.”

The 'Jewel Vein', which was somewhat eerie and dreamy due to the influence of luminous stones, was a great tourist attraction.

"stylish."

“Kururuk.”

“I like it.”

I think I understand why they call this place the 'Jewel Vein'.

“It’s all made of jewels.”

It looked like a cave created by flowing lava, like a cave created by flowing jewels.

Big gems. Small gems. Transparent gems. Opaque gems. Gems in the shape of pointed hexagonal columns. Gems in the shape of round spores. Gems that twinkle in clusters above like chandeliers… .

“Son, don’t eat too much.”

“Kung.”

“I have a stomachache.”

All kinds of jewels were gathered together in a haphazard manner, forming a number of branching paths.

'Sometimes the protruding end glows.'

Geo recalled the explanation of the data that Yoo Seong-un had given him.

“You said it was a very dark cave.”

“Kkuk.”

“Isn’t it a brighter place than you thought?”

It is said that the air in this cave is teeming with microscopic monsters that devour light.

Monsters that suck the life out of people roam the inside without a sound, and monsters that are too small to be caught absorb all kinds of light.

In this place so quiet that even sound seems to have been taken away, the only thing you can rely on are the self-shining jewel pillars.

“I said so….”

Geo's eyes were wide open all around.

“It’s a little dark, but the glowstone doesn’t block your view that much.”

“Kururuk.”

“Yeah, you too.”

I also thought that this was a benefit Geo could receive because he was a 'portrait'.

'I don't know exactly what the benefit is, though.'

If I can see something that all the other hunters on Earth can't, then Geo is definitely the weird one.

The only thing that came to mind as the reason why Geo, who was just a harmless human without even a white belt in Taekwondo, had acquired such strange abilities was the portrait.

“…….”

It seems like this is getting more and more human with each passing day.

“…It’s okay because it’s funny.”

“Huh?”

“It’s a very interesting life.”

“Kur?”

“It’s because I’m handsome.”

It's because he's really 'good' looking.

Well, as people live, they may become portraits, and they may even stray from the standards of ordinary humans.

That didn't bother Geo at all.

“Life is a series of contents, and contents are meant to be enjoyed.”

“Gurrrr….”

“There’s no reason why I shouldn’t enjoy my life, even if it’s a portrait.”

He did not give in to this level of realization. Geo, who had no other thoughts, toured the 'Jewel Vein' with peace of mind.

And I was amazed.

“The tourism industry on Earth has developed so much in 31 years.”

There were monsters that appeared faintly like ghosts, and for some reason, they would express a little favor to Geo and then just pass by. They looked no different from the animals in the forest.

Those guys sometimes kiss my ankles before they leave.

“Because they are like cute darlings.”

Geo nodded, having made his decision based on love, friendship, and peace.

'Did you know that I'm harmless?'

Anyway, since he knew that even monsters were not a threat, he had nothing to fear. Geo walked around the 'Jewel Vein' with a full heart.

As a result, Geo was able to enjoy the amazing tour to 120% with his son… .

“…….”

There were some things I didn't like.

There was no one.

“…I should have known from the moment you said it was a sparsely populated dungeon.”

Perhaps because he felt sorry for Geo, who was growing old alone, he even set up a system of letter communication to help him make new friends, but he couldn't find anyone who was worth becoming a pen pal.

'I am a dung beetle.'

I have no friends.

Since you can't just say hello to someone and become friends with them right away, Geo had to try several times to make new connections. It was this hard to make pen pals.

‘I haven’t seen a single hair on a person’s head since the beginning…’

Sergio, the messenger of this age who was full of love, friendship and peace and could fill his stomach without eating, was deeply saddened.

“In my 29 years of life, I have never been a loner without friends.”

“Kur?”

“Except for family. Wouldn’t it be a bit strange to call the child born from my paints a friend?”

“Kung kung kung….”

“Even if you’re dissatisfied, there’s nothing you can do. No matter how open-minded this dad is, if something can’t be done, it can’t be done.”

As Geo lowered his head, feeling drained for no reason, he saw a cat sitting down near his feet.

“…….”

Oh, cat.

“…When did you come?”

“What the hell.”

“You’re cute.”

It was a long-haired creature with long, fluffy fur, but compared to the whitish monsters of the 'Jewel Vein' that I had seen so far, it had a definite sense of weight and solidity.

“Has the time for selection come?”

Geo, who was checking to see if there was a mother cat nearby, soon died down again.

I mustered up my courage to come out into society and find that my new relationship is with a kitten the size of my palm. Is this okay?

“…I guess there’s nothing that won’t work out.”

Wouldn't it be better if everything was more complex? Life is something that cannot be lived alone.

Convinced, Geo asked the cat.

“There aren’t many people here, kid.”

“Gyarreung.”

“You’re cute, but you don’t answer.”

The kitten just lay down and didn't answer. Butler Geo, who was ready for the natural command to immediately stroke his belly, crouched down and gently stroked his tiny belly.

'Hard and cold.'

A rustling sound was heard. If the master is satisfied, I am also happy. Geo nodded.

“You’re cute.”

“Huh?”

“It’s cute because it’s small and harmless, right?”

“…….”

“…I don’t know why, but it seems like you’re denying what this father said, but whatever the truth is, it would be best if you didn’t tell me. It’s said that people are happiest when they’re ignorant, and that’s exactly what I am. I don’t want to know the cruel truth, so just leave me to enjoy myself.”

Honey acknowledged Geo's sincere appeal.

“But it’s really cute.”

The monster, which was as small as a kitten, was not as clean and transparent as Honey. The monster, whose entire body was made of jewels, had a lot of tight crystals and cracks inside, making it look as if it was opaque.

However, when I touched it directly, I could feel the soft fur covering its outer surface. Unlike Honey, its body made of jewels was cold and hard, but the cat's behavior of lying on the floor and enjoying being touched was very sophisticated.

“Can’t even a monster like this have emotions?”

Anticat

A cat-shaped monster made of jewels that has been acting independently since it was hatched from an egg. It has an extreme hatred for Earth creatures, and the humans who first discovered its existence named it 'Anticat'.

Etiquette: The jewel hair balls that Anticats spit out very rarely can be stretched out and woven into cloth to create an invisibility cloak. Even more rarely, Anticats shed tears, which are used as an excellent tranquilizer in their own right.

"oh."

Geo realized.

“Well, I did give emotions to the monsters in Cheonggyecheon, so I guess the monsters in the dungeon aren’t that different. They’re like this honest Speed Wagon.”

And then the second thing I realized was:

“…Do you hate creatures on Earth?”

Then what about me?

“Am I not considered a creature of the Earth?”

“Grrrr.”

“Don’t be so noisy, but answer me about my identity, kid. Although I am currently living in a semi-forcible portrait because my identity and real estate have all been liquidated, I am still a healthy, South Korean man who grew up in the mountains of Gangwon Province and received pure energy.”

“Gyarrrr….”

“Do you have catnip on your hands?”

I was so happy that I was embarrassed that I liked it this much.

“I found a prepared butler.”

Even though it was a monster, it seemed to be very well-suited to the touch of Geo, a veteran at petting cats, perhaps because it had the nature of a cat.

It was a moment when I felt rewarded for stopping by a cat cafe every now and then while living in a busy modern society.

“…….”

“…….”

Anyway, there was no one there.

"hmm."

Only the cat was cute.

“It’s sad.”

“Oh really?”

“I came here to make new friends, but I came back with only the owner.”

Geo already had his mind set on kidnapping this Anti-Cat. It says that it 'behaves independently from the moment it is hatched', so it seems like it doesn't have a separate family to live with.

'The cats of Earth should not be touched carelessly, but….'

This guy was a monster, so there was a little less burden.

“There’s an icehouse with a similar environment to this one, and I could draw a house in a similar place for you, so I think it’d be okay. What do you think, kid?”

“Gyarrrr.”

“I take it you agree.”

But not seeing a single person was a bit of a blow. The timid Geo had to expend a lot of energy just to go outside to make new friends.

“I don’t like having too many people, but I wish there was at least one person.”

“Okay.”

“…….”

“Grrr.”

"hmm?"

Anticat, who clearly understood what Geo was saying, quietly got up from where he was lying and went away.

"oh."

Geo intuitively sensed new content and waited quietly in that spot.

'A friendship brought about by animals? This is a beautiful situation, like a fairy tale… .'

As I waited in anticipation of a heart-warming encounter, the Anticat soon arrived to lure the humans.

I'm talking about a young and pitiful human who is so frightened by the mere sight that he can't even comprehend the situation, and who is dragged along like a moth by the faint light of the Anticat.

“…….”

Is it an offering?

'Sacrifice?'

Hey, no way.

'I brought you here to make friends, but it's too bad. You look as young as the students I taught to be my friends… .'

Geo spoke to the person who hadn't noticed him yet in the kindest voice he could muster.

"hello."

“Ugh, huh ...

This is a bit hurtful.

“What, what what what, what what what….”

“…….”

“…Who, who are you….”

It really hurts.

“Who, who are you….”

“…….”

Geo became sullen, not even noticing the other person's reasonable question. He was really depressed. Honey, who was hiding in the hood, seemed to be angry and said, "Why are you killing my dad's spirit?", but he ignored her.

I had anticipated that this would happen. It wasn't something I had completely forgotten about.

'Still… I thought I got used to people being afraid of me, but it turns out I don't get hurt.'

Moreover, the guards working at the 'Collector' were not that scared. Perhaps because of the recent rumors about the 'Black Cloak', most of them were not overly afraid and talked to Geo.

In short, this was the first time I had ever met someone who was so afraid of me.

‘… Did I surprise a student who looked like a high school student… ?’

Sergio, who was a high school teacher, suddenly felt heartbroken. If he were a student he was teaching, he would have tried to comfort her by giving her a sweet snack, but in the current situation, he thought that would only make her more scared.

Knowing Geo's feelings, Anticat rubbed his body against Geo's leg as if he had completed his mission. It was so cute. Geo looked down at Anticat.

“…Anti-cat….”

“…….”

“Oh, by the way, are you… a, a trainer? Uh….”

“…….”

“Which guild are you a hunter from…?”

Geo realized belatedly that the other person was asking very careful questions.

“……?”

Oh, that student.

'Are you the student I ran into in the alley last time?'

A kind-hearted student who kindly donated his scarf to a homeless person on a winter day.

'It's still amazing when I think about it again.'

I had to give them a reward right away. Or a store. Or a snack… .

'A special student who showed us that even in hellish Korea, there are special sprouts.'

As a teacher, Sergio was weak towards young students, and personally, he liked good people very much. There was no one who warmed his heart more than a kind and polite student.

'What should I do?'

Geo felt even more lost for words when he remembered that his opponent had been a good student at the time.

‘I think you were really scared of me that day… If you found out that it was the same person, wouldn’t you faint?’

Besides, Geo now didn't have the status to do so. In other words, it meant that he couldn't answer the questions the other person asked.

No matter how crazy you are, you can't say something like, 'Actually, I was an art teacher at a high school 31 years ago, and during a fire, a portrait became possessed by a ghost...'

“…….”

“…….”

But it was not the right thing to do as an adult to continue to ignore the student's questions, saying that my words were lacking.

It was just a coincidence that we saw each other once, but it was nice to see a familiar face, Geo said, putting pressure on his slightly stuttering brain to speak.

"hello."

“…Ah, yes.”

“…….”

“Hey, ah, hello….”

Oh, this is it.

'I'm sure that all the sociality I had in me during the 31 years I was asleep has dried up.'

As I watched the student looking very awkward, I couldn't help but feel sorry.

This was the first time someone was so scared of him that he didn't know how to react, and since the other person was a young student, he became even more cautious, which also played a part in Geo's attitude.

Geo hesitated for a moment and then spoke again.

“My name is Sergio.”

Grandma said that the most effective way to soften someone's heart was to speak clearly. Geo firmly believed in the words of his heavenly grandparents.

“…….”

“What is your name?”

However, even so, this was a bit strange, but Geo, who appeared in the dungeon as a 'portrait', had no awareness that he was objectively saying strange things.

Even if he had been aware of it, he would not have been able to deal with the situation in a plausible way.

“…I, I….”

“You seem nervous.”

“…….”

“Are you scared of me?”

“…….”

“I promise I won’t cause any harm.”

Geo was just saying it out of good intentions and sincerity. The other student seemed so nervous that he just wanted to say, 'I'm harmless, so don't be so scared'...

“Don't be afraid.”

Life isn't that easy.

“…….”

“I wonder what your name is.”

There are already things that have eaten into the ego as a 'portrait', starting with overly polite speech.

'Are you not relaxed?'

To prevent the already dangerous 'Portrait of Geo' from losing its human personality, Yoo Seong-un and Bisabal never depicted how he was a fearful and distant being to people.

That's why Geo also thought of himself as 'a gloomy old man you meet in an alley late at night.'

'It'll be better if we clear up the misunderstanding.'

How great would it have been if Geo's self-objectification had been like that?

“Tea, tea… It’s tea.”

“Nice to meet you, Cha Ara.”

Geo asked with great kindness.

“Would you like to talk to me?”

Look at my open heart. I'll show you how harmless I am. Well, that was the promise.

“…….”

“…….”

“Please save me.”

It's not like I was completely sincere.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (49)

Episode 49

“…….”

“…….”

Oh, what should I do?

‘I did try it anyway…’

Chaara's legs were shaking like a newborn deer.

'shit.'

Chaara's knees, which knew no limits and became cowardly in front of the strong, were already ready to kneel, but in most situations where life and death were at stake, the knees of most humans were not valuable enough to guarantee the survival of their masters.

'Especially when the opponent is not human.'

First of all, I knew that the opponent was not human. No, I couldn't help but know.

How could one not be aware of this profound sense of discomfort, when one feels as if the face is not there at all, even though it is only hidden in the darkness and cannot be seen?

'...Fuck, fuck, what should I do. But the fact that you're talking to me means you want to talk to me, right? Of course, if I don't like it, I can just kill you right away... But for now... .'

Chaara was not a so-called 'educated hunter'. She had only received basic training from the association, and did not know the exact ecology of monsters or how to deal with them.

But even so, I knew how dangerous humanoid monsters could be.

‘If I ever meet a humanoid monster, I just hope that it won’t hurt and that it won’t kill me if I’m below C-class…’

At home, her pig-like older brother and rabbit-like youngest sibling were waiting for her. Cha-Ara, who couldn't die quietly, decided to ask for help.

'First of all, if you can communicate and have the will to talk… it seems like you have it. Right? Right?'

Cha Ara opened her mouth while shivering.

“I, I… I’m just a porter. Do you need a slave…?”

“…Porter?”

"ah."

Not all humanoid monsters were well-versed in human culture. Although it was only a little while before Chaara realized it, it was good news that the other party was interested in what she had to say.

Cha Ara answered with a smile. There was a faint hint of a way to survive.

“A person who carries luggage. I can do many other things besides that. I’m good at cleaning, cooking, and running errands. If you really spare my life just once, I’ll do my best….”

“I'm good at it too.”

"…yes?"

“I’m good at cooking and cleaning.”

“…….”

What kind of mentality would it be to say, "I'm useful too," to a person who wants to live by demonstrating his own usefulness? Cha Ara felt like spitting out blood.

'What on earth do you want from me? Are you not going to let me live? Are you saying I'm useless? Or, or… .'

Even though Cha Ara thought she had a talent for pleasing others during her long life as a porter, her top-level social skills were useless in front of monsters.

'... Ah, no, it's too early to give up. Since we're speaking the same language and the other party is willing to communicate, I'm sure I can interpret what that monster wants and what it's saying. I can do it... Humans will win... .'

Soon, Cha Ara remembered something.

‘…Is this you trying to find something in common with me?’

Whether it was the statement from earlier or what he's saying now, it was obvious that he was trying to induce Cha Ara to feel favor or intimacy towards him.

“…….”

It's so awkward that it only makes me feel more uncomfortable.

“Uh, that….”

Cha Ara, who had been trying hard to hold back the tackle that instinctively came to her mind, meekly surrendered to the strong force.

“…I see! That’s amazing!”

"thank you."

“Cooking and cleaning aren’t something just anyone can do! You must be really good at it! You’re so cool!”

“The same goes for Ms. Cha Ara.”

“…….”

I was speechless.

'I ended up being the one who put myself up in front of that humanoid monster with such strong pride.'

I really needed a real return stone.

'Oppa, maknae, I'll go first.'

As Chaara hesitated in preparation for her painful death, a rustling sound was heard from the other side. Judging from the black cloak she was wearing, it seemed as if someone was tilting their head.

'You do have a head.'

As a strange sense of relief and fear simultaneously washed over me, the monster spoke.

“I’m sorry, but I don’t need slaves.”

“…….”

I'm sorry, youngest. I love you, oppa. Cha Ara once again prepared herself for a horrible death.

'Ara, I'm going to die here.'

I hope those bastards who abandoned me will appear on the 9 o'clock news, get beaten up by the entire nation, and never show their faces in this industry again.

'You guys, if you don't cover your face when you go to the convenience store to buy a snack, you'll get hit with flying eggs. Get so dirty and famous.'

As I poured out love and curses in my heart and shed tears of cold sweat, the other person continued speaking.

“Is your job slavery?”

"…no…?"

I just said this to mean, 'Oh my, you can treat me like a rat, but please just let me live, hehe.' In a country governed by law like today, what kind of slaves would there be?

“Oh, of course, that’s true… I’ve heard whispers that some rich people buy and sell slaves illegally….”

“This is terrible.”

“Yeah, that’s right. It’s horrible. Oh, they’re just bad people.”

“It’s scary.”

“…….”

Cha Ara was truly speechless at the polite and noble word 'scary' that did not convey even a hint of emotion, let alone fear.

But I sensed something.

‘… Are you trying to imitate a human now? Are you pretending to be scared?’

It was something I never imagined, so I realized it too late, but when I think about it, that's what it was.

‘The greeting from earlier, the way you made your name known, and the way you tried to empathize with me…’

It's so formulaic that I can't even tell what it was intended for and it just feels strange.

'I wonder if they were trying to act like humans in their own way?'

No, no, no.

'Isn't this unfair??'

Even if it's just an imitation, you have to be at least a little bit human to pretend to be fooled and say, 'Oh, shit, that's how it is!'

'This isn't even a modified version of a previous question. I'm telling you to imitate the questioner's intentions so that you can understand them. Who would fall for something like this?'

Even the leader who abandoned me made a joke that was easier to understand than this.

'If he were to be proud of himself for imitating an awesome human being and then say that, that would be really ridiculous.'

Cha Ara stammered and opened her mouth, feeling a strange sense of injustice that she had only felt once in her life.

“Yes, that’s right. That’s right, it’s scary.”

Once I realized that the opponent was imitating a human, I had a rough idea of the situation.

'Wouldn't it be similar to not answering or repeating something until I acknowledged your greeting? Like learning how to use a machine… .'

I know that when people greet each other, they greet each other in the same way, but Cha Ara didn't react that way.

'Is it like hitting a broken TV to bring it back to its senses? Like asking the same question over and over again to an AI that doesn't respond?'

When I look into it in detail like this, I feel sorry because it seems like I studied and imitated humans so hard, but honestly, I don't understand it at all.

The monster, who had been stroking the anti-cat while holding it to its chest, opened its mouth again, not knowing whether it knew Cha Ara's feelings of not knowing how to respond.

“I will not kill Ms. Cha Ara.”

“…….”

“It won’t hurt you, and it won’t make you sad.”

"uh…."

“I didn’t want to make it scary.”

The monster wearing a black cloak continued speaking.

“I wanted to make friends.”

"…friend?"

what?

'Does this mean that you are wandering around looking for a scapegoat to drag to the afterlife?'

The words themselves were very mild, but the other person's tone was not mild at all, so I was naturally suspicious.

If this heavy, stout being, whose appearance was barely visible but whose breath was suffocating and whose heart was about to stop, wanted to be a 'friend', it certainly did not seem to mean ordinary friendship.

'He looks like a funeral parlor attendant or a grim reaper. Could it be…? He really saves his comrades from the afterlife…? Something like that…?'

Before Cha Ara's doubts could even end, the monster continued speaking.

“Cha Ara is too young to be my friend.”

“…….”

You can't do that when you're young, right? Isn't this really like looking for a companion on the way to the afterlife?

‘… No, more than that.’

Cha Ara faintly frowned at the monster's attitude, which seemed to use the words young and weak as synonyms.

'I'm not that young, but I guess I don't know much about these things since I'm not human.'

At 18 years old, Cha Ara should already be married. She is treated as an adult, but she feels a sense of alienation once again when people look at her as if she is still young.

‘… But I said I wouldn’t hurt you… .’

It might be foolish to believe a monster's words, but it couldn't help but give me a little bit of peace of mind.

“Are you here alone?”

“…Ah, ah, yes. I’m alone.”

Surely he wouldn't kill me alone? Cha Ara suddenly became nervous.

It was basic knowledge known to all hunters in the world that monsters had their own rules. From a human perspective, there were many rules that felt strange and cruel.

'In particular, humanoid monsters are said to have stronger such regularities… .'

A monster that only kills hunters who are alone?

“Oh, like that.”

Fortunately, that didn't seem to be the case.

“I thought people in dungeons usually act in groups, but am I mistaken?”

"uh…."

You're describing people like a pack of dogs.

I really thought she was being really dirty and monster-like, but Cha Ara was really perceptive. She was so terribly polite that I could sense a faint hint of goodwill in her strange voice.

It seemed like a comprehensive and fair favor not directed at Chaara as an individual, but toward the entire human race… .

'It's not like I had no feelings at all.'

My mind was a little at ease. It was much less scary to face a monster with emotions than one without.

“…No, you know very well. That’s, I wasn’t originally alone…but somehow my group abandoned me. I didn’t have the strength to leave the dungeon alone, so I wandered around…”

“…….”

“…After seeing Anticat….”

Oh shit, I see.

'I… I wanted to know if that black cloak was a friend or a sacrifice, so Anti-Cat asked me, a human, to bring it to him.'

So, is that humanoid monster the unknown boss monster of this dungeon?

'It's not uncommon to see monsters cooperating with each other, but…'

It wasn't that common to hear one-sided orders.

'I don't know how to define it since I haven't learned anything. I never thought I'd see a humanoid monster in my life. Oh, shit. I really want to go home.'

It was around the time when I started to feel depressed.

Gulp!

“…….”

It was a dirty, loud belly alarm.

"…sorry."

“You seem hungry.”

"sorry…!!"

Today, Cha Ara learned for the first time that it is possible to feel both disgust and fear at the same time. Since the other person is trying so hard to meet human standards, it is scary, but it seems that she has the luxury of feeling disgusted.

“I haven’t eaten for the past three days….”

“3 days?”

“Yes, it’s been a little over 13 hours since I was abandoned. The food started then….”

“3 days?”

“…….”

What, what is it?

'What did I do wrong?'

The humanoid monsters weren't the kind of monsters that would appear in the association's textbooks.

Humanoid monsters each had their own set of rules, so no one knows what kind of strange rules the invisible monster in front of you might have.

Fortunately, however, the monster didn't seem angry at Chaara.

“They are bad people.”

“Gulp.”

Cha Ara was surprised by the new voice.

“Ugh, what, what….”

“This is my son.”

"yes?"

“…….”

The monster was silent for a moment, then he held the Anti-Cat in one hand and moved the other hand behind his head. It was hard to see because of the darkness, but… .

Cha Ara soon realized where the crying sound just now came from.

"honey."

Yes? What?

“I should say hello.”

“Kung.”

“He is a good student.”

“…….”

Before the ridiculous words like 'good' and 'student' came into Cha Ara's sight, there was something else.

On the monster's pale hand rested a small, honey-colored bird, filled with all sorts of jewels.

“…….”

… ears, cute.

“…Your name… is Honey?”

“Yes, I do.”

“Ask?!”

It doesn't look like that at all, is that a paragraph?

“But I won’t ask because I don’t want to.”

“Oh… I see….”

“Honey, let’s go home now.”

That was the moment.

Hwaaaak—!

“……!”

The little bird's body glowed brightly, illuminating everything in the cave.

“…Wow, wow….”

A jewel cave with its appearance clearly revealed.

'awesome.'

It was fantastic.

I forgot that I was in a state of fear and was amazed by the beautiful sight that I would only see once in my life.

'So this is what the veins of the jewel originally looked like.'

All sorts of large and small jewels were gathered together as if they were one body, and the paths of the cave were like ant holes. It was a space filled with a beautiful yet messy, dreamlike, and chaotic confusion.

Chaara saw the true form of the jewel vein for the first time.

“…….”

Thanks to that, I also realized how much of a monster 'Honey' is.

‘… I drove away all the dark insects living in the veins of the jewel.’

The 'dark bug' that doesn't physically attack, but is impossible to defeat unless you're a priest of class A or higher. That little bird instantly revealed it, absorbing all light except for the light from some glowing jewels.

It felt like a huge ray of sunlight was shining down.

“…….”

“Ms. Cha Ara.”

"…uh."

Only then did I see the monster's face.

“We are familiar with each other.”

“…Uh, uh uh…!”

As he said, I have seen someone named Cha-Ara.

“At that time, Jewel…! Portrait…!”

“I’m glad you remember.”

“…It was a monster?!”

“I am human.”

“That, that’s true, well, that may be true, but…!”

Chaara quickly nodded, not wanting to offend the monster. It seemed like he wanted to look human somehow, but he didn't want to die after yelling, "Stop joking. What kind of human are you?"

“…….”

Cha Ara, who had been hesitating, asked.

“…I, am I… going to die…?”

“I won’t die.”

“…….”

“Good people deserve to be rewarded.”

"that…."

Cha Ara suddenly realized.

‘That monster… is trying to treat good humans.’

Like the 'good student' I mentioned earlier, and also calling the group that abandoned Cha Ara 'bad people'. Even though Cha Ara was uneducated, she could tell that the other person was sensitive to good and evil.

“I’m sorry for surprising you last time.”

"uh…."

“It’s been a long time since I’ve seen such a kind student as Ms. Cha Ara, so I ended up following her without realizing it. I know you must have felt uncomfortable, so I’d like to take this opportunity to apologize.”

“Oh, no, there’s no need for that….”

“I didn’t mean to startle you this time either. But people are strangely afraid of me. In fact, I’ve never seen anyone as afraid of me as Cha Ara, so I didn’t know how to react. I apologize for any inconvenience caused by my confusion.”

“…….”

That was a dirty, polite monster.

'Don't you know that being so strict makes me feel sorry?'

It felt strange.

The monster, who introduced himself as 'Sergio', looked like an ordinary human being.

'no.'

He seemed like a very handsome man.

But the oppressive and distant feeling of the black cloak covering him was so great that he couldn't even see that.

How could a mouse praise the appearance of a giant in front of him? No matter how fragrant the smell was, a mere creature would not have the presence of mind to even evaluate that.

"……."

It was very gentlemanly.

At the same time, it was a distant and heterogeneous existence.

'… It's as if the universe is imitating humans… .'

I had no idea how to deal with it.

At that time, 'Sergio' held the small monsters in his arms and spoke to Chaara.

"I want to go home."

"…Ah, yes, that, I see. At home…."

huh?

'Do you have a separate house?'

Wasn't this home?

‘The gift you gave me last time was also a jewel… and since the anti-cat is following me like that, I thought that monster might be the real owner of this dungeon.’

Or did it mean that there was another habitat deep within this ant hole?

“…….”

“If you don’t mind, Cha Ara.”

"yes?"

“Would you like to accept the invitation?”

invite?

“An invitation? What the…?”

“Ms. Cha Ara is young. It’s dark here and there’s nothing to eat. You look tired and hungry, and I don’t want to just pass you by. I would appreciate it if you would allow me to treat you to a meal.”

“…I, I am that….”

“I swear I won’t harm you, and I promise to return you to Seoul after one meal. I’m saying this on the back of my own child, Honey, so please don’t doubt me.”

"ah."

“Would that make you feel a little bit more at ease?”

I didn't believe in monsters.

“…….”

However, just like Sergio said, Cha Ara herself was too young and weak to reject such obvious affection.

“…Please.”

I'm tired of being left alone.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (50)

Episode 50

As the late seniors said, don't trust monsters.

'That's not wrong.'

Cha Ara was a person who acknowledged the deep-rooted distrust of monsters in the hunter community.

Actually, the word 'distrust' is a bit strange, because no one trusts a wild boar that came down from the mountain.

'It's stupid to believe that.'

Before discussing trust and other things, the hunters and monsters were in a relationship where their very existence threatened each other's right to survive.

The monsters mentioned here mostly live in dungeons, and there are also those that settled on Earth in modern times. The common denominator among these monsters, which vary in size and taste, is that they are all dangerous.

'Because monsters are basically hostile to life on Earth.'

It didn't matter how insignificant or powerful the ability was, being unilaterally hostile to something other than a human was enough to devastate the human spirit.

“…….”

In that context, it was difficult for Cha Ara to accept the current situation.

“You’d better watch your step.”

“Oh, yes?”

“There is a fault right ahead.”

"ah…."

“Your eyes are dark.”

No, your eyes are bright.

'Even if you talk to a monster, they won't understand.'

The bird that Black Cloak had called 'Honey' brightly lit up the world for a moment, but then the bird returned to a soft brightness and hid behind the hood of the cloak.

Thanks to that, Chaara was following the black cloak following the light of the Anticat.

'Is it because the main body itself is so black? Even when it's close, it's hard to see. If there hadn't been an anti-cat, I probably wouldn't have been able to keep up with it...'

Anyway, I know that 'Sergio' is taking care of me.

'Apart from the fact that my imitation of humans is a bit awkward… you know.'

In the first place, who would come to a cold cave like this barefoot?

In fact, Geo had his own reasons for this. The reason he sometimes walked around barefoot outside the portrait was because he took off his shoes at home.

As he drew pictures to create passageways and entrances, the places he moved to were mostly the workshop in the cabin, and Geo, who came straight from there to the dungeon, did not bother to bring shoes.

Since the 'vein of jewels' was dark, I thought that even if I ran into someone, they wouldn't look at my feet.

"……."

But from Cha Ara's perspective, it felt like it was just crudely imitating human clothing.

"Well, by the way, what is a house…."

"Almost there."

"Oh, really?"

Chaara felt a little relieved at the kind treatment.

'… Judging from the fact that he answers me every time, it seems like he doesn't have any negative feelings toward me.'

Normal monsters don't have this level of intelligence, so they can't be compared.

But basically, monsters are almost always easygoing, and when they see people, they want to see the color of their internal organs.

'I heard that humanoid monsters aren't that different…'

Even if the monsters were kind to humans, it was a disaster from a human perspective.

So, even though she didn't quite understand this kind of polite treatment, Cha-Ara tried to suppress her fear and followed behind the black cloak.

'If things continued like this, I would have starved to death anyway. In that case, it would be better to try something.'

As Chaara tried to calm her mind, the man in black cloak stopped in his tracks and opened his mouth.

He pointed to the wall.

“Here it is.”

“…….”

frame?

‘… It’s an empty frame with only a forest background and no people.’

If so, I could just call it a 'landscape painting', but I felt that something was missing, that this was not a complete work.

"…ah."

She soon realized that it looked somewhat familiar.

“Did you see it last time….”

“Yes, that’s where I’m staying.”

“…Oh, I see.”

A drawing of a person. I'm not sure, but I think the essence of the black cloak is a portrait.

'Was it in the form of a portrait when we met before?'

The black cloak held out his hand.

“Come on in.”

“…….”

I'd be lying if I said it wasn't scary.

‘… If I stay here like this, I’ll just starve to death.’

I'm tired of waiting in the dark, starving, and waiting for new hunters who may or may not come.

Some might say it was a foolish decision, but Cha Ara did not want to miss the opportunity right in front of her.

“Phew….”

I grabbed the other person with slightly trembling hands.

"…ah…!"

Then, for a moment, I lost my mind.

Cha Ara felt like her body was entering the painting.

She felt like she wasn't herself, she felt a hazy sense of floating, and after dozens or hundreds of strange sensations passed through her, she was finally able to come to her senses.

“…….”

A gentle and clear air greeted the moment when the confusion had not occurred, as if it had been a momentary one.

“…….”

“Are you okay?”

"…yes yes."

It happened very quickly.

‘…Just now, something… .’

But I definitely felt a creepy sense of distance as I passed through the frame.

“…….”

It was terrifying.

Or is it loneliness?

Cha-Ara, who had never been to school and was not good at expressing herself, was at a loss as to how to describe the feeling she had at that moment.

If I were to evaluate it after quite some time had passed, it was an eerie and strange sensation, as if I had been left alone in space for a moment.

“…here is….”

“This is the house I am staying in.”

As he said that, Black Cloak put down the cat he was holding in his arms, Anti-Cat.

“Honey, I’ll be your little brother, so take care of me.”

“Kurururuk.”

"kind."

The sight of him talking to a bird made of water was like a scene from a fairy tale.

“…….”

This space was like that too.

A dense chest of drawers filling the walls. Paints infused with the scent of nature, canvases hanging on wooden easels… .

“…Workshop?”

as.

'Why is it empty?'

Not a single canvas was painted.

The air was mild. The scenery was peaceful. But for some reason, Cha-Ara felt eerie as she saw parts that were similar to the human lifestyle but different from each other.

“Yes, this is my studio.”

“This may be a rude question, but… there is no picture.”

“I’m always drawing.”

“…….”

“It’s just not a painting anymore.”

It was a story that was so difficult that it sent a chill down my spine.

“A finished painting either goes away on its own, or… it remains like this.”

“…Wasn’t it a passageway? This was, uh, a painting?”

“It is both a passageway and a painting.”

The monster, who answered bluntly, covered the frame of the 'Jewel Vein', the passage through which Chaara had come out, with a black cloth.

It was only then that Cha Ara realized that there were several picture frames covered with cloth like this all over her studio.

“…….”

“Would you like to take a look?”

“Oh, no.”

“You must be hungry.”

Chaara blinked at the other person's words.

‘… Didn’t the voice change somehow?’

No, the voice itself was no different from before. But… .

“Are you not afraid of me now?”

“…Huh? Oh, huh?”

“I asked because you seemed more relaxed than before.”

“That’s, uh, that, that’s….”

“…….”

The monster tilted its head as it watched Cha Ara stutter, but waited for her. Cha Ara, who once again saw consideration in that, was soon able to calm herself down and continue speaking.

“…Yes, it seems less scary than before….”

“That’s fortunate.”

The voice of the black cloak was polite and soft.

“When I go out, people are afraid of me. I think it’s because I’m a portrait.”

He opened the door to his studio.

“The kitchen is on the first floor.”

“Kitchen….”

It's too homely a word to hear in a monster's lair.

Cha Ara felt a strange awkwardness, but she mustered up her courage and asked.

“Hey, can I go with you?”

“Of course.”

"thank you…."

Cha Ara followed the monster just like she did in 'The Vein of Jewels'. But the atmosphere was completely different then.

‘… It’s very bright.’

To be exact, it would be more correct to say that it is gentle rather than bright.

This place, filled with warm air, gently relaxed my hands and feet, but there was something about it that was not light and calm and settled.

“…….”

Why is that?

'It's like a fairy tale.'

The wooden walls gave off a fragrant smell.

The stairs, although made of hard material, were soft enough to give the illusion of being soft, and the cabin, filled with soft sunlight, had a soft atmosphere like one might expect from a well-dried blanket.

‘Still, strangely…’

Chaara felt like this place was like a grave.

“…….”

“You can take a look around.”

"yes?"

“It looks like it’ll take a while to prepare the meal.”

The voice of the black cloaked man speaking like that had a somewhat aristocratic air.

“In the meantime, I think it would be a good idea to take a rest and look around the cabin.”

“Is that okay?”

“I’ll make you some fruit tea. How about taking it with you?”

"oh."

It's fruit tea.

'Isn't that really expensive?'

While he was hesitating, the black cloak went into the kitchen and soon came back with a glass. The tea, with its mysterious colors like the sunset, was like a magic potion, and it was refreshing thanks to the round ice cubes.

“You can eat while sitting on the sofa.”

“Go, thank you.”

Do all humanoid monsters act like humans?

‘It’s probably natural, in a way, since the word ‘humanoid’ was added to it in the first place… .’

Cha Ara, who accepted the glass, carefully sat down on the sofa.

“!”

It was very soft.

'It must be an expensive sofa.'

Although she thought so, Chaara felt a little embarrassed when she realized that monsters would never buy furniture according to human rules.

In the first place, it was foolish to try to understand the rules surrounding monsters from a human perspective.

“…The scent is really nice….”

It looked more like a work of art than food, but it had a very soft and sweet scent.

“…….”

Let's take a sip.

A mild sweetness enveloped my mouth.

"wow…."

Cha Ara's pale cheeks turned faintly red.

‘… What the heck, this is so delicious. Are all fruit teas like this…?’

Because sugar itself was so precious, I had never properly eaten a single fruit, let alone a fruit tea called cha-a.

So for a moment, I thought that all fruit teas in the world were like this, but that doubt was momentarily put to rest as I sipped the tea and realized something amazing.

“…….”

Oh, I'm not hungry.

‘No, I’m still hungry…’

The horrible feeling of emptiness that felt like my stomach was being scraped with a fork is gone.

'What? Was it a real potion?'

Well, it's a fruit tea obtained from a dungeon inhabited by humanoid monsters. I don't know if I should compare it to the regular fruit tea used by humans.

Cha Ara pursed her lips as she groped to figure out the situation.

“…Ummm….”

I felt strangely good.

It wasn't enough to make me laugh out loud, but I could tell that the tickling inside me was letting go of the tension.

She felt like the stress she had been feeling at work recently and the resentment she had toward her teammates who had abandoned her were starting to subside a little.

“…….”

The fruit tea was quickly consumed.

‘… My body feels so light.’

The tea had a special effect, and the injuries and fatigue she had were washed away. Thanks to the relaxation that followed, Cha Ara was able to look around her surroundings with a little more leisure.

“The ceiling is really high.”

I didn't realize it because I was so nervous, but now that I think about it, it seems like it took quite a while to even come down the stairs.

Although it was only a two-story building, its scale was enormous.

'But it doesn't feel like a rich house like the ones you see in dramas. Is it because this place is a kind of dungeon? After all, it's a place where monsters live, so if it's a dungeon, it's a dungeon...'

Cha Ara slowly blinked her eyes.

The rustling sound and the slow breeze unique to spring.

The chirping of birds coming from outside the window was bright and clear, like a round bead vibrating.

“I’m a little sleepy….”

I keep thinking about it, but it really was like a fairy tale.

“…….”

and.

It resembled a funeral.

“…Is it because it’s quiet?”

It was different from sadness or sorrow.

It did not resemble someone's heartbreaking weeping. It did not resemble a visitor mourning silently. It felt rich and heavy, like several white chrysanthemums quietly placed in front of a photograph of the deceased.

"hmm…."

It was an atmosphere that was difficult to describe.

'It's not uncomfortable.'

It was just uncomfortable.

So much so that it could be considered dire.

“Ms. Cha Ara.”

“…….”

“Ms. Cha Ara.”

“Ah, yes yes…!! Hunter Chaara is here!!”

“I know, so you don’t have to be so nervous.”

The monster that came out of the kitchen had already taken off its cloak.

“…….”

“Are you having trouble moving?”

“Oh, no.”

and.

'crazy.'

I didn't know people could be like that.

'Ah, no, I shouldn't call him a human since he's a monster... but he's really handsome.'

Why is something that should be in a museum preparing a meal in a hut like this? He was so handsome that he felt distant. He didn't seem human in many ways.

The monster, unaware of Cha Ara's thoughts, spoke with his characteristically blunt expression and voice.

“I prepared a light meal, so I wonder what you might like.”

“Oh, thank you.”

And then Cha Ara sees an unexpected sight.

“…….”

“Do you like rice?”

“I can’t eat it because I don’t have it. I can’t eat it because I don’t have it….”

“Is there a side dish you dislike?”

“I wouldn’t complain like that when I’m getting something for free. But, no. That…”

“Is there a problem?”

“…You were Korean?”

What is this seven-course meal?

“I introduced myself as Sergio. Doesn’t that sound like a Korean name?”

“Oh, I see.”

I was so scared I could hardly think, but it was a Korean name and I didn't have time to think about it. I didn't know that someone with such a neat and gloomy face like that aristocrat would prepare such a cozy meal for me.

'So it was Sergio.'

I just learned that the reason the name was made up of three letters was to give it a Korean feel.

There was plenty of plain white rice and various side dishes that I don't usually eat, but Chaara felt a sense of awkwardness.

'…Why can't I feel the energy of my late grandmother?'

Cha Ara felt a little strange.

Considering the noble aura of Sergio, a humanoid monster, it should not have been out of place, but it felt even more awkward because it looked so natural.

"……."

Cha Ara suddenly realized one of her feelings.

"Enjoy your meal."

"…yes."

It's a very faint and rather alien feeling in this peaceful atmosphere.

It was a kind of 'awe'.

"thank you."

This refers to emotions that can be felt towards non-human objects.

'… It's a bit funny to say this after receiving such a friendly meal… .'

Cha Ara suddenly raised her head and looked into Sergio's eyes.

A plain black eye is visible.

"……."

“Is there a problem?”

"…no."

It looked quite human now.

"thank you for this food."

In other words, it never felt human.

It's not fear, I can only say it's awe.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (51)

Episode 51

Sergio, who grew up in his grandmother's care, never saw anyone starve.

'Students who look like they're only high school students are forced to work without even eating?'

To be honest, it felt more terrifying than a natural disaster. Natural disasters are natural events that occasionally erupt when the Earth is bored, but if a child is starving, it is a problem caused by humans.

'I can't forgive you.'

Geo, who had once been a teacher, felt a great sense of responsibility.

“Does it taste okay?”

“Oh my gosh, it’s so delicious…!!”

“I am glad that you enjoyed the food. You are wonderful.”

Look at that nice meal.

'I wish I could go out and gain 5kg.'

There was nothing that made me happier than seeing a young student enjoy the food I prepared for him.

'What a blessing it is to eat so well.'

Geo didn't notice, but the air in the cabin also became warm, responding to his mood as the master of the forest.

Cha Ara, who was already excited about eating dinner for the first time in her life, quickly realized it.

'… Oh, something feels lighter.'

The atmosphere at the funeral seemed light, like an intensive care unit.

'By the way, this is really delicious….'

If Cha Ara, aka the 'learned hunter', had been frightened by this strange phenomenon, he would have been frightened.

I had a vague feeling that this cabin was a dungeon, and that the dungeon's owner was the black cloak in front of me, but it wasn't very common for a dungeon to change its environment depending on the boss's mood.

The dungeon that changes according to the boss's mood is no different from a living creature. In other words, right now, Cha-Ara is eating inside the stomach of a monster called 'Geo'. If she had known a little more, she would have thought about it that way.

But I was so taken aback by the miraculous kindness that suddenly came to me.

"Even if you only eat rice, it's really delicious. Hey, is this… is the rice delicious? Or is it because you cooked it well?"

"The rice is ordinary."

It's rice made by drawing on the packaging of rice we ate when we lived on Earth. It felt like it was my first time doing art for college entrance exams in a long time, so it felt a bit new.

'Anyway, there's nothing better than something delicious to help kids relax.'

Actually, this didn't seem to be just a story for kids. People who were afraid of Geo due to the influence of the portrait were able to relax a little after receiving a delicious snack. I thought it might be along similar lines.

Geo was determined to fatten up this skinny student.

“If there’s one thing different, it’s that this is rice cooked with broth.”

“Add broth…?”

“I used broth instead of water. It’s a little different in that I used deer bones instead of the more commonly used pork or beef, but to be exact, this rice was made with bone broth.”

“…If it’s bone broth….”

Isn't it really expensive?

'People in the city can eat it if they go to a restaurant, but for people in rural areas like us, if we're lucky, we have to slaughter a large cow in the village... .'

It felt like a waste of money to use it for cooking rice instead of anything else.

'What am I eating now?'

I was hungry and the food was delicious, so I ate it without thinking much about it, but wasn't this a situation that was more extreme than I imagined?

Geo said to Cha Ara, who was secretly sweating.

“Even if it’s not necessarily bone broth, it’s also delicious if you make it with anchovy broth, chicken broth, or vegetable broth. If you don’t like oily things, that would be better.”

“Uh, no, that….”

“There’s quite a lot of it, so you can eat as much as you want. But you should be careful not to ingest it. I didn’t want to say anything because it seemed like you were chewing it thoroughly, but if you overeat, you’ll get an upset stomach.”

"…thank you."

Anchovies and chicken are burdensome, but I thought I could make it at home with vegetables that I grew in my garden.

'I need to make this meal before the youngest goes into the dormitory.'

Because we lived so frugally, it was difficult to even eat rice. The most common foods we ate were baked potatoes or sweet potatoes, and the eggs that the village chief occasionally gave us were considered luxurious.

'If I just pick some vegetables here and there from the garden, I can do it somehow, but what should I do about rice…?'

Cha Ara muttered to herself and soon gave up on the idea.

“…….”

Let me enjoy it first.

'I thought I would starve to death or be eaten by ghosts, but I never thought I would get this lucky.'

Perhaps because her stomach was full, Cha Ara's tension had eased a lot.

Although I couldn't completely let go because my opponent was a humanoid monster, I felt relieved at the thought that there was no need to bother poisoning the food when it wasn't even my rule.

'In this respect, monsters are more trustworthy than humans.'

At least the monster didn't deny his own rules. He trusted the monster who had never threatened him and was polite from beginning to end, rather than the human who lied as easily as breathing.

Of course, you shouldn't trust them. There were monsters that pretended to be kind and deceived humans, making them let their guard down. If you thought of Geo as a monster, it was a mistake you shouldn't have made.

“……?”

“Is there a problem?”

“No, my legs… seem better….”

"ah."

Geo nodded.

“Have you ever broken a bone?”

“Huh? Oh, yes, I once encountered a monster while moving luggage in a dungeon and my leg broke.”

“The bone broth in the rice you are eating now has the effect of restoring bone abnormalities.”

“Oh… ah… oh….”

“After you finish your meal, I’ll check to see if your bones have healed before you go home. If not, I think it would be a good idea to give you some soup. I didn’t prepare this meal with the expectation of this effect, but I’m glad it helped.”

“Oh, I see….”

Who cooks rice with potions?

'This is how you act inhuman.'

I didn't know because it looked like a normal dining table.

'It's like my bones are all glued together after eating just a few spoonfuls of rice.'

I don't know for sure since I'm a lowly Chaara, but it would be a fairly high level recovery potion.

It was surprising that they cooked rice with it, even though its form was a bone soup. I could clearly feel that its way of thinking was different from that of humans.

'Still… I never thought I'd say this, but it seems like a good monster.'

As she ate the rice, which was so well-cooked that it felt sticky and had every grain of rice crumbling down, Chaara thought, “Those bad guys make bad rice.”

'Monsters have their own rules, so as long as you don't break them, it'll be fine.'

Cha Ara decided to ask outright.

“Excuse me, is there anything I should be careful about when dealing with Mr. Sergio so that he doesn’t feel bad?”

“What should I watch out for?”

“Uh, so… like, don’t make a mess of the house… there are things that Sergio particularly hates or wants you to keep from doing.”

"hmm."

The monster blinked twice and answered.

“I would appreciate it if you could just observe basic manners.”

"is it so?"

“I don’t really care as long as you don’t commit a crime.”

“Ah, crime….”

As I felt in the 'Jewel Vein' I encountered earlier, it was clear that this monster hated it.

'I guess you hate rude and bad people.'

And Cha Ara was confident in that direction.

'I suffered what I got, but I'm not strong enough to bully anyone.'

He was a F-class porter, the lowest class among hunters, openly called a slave class. He had no intention of committing a crime in the first place.

When Cha Ara learned the rules of the monsters, she felt much more at ease. It was something that the weak Cha Ara would never have done.

“…….”

That doesn't mean you can completely relax, though.

‘… His actions are very kind and polite… .’

Strangely, it was difficult to treat him comfortably.

'I know you're trying to be considerate. And you've never been particularly overbearing, so I don't understand why you're cowering like this. I feel a strange sense of pressure...'

But Cha Ara was steadfast.

“…Just one more bowl of rice….”

“It’s nice to see you eating well.”

“Oh, it’s me.”

But the food was delicious.

'Is this the monster my late grandmother sent me? It's really delicious.'

I think our village chief needs to learn cooking skills.

* * *

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un felt dizzy.

“I was in trouble, but thank you for helping me.”

“…Uh, no. Just this much.”

“I don’t know much about Korean geography, so I needed help.”

“I’m grateful that you called me.”

I never thought a sane person would pop out from behind this gloomy frame.

“What did Hunter say his name was?”

“Chachachachaarayo….”

“Oh my, you’re so nervous.”

Even Yoo Seong-un, who said that, was nervous. Wasn’t it a situation where he had hastily released Geo due to his own greed and that of the guild leader?

‘… It was fortunate that I had prepared myself mentally in advance. It was a much more peaceful situation than I had imagined.’

Even though it was part of the process of finding a way to coexist, it was right after he gave Geo a list of dungeons he could visit… an action that could be quite harmful to humanity.

I was drinking coffee and staying up all night, thinking that something unexpected might happen. I might hear news of a dungeon that was rarely visited by people exploding.

'I thought the association might step in, but it doesn't seem like it's that big of an issue. It's just a person being spit out of a picture frame.'

Still, it was surprising.

‘I never expected it… I never thought it would be connected so openly like this.’

Geo said to Yoo Seong-un, who had come to see him after receiving another indecipherable letter. He said that he had found a young human while playing in the 'Jewel's Vein', and that he felt bad about sending him away alone, so he asked if he could take him home.

When Geo said 'young human', I thought for a moment that he was around 10 years old, but thankfully that wasn't the case.

'Well, from Geo's perspective, it might be difficult to figure out what's young.'

Just as it is difficult for people to estimate a dog's age, Geo seemed confused as well.

'If you're 18, you're definitely an adult.'

Even if we didn't know that the Earth's culturally correct Hunter was an adult, it would be a bit ambiguous to call an 18-year-old young man

'young'.

Yoo Seong-un rubbed the back of his neck.

“…I think it would be right to bring Mr. Cha Hunter home first. Is there anything I should know?”

“I don’t think so.”

“Okay, then. Let’s continue the conversation when you come back later. Thank you for calling me first.”

After Yoo Seong-un's greeting, the portrait closed its eyes.

Since it meant that he had nothing more to say, Yoo Seong-un looked back at Cha A-ra without hesitation. He had to take this young hunter home so that he could complete the request that wasn’t really a request.

“Tea Hunter….”

"yes yes?!"

"…ah."

Yoo Seong-un was a little flustered by the strong reaction, but soon realized something.

“If you don’t mind, may I ask what rank you are in?”

“…….”

“I know you may feel offended by my sudden request for personal information, but I do not mean it in a bad way.”

“…It’s an F-class….”

“Aha, so that’s why.”

I thought he was a bit overly nervous, but he was definitely too weak of a hunter to be here.

'There's no way an F-rank hunter could tolerate the gallery of the Bisabal Guild Master so easily. And this is on the 5th basement floor.'

It was a gallery full of all sorts of dangerous items. Only Hunters with a C-rank were allowed entry. Those below that level were restricted from visiting to protect the Hunters.

'I didn't show any consideration because such a weak person would not come in. It's a very different atmosphere from the association's research institute where even researchers of the average level can enter through complete control.'

As a former research team leader of the association, Yoo Seong-un said that although they were comparable, each had its own strengths and weaknesses. From the gardener’s perspective, he felt that the association’s research institute was excessively abusing the existence of the source.

In any case, only those employees who can enjoy even a minimal level of communication with such dangerous works can become curators, so it would have been difficult for an F-class hunter with no connection to them to endure.

“I’m sorry, this is the first time a C-rank or lower hunter has come here, so I couldn’t pay attention to you.”

“No, no, no, that….”

“Shall we go out for now? There are a few things I want to ask, but I don’t think it’ll be possible to do so here.”

“Yes, yes, yes, yes….”

“I’m the curator here, so don’t worry too much. If you stay by my side, you won’t get hurt.”

There were a few works that occasionally gave me a heads up, but I didn’t plan on going near them, so it wasn’t a problem. Yoo Seong-un led the trembling, frightened Hunter Cha Ara to the elevator.

That was when I arrived at the first floor.

“…….”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un almost closed the elevator door again for a moment, but he was able to stop his muscles from moving thanks to the patience of capitalist society.

A giggling Bisabal appeared in front of his eyes. Yoo Seong-un couldn't help but ask.

“…What are you doing here, Guild Leader?”

“I was watching the CCTV, and I think I caught something really interesting.”

Should I say that in front of the F-class hunter who was trembling pitifully? It must have been hard to be so openly happy, but he really was an amazing person.

'It is clear that all the consideration that the Guildmaster of the Visabal should have given to humanity went to his own collection.'

Even if this world had fallen into the abyss of human rights, this wasn't it. Yoo Seong-woon shook his head to protect his guests.

“I don’t want to hear any more. I should be the first to interview Mr. Cha Hunter. You just came out of the gallery, so you’re very nervous. It would be awkward if you came out like this.”

“It is very unfortunate, but Curator Yoo Seong-un has no right to stop my enjoyment. No matter how you try to harass me, I am still the guild leader, right?”

“Should I get a promotion?”

“No matter how much I get promoted, I won’t be as good as the guild leader, but I wish I had done it when they told me to.”

"after."

Yoo Seong-un felt like chewing his tongue, but he couldn't hand the frightened, pale young hunter over to this crazy hedonist. In that case, he would be at a loss for words to say to Geo.

“…I know, it’s an exceptional situation that caught the guild master’s interest. But wouldn’t it be enough for me to check first and then report back to you? After all, the guild master is the face of our guild, so if you personally handle small tasks….”

“Wouldn’t it be comfortable for you guys?”

“Please, have some dignity, please have some dignity.”

It's a very good thing to do in front of a hunter you're meeting for the first time.

'Still, it's one of the top 3 guilds in Korea, so they're making an image for cheap.'

Hunter Chaara was unable to accept the situation as it was going and was completely frozen.

It seemed that he had decided to become a handful of air rather than accept this situation, but he was not the type of person to leave his tempting prey alone.

“Okay. You said you were Mr. Tea Hunter, right? What is your name?”

“Cha, Ara… It’s Cha Ara… Please save me….”

“Oh, dear. You’re so scared! No one kills Hunter!”

The thought, 'Why would you kill such an interesting person?' was written plainly on his face. It was more like the eyes of a viewer watching a wonderful relic or a meaningful movie than a human being.

It seemed like only Yu Seong-un noticed, but Cha Ara slowly hid behind Yu Seong-un.

‘… I was also wary of you when we first met, but I thought I would be safer than that human. Should I call that wise…?’

Yoo Seong-un hid her out of pity. But that didn't mean he could avoid the situation where the guild leader was holding the elevator button in his building.

“…….”

Now that it has come to this, it has become difficult to get this poor hunter away.

“…I was planning to go to the interview room….”

“Shall we go together?”

“…I see.”

It seemed that the only way to stop the meteor shower was to block it from the center as much as possible.

Geoya, you tried hard.

* * *

The visa was excited.

“Then, come on Hunter.”

“Yes, yes, yes.”

“Can you tell me what happened?”

“I just, nothing….”

“I don’t want to blame Hunter Chaara.”

This was quite a surprise.

“I am just amazed.”

Oh my, the being of origin is embracing a human? And a weak F-class at that.

'Contrary to what Curator Yoo Seong-un said, who prefers the appearance of overweight humans, Hunter Cha Ara is on the thin side. No, was it rather a choice to gain weight? Aside from the fact that she looks quite innocent, she is not a particularly special porter, but perhaps it is this innocent side that catches Geo's interest.'

The yellow eyes of the visage gleamed.

'Is it really necessary to have an innocent lamb rather than a sinner? Considering Geo's innocent nature, there would have been no need to offer pure blood like when dealing with traditional evil spirits, but if a good, young human had been offered from the beginning, a more certain response would have been obtained… .'

Bisabal thought of Yoo Seong-un, who had reported to him after the portrait and tour. He had been a little disappointed because Geo's first experience with human society had ended too smoothly, but this bait of visiting Earth's dungeons seemed surprisingly successful.

'Is it because he is the original being that he moves more actively in the dungeon? Since Geo has a fair amount of favor towards the human race itself, it may be inevitable that he becomes active in places where there are few humans who are easily frightened by his status. That is an interesting story in its own way.'

Portraits that arbitrarily draw humans into frames and then spit them out, no matter what the meaning, could not help but be sweet to collectors.

Visabal's smile deepened.

“Please explain how the painting ended up on the other side of the frame, what happened inside, and why you met the monster wearing a black cloak.”

I'm already looking forward to hearing what an interesting story he'll tell.

“Would you please do that?”

"…yes…."

"thank you."

Bisabal was very curious as to what artistic miracle this worthless hunter had managed to survive.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (52)

Episode 52

After hearing the whole story, Yoo Seong-un felt complicated.

“…….”

No, I just felt sick to my stomach.

‘…I never thought that the Source would allow humans. Has there ever been a case like this before?’

No matter how gentlemanly Geo is, he was born from the origin. If we were to find something similar, it would be something like 'the child of the origin', but well, I guess that's okay now.

The problem is probably what Cha Ara saw….

“…It was a cabin in the forest?”

Because it was assumed to be a kind of 'garden' of origin. If I had to find the most similar thing, it would probably be like that.

'... It's not a place that anyone can visit, because if someone who isn't qualified enters, they'll die. It's not even a normal dungeon to begin with.'

At Yoo Seong-un's question, Hunter Cha Ara wiggled her fingers. Then she nodded her head in a rather defensive manner.

From what Yoo Seong-un could tell, he seemed to have a rather sensitive and prickly personality, but more than that, he seemed to be more intimidated, which seemed to be due to how he had been treated in his daily life.

“Yes, I think so, but I’ve never been outside the house.”

“I see.”

Yoo Seong-un rubbed the back of his neck.

'This is a headache.'

I heard that the air changed depending on Geo's mood.

Although Hunter Chaara didn't seem to think that far ahead, there weren't many boss monsters among humanoid monsters that were so integrated into the dungeon.

'At that point, we should treat the monsters and the dungeon as one body.'

In other words, Hunter Chaara went into Geo's stomach and came out.

'Not even just a dungeon, but a garden... Does that make sense?'

For Yoo Seong-un, who knew how terrible things could happen if an unqualified person were to enter the 'garden', it felt like a ridiculous and bad lie.

'Even if Geo gave permission, it's not a merciful space where a weak F-class hunter can come out alive.'

If what this person had seen was really a garden, even if Geo had been a unique type of gardener, he would not have been able to protect Chaara. A mere gardener did not have that much authority.

Strictly speaking, it's like a kimbap that went into a person's mouth and came out of the stomach without being digested. It's impossible, and because of that, it's become difficult for Yoo Seong-un to define the current situation.

“…….”

If that's the case, then Geo, really… .

“…I know you must have been flustered by the sudden situation, but thank you for answering me with all your heart.”

Fortunately, Bisabal just smiled and didn't interfere, so it was easy for Yoo Seong-un to control the flow.

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking, intending to wrap things up for now and give his opponent a rest.

“It seems like we’re the only ones asking questions, but if you have any questions, feel free to ask.”

“…Can I ask?”

“…….”

As expected, he was a sharp person with a lot of vigilance.

It seemed like he was stretching out his legs to find a place to lie down, but even so, he couldn't hide the sensitivity of this young hunter. He may have some kind of survival strategy, but his personality itself didn't seem to be very well-rounded.

'You're saying that you melted that kind of person so sweetly that you even fed him?'

I've never thought about it because so many people say it's scary, but Geo might have the ability to lower people's guard.

While pushing such a guess to a corner of his brain, Yoo Seong-un slowly nodded his head to make the other person feel as reassured as possible. The other person was a valuable witness to Earth's history, so it was right to be as considerate as possible.

"Of course you can."

It seemed like it would be better for him to explain first, so Yoo Seong-un continued speaking.

"The piece that Hunter Chaara encountered is called 'Portrait of Geo.'"

"…A work of art, right? Not a monster…?"

"We are still trying to figure out the exact identity, so please understand. However, for the sake of understanding, it would be better to think of it as a humanoid monster."

"Rather, I don't understand it even more…."

"You can think of it as a monster with less hatred towards Earth compared to other monsters."

In fact, he saw it as something much higher in level than that, but he couldn't tell this hunter who was meeting him for the first time that much. His mouth didn't seem to be open, but there were many variables in the world.

"The title of the work, 'Portrait of Geo,' suggests that there is a self defined by 'Geo.' It can move through the frame, just like the way that Hunter Chaara said she saw it at dawn on a snowy day, and it can even move outside the picture."

"…That's…so…."

"Because it has a fairly friendly attitude towards humans and there is no way to stop it from moving by drawing beyond the frame, collectors are also trying to persuade it to leave it alone."

“What, no, yes?”

Cha Ara shivered.

“How can we just leave such a dangerous person alone…! Well, since you said it’s a work of art, doesn’t that mean it’s stored in a collector’s gallery? T-T How can we not keep it locked up?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un felt doubtful.

‘… Did you just say person?’

It was a strange thing, as it was not an easy word to come out while feeling the oppressiveness of that black portrait.

'Even though he says in words that he wants to lock her up because she's a work of art, I guess that means he actually feels like Geo is a person. This is definitely unique. If Hunter Cha Ara herself isn't special, then maybe it's Geo's ability.'

While thinking that, Yoo Seong-un said with his characteristically innocent smile.

“There are only two places in Korea where dangerous objects like ‘Portrait of Geo’ are stored.”

“…Ah, were there any other places besides the collector’s gallery…?”

“It’s not well known, but that’s where the Society’s research lab is. It’s a much more secure place than the collection gallery.”

“Then why don’t you send it there….”

“The guild master had a strong opinion. The ownership of ‘Portrait of Geo’ belongs to the successful bidder, Guild Master Bisabal.”

The guild leader's opinion was that ownership and time to appreciate the work were more important than people dying from dangerous works. Cha Ara seemed speechless at that shameless answer.

Despite the danger of the work, did she understand the harsh world and her own situation where she could not protest in any way? Yoo Seong-woon, who had been watching her become a little quieter, continued speaking.

“Our guild will compensate for any inconvenience caused to Hunter Chaara.”

“…You want me to shut up after receiving that?”

“I would appreciate it if you could do that. Is there any reward you would like?”

“…….”

“If you still can’t think of anything, feel free to ask other questions during the remaining time. Hunter Chaara must have been very flustered by this situation as well.”

Hunter Cha Ara, who had been hesitating and looking around, soon opened her mouth.

“That, that… person…? Anyway, that person isn’t human, is he?”

“As I said before, you can think of it as a humanoid monster that can speak. That doesn’t mean it’s a real monster, but at least you can be sure that it’s not human.”

The visa holder spoke.

“You can think of him as a god who enjoys playing. Even though I don’t know his exact identity, I don’t think his status is lower than that of the gods worshipped by priests.”

“Guild Leader, I am concerned that spreading uncertain information to a hunter you are meeting for the first time could be a source of great anxiety.”

“But wouldn’t that be easier to understand? A humanoid monster that can talk isn’t something that hunters would really relate to. On the other hand, there are some eccentric gods who enjoy having fun.”

At Bisabal's words, Chaara muttered with a trembling expression.

“You cook too…?”

“…….”

“Are there any gods who cook…?”

At his insecure muttering, Bisabul burst out in laughter without a sound, and Yoo Seong-un tried hard to hold back a sigh.

So, Geo, are you a grandmother?

'Even if you like fat people, why do you get anxious when you see people and can't feed them?'

It wasn't enough information to give an answer, so I nodded obediently.

“…Yes, it’s one of the habits that ‘Geo’s Portrait’ shows. There are already many people in our guild who have received gifts from Geo. Things like cookies, chocolates, and candies….”

When Yoo Seong-un glanced at Bisabal, he nodded with a smile still on his face. With that permission, Yoo Seong-un continued to speak comfortably.

“In my case, as someone who manages ‘Geo’s Portrait’, I also received gifts of fruit tea and sausages. I think it was probably the tea that Geo gave me at the cabin. I think the type of food may change depending on Geo's feelings toward the other person, their relationship, and his personal judgment."

"Ah… ahh…."

"But… I have a question, so for a moment."

Yoo Seong-un asked Cha A-ra.

"Did you give Geo something before you ate at the cabin?"

"…? No… What? I, I'm a beggar… I don't have anything like that…."

"It doesn't matter if it's nothing special. Even if it's just a rock, didn't you give Geo something? Or did Geo seem to have strong feelings for Hunter Chaara?"

"……."

Cha Ara looked confused between annoyance and bewilderment with a face that said, 'Why on earth are you asking me this?', but soon she became lost in thought, deciding that this wasn't just a useless question meant to harass her.

Even though some time had passed, Cha Ara's answer was the same.

"…It doesn't seem to exist, no matter how much I think about it… Even if it's something like an emotion, it doesn't seem to exist at all…"

"Is that so? Didn't Geo even say anything about considering Hunter Chaara a friend?"

"I said in 'The Vein of Jewels' that I came to find a friend, but, uh, um, no. I said that I was too young and weak for you to have me as a friend."

"aha."

It was a strange standard.

'… It's definitely a bit unusual for Geo to think that someone around 18 is too young, but anyway, did he think that it would be hard for an 18-year-old and a 29-year-old to be friends? I don't know if he was worried that the other person would be oppressed by his status, or if it was a conclusion that fit the popular view of humans… .'

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“It certainly seems like I didn’t receive anything.”

“Is that not okay?”

“As far as we know, there has been no such case.”

One of Geo's rules was 1:1 trading.

“When interacting with humans, ‘Portrait of Geo’ would receive something in return, and when given something, it would want to receive something in return. This applies even if it is not necessarily something material. Geo would always give a gift of apology to those he thought he had surprised.”

“Ah, ahhh…!”

“……?”

“A gift of apples!!”

Cha Ara rummaged through her arms as if she knew something.

“That, that…! The present I received on that snowy day, when I saw it back then…!!”

“I would appreciate it if you could calm down and speak slowly.”

“Ughhhh….”

Cha Ara took a deep breath and took out a black jewel from her bosom.

“I, I received this. I found it when I sat down in surprise.”

“…….”

“I forgot for a moment, and I wasn’t sure if what Geo-ssi gave me was right, so I couldn’t tell you….”

“…Can I take a look for a moment?”

“Oh, yes.”

"hmm…."

The armored meteor lifted the jewel and examined it closely.

“…….”

A crystal structure that shimmers faintly, almost like a liquid.

But the quality is solid.

“…That’s right, Geo gave it to me.”

“Oh, really?”

“Yes, only Geo can create such jewels.”

That's what I've found out so far.

“If you don’t mind, may I purchase this gem from our collection?”

“Huh? This?”

“Because it is a crystal structure that does not exist on Earth, even if you put it up for auction, there will be a lot of gossip. In the worst case, even Hunter Chaara and her family could suffer damages.”

"uh…."

“I think it would be better for us, who manage ‘Portrait of Geo,’ to keep it.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders as he said that.

“I’m not forcing you.”

“You’re completely forcing me… You’re threatening me by bringing up my family….”

“I just told you the reality, and the choice is yours, Hunter Chaara.”

“Ugh….”

“I’m not saying I’ll buy it right away. I’m saying it’s only if Hunter Chaara allows at least some minimal protection.”

“Protective measures? Are you talking about surveillance?”

“Because I can’t just leave the unidentified gift from ‘Portrait of Geo’ alone.”

"no…."

“As I said before, this is not something we are asking for right now. We also feel burdened by the idea of forcibly taking away the gift that ‘Portrait of Geo’ gave us.”

It wasn't the way of the collector to steal and buy something while the other party hadn't even figured out the situation yet. He had no intention of committing any hooliganism against a young hunter who seemed inexperienced in trading or auctions.

“If you are sure, please contact me then.”

“…Aren’t you taking it?”

“It is a gem that has no value on its own, except as research material, as its crystal structure itself is unique.”

Although it may not be as large as the Association's research lab, the collection also has a separate team that can study new works or pieces of works. Geo's jewel had already been confirmed to have 'no special functions' and its safety had been confirmed through various experiments.

'It's not like I can be completely at ease though… It's not something dangerous or valuable enough to warrant the risk of taking it from a young hunter who's already scared.'

And then, if you die with the favor of the work, it is a natural death, which is also Bisabul's opinion. As a gardener and employee under him, Yoo Seong-un had no reason not to follow this direction.

Yoo Seong-un continued his explanation.

“Most gems are valuable simply for their beauty, and collectors often buy gems simply for their beauty, but that doesn’t mean there’s anything wrong with that.”

“What the heck…?”

“I meant that there would be no problem if you just had the gem in your possession. If you hide it well so that other hunters don’t notice it, no one will know that the gem is special unless they look at it closely. If you’re just going to use it for decoration, I recommend not selling it.”

In such cases, you may suffer an accident if it is stolen or you may be seriously injured due to a risk factor that the collector is unaware of, but there will be protective measures at the guild level in that regard.

'We also need to prevent the world from becoming too noisy because of Geo's existence.'

Yoo Seong-un took out a red jewel to reassure his opponent.

“I also received a jewel in return for ‘Portrait of Geo’.”

It was a jewel I received after drawing an apple for Geo a while ago. It was still transparent and beautiful even without any separate action.

“I have examined it as closely as I can from a collector’s perspective, but it is no different from any ordinary gemstone on Earth, and is harmless, neither easily broken nor scratched. There is no problem with it, except that it is excessively hard.”

"ah…."

“I personally recommend keeping it for ornamental purposes, but there has been no detailed research on the ‘Portrait of Geo’. There is no way to know when or how the gem might harm you, so if you wish to trade, please contact me then.”

Suddenly, Visabal became sullen. It was a truly disgusting reaction.

“Are you not selling it now…?”

“Please keep your cool, Guildmaster. This is not an auction house.”

“I… I don’t have anything… I don’t have Geo’s jewel… We’ve never talked before….”

“So what I’m saying is, you should change that personality.”

How burdensome must it be for that kind Geo to even avoid conversation?

'There's no way a guy who likes to be quiet would get hit by a viper. He's not a bad person, but he's definitely not a good person... He's harmless to his work, but he's a very harmful person to other people.'

I barely managed to hold back my sighs in front of outsiders. No matter how much the collector's image was of a free-spirited atmosphere, there was no benefit to showing the staff disparaging the guild leader.

“Besides, I need to ask Geo for his opinion on whether I can sell the jewels I received as gifts to our guild. Monsters are strict about rules.”

“…That, that’s true… I guess….”

“Aside from that, there won’t be any problems for the time being, so it would be better to keep it for ornamental purposes. If you feel uncomfortable, you can sell it now.”

I didn't want to see the Visa-Bal people jumping for joy, nor did I want it to fall into the hands of others and cause a stir in the academic world.

As long as there are no emergencies, it's not a bad idea to just own it as an individual.

'It would be safest to keep it unofficially in a collection store.'

Cha Ara was a rare hunter who received much favor from 'Geo's Portrait'. She was the only one who ate a meal prepared by Geo himself, not just a simple gift like cookies or fruit juice.

'It's a shame to incur hostility from such a person. He is a person who basically has a wary attitude towards others... Let's not make him uncomfortable.'

As a gardener, I was curious about what effect Geo's jewel would have on an F-class hunter. Yoo Seong-un continued speaking.

“Our collectors still don’t know much about the ‘Portrait of Geo’. However, since you have received Geo’s favor, Hunter Chaara may also encounter the ‘Portrait of Geo’ again someday.”

“…….”

“So let me tell you what I have to share.”

It would be a problem if Hunter Chaara buys the portrait for no reason.

“As I said before, Geo prefers a 1:1 deal. From what I’ve heard from Hunter Chaara, it seems like this rule only applies when there’s a picture frame between them. You said that there was no problem even though you didn’t give Geo anything when you were eating inside the painting.”

“Oh, yes, that’s right. I don’t really have anything….”

“If you ever encounter ‘Portrait of Geo’ again, there’s no problem with talking to him. However, if you give or receive something from Geo, you should be mentally prepared for a corresponding price.”

“Uh, uh, uh, how? What price do I have to pay?”

“I confirmed that there is no problem in paying up to 10 bungeoppang.”

“…….”

It's simple.

Cha Ara made a strange expression as if she had seen a talking panda. It seemed like she thought that Geo was receiving something so ordinary that it was not worth much compared to his status, and Yoo Sung-woon also agreed with that a hundred times.

“I also confirmed that telling Geo personal information such as your name is not a problem. Several of our collection staff members have shared their names with the portraits, but no unilateral contracts have been made.”

"…thank god."

"and…."

Yoo Seong-un held back a sigh as he felt the fatigue suddenly creeping up on him.

“…….”

Whether the situation was good or bad, the source's being friendly to humans was also a matter of consuming one's soul.

I will never meet a being like this again in my life.

* * *

“…….”

1. The name of the man wearing a black cloak is Geo.

2. Geo is a member of the early morning shift. Don't ask for his identity.

3. If Geo wants to use his full name, please let him know. No problem.

4. Respond kindly and politely to any conversation Geo initiates. If the conversation is successful, you will receive a gift from Geo.

5. Rule number 4 is exaggerated and does not have to be strictly followed.

6. Ignore rule number 5. Always be polite to customers and coworkers.

7. You can give Geo a gift. In this case, be sure to get something in return from Geo.

8. If you see a picture frame hanging inside a building that you haven't seen before, ignore it. It will probably be taken down before dawn due to experimental installation by the early morning shift. Do not touch or scratch the artwork.

9. Bad people cannot go in front of the portrait on the 5th basement floor. Be especially careful not to visit the portrait at dawn.

“What is this?”

“These are rules that our guild leader personally established.”

“Is it okay for me to look at this?”

“Actually, it might not work….”

Yoo Seong-un suffered from extreme fatigue.

“But since the guild leader himself asked me to show it to you, I guess it’s okay.”

“Are you sure it’s a good thing? This is just giving up. Can a large company run like this? The management of the work is also a bit strange.”

“This is a rule that was created for our employees to use, so please check it carefully with some caution regarding terms and such.”

“Yeah, yeah….”

Chaara, who had been looking over the rules, tilted her head and asked.

“By the way, what are numbers 4 and 5? It looks like these are rules written by two people. It’s not like it’s a ghost story.”

“Ah, that’s because Geo personally added the part after seeing the rules the guild leader had put together….”

“Can we just let the monsters change the rules themselves? Why did we leave it like this in the first place?”

“The guild leader said to leave it as it is because it’s fun.”

“…….”

“If you understand, can I take you home now?”

Cha Ara nodded cautiously as she looked at the tired office worker's face.

“Father, please….”

Not all big companies are good.

It was a moment of enlightenment.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (53)

Episode 53

Meanwhile, the staff at the collection office who received the same official document as Cha Ara were very embarrassed.

“……?”

“What is this?”

“Is the guild leader joking or something…?”

“You’re not the type of person to play around with official documents.”

It is true that Bisabal frequently plays pranks, but surprisingly, he is a man of solid public works. If it were not for his collecting habits, Bisabal, who always maintains a gentlemanly attitude, would never play pranks on official documents.

“Is it like a ghost story?”

“Is this the story of the black cloak?”

The staff was confused.

“So, ‘Geo’ is a person or a ghost….”

1. The name of the man wearing a black cloak is Geo.

2. Geo is a member of the early morning shift. Don't ask for his identity.

3. If Geo wants to use his full name, please let him know. No problem.

4. Respond kindly and politely to any conversation Geo initiates. If the conversation is successful, you will receive a gift from Geo.

5. Rule number 4 is exaggerated and does not have to be strictly followed.

6. Ignore rule number 5. Always be polite to customers and coworkers.

7. You can give Geo a gift. In this case, be sure to get something in return from Geo.

8. If you see a picture frame hanging inside a building that you haven't seen before, ignore it. It will probably be taken down before dawn due to experimental installation by the early morning shift. Do not touch or scratch the artwork.

9. Bad people cannot go in front of the portrait on the 5th basement floor. Be especially careful not to visit the portrait at dawn.

The official document says to treat him like a human being, but the nuance is that it means, 'This kid is definitely not human, but don't show it and behave yourself.'

“…….”

“…….”

The staff foresaw a future in which they would become tired. They looked at each other.

“How should I interpret this?”

“…Let’s first gather our teams together and assess the situation.”

“Oh my, Guild Leader….”

As expected of a guild of cynical people, they no longer squabble and gather among themselves to discuss things coolly. They know that nothing will get done if they just wallow in confusion.

“First and foremost, this is a discussion about whether this is a joke or serious. If you have any opinions, please feel free to share them.”

“First of all, I don’t think it’s a joke. Our guild leader is someone who knows how much he can control his employees with a single official document. He’s someone who often ruins people when it comes to his works and art, but he usually maintains a clean attitude.”

“I agree with you. However, I think rules 4 and 5 are just jokes. It’s like someone messed with the rules the guild leader had set up….”

One of his employees said to him:

“Isn’t it possible that someone else has been messing with the rules that the guild master has set out? The most likely one is the ‘Geo’ mentioned in these rules, aka ‘Black Cloak’. I mean, the ghost that is assumed to be a humanoid monster.”

“Ah… That’s what I meant when I said it was a joke. This official document isn’t shared in real time, and it could have been easily edited, but it was sent like this. I think the guild leader is enjoying this kind of ghost story-like atmosphere.”

“That makes sense.”

Even if Bisabal had established a rule in this way where the two egos check each other, it was a joke, and even if 'Geo' had touched the rule established by Bisabal, it was a joke because he didn't modify it and just threw it away.

“But in that case, we can stipulate that these rules are worth knowing.”

“After looking into it, I found out that they sent an official letter to all employees except for those who had been irregular workers for less than 6 months. Judging from the fact that they took measures to prevent the official letter from leaking outside the guild, I can tell that this case is quite important."

"Then let's conclude the first discussion with 'I am sincere.'"

"I agree."

"I agree."

Second, the staff reviewed the content of the rules.

"It is true that this rule is targeting the 'Black Cloak' that we know of. The name Geo was also secretly known thanks to several sightings. However, I think the reason for introducing his identity in the first sentence like this is to let us know about his existence."

"It says that I'm a member of the dawn shift and that I'm not to ask for my identity. I'm sure this is because Black Cloak doesn't like people asking for my identity. I don't know why…."

An employee asked.

"First of all, is the black cloak human or a monster? Shouldn't we start by making that clear?"

"But you even sent me this official document in the form of a ghost story, vaguely organized. It seems like the guild leader is saying indirectly that he has no intention of revealing the exact identity of the Black Cloak."

"Still, we can guess."

"No, think again."

The employee shook his head.

“The more we know, the more likely we are to take on difficult tasks.”

“You’re wise. In that case, it would be best to treat Black Cloak as Schrödinger’s Man. Until we see for ourselves, everyone should think of Black Cloak as a member of the early morning shift that the guild master secretly brought in.”

“Yes, the official document also has the nuance of treating ‘Geo’ as a human being. If the guild leader tells you to do so, it is the virtue of a good subordinate to follow.”

The employees who were virtuous and had no intention of taking on additional work all nodded their heads. It was truly a guild that could not help but be running in a precarious state.

But there wasn't a single employee who wanted to know the details of the incident that made Bisabael so happy and nervous, whether it was a ghost story, a human, a ghost, or a scorpion.

“The more you know, the more work they’ll make you do.”

“But they give me more allowance.”

“I won’t work if I don’t get paid. I have to go home and take Choco for a walk.”

"but…."

They were serious about work-life balance.

“Anyway, if you tell me not to ask for my ID, doesn’t that mean that employee Geo doesn’t like being asked questions about his identity?”

“The more I look at this, the more it looks like a human, a monster, or something….”

“Oh, if you don’t want to be given extra work, then keep quiet. But since they said there won’t be any disadvantages to giving your full name, at least they're not someone who's messing around with contracts."

"Team Leader, you're treating me like a monster right now."

"I told you to be quiet, so that's why you're doing that."

Unless there were very special circumstances, there was no way that a visa would do anything to damage one of my collections, the staff. So it seemed true that there was no harm in making a statement.

"But the fact that the word 'Tongseongmyeong' appeared in the official document means that Black Cloak attempts to make Tongseongmyeong quite often, doesn't it?"

"Everyone uses their full name, right?"

"But if it even appears in an official document, it means that the black cloak is making statements in an unnatural manner. No matter how you look at it, this is a monster imitating a person…."

"It's quiet."

"I'm sorry, I'm so speechless."

The analysis continued.

"No matter what conversation you have, be kind and polite…"

"After that, it is written, 'Let's always be polite employees to customers and colleagues.'"

"It seems that Black Cloak hates rude people, judging by the fact that he emphasized it twice."

"And bad people too."

One employee pointed out rule number 9.

“'Bad people cannot go in front of the portrait on the 5th floor underground. Be especially careful not to visit the portrait at dawn.'”

“…….”

“This part seems to block access altogether, so we can see that the Black Cloak’s penalty for ‘evilness’ is greater than that for ‘rudeness.’ I think it would be best to prevent hunters with criminal records from entering as much as possible.”

“No, really.”

The young employee who had been grumbling for a while now washed his face dry.

“Fuck, even if I try to treat him like a human being, the way this guild leader speaks is just….”

“Calm down, this guy is the guild leader and that’s just how he is. He probably signed the contract without knowing, but everyone knows by now.”

“You are right.”

“But it’s become clear that the black cloak is deeply connected to the portrait on the fifth floor of the underground gallery. I heard that there was a portrait of a man in the fifth floor gallery that the guild master recently bought at an auction, um, yeah.”

“…….”

“Let’s stop here.”

No matter how hard they tried to figure out the identity, the truth was of no use to the employees who absolutely hated the extra work. They gritted their teeth and ignored the identity of 'Geo' while analyzing the official document to avoid making a mistake.

“Let’s go back to rule number 4. Not only is it simply a courtesy, but it also says at the end, ‘If the conversation was successful, you will receive a gift from Geo.’”

“Then, if I have a conversation that doesn’t satisfy Geo and I don’t receive a gift, is there a separate punishment? Like being sick all day…?”

“Considering that the guild master is just leaving the black cloak alone, it doesn’t seem like there will be any major problems that will affect his life or daily life. However, it seems that the black cloak hates rude people, so ‘unsatisfactory conversation’ could also be considered a form of rudeness.”

“Then, if such ‘rudeness’ piles up, rather than just not receiving a gift at the time, then you could incur the enmity of the Black Cloak. That could definitely be dangerous, so you should be careful not to miss out on receiving a gift more than three times.”

“I don’t know if Black Cloak’s patience will last three times… but I understand.”

The employees who saw rule number 5 exchanged glances.

“This is also….”

“It must be something the black cloak wears.”

“It’s exaggerated, so don’t follow the rules. What does this mean?”

“It could be that we are waiting for you to let your guard down as per rule number 4.”

“It’s creepy.”

There were many monsters like that. They were monsters that deliberately made humans break their rules, and then when humans broke the rules, they would use that as an excuse to attack or harass them.

“So that means you know Korean, right?”

“According to eyewitness accounts from the morning guards, he introduced himself as ‘Sergio.’ It seems to have been done in a Korean style, so I think he must have been very familiar with Korean culture.”

“If you treat me like Schrödinger’s man, then you’re right, Team Leader.”

“Ah, um… yes, there are people among humans who are ignorant of different cultures.”

The team leader waved his hand as if to brush it aside.

“Rule number 7 is also easy to understand. If you want to give something to Black Cloak, you must receive something in return. I think this part is Black Cloak’s rule.”

“So this is just a monster….”

“Shh. There are people who value rules everywhere. I don’t know how much direct interaction we’ll have with Black Cloak in the future, but if we give him anything, make sure you get something in return.”

“I guess he’s the kind of person who really likes to repay favors with favors.”

“Yes, that’s very kind of you.”

They were still gritting their teeth and turning away from the truth.

“Isn’t rule number 9 difficult to achieve in the first place? The number of people allowed to enter the gallery on the fifth basement floor, which is the last floor, is limited. Is this a rule for the curators?”

“I think that's not very likely.”

After finishing the general cleanup, the employees dispersed on their own.

“I should buy the curators a meal soon….”

They sympathized with the curator, who was the manager of the gallery.

At that moment, numerous curators were holding back tears.

“It’s not just me.”

“Anyway, ‘Portrait of Geo’ isn’t our responsibility.”

“If Mr. Yoo Seong-un is busy and can’t come, we have to do it.”

"ah…."

It was the same with the dawn guards.

“…They say it’s that scary.”

“…You have to be careful, huh….”

Anyway, as long as I follow the rules, there won't be any problems in my life, right?

Then, the employees accepted it calmly.

* * *

“…Things have turned out like this again….”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“I think you’ve chosen your staff very well.”

“You all seem so indifferent. It’s typical of our collection members who hate extra work more than dying.”

“Anyway, I think I’ll adapt well.”

Visabal said there was no way to keep 'Portrait of Geo' locked up, and he also wanted to make sure that his work was not abused in that way.

With the input of gardener Yoo Seong-un, they devised a way for the 'Black Cloak' to properly blend into the human world.

This could be called a kind of vaccination. Bisabal laughed, saying that it was not a judgment that would be detrimental even on a human scale. The way he said that it was okay if some people died was indeed shameless, worthy of an S-class.

“And the Chaara Hunter I saw last time.”

“Oh, is there a problem with that guy?”

"that is…."

Yoo Seong-un scratched his neck.

“I think Geo and your family will meet soon.”

"oh my god."

Visabal's face brightened.

“Is Geo going out again?”

“I wrote in my last report that I was planning to watch the initiation ceremony of the Solar Church.”

“I thought it might change your mind, since this is a portrait that doesn’t like much noise.”

“I was worried about that too, so I asked him again, but he said he still wanted to go out.”

“The first outing went really well, but I don’t know if it will be the same the second time.”

“Isn’t this strictly speaking the third outing? Geo has already met Hunter Chaara in ‘The Vein of Jewels’.”

“To be precise, it is the formal imitation of a human being in a portrait. It is a pleasure.”

"…happy…."

“Has the sea been noisy lately? You said there have been changes in Geo’s personality as well… Hmm.”

“…….”

The meteor cloud has become ominous.

“…It seems a bit strange to hear you say this, but have you seen anything? The future, for example?”

“My skill is emotion. Please refrain from making strange lies, Curator Yoo Seong-un.”

The visa holder laughed.

“But it sounds like it would be fun.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un clenched his teeth.

It was a remark that shortened the lifespan of Bisabal, which was famous for its good eyesight, by saying, 'It looks like fun.'

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (54)

Episode 54

Meanwhile, in a peaceful cabin.

Geo was looking after his new family member.

“Is this kid all grown up?”

“Gyarrr.”

“You’re cute.”

It was a cuteness that brought peace to my heart.

Geo gently grabbed Anti-Cat's two front paws as he saw it lying on its back and flapping its four legs. Cats on Earth don't like having their paws grabbed, but Anti-Cat didn't seem to mind at all.

He held the front paws lightly and shook them a few times as if he was playing with a newborn baby.

“Grrrr….”

“I don’t think you hate it.”

“Mishap.”

“A cat is a cat.”

“Mmmmm.”

“It’s really cold.”

Anticat's body felt cool, as if touching a stalagmite in a deserted cave.

“Honey, it’s the complete opposite of you.”

“Kururuk?”

“You are warm.”

Perhaps because it evolved from the juice of Lulupu, who grew up under sunlight and moonlight, Honey's bean-sized body was particularly warm. It seemed that its temperature had risen even higher recently thanks to the generous affection it had received from the sun god.

“It’ll be hard to stick close to Honey when it’s this cold….”

I don't know if there is any scientific basis for this, but don't you think that if you hold something like a fish or a frog, which is naturally cold, with your hand, you might get burned?

“If you feel uncomfortable with me touching you, just tell me, kid.”

“…….”

“You keep your mouth shut like a ghost. Good girl, good girl. Very smart.”

It doesn't seem uncomfortable.

“It seems like you understand what I'm saying.”

That was really interesting.

‘It sparkles like a jewel… It seems to be a crystal of something.’

Anticat's body was like that of a kitten only a few months old. Its body was filled with a dense sparkle like a well-cut diamond.

Thanks to that, unlike Honey, whose body is completely transparent, it also appeared opaque.

“That’s cool.”

“Ugh.”

“It even knows how to glow on its own, it’s amazing.”

Honey looked at Geo intently from the side.

“…….”

“…Of course, Honey, you’re special too.”

“Kung.”

“Oh, it’s pretty.”

“Gurr.”

Raising children is so hard.

“By the way, what does our youngest eat when he grows up?”

I roughly checked and it seems that it lives by sucking life out of people. They say that on Earth, it's treated as a kind of ghost, but if it's such a cute ghost, I thought it wouldn't be bad to suck out the life out of it just once.

“I might have to build a cat tower soon… I guess I’m good at making hiding tunnels.”

“Gyarrr.”

“There are tall, rugged trees scattered around here, so it would be good for climbing, but even inside the house, you would need an anti-cat territory. If you resemble a cat, you would be sensitive to your own territory.”

“What.”

“The place where the youngest lived was the ‘Jewel Vein,’ so it would be fun to have a similar environment. If we make a hiding place like a dark ant hole and put some jewels in it… I think it’ll be okay.”

So now it was time to name it.

“Sparkle….”

“…….”

“…Is this deja vu?”

It was a similar reaction to when I first thought of the word 'Golden' with the name Honey. It was a reaction that seemed to ask, 'Are you serious, human?'

Geo tried to be a little more creative.

“…….”

He was silent for a moment and then muttered softly.

“Dana?”

Among Korean names, there is one that means 'a person who always goes ahead', but in fact, this was not the reason that I thought of the name 'Dana'.

“I kept thinking of Diamond, so I thought about giving it a similar name, but Diamond is too long. Even if I shortened it to Diamond, it felt too long.”

But it seems too unscrupulous to shorten it to 'daa' or 'dai'.

“How about making a little change there?”

“No response.”

“I’m glad you like it.”

Passed the examination.

"after."

Geo gave this honor to the namers of the world. As expected, naming is not an easy task.

“Now let’s go prepare dinner.”

“Kururururuk.”

“I got hungry while naming it.”

I also had to clean up the bone broth.

“Fortunately, it seems that student Cha Ara liked the taste as well.”

The earth's skeleton has many things to take care of. The process of handling it was similar, but after that, the care was put into controlling the fire and removing the impurities that came up.

“The first bone soup that comes out is too oily, so it’s too much of a burden to eat on its own. I boil the bones at home, but it’s a shame to throw them away, so I try to use them somehow, but the fact that the bones are made from the earth’s own cows is still a hassle.”

“Huh?”

“There is something like that.”

Even though she understood what was being said, Dana, an anti-cat who was not used to it yet, hung on Geo's shoulder as if to say, 'I have no idea what you're talking about.' It was a heavier and more interesting sight than she had expected.

On the other hand, Honey, who knew that Geo enjoyed cooking, listened calmly. A true gourmet knows the origin of the food he eats and enjoys it more deeply. That's what Honey and Geo did.

“In that respect, the skull of the wood deer is quite independent.”

If you leave it alone for three days on low heat, the bones and cartilage will melt without you even being able to remove the impurities.

“If you really think about it, there is nothing to throw away about the wood deer.”

“Kurururuk.”

Honey, who had eaten all of the intestines except for some of the intestines, showed strong sympathy. Honey, who was happily shaking her tail feathers, looked back at Geo from Dana's other shoulder.

“…….”

“……?”

As soon as Geo Honey saw that something had come to mind, he realized what she was talking about.

"…ah."

Come to think of it, I had a jewel heart that I got while dismantling the wooden deer.

“I forgot to check.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“If you finish eating today and there are no problems, I’ll give it to you, honey.”

Geo, who was a jewel and could create it himself, did not covet the jewel heart. It felt strange that it was still alive somehow even though it was clearly a part of a dead body.

“But if you think you’ll get sick from eating it, Dad will keep it.”

“Kkuk.”

Honey didn't go that far and throw a tantrum. Geo was pleased.

“What a wonderful thing.”

He was happy to have a good and honest son. Geo himself may not be a very good person, but he thought it was a great blessing to have such a good family all his life.

Geo skillfully corrected Dana's flowing posture and said.

“Actually, the bone soup itself was completed when I gave the rice cooked with it to student Cha Ara, but I thought it would be better to keep it in the ice storage and eat it for a long time, so I boiled it a little longer. I could just add more water later if I needed it.”

“Kurururururuk.”

“Yes, you waited a long time too. I can still clearly see you loitering in front of the stove because you wanted to eat, but you really held out well. Judging by your patience, you will grow up to be a big bird.”

Honey originally liked liquid food. The wait must have been quite harsh. Geo acknowledged and praised Honey’s patience and went to the cauldron where the bone soup was still boiling.

"oh…."

A sweet scent hits you as soon as you open the lid.

“Good.”

“Knuckle, knuckle, knuckle….”

“It must be hot now.”

“Kung.”

“If that’s true, I’ll spread it out.”

Honey had received the touch of the sun god several times without any problems. Now, it was natural that there would be no problem with the soup boiled a little longer with firewood. Geo tried to scoop up some soup into a small bowl and give it to Honey.

And Geo saw it.

"honey."

“Kuruk.”

“It would be good for my body and mind if I came out.”

I'm talking about honey that's been stuck in a cauldron.

“Kung kung kung….”

“I don’t want my son to eat our broth. This isn’t a scene from Greco-Roman mythology. What kind of human scum are you planning on turning me into?”

In the meantime, Honey had grown from a magpie to a pigeon, and if she went to the animal hospital, she would definitely be told that she was severely obese and that her guardian would have to be careful.

“It’s already concentrated and the taste is stronger, what is this?”

“Kung kkung kkung kkung kkung….”

“It’s not good for your health if you eat too salty food. Let’s calm down a bit so that Dad can make it more delicious.”

Honey crawled out of the cauldron, grumbling.

“…….”

"…you also?"

“Ouch.”

Was he impressed by the antics of his brother who confidently crawled into the cauldron and tasted it anywhere, anytime? Dana, who had been hanging on his shoulder like slime without much motivation, sat down next to the cauldron.

'It might be a little hot for Dana, who has a low body temperature.'

Geo cooled the soup down as much as possible and handed it to Dana.

“…….”

licking.

“…….”

"oh."

Geo nodded at the sight of her whole body glowing softly and silently.

'I guess you like it.'

Although he wasn't a talkative guy like Honey, it seemed like his mood was expressed through his body glowing.

Geo prepared the meal with pride as a father and a chef.

“Let’s eat some rice. I made some when the students came. Let’s eat that.”

“Kuruk.”

"net."

Dana, who had never shown much interest in eating, seemed to have felt something after tasting the bone broth. It was very interesting to see her following Honey around and meddling in the meal preparation.

“As expected, nothing speaks as well to children as something delicious….”

Geo scraped up the rice cooked in bone broth.

After scooping up all the rice grains that were still sticky, I scraped off the remaining scorched rice at the bottom. It was scraped off very cleanly, perhaps thanks to the oiliness of the bone broth used to cook the rice.

“Who would like some nurungji?”

When Geo asked about making a simple snack by rolling up the nurungji, both creatures responded.

“Kurururuk. Kurururururuk.”

“Mang, Misap, Mangok… Mangmangmang.”

“…Let’s go.”

Although the resentment was strong, is there a choice as wise and historic as the wisdom of Solomon? Geo neatly cut the rice ball in half, and when he got there, the two companion creatures stopped grumbling.

While they were busy eating the nurungji rice balls, Geo finished preparing the meal.

“I should try making some grilled rice balls with the bone broth.”

Even though I said that, it didn't mean that I was really going to bake just one.

“For a side dish, let’s try grilling eggplant in soybean paste… and making some soup.”

Geo headed to the backyard, which he called a vegetable garden and considered a monster garden.

The pea stalk still seemed to have a firm sense of self.

“…….”

Enough to say hello.

“…It’s starting to get funny.”

Softly.

“Yes, nice to meet you. The weather is nice.”

“…….”

“Thank you for taking care of the garden today.”

The stem that had received Geo's greetings sank again calmly.

‘… Even if I pretend to be an ordinary bean stalk now, I won’t look ordinary.’

But Geo decided to respect the privacy of the bean stalk. He naturally overlooked the fact that a normal bean stalk could not move.

Anyway, Geo picked four eggplants and some other vegetables from the garden. After washing them cleanly, he cut the eggplants into appropriate thicknesses and salted them. He peeled the radish and cut it into thin strips. He also took the peas out of their pods and washed them in water.

“…Even so, I feel a bit awkward putting in beef jerky.”

Geo brought sausages.

“Honey, you don’t like spicy food?”

“Kurururururururuk.”

“I knew it.”

It was a sausage with a refreshing taste.

“Huh?”

“Well, let’s find out later if you can eat spicy food. I’m only making one soup, so if there’s spicy sausage in it, Honey won’t be able to eat it.”

“Ugh.”

“I’ll cook the spicy sausages later.”

It may be an unfamiliar combination to Koreans, but it tastes better than expected when you boil sausage in soup. Of course, it would be a bit ambiguous to use ham that doesn’t even show the shape of meat eggs, like pink sausage or spam… .

“Then shall we take it off now?”

Geo trimmed the sausages.

If you slightly cut the end of the innards and gently push them out with the back of a knife, the meat filling inside the sausage will come out intact.

During this time, the spices have soaked in properly to create a deep aroma, and Geo cuts the meat and intestines into appropriate sizes.

“Now just put them all in.”

Add a little water to the concentrated bone broth and top it with radish, peas, and trimmed sausage.

The peas were thick and grew in the monster field, but were small compared to the others, and the sausages were already good enough to eat raw, so they could be eaten once they were cooked.

“And next is….”

After lightly grilling the rice balls and putting them in a sauce made with fruit juice, soybean paste, and soy sauce, the eggplants were dipped in it and placed in the oven. By the time the soup was almost done, the rest of the food had also been cooked.

“Let’s eat.”

“Kururururuk.”

“Oh my, oh my, oh my, oh my….”

Geo had never seen Dana cry this long before. It was so nice to see her enjoying mealtime so much. The kids were the cutest when they were eating.

“Dad, I’m going to go make an offering to the sun god, so you guys eat first.”

“Mwah.”

“Kuruk.”

Geo headed straight to the second floor art storage room. Several landscape paintings were there. Geo headed straight to the 'Breathing Sea'.

As expected, the sun god was very pleased… .

“…….”

Gave a gift.

“…What is this? A certificate?”

“ ”

“Then shouldn’t I receive it? It wasn’t mine to begin with.”

“ ”

“… Yes, I understand.”

I'm not sure what it is, but it doesn't seem bad, so Geo decides to gratefully accept it.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (55)

Episode 55

“…….”

“Huh? Why?”

“…You punk brother….”

"uh."

“What is that?”

At Cha Ara's question, her older brother, Cha Eun-hyuk, tilted his head.

"…jewel?"

“No, I know it’s a jewel when I see it. How did you get it?”

“Ah, that’s….”

“Brother.”

It seemed like he was preparing to make an excuse, but long-winded speeches were not Cha Ara's style.

“Look at this.”

“…It’s a jewel.”

“I got it as a gift from some humanoid monster.”

“…….”

The eldest son, Cha Eun-hyeok, silently placed his hand on his forehead, and the youngest, Cha Sol, dropped her spoon.

Cha Eun-hyeok said, letting out a big, deep sigh.

“…I’m sorry for trying to pass it off as a lie. Let’s talk about it honestly, step by step.”

It was two days before the youngest's induction ceremony.

* * *

“Oh, so….”

Eunhyuk Cha, the eldest son of the Cha family, nodded.

“That’s what you brought in, saying it was insurance money or something.”

“Oh, it’s money given to me by the Collectors’ Guild as compensation for damages.”

“Thanks to you, I was able to buy the youngest priest’s robe, but why are you telling me that now?”

“No, I didn’t mean to say anything….”

“Do you think we are that unattractive?”

“What are you talking about? If I just hit them, they’ll get hurt.”

Cha Ara grumbled sensitively as if it were a habit. It wasn’t that she was particularly angry or hurt, but it was just a habit of Cha Ara to act like a very cautious cat. Although she wasn’t aware of it.

Cha Ara continued speaking with a more subdued expression, since the other person was her family.

“I didn’t plan on saying anything originally. The youngest has a job, but he doesn’t know when he’ll be selected. He’s a non-combatant… not a field worker, but an office worker… That kind of feeling. My brother is a complete civilian.”

“That’s true.”

“It seems like even the Collectors Guild wants to keep it a secret if possible. It’s because I’m talking without thinking, but it actually feels like an incredibly important secret.”

“For something like that, it doesn’t seem like they even signed a nondisclosure agreement?”

“That’s a bit strange. I wish I hadn’t said anything, but since it’s going to get out eventually, if you really want to talk about it, then just say it… Something like that? Even big companies are more or less run by people than you might think.”

“What are you saying?”

Cha Eun-hyuk pressed his throbbing temples.

“So you’re saying that because you saw me holding that… that jewel?”

“They say there is only one gem in the world with such a crystal structure. So what? You’ve already met that monster, oppa. I thought there was no point in hiding it, so I told you.”

“The youngest is listening too.”

“Then you’re just going to ignore him? Hey, why are you acting so upset?”

“No, that’s not what I meant….”

Cha Eun-hyeok, who was about to say something, nodded.

“Isol-ah.”

“Yeah, bro.”

“You shouldn’t go around saying things like this, okay?”

“I’m good at that.”

“I’m already wondering what to do if I’m doing this well, but anyway, I’m proud. If I’m not careful, my brother and sister could end up being taken to a large guild in Seoul and used as test subjects.”

“Then I won’t say anything more!”

“The kid is cool.”

Looking at the youngest one cheerfully giving a thumbs up and the older brother praising him, Cha Ara reflected on her life for a moment. What kind of karma did we commit in our past lives to have such idiots gathered around us?

'I have to protect you.'

Cha Ara, unaware that all her family members were looking out for each other as objects of protection, mumbled while stirring her rice.

“Ah, this isn’t the taste….”

“You said you were dragged away by a monster and came back eating a seven-course meal, but your appetite has only gotten better. Look at our youngest who eats well without being a picky eater. How special.”

“This is so unfair. When was I a picky eater? And she’s my youngest too? Why am I not surprised? I’ve been collecting insurance money here and there.”

“You should have realized that although it helped with the household expenses, it also increased my self-esteem. I would rather eat bread than live off your insurance money."

"You idiot, are you going to starve your youngest? If you live a good life like that, money will fall from the sky? Your grandfather in the afterlife will pick the lottery numbers for you?"

"How can you be so great that you can't even talk nonsense?"

The Cha family has been a householder for generations. It is not a situation where one can say who is better.

Cha Eun-hyuk and Cha Ara were worried that the youngest, Cha Sol, might get scammed somewhere, but when they saw that Cha Ara was a little better than that and Cha Eun-hyuk was slightly better than that, they realized that it was a case of acorns growing taller.

"You said you threw the scarf that the youngest knitted for me to a stranger last time."

"Ah, shit, then you're going to be so cold and just watch that?! Are you a fucking psychopath?!"

"Then why don't you just hurdle like a penguin instead of spending money, Hunter Cha Ara! That would have been much more economical!"

"You're a total stranger, why are you hurdling like that? Stop talking nonsense!"

"Yeah, you gave that stranger the scarf that the youngest made for you?!"

Looking at the two families, the youngest, Chae Sol, just ate the rice she had not eaten in a long time with relish.

"This is really delicious."

“My brother made that.”

“Chaesu is me, Woorim.”

“Yeah, it’s delicious! It’s awesome!”

The two elders gained strength from the innocent sight of their youngest giving a double thumbs up and were able to stop their meaningless fight.

“Will I not be able to see your face when our youngest enters the dormitory?”

“It’ll be hard.”

“Chaisol, don’t you miss your older sister’s face already?”

“I’m watching you right now, sis.”

“Fuck, this doesn’t make sense.”

Cha Eun-hyuk harassed my younger brother.

“Don’t swear at the youngest.”

“If I go into the youngest dorm, I’ll be the youngest.”

“You met a monster, so you got a hole in your head? The second child will always be the second child, and the youngest child will always be the youngest….”

“Let’s fight.”

In the midst of the chaos that was brewing, the youngest, Chae Sol, just ate.

"lol."

The rice I was eating after a long time was really delicious. The monster my older sister said she met seemed like a very kind monster.

* * *

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok, who came outside for a moment, was lost in thought.

‘…The person I saw that day was a monster?’

It was strange from the beginning.

'Well, when I met you at dawn, I thought you were some kind of monster.'

A dark dawn with no one around. A man appeared wearing a pitch-black cloak that did not look human at all.

'I guessed it was one of those types because it had a similar vibe to the ghostly things that only I could see.'

But he was seen not only by Cha Eun-hyeok but also by other people. He may be overly blunt, but that is a personal characteristic, and I thought the strangeness I felt was just the power of a devout believer.

“…….”

But what if he was just a humanoid monster?

“…But doesn’t that make sense?”

Something was strange.

'I've seen monsters too.'

In the world, there are monsters that can only be seen by entering dungeons, as well as monsters that can be encountered simply by staying still on Earth. Even if they are weak enough to be caught by ordinary people, their ferocity does not change.

Although Cha Eun-hyeok was not a hunter but an ordinary person, he had hunted monsters before, and so he could tell that the energy he felt from them was different from the energy from the black cloak.

'That wasn't the aura of a monster.'

Cha Eun-hyeok, who was sitting in the yard, looked at the dark sky.

"……."

I saw something like a large, black snake moving slowly beyond the dark clouds. It had human arms and legs, and was slow and huge.

"…He was definitely one of those guys."

The identity of the black cloak could not be determined.

'If we look at the situation objectively, it's definitely right to see it as a humanoid monster. He said he had a personal dungeon. However, the aura itself is strange… and to call it that type of monster… it's too… .'

Acted like a human being.

"It looks like a haphazard mix of things."

It seemed like a monster, a monster that only I could see, and a bit human. Since I could feel so many characteristics at once, it felt more natural.

It felt as if the black cloak was the source of everything.

"…That's nonsense…."

If you say that monsters, monsters, and humans are the origin, then it is no different from God.

'No, even God finds it difficult to do such a thing.'

It was a vain thought.

‘I looked into it here and there because of the youngest one, and it seems like the gods aren’t as omnipotent as I thought… .’

Cha Eun-hyeok thought to himself.

'In that sense, should we consider the black cloak that Nana Chaara saw as a being of a higher rank than the gods served by the priests?'

but.

“…….”

I think so.

“Ugh….”

It's the sexual power I felt last time that's being used.

Even though he may be an ordinary person, there's no way that Cha Eun-hyeok, who has a lot of experience, wouldn't be able to distinguish the power of a god. That was clearly the energy of a god.

It was different from the energy that Cha Eun-hyeok felt from the black cloak.

“…Considering how warm it was, it must have been something related to the sun or fire….”

I thought he must be a follower of the sun since there was a temple of the sun nearby. It was impossible for someone with the profession of trainer to have a second profession as a priest, so I thought he must have been a devout follower and gained holy powers.

But if the opponent was neither a god nor a human, then what on earth was that energy?

“The breath of God….”

Isn't it impossible for a mere monster to hold it?

“…….”

The more I thought about it, the more it seemed like it wasn't something that Cha Eun-hyuk himself should be concerned about.

“…First of all, it’s certain that it’s not a simple monster. Even the collector said that it’s definitely not human.”

A monster that could control the energy of a god could no longer be called a monster.

'If I had to choose the most convincing one, it would be the monsters I've seen before.'

While I knew a lot about monsters and humans, I knew little about those 'monsters'. Perhaps among them, there were monsters that could use the power of the gods.

'I've never seen it before.'

A monster with such a gentlemanly attitude? Even if it were a humanoid monster, it would have been a rather friendly opponent since it personally picked up my lost and abandoned younger brother, fed him, and sent him back home.

'But if you think about it this way, then it could be a being higher than the gods of Earth. The black cloak I saw that day had the aura of a god, but a god doesn't have the aura of a black cloak...'

The thoughts that had been going on up to that point suddenly stopped. I didn't want to waste energy on them.

“…There’s no point in thinking any further about its identity.”

Cha Eun-hyeok just thought about the future ahead.

“Cha Ara said she even went to that person’s dungeon.”

Although Cha Ara was openly treating the man in the black cloak as a monster, for some reason Cha Eunhyuk was referring to him as a 'human'. Even Cha Eunhyuk himself was unaware of this.

“So does that mean we might meet again someday?”

First of all, Cha Eun-hyeok invited him to the initiation ceremony. Since the youngest's initiation ceremony was decided, the chances of meeting him again were high.

'It looks pretty interesting, so I don't think it'll come.'

Now the misunderstanding that he was a believer of the sun god has disappeared, but in any case, he was someone who handled the power close to the sun. We were definitely going to meet him at the initiation ceremony.

“…I hope I didn’t invite someone too dangerous….”

The next morning, after spending the night worrying like that.

“…….”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok felt dizzy for a moment.

"…hello."

“Yes, hello.”

The Cha family, who came up to Seoul together for the first time in their lives, ran into none other than Geo.

A strange man wearing a pitch-black cloak.

“It’s been a while.”

It was a calm greeting.

'I thought it was a possibility, but I didn't know it would happen this quickly.'

The black cloak that he met again still had a strange aura surrounding it. It wasn’t for nothing that Cha Eun-hyeok thought, ‘This isn’t human’ from the moment they first met.

Meanwhile, the white-haired man next to the black cloak also came to say hello.

“It’s nice to see you again. I guess the whole family came up together?”

“What, you and Yoo Seong-woon knew each other?”

“We met often while buying bungeoppang.”

“Ah, bungeoppang….”

Cha Ara nodded and looked at the black cloak with subtle eyes.

“…….”

“Is there a problem?”

“…I’ll buy you some bungeoppang later too.”

Cha Eun-hyuk finally thought that our piglet had gone crazy. To openly give a fish-shaped bread to such an intimidating opponent? Of course, Black Cloak had bought a fish-shaped bread from Cha Eun-hyuk himself, but that must have been part of his social experience… .

But surprisingly, the black cloak accepted it obediently.

“I don’t know why, but thank you.”

“That… yes.”

Do you like bungeoppang?

‘… It’s more easygoing than I thought, isn’t it?’

In that kind of atmosphere?

'It feels like the criminal will soon be put on the gallows and judged.'

The black cloak was a being with a conspicuous air. Perhaps because of the pitch-black cloak, he looked like an evil spirit or a grim reaper.

It was not human, but rather ghostly, ominous, cold, empty, and beautiful, like an intricately crafted ornament, yet at the same time strangely creepy.

It wasn't just Cha Eun-hyuk.

“…….”

Looking around, I saw people going to work occasionally fixating their gazes on the man in the black cloak.

“Don’t worry too much.”

“…Oh, yes.”

“Because it’s always been like that.”

"okay."

Eunhyuk Cha felt a strange sense of unease at Yoo Seongwoon’s words.

'It's the youngest's entrance ceremony.'

Will this end well…?

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (56)

Episode 56

The initiation ceremony consists of three stages.

“The first is the pre-introduction, the second is the pre-training, and the third is the main course.”

“…….”

“I thought it was…”

Chiiik—

Yoo Seong-un asked while turning over the pork belly.

“Is that right?”

“Oh, yes, that’s right.”

Cha Eun-hyeok, the guardian of the prospective priest who had been momentarily distracted by the meat, nodded.

Under the leadership of Yoo Seong-un, who decided that they needed a place to talk right after meeting at the station, they sat down at a pork belly restaurant. The room, which was blocked off on all sides, was quite quiet and cozy.

“What we will hear today is a preliminary briefing session. It is said to be an event that will tell us about the characteristics of the priesthood, the type of education we will receive in the future, and the type of priest we can become.”

“Pre-ordained training would be a place where prospective priests receive separate training before the main ceremony?”

“It would be difficult to proceed with the main ceremony right away for young children who don’t know anything. I think it was probably about learning the manners to be observed and the roles to be played at the main ceremony.”

Cha Eun-hyeok asked his younger sister, Chae Sol.

“You said that right after the pre-introduction session, we would go into the temporary dormitory and learn formal etiquette?”

“Yeah, he said it would take about a day.”

Chae Sol, who said that, looked back at Yoo Seong-un and Sergio and smiled bashfully.

"…yo. this."

“Hahaha, if it makes you uncomfortable, you don’t have to use formal language.”

“I use polite language a lot.”

“Really? That’s great.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed and clapped his hands together.

“So, it’s a two-day event then?”

“No. They say it takes a total of three days, one day for the pre-briefing and pre-training, and two days for the main event.”

“It takes two days to prepare the main course? I didn’t know because it’s not my field, but it’s been going on for quite some time.”

“I think it’s because in order to receive God’s gaze, it’s advantageous to have the main meal as long as possible.”

“Then I understand. Well, it seems like the initiation ceremonies for famous religious groups were generally long.”

Geo, who had been quiet for a while, asked.

“Do we really need God’s gaze?”

“…That’s because priests cannot do much if they are not chosen by God.”

Cha Ara, who had been keeping an eye on the unusual situation of eating pork belly with Geo, who was not sure if he was a monster or not, continued speaking.

“Becoming a priest does not always give you the opportunity to receive God’s gaze. The biggest opportunity, if any, is during the initiation ceremony when you are first recognized as a priest, and the rest… what did you say?”

“Anyway, when there’s an event, or if you gain a chance in a dungeon, or if you prove your abilities as a priest, the chances of getting the god’s attention increase.”

“That’s what they said.”

Even while the older sister and brother were talking back and forth, Chae Sol, who had hair as fluffy as a puppy, stuffed meat into his mouth.

“This is Mahita.”

“Eat a lot.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled as if he found the food cute. Local residents probably eat so deliciously because they rarely come to restaurants, but even considering that, Chae Sol ate quite happily.

'Everyone who sees it feels good.'

Perhaps because Geo felt the same way, he placed meat in front of Chaisol.

“Thank you.”

“You eat well.”

“I eat well.”

“That’s wonderful.”

“Hehe.”

The three adults who knew Geo's true identity were watching the scene with a strange feeling, especially the two Chas.

‘Oh my, Isola… .’

'What should I do with that friendliness?'

I'm sure we had talked about 'Black Cloak' over dinner before coming up to Seoul, but looking at him like that, I think my brother didn't realize that 'Sergio' and 'Black Cloak' in front of him were the same person.

“…….”

“…….”

Cha Ara, Cha Eunhyuk, and Yoo Seongwoon exchanged glances at the sight of Black Cloak blatantly taking care of Cha Sol.

'Do you like kids originally?'

'I don't know either.'

Yoo Seong-un shook his head, but thinking about it, Geo said that he was also obsessed with feeding Cha Ara when he met her. He always gave food as gifts to Yoo Seong-un and others.

Considering that, it seems like he just has a strong interest in filling someone's stomach.

“Uhm….”

Of course, what's good is good.

“Geo, what do you want to do?”

“Are you asking about the initiation ceremony?”

“It seems like it’s taking longer than I thought. Is that okay?”

Geo seemed to have a hard time being outside the frame.

'How could it not be difficult to kill someone at the level of a normal human?'

The current Geo was maintaining the level of an A-class hunter while killing his usual temperament. It must have taken a hit to his soul or something essential, but I don't know if he can last three days.

“I thought it might be difficult.”

“That much is okay.”

“Then that’s good.”

While Cha Eun-hyeok and Cha A-ra made expressions as if they knew what was going on in their conversation, Cha Sol, who was diligently eating the meat, asked with a questioning face.

“Brother, you can’t stay outside for long?”

“…….”

“Are you feeling weak?”

While Cha Eun-hyeok and Cha A-ra were silently shocked, Yoo Seong-woon was only slightly surprised and decided to watch the situation. He was curious about how Geo would respond to the young human's questions.

Geo answered after a brief pause.

“I don’t think I’m physically weak.”

"sure?"

“In my case, I think I have a weak mind.”

“It doesn’t look like that?”

“I'm trying to make it look like there's no problem.”

This answer was unexpected even for Yoo Seong-un.

‘… I’m not sure if it’s okay to say that Geo’s mind is weak… .’

I thought I knew why he blamed his mind and not his body.

Lowering the level would be more mentally painful than physically painful. However, by human standards, it would be like enduring pain equivalent to cutting off a limb and being beaten, and that could not be described as 'weak'.

Looking at that, it seemed that Geo, unlike other beings of origin, did not consider himself a strong being.

'No, I think it's closer to not being able to do it.'

It was natural that he had difficulty being objective about himself, as he often appeared to have a disorganized personality and memory. Like an elephant with poor eyesight who doesn't know how big he is.

“What god do you worship, hyung?”

"god?"

“Yes, I feel something warm….”

Yoo Seong-un's eyes widened at Chae Sol's words, which seemed to be assessing something while staring at Geo.

“Can you feel it?”

“Yes? Um, yes. It’s really warm.”

"oh…."

“Isn’t it okay for you to feel this way?”

“That’s not true, but it’s rare to find a priest who can perceive other people’s powers.”

Yoo Seong-un snapped his chopsticks.

“Especially for a young priest like you who has no sacred affiliation.”

Geo muttered at those words.

“When you say ‘affiliated sacred’, it feels like it’s a single party.”

“It’s probably similar. Even gods fight over power and share things. As the number of believers increases, the power of the god in question grows, so it becomes easier to operate…”

“He is a god in name only, but he does not seem to be treated as sacred as he is supposed to be.”

“I think that since the great disaster, it has recently developed a slightly worldly image.”

As he said that, Yoo Seong-un lightly clapped his hands while holding his chopsticks.

“Congratulations, guardians. If Chae Sol does well, he will be chosen by God at this initiation ceremony.”

“Uh… Really?”

“Any god covets good talent. I’m not a priest, so I can’t guarantee, but he seems talented.”

Yoo Seong-un added an explanation.

“In the first place, the power called holy power is a power borrowed from gods, so unlike magic power, it is difficult for others to sense it.”

"ah…."

“Look, I’m an A-class hunter, but I didn’t know Geo could use his powers, and I didn’t know what kind of energy it was.”

“Oh, I see….”

Chaara looked at Geo with subtle eyes.

‘I don’t know if it makes sense for a monster to use its powers…’

Yoo Seong-woon nodded as if he understood what Cha Ara was thinking. However, since he couldn’t say it out loud in front of Geo, who thought he was human, he let it slide.

Even in the midst of all this, Chaisol remained steadfast.

“So, who is the god you worship, hyung?”

“There is no separate god.”

Yoo Seong-un whispered with an awkward smile and a stiff face.

“Geo.”

"yes."

“I think it would be better to say that it exists.”

“Why do you say something exists when it doesn’t exist?”

“Usually, there is.”

Whether you were a chosen believer or a faithful priest, handling the power of the Holy Spirit meant that you were chosen by God in the first place. It didn’t make sense that you didn’t have a god to serve when you had already cured Cha Eun-hyeok with the power of the Holy Spirit.

From the human point of view.

“…….”

“…….”

“If you use your powers without a god to serve, then that’s just….”

“Shut up, pig.”

“I'm sorry.”

Cha Ara shut her mouth at her brother's wise advice.

There were no gods to worship, but the only beings that could control the power of the Holy Spirit were gods. At the very least, they were beings of a comparable status.

'Your mouth is a square.'

I can control myself well in front of other hunters, but I don't know why my tongue becomes so unruly only in front of Black Cloak.

While Cha Ara was quietly shaking her pupils, Cha Eunhyuk was also trying to gather his wits.

‘… It’s completely different from the image or atmosphere of the god I know, so I thought that no matter what, it couldn’t be this… At this point, wasn’t it too disrespectful for them to introduce the black cloak to Cha Ara as a monster that could talk?’

Was it true that his delusional suspicions last night were correct? Cha Eun-hyeok was greatly shocked and skeptical at the sight of the world going on as it was.

'There was no need for me to know the truth about this enormous existence.'

Although she was very tired, Chae Sol, the youngest person here, was still cheerful.

“Wow, it is possible to have spiritual powers even without a god to worship!”

No, there isn't.

'That person is strange.'

Why are you pretending to be human and standing here like this?

Cha Ara, a porter hunter who has seen everything and never seen before, and Cha Eunhyuk, who has seen strange beings since childhood, swallowed their feelings skillfully.

But that doesn't mean I was scared and ran away. In the first place, the 'gods' of this era were at the level of dragons who enjoyed the entertainment of medieval fantasy. It was thanks to the eccentric gods who enjoyed life on Earth disguised as humans or monsters that they often made the news.

“…….”

Unlike the two Chas, who somehow accepted this situation, Yoo Seong-un had complicated feelings in his own way.

‘… I knew that Geo was a being with a great connection to the source, but even so, the fact that he had holy powers… .’

Yoo Seong-un swallowed a sigh inwardly.

'It's a little strange. Just because you're of a high rank doesn't mean you can be considered divine.'

Could this problem also be related to Geo's personality?

'I still don't know what it is.'

Yoo Seong-un scratched his neck.

I've known for a long time that Geo is not good at imitating humans. Not only Cha Ara, who was dragged to Geo's dungeon, but even Cha Eunhyuk seemed to have noticed it, so how could I hide it any further?

“…….”

As if he noticed the awkward atmosphere in an instant, Black Cloak also seemed to be getting awkward.

'Don't be awkward.'

If you do that too, the atmosphere will get worse.

Geo, who had been hesitating, said.

“…I also have a god that I worship.”

“You came now?”

“What does that mean?”

“Oh, no, I just said it once.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been dealing with the capricious and stubborn children of the origin, smiled neatly and followed Geo's rhythm. He did not want to upset the unknown being whose identity was still unknown.

“So what kind of god is he?”

“The sun god.”

“Yes, he is the most universal god….”

The religion that emerged in various parts of the world on Earth was the religion of the sun. In this small country alone, there are over 50 sun temples. Many people even know that it was a religion that existed almost before the great disaster.

And it was perfect for joking around like, 'Hey, I'm a believer in the sun.'

“Ah, so that’s why it was warm.”

Only Chae Sol was fooled by Geo's words.

“I like the sun god too.”

"thank you."

Why are you grateful?

'Are you not planning on hiding your true identity?'

Cha Eun-hyuk almost heard the sound of a slur. It was the first time in his life that he ate at a restaurant, but the food didn't taste good.

In fact, the reason Geo said thank you was because he was thinking of the old man resting in the inner room of his cabin.

'Father will like it.'

As he was already feeling sorry for the teddy bear who had become gloomy due to the lack of believers, it was natural for him as a son to feel grateful to Chae Sol who told him that she liked the sun god.

“Can I introduce you to a sun god I know?”

“Just a moment, Geo.”

Yoo Seong-un applied the brakes.

“We need to give Chaisol a chance to catch the eye of other gods as well.”

“I just said I would introduce you….”

“Why did you make that introduction in the first place?”

“Wouldn’t it be nice to have more friends?”

“Can God and Chae Sol become friends?”

“Why can’t I do it?”

"oh…."

Geo had intended to introduce a teddy bear that was growing old alone, but to the adults who didn't know about his circumstances, it was like saying, 'I'm like the sun god and I want to be your friend.'

'You really are so filthy and unbiased.'

This was definitely not the kind of story we should share at a pork belly restaurant.

“…Geo really has a big heart.”

"thank you."

“Okay, let’s eat.”

I felt like I had to quickly show him the inauguration ceremony and then return it to the frame.

* * *

“…….”

Bisabyeol blinked at the text message from Yoo Seong-un.

“…the sun god.”

I didn't really think it would be that way.

'In the first place, I didn't feel any divinity in Geo's portrait. It would be right to say that it's something that can't be felt unless he shows it to you directly.'

Moreover, it is too unstable to conclude that Geo's identity is 'God'.

“That can’t be all.”

His divinity is just one of Geo's many qualities.

It was still a confusing entity. It had the characteristics of a monster, had ambiguous aspects like the children of the origin, and, as Yoo Seong-un said, was also a being of divine status.

“At the same time, it resembles a human being.”

Sometimes he becomes a monster. Sometimes he becomes a human. Then, sometimes he becomes a god. As if everything in the world were a derivative of him.

‘… But, if you look at it that way… .’

In other words, Geo is the 'origin' of everything in the world.

“…….”

It is the source.

“…Hmm.”

Is it possible that it is a personification?

If Geo had made a bigger mistake, he would have been able to figure it out for sure, but his kindness was just wasted.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (57)

Episode 57

“Oh, let’s go see the initiation ceremony.”

“Shall I take a quick look and go?”

“It was already cold, so this is good.”

“What church is this event held at?”

“It seems to be the Solar Church….”

“The Sun Bridge is worth seeing.”

In any religious initiation ceremony, onlookers are not prohibited, even if they are not related to the ceremony. This is because the more members of the initiation ceremony there are, the higher the possibility of God coming.

“Thanks to that, we got a spot too.”

“There are more people than I thought.”

“It is difficult to receive God’s attention when only one or two people gather.”

Of course, there are cases like Geo.

'Not all gods are like you.'

Even though Geo's identity had not yet been confirmed, it was certain that he was the subject of some divine being. There was no reason to deny the fact, it was just that the confusion had been compounded by the added elements.

The Cha family had already moved to the event staff seats. Yoo Seong-woon, who had been scanning the scene, offered Geo a seat. It was a table that was a good distance away from the noisy crowd.

“Shall we sit here?”

"great."

Perhaps it was too much of a hassle or a burden to be so close to humans. Geo sat down in the seat that Yoo Seong-un had given him as if he was happy to see him.

Thanks to that, it was easy to talk.

‘… Most of them are civilians, not hunters, so they probably won’t be able to hear the conversation being held here.’

Yoo Seong-un, who had moistened his throat with the water on the table, opened his mouth.

“Can you handle divinity?”

“When you say divinity, are you talking about the authority of God?”

“You could say it’s similar. Or, what should I say… you could say it’s like a certificate.”

“Ah, so it’s a certificate.”

"also…?"

I was puzzled for a moment, but soon Yoo Seong-un added.

“It’s not strange to express it like that. You could think of it as a divine license.”

Divinity is different from what is commonly referred to as holy power.

The power that humans chosen by God can use with His help is called divine power, and divinity refers to the divinity itself that a god possesses and the power derived from it. They were guys on completely different levels.

“…….”

Geo said, as if remembering something.

“If you were talking about a certificate, yes, I have one.”

“…You received it?”

“I was the only believer.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un realized it instinctively.

‘… Is this a story related to the blond, blue-eyed Geo I saw at Cheonggyecheon before?’

When Geo's personality changed significantly, I guessed that his appearance would also change. I still vividly remember Geo's hair turning platinum like fallen leaves that changed color when he put his feet in water.

'But since it's particularly associated with water, I thought it would be a god of the sea, or a river or a pond, or something like that…'

It was quite interesting that the sun came out of nowhere. If Bisabal had been here, he would have felt the same way. I wonder what the story was.

“Getting a license from God? That’s amazing. It’s something that doesn’t usually happen.”

He exclaimed as if it was nothing, but as far as Yoo Seong-un knew, it was something that never happened. No god would give his status to a mere human.

'Why would anyone do something that would cause suffering to both humans and gods?'

But Geo's voice was still blunt and businesslike.

“You said you didn’t want to be alone anymore.”

“…The sun god before you?”

“As I was the only believer, I spent a lot of time with him, eating with him, talking with him… I felt like he was afraid of being alone like before.”

“…….”

“Then he gave me this certificate. He said he wanted to share what I see and hear, and that it was partly a gift. Even though it’s called a certificate, it doesn’t seem to be something tangible.”

Yoo Seong-un licked his lips.

‘Should I say that… the previous Sun God is too weak, or should I say that Geo is amazing… .’

It's probably the latter.

Usually, gods are unique beings and don't feel lonely when they are alone, but perhaps Geo made god feel that way during the process of their interaction.

That's right, Geo is great.

'Besides, if he was a normal person, he wouldn't have burdened me with that in the first place.'

If you think about it in the same context, it would be correct to say that since Geo was a being close to godhood from the beginning, the sun god recognized him as an equal being, felt lonely, and gave him godhood as a gift.

"……."

By doing so, it will become even more impossible to know the true identity of Geo.

If the sun god judged him to be equal, then that simply meant he was a different kind of god. At the very least, he was of a higher rank than them, capable of holding divinity.

How should I define that?

'What the hell are you doing?'

The more I dig, the more I find myself wondering what's going on, so I really wish someone would organize this into one story.

* * *

The pre-briefing session proceeded quickly.

"It doesn't take as long as I thought."

"Is the schedule tight?"

"That may be the case, we need time to educate the prospective priests."

Simple hierarchy. Definition of a priest. How should such a priest behave, what virtues are necessary….

After a brief explanation of the priesthood, the story of the initiation ceremony followed. The main content was about the education and benefits that the prospective priests would receive.

“After speaking with all the families, the prospective priests will follow me. Those prospective priests without guardians can come to me first.”

As the dark blond priest spoke, several children approached him, timidly. A thick-faced priest who looked like he came out of a fantasy movie was leading the children. He had a distinctive Western face line and curly hair.

In Korea today, it is easy to find Western-style faces like that, but the atmosphere was different because he was a priest. Geo’s gaze, which was observing the general priest, turned to the children below him.

“I guess those kids didn’t come with their own families.”

“Well… although family is the most common form of human organization, in this day and age there are more cases of humans not being organized as blood-related groups.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded as if he knew what Geo was curious about.

Geo, whose knowledge of humans is vague, knows that 'humans form family communities', but there are always exceptions.

“Do you see how most of those kids are particularly unclean?”

"okay."

“They are probably the Carnation children who have awakened as priests.”

“What is a carnation eye?”

“Should we call him an orphan who actively seeks out a guardian?”

On the outskirts of the city, there are the poor, fourth-class citizens, and there are quite a few children who are intentionally abandoned. There is even a saying that it is a trash can where people are thrown away.

“Among them, the Carnation Children are children who advertise on the streets to find guardians who will take them in.”

“Do you promote yourself?”

“Yes. A child who wants someone to take him/her is holding a flower. A child who is a little better off is holding a real carnation. If not, they can fold the flower out of tissue paper or paper or something… As long as it’s old-fashioned, the meaning will be conveyed.”

The so-called 'Carnation Child' was a culture that was created right after the great disaster when there were many orphans.

“A great disaster occurred in the spring, and after that came Parents’ Day… a day when children would give their parents carnations as gifts. So, carnations were made to commemorate their deceased parents, but there was no one to give them to.”

Adults who felt sorry for this situation began to take away the children holding colored paper carnations one by one.

The clever orphans who saw this folded carnations that they had no intention of making and took them out onto the street, and this became the beginning of 'Carnation Kids'.

“Actually, I don’t know either. It happened one or two generations before me….”

"okay."

“Anyway, starting from there, even now, orphans who want to be adopted prepare carnations in that way. They fold carnations with tissue paper or colored paper, pick flowers from the street, or work hard to earn money to buy a single carnation… It means, ‘Please take me.’”

“It seems like they didn’t go through proper adoption procedures, so isn’t there a risk of them being abandoned again?”

“Why wouldn’t it be there? It’s one of the social problems that’s even in elementary school textbooks. When the Carnation Child culture first came into being, there was a lot of noise for a while because there were so many children who were abandoned like that. There’s no way things have gotten any better now.”

No one seriously considers adopting a carnation child.

“The same goes for Carnation Eye herself. She might have adopted him out of pity right after the catastrophe and wanted to treat him like family, but now it’s just… hiring him as a free worker? That’s more like it.”

“…….”

I don't know why I always hear such surprising news when I come to this place.

'The world has become a lot more scary.'

If I did well, I felt like I could open my eyes and cut my nose. Physically.

“But isn’t it possible that those children are not Carnation Children but simply orphans?”

“Even if you awaken as a priest, the only ones in charge at the temple are usually the Carnation Children.”

“Why?”

“Because they have a good workforce?”

“…….”

Where have children's rights gone?

“…Don’t look at me like that. It’s scary when you criticize with your gaze. In the first place, fourth-class citizens who have been neglected without any special poverty relief policies are not easily hired by regular companies. It may be different if they are working in back-alley production.”

“Is it difficult for a 4th class citizen to get a regular job?”

“In the first place, 4th class citizens had a bad reputation of being ‘vermin who came to the city without the ability to handle it and settled down.’ Not all of them are like that, but they usually don’t have the will to work.”

“…….”

“Even if you pay them a fair price, their efficiency is low and they are not well-received by the citizens, so no place would want to hire them unless they just want to get cursed at by customers. The perception of 4th-class citizens is that bad. It’s because they are protected by the city without making any proper efforts.”

Companies that employ fourth-class citizens are viewed negatively by the citizens. Why give a chance to these slackers who just sit around doing nothing and try to share in the city's benefits?

“In the same vein, usually, a child from the slums who manifests as a priest is not necessarily accepted by the temple. The chances of being chosen by the god are low, and there is no way to afford to take care of a child from the slums while receiving negative reviews… That’s the context, I guess.”

“Your calculations are solid.”

“Carnation Children are different from other 4th class citizens in that their will to work can be confirmed through ‘carnations’, and since they are still young, the public’s gaze is not entirely negative. If they have already been chosen by God, then it may be different, but if there is an orphan who has simply awakened, there is a high probability that they are a Carnation Child.”

“…….”

Geo made up his mind.

'I just have to watch the initiation ceremony and then jump back into the frame.'

This world is so harsh. I couldn't live because I was so scared and cried.

It's not that I don't feel sympathy, but Geo was just an adult who had grown old enough to decide to break through this social atmosphere on his own.

Geo looked around, wishing the world would become warmer. It was intended to distract his mind, but he found himself feeling at ease sooner than he had expected.

“…….”

“Why? Is there something in common since we are from the same sun god lineage?”

“I was thinking that it was warm and felt good.”

I don't know why, but I felt welcome.

“Especially that statue….”

“…….”

“……?”

It seems as if my eyes met with a statue in the shape of a goddess.

Geo blinked his eyes twice.

'What is this? Is it a ghost story?'

His judgment was quick.

'Nothing happened.'

I decided to pretend I saw something strange.

“Your appearance is nice.”

“I think there was a gap just now, but I’ll just let it slide. I don’t want to get involved in the affairs of the gods as a mere human being.”

"thank you."

Although he did not understand Geo’s burden, as a mere human, Yoo Seong-un clenched his teeth and avoided the miracle that was right in front of him. After all, he was a member of the collector’s guild.

Yoo Seong-un also saw it clearly. The gaze that was openly poured out when Geo praised the atmosphere of the temple and the beauty of the statue. Yoo Seong-un had never felt such a direct gaze from a god.

'Please, make this miracle happen when I'm not around.'

I didn't want to get involved in anything.

“It seems like our dear Cha family is also talking, why don’t you join in?”

"great."

So the two of them pretended not to notice the gaze of the god with their whole body, but the priest who served her could not do so.

There was a priest who was looking at the two with wide eyes as they headed towards the Cha family.

'You're done.'

Yoo Seong-un had that thought without realizing it.

The dark blond priest was clearly the high priest who presided over this event. If he was going to appear at such an event, he must have been one of the priests who served the bishop closely.

In other words, it means that he is a person who cannot help but know where the sun god's gaze is directed.

“…….”

“…….”

There was a strange tension in the air.

“…….”

The blond priest nodded faintly, as if he had noticed something. Perhaps because of his strong impression, it was a particularly sacred gesture.

Yoo Seong-un realized the meaning of the bow.

'You've caught my eye.'

It seemed that he had realized that Geo had divinity.

“Geo.”

“Yes, go ahead. I’m listening.”

“Should I go back now?”

“If it is a problem that can be resolved then so be it.”

“Probably not…?”

Yoo Seong-un wanted to leave work.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (58)

Episode 58

The blond priest, Kang Seo-dam, thought as he looked at the being wearing a pitch-black cloak.

'I never thought that a god would come to an event that I was unintentionally pushed into.'

This event wasn't his.

After the priest who was originally supposed to officiate went missing, Kang Seo-dam took over, but he never imagined that he would encounter a god of such an unexpected appearance at such an event.

'But it's quite quiet for a place where God himself is present.'

Neither the sun goddess he serves nor the god who pretends to be human and enjoys playing among the crowd. Despite the unusual situation, no confusion arose.

'... It's understandable that people wouldn't notice since the goddess didn't descend, but it's strange that a god who blatantly took on human form is so quiet.'

He seemed to be a god with a high level of understanding of humans.

“…….”

Indeed, most gods who enjoyed play were friendly to humans.

'Unlike the Temple of the Sun, it has a cool and desolate atmosphere. Could it be a god of death or disease? Judging by the cool aura, it could also be a god related to the deep sea.'

Geo received a 'certificate' from the sun god, but it was only one of the elements that made up Geo. Geo basically had a gloomy atmosphere that seemed to symbolize a funeral.

There was no way Kang Seodam could know what kind of divinity he possessed unless he checked closely or made contact. He looked around, guessing roughly.

"…hmm…."

If you pretend to know a god who enjoys playing, you will only be offended.

'There's no sign of a disaster miracle coming down. Judging from the fact that he's interacting well with other humans, I don't think he has any intention of ruining this event. Let's just let it pass quietly.'

Perhaps he is a god who is not well-known or who seeks out a select few, and he may be trying to find his followers through this event. It is a rare occurrence worldwide, but I heard that it is an event that happens secretly in religious circles.

“…This batch is lucky.”

The god in the form of that black cloak may personally make the selection, or even if not, the sun goddess has already set her sights on this position. The interest of other gods will also increase, so the chances of the prospective priests being chosen will also increase.

“…….”

Suddenly, Kang Seo-dam realized that the man in the black cloak was staring at him intently.

For a moment, I lost my mind.

“…….”

The moment he realized the situation he was in, Kang Seo-dam looked down without showing any sign of remorse.

'There is nothing more foolish than trying to face the gaze of God.'

Although it may have been out of consideration for other humans or for the sake of higher-quality play, the black cloak's status was so low that it almost felt like it was not divine. However, that did not change its distant essence.

God was God after all, and Kang Seo-dam was a priest who was particularly sensitive to the status and divinity of existence. If he were to come face to face with God’s gaze, he might lose consciousness.

“…….”

“…….”

The black cloak seemed to know that too, and looked away again.

‘… Are you being considerate?’

It was truly fortunate that God knew that humans were weak beings.

Most of the gods who enjoyed their games without knowing such things harmed humans without any malicious intent.

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam quietly sighed in relief and checked the time.

“…In one minute, the prospective priests will finish greeting their families and gather in front of me. I will guide them to the dormitory where they will learn the proper etiquette.”

Whether he was a god or not, Kang Seo-dam himself had to fulfill his responsibilities as a priest.

* * *

“I guess I should go now.”

Cha Ara nodded solemnly at Cha Sol's words.

“Yeah, if it’s hard, just run away.”

“You just don’t want to say anything proper?”

“Oh, why, he can also live like the village chief by farming.”

“But are you encouraging me to give up before I even start? Is there anything I can do to discourage a child?”

“Isn’t it better to do something you’re good at rather than hold on to something you’re not good at?”

“That's right.”

Cha Eun-hyuk also nodded.

“If you really don’t like it, you can just leave.”

“Yes, I will! But I will work hard because I will become a great priest and the head of the Cha family in the future!”

“It’s me.”

“I will be the pillar of this family!”

“The pillar is also me.”

“See you tomorrow!”

Chae Sol, who smiled brightly with a tea-like smile, turned her gaze to the other guests.

“I'm going.”

“Oh, okay, I think Chaisol will do well, so don’t worry too much.”

"thank you!"

Chae Sol, who had been receiving praise and encouragement from the white-haired hunter, looked back at the black cloak with sparkling eyes.

"brother!"

“…….”

“I think I’ll do well?”

“I think so too.”

"lol."

Chaisol managed to extract encouragement from even Black Cloak.

“If I were chosen by the sun god, would I be able to smell like you?”

“Do I smell?”

“I’m not sure, but you smell like a sun-dried blanket.”

To describe it a little more, it felt like 'a blanket that smells like the sun that was just put in the closet.' When I smelled him, I felt like I was hiding in a dark cave made with blankets that had been hung out in the yard.

It was dark, warm, and comfortable.

“…….”

Chae Sol, who had been looking up at the black cloak for a long time, suddenly made a bold request.

“Please hug me just once!”

“Isol, please.”

This damned brave guy.

Although Cha Eun-hyeok was terrified by his younger brother's disastrous friendliness, Geo didn't really care.

“I can hug you if you want.”

"and!"

“Come here.”

Black Cloak opened his arms.

'awesome.'

Perhaps because the light was above, the inside of the cloak was filled with black shadows. Chae Sol walked quickly to the black cloak that was as dark as the night sky and as cozy as the inside of a closet, and hugged it tightly.

And surprisingly enough, his body temperature was cool. I thought it would be warm because it felt like a warm warmth, but it was unexpected.

“It’s been a long time since I’ve hugged a child as much as Chaisol.”

The soft voice falling from above sounded like a lullaby.

“That child was also small like student Chaisol.”

“I’m not small.”

“He’s smaller than me. Of course, Chae Sol will soon become a great adult.”

"lol…."

“May the sun shine on you.”

“…….”

Chaisol raised his head and looked at the face under the black cloth that only he could see.

Gentle eyes resembling the sea entered Chae Sol's field of vision.

"…and."

Those eyes,

It's very big.

It was cozy.

“…You’re really handsome, hyung!”

“I hear it often.”

“This is awesome.”

“Is that so?”

The face beneath the cloak, which no one could see, was smiling with a detailed light.

“Then I’ll see you tomorrow.”

"ah…."

Chaisol let out a regretful sigh.

It was sad to have to break up with him, but it was also sad to see his platinum blonde hair and blue eyes turn black, as if a light bulb had gone out.

That was really cool just now.

'Isn't this a color that suits Geo hyung much better?'

But Chaisol didn't push it any further.

“Then I’ll really go now!”

Already, other prospective priests had gathered in front of the real priest. The blond priest was checking the number of children gathered, their names, and their faces, and was saying something.

As I got closer, I could see what the blond priest was talking about.

“Mr. Chaisol?”

“Yes, it’s me.”

“Team Chaisol will be partners with the Galaxy Army in the future.”

"partner?"

“I will give you a detailed explanation once all the students have gathered, so please line up with Eunha-kun for now. The student with the blue hair over there is Eunha-kun I was talking about.”

"yes!"

Chaisol approached the child the priest had pointed out.

The friend the priest had named 'Eunha' had warm, turquoise-blue hair. As Chae Sol approached, the boy smiled with a soft and gentle smile.

“Are you Chaisol?”

“Yeah, you’re Eunha? We’re partners.”

“I think it’s because the rule is that there are two priests per group.”

“So you’re saying two people are a team?”

"that's right."

Eunha's pearly eyes widened. It was a benevolent smile that reminded her of priests.

“Perhaps your partner will change after the main ceremony, but it is said that the partner you meet at the initiation ceremony often stays with you until the end. We may continue to be partners… Please take good care of us.”

“That’s totally cool.”

“Is that so?”

Eunha let out a small smile as she said that, and Chaesol felt a sense of awkwardness at that smile.

'Hey, you look like Geo hyung.'

Chaisol instinctively felt the difference between 'Sergio' and 'Giovanni'.

It was noticed that the change in Geo's hair and eye color was not simply a matter of appearance, but a fundamental change in his personality and temperament.

And the smile of the galaxy was strangely similar to Giovanni's.

'Why?'

Of course, Chaisol didn't know that the blonde-haired, blue-eyed Geo's name was 'Giovanni', but at least he knew that it was quite similar to Eunha.

“You have a really cool smile!”

Chaisol simply concluded.

“The older brother I know smiles like you.”

“…You laugh like me?”

"huh!"

“I don’t think people like that are common.”

Eunha rolled her eyes and muttered.

“That’s amazing.”

"…huh…."

Chaisol felt something strange.

'You're smiling, but it feels like you're not smiling.'

Galaxy's smile was very similar to 'Giovanni's', but unlike Geo, who felt warmth without even looking at it, it was somehow cool. It was a temperature similar to a snake I had once touched or a rock on the riverbank.

Eunha, who didn't know what Chae Sol was thinking, asked with a faint smile.

“Is that the ‘Knowing Brother’ you mentioned?”

“Huh? Yeah.”

The galaxy was talking to Geo.

“It’s Geo hyung.”

“…….”

Eunha blinked silently and asked back.

“Geo?”

“My last name is Seo. Sergio.”

“Oh, okay.”

Eunha looked back at the black cloak whose face was completely invisible and opened her mouth.

“The atmosphere is unique.”

“Isn’t it? It’s so warm?”

“Are you the chosen one of the sun god? Or….”

“They said they were believers in the sun god.”

“Shindora.”

The galaxy muttered in a faint voice.

“It’s not at that level.”

"huh?"

“Because he seems like a very faithful person.”

“Isn’t it really warm?”

“That’s right.”

And it's so cold, like it's not even human.

Chae Sol, who heard that small muttering, opened her eyes wide, unable to understand Eunha's words, but Eunha did not talk about Geo anymore. He asked about her family.

“Then the black-haired people next to the black cloaks… are they your family?”

“That’s right, it looks like me, right?”

“They look so much alike. I can tell at a glance that they’re family.”

Galaxy smiled faintly.

“I look a lot like my older sister.”

“Really? Then it would be really pretty.”

“She is as beautiful as a princess.”

“Huh? Uh… really?”

Do you usually call your older sister 'as beautiful as a princess'?

'He seems like a very educated person.'

Cha Sol, who had picked up on Cha Ara's way of speaking, concluded that Eunha was an 'educated person'. Somehow, the way she smiled and the tone of her speech seemed to be very soft, like Geo hyung.

That was so good.

“Let’s be friends!”

“…I wonder?”

“You can take it slow.”

Maybe this guy doesn't trust people well, so I should be considerate of him.

“I'll wait.”

Chaisol was a quick-witted child.

* * *

The Little Mermaid always wanted to know about humans.

What kind of life do they live on the water surface where sunlight ripples like a net?

Why do they, who cannot even breathe under water, throw themselves into the sea from time to time? Why do they get so upset?

What do they think, what do they eat, and how do they laugh, cry, and get angry?

The mermaid went up.

Keep going up.

I saw the prince.

“…….”

It's warm.

The warmth spreading over the water was a symbol of sunlight.

The platinum hair, which contained the net-like sunlight that looked up from the deep sea, flowed like waves, and it sparkled like silver on the surface of the water. The blue eyes, which contained warm light, felt warm despite being the color of the sea.

The mermaid princess who ruled the sea was curious about humans.

I was curious about the limits of humanity.

“…….”

Will the human who resembles that sunlight be warm even in the sea?

So hold hands and stay like that… .

“…….”

with a plop.

“…….”

In the sea.

"…ah…."

I think it was missing.

The pearl-filled eyes blinked dimly.

The blurry focus soon became clear, and her red lips drew a lazy curve. She had already woken up.

"this."

A beautiful princess wearing a large doctor's gown said.

“I had a good dream.”

Right, Giovanni?

The little mermaid princess laughed as she lay on the water.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (59)

Episode 59

“Were you a foreigner?”

"uh?"

Yoo Seong-un asked back at Geo's words.

“What does that mean?”

On the way back after finishing the first initiation ceremony and parting ways with the Cha family, Yoo Seong-woon tilted his head at Geo's unexpected muttering. He didn't understand exactly what Geo was asking.

“A foreigner.”

“The blond priest I saw at the initiation ceremony briefing earlier….”

“Oh, you said something.”

Geo was oddly old-fashioned. He had the old-fashioned common sense of a grandfather, but he seemed to worry that he might have been racist without realizing it.

He was polite and gentlemanly in everything he did. He really didn't worry about anything.

“That person must be Korean. You’re just confused because he looks a little different from traditional Koreans.”

“You’re Korean. You have blond hair and blue eyes, and your bone structure is a bit different from the Koreans I know, so I thought you were a foreigner from the West. Was that rude?”

“It’s a bit of an old mindset.”

“I will be careful.”

“I can’t help but not know since I’ve been locked in a frame all this time.”

Moreover, from the perspective of a being of origin, it would have been a bit difficult to distinguish between human nationalities. Just as it would be difficult for a person without specialized knowledge to distinguish between all the different types of ants.

'More than anything, the existence of the source has the side of believing in the rules of humans once they have figured them out…'

The existence of the source does not quite understand human exceptionalism.

There were some guys who couldn't understand why I didn't eat three meals a day, and there were guys who couldn't understand why I didn't have hair, which is supposed to be there.

'Isn't this what humans should be like?'

Rather, it could be said that Geo was great in distinguishing them to the extent of defining them as ‘foreigners of the West.’ In this case, it seems that his superficial knowledge was rather poisonous… .

“Of course, the traditional Korean appearance is generally black hair and black or brown eyes. The bone structure is also a bit different. However, these days, it’s a bit… difficult to distinguish nationality based on hair color or bone structure.”

In order to make the being of origin understand humans, it was good to tell them the flow that originated from its origin. Yoo Seong-un began to tell the old story again.

“You seem to know about the Great Disaster, but I think the Earth was turned upside down during the Great Disaster. It wasn’t my generation, so I don’t know exactly what it felt like, but it must have been much more chaotic than it is now. It must have been like an apocalypse.”

“…….”

“…Do you know what an apocalypse is…?”

“I know.”

“Oh, that’s great.”

I think it might have been one of the memories that the human personality called 'Sergio' knew.

“Anyway, back then, the concept of borders was vague. To be precise, it had become vague. People started to migrate here and there to escape the disasters in their own countries, and as a result, the entire Earth began to mix with various races like a giant salad bowl.”

Because of this, it has become rare to find someone who is considered an 'authentic Korean'.

“If you were to say pure-blooded Koreans, you would only find them in very rare places in Korea where there is very little interaction with other regions. Some old-fashioned elders are extremely reluctant to have their children’s blood mixed with that of a foreigner….”

“There are people like that everywhere.”

“There are always people who hate change. That’s why it’s hard to figure out someone’s nationality just by their appearance. But that blond priest you mentioned, he's probably Korean, considering he's even hosting this kind of event."

"You don't entrust the event to a foreign priest?"

"No, rather… if he's hosting such a big event, he must have held a fairly high position in the Sun God Church in Seoul. Then he must be living in Korea, so wouldn't it be harder to think that he's a foreigner?"

"aha."

I understand.

'In effect, racial distinctions have now disappeared.'

No matter where your blood comes from, no matter what you look like, if you have Korean citizenship, you are Korean. That was true even before the Great Disaster, but the atmosphere then and now is a little different.

'It's as if citizenship is being treated as a light qualification, like a driver's license.'

Yoo Sung-woon said that since the priest commutes here, his race must be Korean. It doesn't matter where or who he was born, he is simply registered as Korean, so they judge him to be Korean.

"……."

A truly united Earth.

'… It seems good.'

This seemed somewhat desirable.

'It's a little unfamiliar, though.'

Geo was still unfamiliar with his hometown. He felt like he couldn't even order food at a hamburger place anymore.

For Sergio, the living ancestor, this world was moving too fast.

“I don’t think there will be any problems like racial discrimination.”

“It’s a conflict that seems to come straight out of a textbook.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“I said that, but I can’t say that there is no racism.”

“Didn’t you say there is no distinction of nationality?”

“No, that’s not the problem….”

He looked around, made sure no one was listening, and then continued.

“There is class discrimination.”

"ah."

“It may sound like an excuse… I don’t really have any particular thoughts, but it seems like citizens of the first or second rank are particularly arrogant. In particular, first rank hunters find it unpleasant to interact with citizens of the third rank or lower….”

“…….”

When I first heard about classifying citizens into classes, I felt ominous. Is the caste system really coming back?

“…Is that the difference between nobles and commoners?”

“Oh, is that easier to understand? I guess you could say it’s definitely a similar perspective.”

“I was surprised that the classification and handling were clearer than I thought.”

“Well, anyway.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled faintly.

“So be careful not to judge people by their appearance, because people will say you’re a crazy old man. I understand what you’re going through, but other people might think it’s ridiculous discrimination.”

“Thank you for letting me know.”

“I wonder if there are any truly pure-blooded Koreans left in this day and age. Even I’m not a native….”

Although the feeling was subtle, Geo let it slide for now and asked something else he was curious about.

“Is it because of the mixing of races that hair and eye colors are different? Of course, I know that there is no case where a pure gene produces blue hair, but just in case….”

“Ah, in my case, it’s just the effect of awakening.”

When it comes to awakening, it seems to be something related to 'hunter'.

“Does it change color when you awaken?”

“Not all of them are like that, but if there is a particularly friendly attribute, the color will change accordingly. The blue hair you mentioned is not a color that can appear naturally, so it is probably due to the influence of awakening.”

"okay."

“Attributes aren’t something that the system clearly indicates, like ranks or jobs. Rather, they’re something you roughly define based on your own abilities. By the way, the attribute I have is ‘Freezing.’”

Only then did I notice the white hair, as white as a meteor's snow, and the blue eyes, as cold as ice. It was a color similar to 'Giovanni's', but it was definitely a color that gave off a cold vibe, unlike his.

“I used to have brown hair and brown eyes, but after I woke up, I became like this.”

"…okay…."

I was wondering if dyeing your hair is trendy these days.

'Was I too prejudiced?'

To be honest, I didn't really care even though I saw portraits of people with ghosts and hair or eye colors that stood out. That's because Geo is an open-minded person who respects human diversity.

‘The world has turned upside down and fashion has become so complicated, but I thought there was nothing I couldn’t do with dyeing my hair…’

Or maybe he just thought it was a form of evolution and just passed it over without thinking. He was a really thoughtless person, even in his own opinion.

“I can change color too.”

“Huh? Suddenly? You were originally black. Wasn’t that your identity?”

“It’s interesting to think that color can be a person’s identity, but I’m not black. I just added it because Mr. Yoo Seong-un said that his color changed.”

“No… to begin with, your black color is a bit too… not native Korean… that…”

Isn't it too black?

'Just like the abyss or obsidian.'

It was difficult to say that Geo's color was a simple color. The black color, which seemed to symbolize death or silence, often made people's minds dizzy.

'Even now that I've lowered my status to the level of a human, I still feel a little uncomfortable making direct eye contact.'

Geo asked back, wondering why Yoo Seong-un was reacting so strangely.

“Isn’t it just plain black?”

“…If that’s what you thought, then fine.”

Yoo Seong-un returned to the topic from before.

“So, you change color too?”

“If I put in a little effort, I can change it. Can I still be considered a modern person?”

“What kind of 29-year-old guy is talking like an old man who can’t keep up with the times… No, is that it? Blonde hair and blue eyes?”

“You knew that.”

“You had that color change at Cheonggyecheon and when you rode the water taxi.”

“Unlike other people, I wonder if I have evolved into a chameleon.”

“Rather than that….”

I wonder if it wasn't a change in personality.

“…….”

“What were you trying to say?”

“…I just thought it was interesting.”

By this time, Yoo Seong-un had also gotten a feel for Geo.

'Geo… likely has numerous personalities.'

Centered around the personality named 'Portrait of Geo' by the source, various personalities spread out like branches on its side.

Normally, he acts as the personality called 'Geo', but when a certain situation arises, the corresponding personality seems to react.

'He's really a difficult guy to deal with. He was hastily sent out into society due to the greed of Guild Leader Nana... but if he develops a personality that's hostile to humans, it'll be quite difficult.'

Even if that were the case, Bisabul would preach a taste that was difficult to sympathize with, saying, "Dying while appreciating a work of art is part of art," but for ordinary people who were not like him or Yoo Seong-un, who had an irrational collecting habit, it would have been a disaster.

'I am aware of that too.'

Although his conscience has become more rounded after going through various things, there is still a minimum level of good. Yoo Seong-woon, who was thinking about how to deal with Geo for a moment, opened his mouth.

“By any chance, that is….”

"yes."

“…….”

Isn't this the story we should share here?

“Can you tell me about yourself? Not here, but when we get back to the hotel.”

“I think I’ve told you a lot about myself so far.”

“I want to know more about it. Go back to the hotel and ask, and if it doesn’t bother you, answer me. That’s my job as a curator.”

“I will do that.”

“Thank you so much.”

Geo suddenly brought up a random story, probably thinking that the topic would not come up again until they arrived at the hotel.

“I’m worried about the cat I left at home.”

“…Cat? Did you bring a cat into the house?”

“I met Anticat for the first time at the Jewel Vein this time.”

“…….”

“But it’ll be okay since the teddy bear is watching over me.”

“…I don’t know how to react since a while ago….”

Yoo Seong-un asked with a subtle expression.

“I guess you’re an anti-cat, but that’s okay because you’re you.”

“I don’t know what it means.”

“What do you mean the teddy bear is looking at the anti-cat?”

“A teddy bear is literally looking at Dana.”

“Did you make it?”

“The old man entered the doll that was abandoned in the sea.”

“Who is that old man? Why did he go inside a teddy bear of all things?”

“This is the sun god I serve.”

“…….”

After a brief silence, Yoo Seong-un decided not to ask any more questions.

“Oh, I see.”

It was already confusing enough.

* * *

Soft and blunt hands.

A doll with fur the same color as Giovanni's slowly stroked the back of the kitten that had curled up in its arms.

The body of the jewel cat spread out lazily, as if it were comfortable in her arms.

“…….”

The teddy bear was constantly stroking the little jewel filled with the spirit of the dead.

It patted, swept, and sometimes covered me with its warmth. Although it was now a sun with no divinity left and only a trace, it was still able to perform miracles that could warm this cold body.

We're just holding each other tightly.

“…….”

The teddy bear looked into the picture frame depicting the blue sea with a stuffed smile. It felt like it was depicting a single person, with a gentle vitality.

My child called this the 'breathing sea'.

“…….”

And this is obviously connected to the world of mermaids.

“…….”

Geo will meet a mermaid.

The teddy bear wished that Giovanni would hold the little mermaid again.

“…….”

For that, I would not even spare my divinity.

Even without anything that grandiose, this place was… bright and warm enough.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (60)

Episode 60

“I’ve been wondering about this for a long time.”

Yoo Seong-un asked after arriving at the hotel.

“Is your personality divided?”

“Are the personalities divided?”

“That’s, what should I say, something like multiple personalities.”

“…….”

Geo, who had been sitting on the bed and thinking for a moment, tilted his head.

“I don’t know.”

"…okay?"

“But I know that I change often.”

Geo pulled back the black hood that had been completely covering his face and took it off. This time, Honey, who had been hiding inside, fell onto the bed with a thud. Geo picked up Honey in his hands.

Soon after, Geo's 'color' changed.

“…….”

“…….”

Platinum blonde hair that's almost silver, and emerald eyes that resemble the sea of a famous resort.

"…uh…."

Even the previously gloomy and calm expression became lively.

It was a very gentle and mature expression. There was a sense of mature playfulness in the way he smiled brightly.

“…So, did your personality change?”

“I don’t think this is a change in personality.”

Geo's speech was still formal. But unlike his previous indifferent tone, which sounded like a machine spitting out input words, his voice now had a calm pitch.

“Because even now, I am ‘Geo.’”

Nevertheless, the words of the black cloak were true.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“…How many ‘Geos’ like that are there?”

“As far as I know, there are three people.”

"I see."

He could be sure.

'There is a portrait of Geo in the center, and many personalities are gathered within it.'

I felt like I had to hear more about how that was possible.

“The current Geo… can I just call him Geo?”

“It doesn’t matter, it’s been called that before too.”

“If you’re saying ‘that’s what it was called’, does that mean it has a real name?”

“It’s not like it’s a pseudonym or a real name.”

Geo, who was dyed in a dull color, looked like a rather polite and noble nobleman, but his faint cheerfulness could be felt from his fleeting smile. It was a completely different impression from 'Sergio' who weighed more than a thousand pounds.

“At one time, I used to go by this name, ‘Giovanni.’”

I should say that he looked like a kind and gentle young man, healthy and energetic. Wherever he went, he seemed like he would be liked by the elders and make a lot of friends.

“People used to call me ‘Geo’ because it was just a nickname. So it’s not strange for Yoo Seong-woon to call me Geo.”

“…That’s a different person from ‘Sergio’, right?”

“They are very similar, yet completely different people. Now they are just one, but they used to be.”

"…okay…."

If so, the probability that a person named 'Sergio' actually existed on this Earth increases.

'I'll have to talk to the guild leader about this. He seems to be investigating something, so he might still have some information.'

Yoo Seong-un, who was chewing over the guild leader who was feeling gloomy in a strange place, soon came up with a guess.

'What if Geo's portrait is… repeating death and resurrection?'

The existence of dungeons and sources has already revealed that there are dimensions other than Earth in this world.

In that case, the 'Giovanni' in front of us now could have been a kind of 'Portrait of Gio' that was living in another dimension.

'... If that's true, then it also explains why the personality of the portrait is central. After finishing one life, he may return to the state of the portrait and slowly restore his previous personality... .'

Geo clearly said, 'As far as I know, there are three people.' This meant that there could be more personalities, and Geo himself knew that possibility.

If this Yoo Seong-un's own speculation is correct, then how long will the portrait's personality restoration continue? Will it ever end? What if a personality that harbors hostility toward humans is restored?

“…….”

No, it's still just a fantasy.

'... But I know that there is a central figure called Geo's portrait, and that there are numerous personalities named Geo around it. I have enough reason to prepare.'

Yoo Seong-un rolled his eyes.

'If this is a situation where the portrait is thought to be a kind of past life, then it also explains the mindset that allows him to define himself simply as Geo despite his numerous personalities.'

After organizing his thoughts briefly, Yoo Seong-un asked.

“…Then is there anything I should be careful about? Someone named Sergio might like sweet potatoes, but someone named Giovanni might not like them. If you could tell me something to keep in mind like that, I would appreciate it.”

“I don’t think there’s much to be careful about.”

“But, well, what is it? If we make some kind of rules, I can be more polite… Let’s make each other feel comfortable in advance.”

"hmm…."

Even with the change in personality, his temperament that was sensitive to manners and good and evil remained. Fortunately, Yoo Seong-woon’s words worked. The pale but gentle-looking young man answered after a moment of thought.

“It’s hard to leave a patient alone when I see them.”

"…oh?"

Come to think of it, I checked on Cha Eun-hyeok's condition, who was said to have been chewed out by Honey before.

“Did you say you were a doctor? No, a priest?”

“Both are correct. As a priest, I also worked as a doctor. I went further and built hospitals in rural villages and traveled around to treat people.”

“That’s great.”

“Actually, even if you ask me to tell you the rules right now, I can’t think of any.”

The young man continued speaking, smiling awkwardly.

“Is it to the extent that you wish that the sun god would not be insulted in front of me?”

“It’s rude to badmouth someone. I’ll be careful not to do that.”

“Thank you, and….”

"and?"

“…….”

Giovanni said, seeming to remember something.

“I might be a little sensitive about mermaids.”

"…mermaid?"

Come to think of it, even on Geo’s first tour, he had rarely brought up the topic of ‘mermaids.’ Yoo Seong-un asked based on his own reasonable reasoning.

“Did you live with a mermaid when you were Giovanni?”

“Yes, it was a world where two races, humans and mermaids, lived together.”

“In what sense are you sensitive?”

“In many ways….”

Geo shrugged.

“I was eaten to death by a mermaid.”

Just when I thought it was a topic that would definitely feel sensitive, Geo continued speaking in a still even voice.

“But that wasn’t because the child wanted it.”

“…….”

“At that time, humans and mermaids were in great conflict, and my students and I were caught for the crime of forming a bond and received an absurd punishment.”

“…So that mermaid named Ai ate you?”

“You must have been hungry.”

He added with a composed laugh.

“I was already in a dying situation.”

“…I didn’t mean to hear about your death like this….”

“Was this a sudden story?”

“That’s a little bit.”

“I don’t remember very well either.”

As soon as he said that, the color faded away and Geo returned to black like a shadow. It was the person that Yoo Seong-un knew well, the 'Portrait of Geo' and 'Sergio'.

Geo continued speaking, his expression cold and sullen, without a trace of laughter.

“I’m still in the process of thinking about it.”

“So you gradually recall the memories of your personality over time like that?”

“I often get confused. Do I like the ocean or do I hate swimming? Those little details sometimes conflict with the ‘Geo’.”

“It sounds really painful, is that okay…?”

“It’s not as confusing a process as you might think.”

Geo's voice was heavy and calm.

“It’s more like recalling forgotten childhood memories.”

“If that’s the case, then that’s good.”

Suddenly, Yoo Seong-un thought he knew where the heavy silence he felt from Geo came from.

‘… This portrait is made up of so many deaths that I can’t even imagine.’

So it can't help but be so heavy and quiet.

Death is like that.

* * *

“…….”

Mind.

Rise above the water.

"…ah…."

The sun was visible.

“…….”

“Excuse me, are you okay?”

A young voice was heard.

“Can you take a breather?”

“…Cool, big.”

“Thank goodness you’re awake.”

“…….”

When I opened my eyes, I saw pure white pupils.

The mysteriously colored eyes that contain the color of pearls are something that only mermaids have.

"…mermaid?"

“Don’t worry, I don’t mean to hurt you.”

“Why am I here….”

Only then did I come to my senses.

"ah."

I went out to the sea, and was caught by a mermaid and dragged into the sea.

“Did you save me?”

“Oh, yes.”

The mermaid, who appeared to be male, spoke with an apology on her young face.

“I’m sorry, it was my sister who dragged you into the sea.”

“I’ve never heard of a mermaid eating a human… Wasn’t that a superstition?”

“The superstition is true. She didn’t take you away to eat you. However, my sister is very curious about humans, so I think she took you in to observe and analyze you in more detail.”

“Thank you for your kindness, I thought I was going to die, but I survived. Thank you for your kindness.”

The little mermaid seemed to think he would be angry, but she wasn't particularly angry. Not only did she not have any ill intentions toward the mermaid who had dragged her into the sea, but she also remembered that she was very young.

Even though humans and mermaids had a very bad relationship, he had no ill feelings toward mermaids. Especially since mermaids had different ways of thinking and emotional systems than humans, it wouldn't have been strange if they immediately dragged humans into the sea.

"hmm…."

Looking around, I realized it was the beach where I had first taken a walk.

“You brought me all the way here.”

“Since our older sister has caused trouble, it is only natural that we guarantee her a minimum level of safety.”

“I know I am very lucky to have met such a kind mermaid.”

I almost died.

“But there is a village around here. You seem to be a relatively young mermaid, so if you stay here too long, people might attack you.”

“Oh, there was a village here?”

“Yes, she is very upset because she recently lost three family members to mermaids. She would probably torment a young mermaid like you with that resentment… I appreciate your kindness, but I think it would be best for you to go back.”

“Thank you for providing me with the information I need to protect myself.”

The young mermaid seemed very happy, perhaps because it was her first time interacting with humans.

“I am glad that the first person I spoke to was such a kind person. Do you live in this town?”

“I was just looking around to see if I could settle down. I’m a priest who’s leaving the temple to open a hospital, but I guess mermaids don’t like the Sun’s followers very much, do they?”

“My sister and I don’t care about that kind of thing.”

Mermaids worshipped the god of the deep sea, and humans worshipped the god of the sun.

This kind of moderate conversation between humans and mermaids, who have different thoughts and eating habits and easily cause conflicts big and small, was like a miracle.

Perhaps the little mermaid didn't want to miss that little miracle.

“My name is Isser. Can I visit you often? If it’s okay, I’ll invite my older sister and make a formal apology.”

“Isser… It’s the language of the sea that refers to the Milky Way. What a good name.”

The weak had to be protected and treated with affection. Even if the target was not a human but a mermaid, the warmth of the sun could reach anywhere.

“My name is Giovanni.”

Giovanni developed a bond with these young mermaids.

It was a happy time.

* * *

“…….”

Lying on the hotel bed, Giovanni blinked.

"…ah…."

He was crying.

This too must be foolishness.

* * *

“…….”

“Kkuk.”

“…….”

“Kuruk.”

“…….”

“Kung kung kung….”

“Hot tea.”

It was only when he heard his son's disgruntled cries that Geo came to his senses.

“The assimilation rate has increased considerably.”

The last time I remembered it was around 31%, but in just one day it had increased to 59%. Geo, who had confirmed that Giovanni's assimilation rate had been inflated by almost half, finished assessing the situation.

“Is it because I was dreaming?”

No, rather than that.

“What I saw at the event back then….”

A child with blue hair.

“…….”

“Kururuk?”

“Dad, I’m not sleeping.”

“Kkuk.”

"okay."

It was a dream, so my memory is already hazy, but for some reason, the child I saw at the event and the child I saw in my dream looked quite similar.

Maybe it was because their hair colors were similar that it brought back memories of Giovanni.

'Could this be the child I saw in my dream?'

Geo, who thought so, soon shook his head.

“It’s a crowd.”

No matter how well you hit it, isn't it a story of a different dimension that you have to cross twenty-five alleys to meet? There was no way that the person who should be in Giovanni's dimension would be in Sergio's dimension.

“Even if it’s true, it’s a bit unconscionable to say that you know someone as Giovanni with a purity of 33.3%.”

I feel like I've become an evil boss who gives gift certificates in my salary.

“…….”

Well, anyway.

Geo just did it to himself.

“Lie down, honey.”

“Kkuk.”

“You’re hot.”

No matter what past or future came his way, Geo, with his thick nerves, didn't care.

I think it would be okay to pay a little attention to it though.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (61)

Episode 61

Long ago, there were two mermaids who called each other family.

The sister wanted to analyze human limitations, and the younger brother wanted to learn about human culture.

Among them, the younger brother, Isser, wished that one day there would be a world where humans and mermaids could live together. It was a truly vain wish in an era where the two races were full of fear and contempt for each other. The mermaids knew it too.

“It is a world where the sky and the sea come together, what a wonderful wish.”

The person who said that was the first human Isser had ever met.

Long blond hair that flowed like waves. Blue eyes full of wisdom. A man who always liked to wear white clothes. He said he was a priest and a doctor.

“It’s a story that makes me feel good just hearing it.”

“…….”

He was born with a color that any mermaid could not help but follow with their eyes.

The mermaid adored the white man.

“…Humans are lovely but fickle creatures. Is it difficult to wait for that day to come?

“I won’t say it will be easy. There are just so many differences between humans and mermaids.”

He gave practical advice.

“Even humans hate each other because they don’t understand each other. How much worse is the conflict between humans and mermaids?”

Then he added some affectionate words.

“But if there are more people who think like Mr. Isser, that day will come someday.”

“…….”

“Ultimately, it’s a matter of perception. I think that hatred is something that can be overcome if you understand the other person.”

“…It makes me very happy that you said that.”

It was a dreamlike story.

“I love the sun. I think it’s as wonderful as the humans who live their short lives, each with their own unique colors.”

“I know that mermaids serve the god of the sea. But Mr. Isser says that they love the sun.”

“Yes, of course I worship the god of the deep sea… but the sunlight is warm and gentle. It has a different majesty from the deep sea.”

“I know what you’re saying. Sometimes it feels really good to sleep in the sun.”

“It’s hard work at sea.”

Isser longed for the land.

“That’s why I want to capture human life with my own eyes even more.”

“As a son of the sun, I affirm your courage, Isser.”

“Thank you for not denying the children of the deep sea.”

The mermaid siblings pretend to be human with the help of a human named Giovanni, and the older sister dreams of becoming a doctor, while the younger brother dreams of becoming a priest.

“You serve the god of the deep sea, yet you still want to be a priest of the sun?”

“I am not an apostle of the deep sea, so I am not abandoning my duty. Above all, wouldn’t unity be faster if we serve both gods?”

“It’s a simple but good idea. May the sun see your heart, accept you as family, and grant you divine power.”

Giovanni was the only one who did not criticize Isser's vain dreams.

He was kind and affectionate, a bit mischievous and would often joke with Isser and his sister, and he was also capable as a priest and doctor, saving many people through the night.

Sometimes I say things that are nonsense, and sometimes I become shameless to the point of being ridiculous… .

“I want to be like Geo.”

“Then shouldn’t I study medicine hard as well?”

“That’s not what I meant. I don’t want to see blood.”

Giovanni was a respectable man.

Even in an age of conflict and criticism, he was always calm, cheerful, and gentle.

“There is blood that flows in peace and mercy, Isser.”

“…….”

In a time of upheaval, only Giovanni remained in his place.

“Teacher, will you stay here forever?”

“That can’t be.”

The only thing the siblings worried about was Giovanni's lifespan.

“I am human, so I will die sooner than you mermaids.”

“I already know that.”

“So I can’t tell you for sure that I’ll always be by your side.”

“…….”

“But I promise you that everything else will be the same. The conflicts and sufferings of the times will not change the people of this country.”

“…Teacher, you are a human, not a mermaid, so how can you do that?”

“I am sure that even when I die one day, when you think of me, I will always be the same.”

Parting with him would have been a very sad thing, but even this brief conversation was enough to comfort Isser.

“Can you promise me that even if your body returns to dust, you will still be the same human being you are now?”

“Don’t worry, Isser. You are my special student, so how could I disappoint you?”

“Thank you for putting my stupid worries to rest. I guess my heart aches when I see people leaving and changing over and over again.”

“I understand your feelings. I, too, am a human being and feel bitter about the flow of the world.”

“I’m so glad it’s not just me. I’m not alone….”

He hoped that Giovanni would not be easily corrupted or broken like other humans.

But soon Isser regretted it.

“…….”

“Run away.”

Why did I make that promise?

Maybe things would have been better if he had made selfish choices like other humans.

“G, Giovanni….”

“Don’t ever come back here again, okay? This is neither home nor school anymore.”

“Geo, just a moment.”

“Don’t even think about saving me. You are young and have no reason to suffer with the flow of the times.”

"…teacher…."

“Promise me.”

Because you have become selfish.

“There’s a guy hiding a mermaid here! A traitor is here!!”

Because I couldn't overcome the fear of a future where pain and death were expected.

“Over here, set fire to this place! Burn it down with those horrible mermaids!!”

“Bring that traitor out right now!! Raising a mermaid is horrible…!”

“Why on earth did you hide the mermaids, you who have saved countless humans!”

So how much better would this wicked heart have felt if he had abandoned us, run away, or betrayed us?

“They have not committed any sins that deserve your wrath. They are only children.”

“He must be crazy, calling a monster like a mermaid a child. He is a traitor to humanity!!”

“If that will end the nightmare in this town, then so be it.”

“This hypocrite…! That guy pretends to do good deeds with a nice face, but behind the scenes, he’s raising a mermaid!!”

“I hope that someday this painful relationship will come to a peaceful end.”

Giovanni remained noble to the end.

“…….”

I am trapped in that narrow fishbowl created by human cruelty.

Unable to overcome the terrible hunger that was enough to melt my organs, I sunk my sharp fangs into that rotten and decayed flesh.

You were affectionate.

“…….”

Why is it so cold?

* * *

“…….”

"are you okay?"

A human child asked me.

Only when the young face came into view did the mermaid realize that she had woken up from a bad dream.

“Your expression was really bad.”

“…I think I had a nightmare.”

“Really? Should I tell the priest?”

“It’s not that big of a problem.”

He refused kindness with a smiling face.

'I don't want to seek human help right after having a dream like this.'

Why did I suddenly dream of Giovanni?

'Because I'm in the arms of the sun god...? Or is it because of that Sergio I saw yesterday?'

The mermaid rolled her pearl-colored eyes and thought of the man she had seen at the event. The man, who was covered entirely in a black cloak, certainly had a striking aura.

The man's surroundings were as quiet as if all life had died. Mana shrank as if she was examining the emperor's mood, and the air flowed in a somewhat timid and muffled manner.

Perhaps the man is a hunter so strong that he can no longer be called human.

‘Why does the name have to be Geo…?’

No, actually, it might not be a problem with names or anything like that.

“…….”

It was unpleasant.

In such a capricious and selfish human being, I was reminded of the image of a noble teacher.

Now, I am even more disgusted with myself for pretending to be human and participating in my sister's massacre… .

“…….”

“Galaxy, does your head hurt?”

"…little."

Don't be so kind.

“But it’ll be okay now.”

Please, don't be so horrible.

'There is no reason now to show mercy to humans.'

No matter what he did, Isser hated humans.

I hated selfish people because they reminded me of the horrible nightmare I had that day, and I hated selfless people because they seemed to be imitating my teacher and saying that what was mine was nothing.

The mermaid's anger was not something that could be erased even after a lifetime.

'In the end, a mere creature that will writhe like a bug in the face of pain and death.'

The mere fact that a mermaid was talking to me was disgusting enough.

"……."

Still, he smiled.

That was the greatest good deed this wicked mermaid could do.

"I'm sorry, did you wake up because of me?"

"No? That's not it, I'm just not used to sleeping there…."

"Then we can sleep together now."

"Yeah, thanks."

"There's nothing to be thankful for."

Even though I was sick of myself for blindly hating a race and participating in the slaughter of my sister, I couldn't stop.

Isser twisted his lips as he looked at the human child lying comfortably next to him.

"……."

As much as my grace.

'Just that much.'

I hope they all die a horrible death.

Me too, you too.

* * *

The main meal day.

"uh?"

The procession of priests began.

“Is that it?”

“That’s it, the procession of priests.”

“Looking at how young everyone is, I guess it’s an initiation ceremony….”

“It’s almost time to have an initiation ceremony in the Sun God Church.”

“Wow, look how cute the kids are.”

8 p.m. The event was held around the time when most office workers were leaving work, so there were a lot of onlookers. In order to get the attention of the gods, initiation ceremonies are usually held in the late afternoon.

“Even though they are young, they are all priests, so they have a different kind of sacredness.”

“Just looking at it makes me feel purified. Is it because it’s a solar temple? It’s also warm.”

“Should I call some others too? You never know who will be chosen today.”

Although the existence of God had become more familiar than before the Great Calamity, the divine majesty remained. People were excited to see if one of these young priests would be embraced by God through a miracle.

In fact, even without such calculated intentions, the procession of priests was enough to attract people's attention. The incense burners swayed like bells and the symbols of the sun held in the hands of the priests of the sun cult.

“Ah, it’s warm….”

“As expected from the Sun God Church.”

On such a cold winter day, the gentle and majestic procession of the sun evoked a special feeling.

“…Hey….”

“…….”

It was the same for Yoo Seong-un and Geo and their friends.

“I haven’t seen the initiation ceremony often so I didn’t get a feel for it, but this is what it feels like.”

“Haven’t you seen it often?”

“There isn’t always an initiation ceremony… I have to consider the date and all.”

Among the weaker churches, there were some that held the event only once every ten years.

“Especially, it takes a lot of capital to prepare a splendid initiation ceremony like the one you see now. Initiation ceremonies for religions without money or influence aren't as grand as this. It's more like praying at a temple or something."

So, this kind of event was a pretty good spectacle. It was also a very special event for the citizens living in the city.

"We're slowly entering the temple. We've already reserved our seats, so let's go in first."

Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo.

"As time goes by, there will be so many onlookers that it will be difficult to find a seat."

"All right."

"Aren't you tired of all the people? I don't think you enjoyed the noise the last time you came out."

Even though the last tour had ended safely, Yoo Seong-un still didn't know much about 'Portrait of Geo'.

I had no idea that some random part would trigger an aggressive reaction.

'The guild leader may not care much about the casualties, but he may be happy that he has something to watch… but the country needs to be careful.'

Bisabul was not only kind to my collection, but he was also not a good person objectively. Even Yoo Seong-woon himself thought so, but he was bitter about people dying.

The work said at that time.

"I'm a little tired, but not enough to worry about."

“…Okay, then that’s good.”

As expected, it was a work that required great patience.

'But you still have to be careful.'

As the procession gradually entered the temple and the people began to settle down, the priest standing at the very front placed the incense he was holding on the altar and stopped the steps of the prospective priests.

He gestured to the young priests and organized them as if he were the conductor of a choir.

“…Goddess who illuminates the heavens and the earth with gentle light, please send down fire here today where your servants have gathered. These young priests are like sprouts that have grown following your light….”

The priest, Kang Seo-dam, who recited the prayer announcing the initiation ceremony, soon concluded.

“Receive a little light.”

“Receive a little light.”

After reciting the last prayer of the Solar Church, Kang Seo-dam bowed his head to the altar, then turned around and bowed his head once again to the prospective priests who were each standing in their respective seats and holding the symbol of the sun.

Kang Seo-dam opened his mouth after seeing the prospective priests bowing their heads.

“This is the temple of the sun, but the sun is not forced upon the novice priests. You will learn how to treat the gods and become their servants with the help of the sun goddess. I hope that today’s initiation ceremony will be an opportunity for you to gain another parent.”

Daughter—.

Kang Seo-dam continued speaking, ringing the silver bell.

“Before preparing the mind and body to welcome new parents, the catechumens will take the time to express their gratitude for their earthly connection. Before the closing ceremony begins, the catechumens will exchange greetings.”

The initiation ceremony is divided into two parts, with a break in between to allow time for family. Not all religions are like this, but the initiation ceremony of the Sun Church was like this.

Thanks to the prior training, all the prospective priests moved to their respective positions.

“Mom, Mom…!!”

“Brother, I am a priest now!”

“These clothes are cool!”

Some people disappeared into the distance to spend time with their families, while others moved to the waiting room to rest.

“…….”

He too was about to move to take a break.

“……?”

In Kang Seo-dam's eyes, a prospective priest appeared, wandering around without being able to go anywhere for some reason.

‘… It was definitely a child named Eunha.’

For some reason, he was an impressive child with blue hair that reminded one of the sea. In reality, he had a strong, cool aura, perhaps because he wanted to be in that lineage.

'I know you don't have any family to talk to since you're from Carnation Eye, so why are you just sitting there?'

I couldn't let even one of the priests under my jurisdiction be careless. Kang Seodam looked around.

'Who are you looking at now?'

Following the child's gaze, I saw a black-haired prospective priest being embraced by his family.

‘That kid….’

I think the name was probably Chaisol.

"…ah."

Black Cloak was also among them.

'You're the person I saw last time.'

Kang Seo-dam remembered that he had been unfaithful and had only observed the event and left cleanly.

'The initiation ceremony itself was quite long, so if they showed up today, is it to accept new believers?'

As I looked around with questioning eyes, I could see that the gaze of the galaxy was on the black cloak.

“…….”

Maybe you want to fit in with those guys.

'Well, they're particularly crowded over there, so if you're a carnation kid, you might be jealous.'

Fortunately, it wasn't long before Chae Sol dragged Eunha away. She was quick-witted, so she naturally introduced my partner to her family.

I watched carefully to see if that consideration might have hurt her pride, but Eunha's mood of being dragged along like that didn't seem too bad.

“…It’ll be okay now.”

Since the black cloak also seemed like a god with a high level of understanding of humans, there shouldn't be a big problem.

Only then did Kang Seo-dam take a step to rest.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (62)

Episode 62

This situation was unexpected.

“This is Galaxy! My partner.”

“They say that priests are basically pairs, but now I have a partner.”

“Now, Eunha and I are on the same team!”

Geo blinked his hooded eyes as he watched Chae Sol brag about his partner to his family.

'Looking at it this way, they definitely look alike.'

The way she smiled skillfully despite being flustered because Chae Sol had suddenly brought her here. There was definitely a difference in that level of sophistication, but the strangely bluish-green hair triggered Giovanni's memories.

'I think Isser's name also meant Milky Way.'

Since dreams are dreams, I don't remember much after waking up, but the long blue hair reminded me of the mermaid Isser in my dream.

“…….”

“Hey, these guys….”

Perhaps because of Geo's gaze, Eunha opened her mouth as if she wanted to introduce herself to Chae Sol.

Chaisol made an “Oh no” expression, then smiled brightly and explained.

“You can tell just by looking at my brother and sister, right? And although we’re not family, this is the Geo hyung I told you about last time!”

Chaisol urged him to answer.

“He’s so handsome!”

“Huh? Oh, okay….”

Geo was also embarrassed by that bold appearance. How could he know if he was handsome with the hood covering his face?

'I don't think that guy has any clairvoyance skills.'

Geo, who was embarrassed to be openly complimented on his appearance by a child, couldn't stand the awkwardness and greeted him.

“Nice to meet you, my name is Sergio.”

“…My name is Eunha.”

With a mature smile that felt strangely unfamiliar, Eunha added shortly.

“Yes, nice to meet you.”

hmm.

Geo thought absentmindedly.

'It was my mistake after all.'

It may be a hasty judgment, but the Isser that Giovanni remembers was a student who tried to be polite and courteous, but was also somewhat blind and had a teasing quality.

'I guess it's because there were so many awkward points, but my speech was much more stiff.'

First of all, I should say that he is a friend who is quite distant from the words 'mature' or 'experienced'. Compared to that young student who was like a fresh ray of sunshine, the child in front of me had a somewhat cold air about him.

'It must be a great coincidence that I met a child who looked so much like Isser so soon after I began to assimilate as Giovanni.'

Moreover, the last image he recalled of Isser was of her in her late teens or early twenties, making it feel even more unlikely that she was the same person.

“It’s fate that we’ve come together like this, so how about having a meal together?”

Yoo Seong-un nodded at Geo's suggestion.

“Oh, that’s good. Even if it’s the Milky Way Army, the Cha family won’t be shying away from us now, right?”

“Ha, but then I think it would be too much of a bother….”

“Anyway, Chae Sol-kun won’t be able to go outside for a while once he enters the dorm. Rather than two dark guys like Geo and I eating together, wouldn’t it be better if we could have a more crowded atmosphere?”

As expected, you are my older brother.

'I should emulate that expertise.'

I really admire his ability to naturally draw others in the way he wants, like flowing water, while not being rude. Isn't he the epitome of an adult who is good at socializing?

Of course, if Yoo Seong-un had known Geo's thoughts, he would have been so scared that he wanted to die.

“Is there anything that the Milky Way can’t eat?”

“I don’t really eat meat.”

“Oh, a vegetarian? Well, if you look around, there are a lot of vegans among the priests.”

“I don’t care as long as it’s not meat.”

“Then you’re not the type to be very picky? Then I think it would be better to go with seafood.”

Even as he said that, Yoo Seong-un looked at the child named ‘Eun-ha’ without letting on.

‘… I feel a little uneasy for some reason.’

Behind his indifferent expression, Yoo Seong-un hid a faint suspicion.

Yoo Seong-un, who often comes into contact with the children of the origin, was particularly sensitive to the energies of non-humans. If he felt that strange feeling now, he could definitely determine that it was a problem.

'It doesn't seem like he's the son of the original, so he's probably closer to a monster. He must be a dangerous guy.'

However, as a prospective priest, it is possible that Yoo Seong-un mistook the strangeness of the god.

'... There are cases like that. Especially if it's someone who receives a lot of love or attention from God, they can easily feel uncomfortable even though it's not their problem.'

There was something about the other person's young appearance that made him particularly cautious, so Yoo Seong-un decided to swallow his guard as it was. He might be suspicious of the poor child.

'If it comes down to it, it would be nice if I could at least take Geo with me. Since this is a work whose behavior patterns and rules haven't been figured out yet... I don't want to give it too much stimulation if possible.'

As long as it wasn't detrimental to the work I was in charge of, I couldn't care less whether the child in front of me was a monster or not. In this world, it's not uncommon for monsters to kill humans, and for humans to kill humans.

Here, humans were just props. The fact that only about 30 people died was not even reported on the news.

'I hope nothing happens though. If things get noisy, it'll just increase my overtime work.'

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking nonchalantly, as if he had not even thought about anything else for a moment.

"Is there anyone here who doesn't like seafood?"

"…I don't know because I haven't tried it…."

"Then you can try it this time."

Although Cha Ara showed a trembling reaction, Yoo Sung-woon, who had already expected it, simply brushed it off. It was not a comment made out of inferiority complex or jealousy, but rather a response that said, "I don't know what to do, so why are you asking that?"

“I know a good mackerel restaurant.”

“Huh? Is this the galchi restaurant?”

“Even if there are a lot of people, the room itself is large enough to accommodate them, so how about going there? I guarantee the taste.”

“That’s not the problem, but, uh, if it’s a galchi restaurant, isn’t it incredibly expensive….”

When Cha Ara became strangely anxious, her older brother Cha Eun-hyuk showed a similar reaction.

“Is it okay for us, third-class citizens, to go to a restaurant like that?”

“……?”

Geo, who had been listening to the story without thinking, was quietly embarrassed.

‘…What did I just hear?’

A third-class citizen can't eat croaker?

'Even though the caste system has been revived, how can it be this scary to discriminate so viciously based on what people eat?'

Geo, who was serious about eating, became very sad. He was very bitter about the change in his hometown.

'If something as big as a disaster had happened, I would have fled to Gangwon-do, so I would have been a third-class citizen. If I had lived on Earth paying rent, I wouldn't have been able to eat even a single piece of hairtail.'

Geo, accustomed to a democratic society, was inwardly appalled, but in this day and age, a galchi restaurant in the city was a very high-class restaurant. It was the perfect place for third-class citizens who were secretly discriminated against in the city to get glares from.

“I understand what you’re worried about….”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders, noticing her feelings.

“It’s all rooms anyway, and there won’t be many people around at this time. If you guys are worried, you can look for somewhere else, but since we’re spending money, let’s all eat something delicious.”

The meteor looked back at the galaxy.

“Galaxy, are you okay with the galchi?”

“I would appreciate it if you could buy me anything.”

“Thank you for saying so.”

Even Eunha, who is presumed to be the Carnation Eye, agreed, so Cha Ara and Cha Eunhyuk also agreed without realizing it.

“Is this okay…?”

“A galchi restaurant?”

The Cha family followed Yoo Seong-un with faces that looked as if they had been deceived for some reason.

Geo, who was trying to move with such friendly siblings, discovered a galaxy that seemed strangely distant.

“…….”

“…….”

It bothers me when you act like that.

“Galaxy Student.”

Aside from the fact that the child resembled his former disciple Isser, as a teacher himself, Geo did not like the way the child kept his distance as if it did not belong to him.

Isser, who had a dry face, fortunately came to life and answered Geo's call. He seemed a little flustered.

“Oh, yes.”

“Shall we go together?”

When Giovanni held out his hand, Eunha hesitated for a moment and then took his hand.

‘…It’s colder than I thought.’

Those little hands were quite cool for a child whose body would boil with heat just by breathing.

“Your temperature is low.”

“I think it’s because I have severe anemia.”

The child smiled skillfully. It was a gentle and loving smile, the kind that naturally comes to mind when you think of the word priest.

It might be a bit odd to use the word 'compassion' when referring to a child like this, but for some reason Geo found that smile familiar.

'I don't hang out with this student.'

Where have I seen this smile?

While Geo was quietly recalling his memories, the child pretended to be calm and spoke, perhaps anxious that there was no answer.

“Are you uncomfortable with cold hands?”

If it sounded like a question expecting something, would that be strange? Geo answered without thinking.

“It’s nice and cool.”

“It’s winter and you’re saying that.”

“Because I am a very passionate person.”

“…….”

Galaxy, who had been silent for a while for some reason, spoke.

“Mr. Geo’s hands are cold too?”

“Oh, right.”

"why…."

“I forgot about it for a moment.”

“What did you forget?”

“I forgot that I was cold.”

I've been having this dream called 'Giovanni's Theater of Life' over and over again lately, so to be honest I completely forgot about it.

Even my body temperature.

'When I was Giovanni, I was a priest of the sun, so I had a lot of heat in my body.'

Sergio and the portrait were not particularly high in body temperature.

'I guess that sounded strange.'

These days, the fairy tale rate has risen so rapidly that the words have become nonsense.

I looked back at the child, wondering what to say next… .

“…….”

“……?”

His small face looked stiff.

“Galaxy student?”

“I felt a little cold… so I thought about something else.”

“Then would you like to let go of my hand?”

"no."

The galaxy muttered.

“…If you keep holding it, it might get warmer.”

“That’s true too.”

“…….”

“I’m glad you don’t hate it.”

Although the atmosphere was cold for some reason, Geo felt that he was a kind and affectionate child by nature.

'These children need to be fed well and made fat.'

Sergio, who had inherited the strong beliefs of his grandmother, who was the village's leading figure, thought.

'Become a pig, yap… .'

Sergio was the type of person who felt more satisfied with life only when he fattened up skinny men, women, and children.

* * *

We had that conversation.

“Isser’s hands are cold.”

“Maybe… it’s because I’m a mermaid.”

“It would be natural for body temperatures to differ between different races.”

“Are cold hands uncomfortable?”

Humans despised the cold hands of mermaids, believing them to belong to underwater monsters.

Giovanni was also human, and Isser was a mermaid. Above all, Giovanni, who was always warm under the protection of the sun, might have felt repulsion towards Isser's cold, damp hands.

But Giovanni laughed as if it was nonsense. He dismissed Isser's worries as if nothing had happened.

“Rather, it’s nice because it’s cool.”

“…It’s winter now.”

“I’m a very hot-tempered person, so it doesn’t matter to me.”

“…….”

“Yes, that’s good.”

Even if you have a high fever, who likes to be cold in the winter?

No matter how much I think about it, it was a lie to be considerate of the young mermaid, but still… .

“…Teacher, your hands are warm.”

I tried to hold that hand filled with warmth for no reason.

“Is this high body temperature also due to the protection of the sun god?”

“That may be so. I was born on a summer day, when the sun was at its most blessed.”

“I don’t want your hands to get cold because of me.”

I held on to it greedily, but I always felt sorry because I felt like I was taking away its warmth.

"…I am…."

Sometimes Isser felt as if he was taking something that belonged to Giovanni.

If I, a mermaid, hadn't insisted on fate, Giovanni wouldn't have had to treat people so anxiously, and his great skills wouldn't have been confined to this small town.

“…….”

So, whenever I feel sorry for taking away even this little bit of warmth, Geo said.

“I will always have enough warmth to give to you, Isser.”

“…Isn’t that too harsh a thing to say to you, a creature of the sun?”

“I meant that you don’t have to feel sorry for just holding hands. Isser, you are often too timid. You should be more confident.”

“But I am a mermaid, sir. The more I learn, the more I doubt whether humans and mermaids can ever become one.”

“And yet, aren’t we still having a conversation in the same place as we are now?”

He was always warm.

“You can always hold my hand as long as I don’t become a corpse.”

“…Is it not allowed to hold the corpse’s hand?”

“The dead must be sent away, so that I too may go to the sun.”

“…….”

“That is nature and the order of things.”

The foolish mermaid didn't know it, but your warm words were actually wrong.

Even your hands, which were once filled with warmth, became so cold after being suffocated by the seawater. You probably couldn't return to the sun even after you died.

Otherwise it wouldn't have been that cold. Your corpse wouldn't have been that cold.

“…I feel sad already….”

Still.

That's what happened in the end.

* * *

‘…Why does this make me think of that person so much?’

Isser thought as he looked at the black cloak sitting next to him.

'On that subject, why is the sun's energy so strong?'

It became more certain when I looked closely.

This man was not simply a strong human being, but he possessed the divinity of the sun, a great quality that only a god could possess.

'You seem to have a high level of understanding of humans, so perhaps you inherited divinity while still human.'

If so, Isser will hate this black cloak.

“…….”

“No appetite?”

With that endearing name, Geo, and with the same warmth as my teacher… why the god of the sun?

'Is this the work of the sun god?'

During those long, miserable days, Isser learned a lot about humans, gods, and the world.

'Perhaps this was done by the sun god of Earth, who was wary of mermaids and the deep sea.'

He committed the atrocity of passing on the sun's energy to a human who looked exactly like that person.

‘… It’s still terrible.’

Gods and men, the creators of the sun have always made me feel sick.

“…It’s just, it’s my first time at a restaurant like this….”

"okay."

“…….”

“You can eat it slowly.”

The voice of the black cloak was calm and affectionate.

'It's really strange.'

At times, it seems as quiet as a still corpse, but when it looks back at me, it bestows its kindness with a soft rhythm.

'I wonder what your exact identity is.'

Even if they were gods or humans, their behavior was not befitting of that cruel race.

"…thank you."

Even as he greeted her, Isser felt a hypocritical anxiety. It was a tiny anxiety that faintly tickled the tips of his toes.

'Sister will soon call the sea.'

Even the hot sun loses its vitality when it sinks into the sea. Isser has already confirmed this several times, so this one will probably be no exception.

Could this hand ever get colder than it is now?

"……."

That seemed a bit sad.

It was a feeling I hadn't felt in a long time.

* * *

Upon returning to the temple, a blue-haired galaxy grabbed Geo.

"Mr. Geo."

"Yes, what's going on?"

"……."

The hesitant child asked.

“…Do you like the sea?”

“I like water.”

“Are you good at swimming?”

“Actually, I’m not very good at it.”

“…….”

The child, who had been silent as if recalling something or lost in thought, soon opened his mouth.

“I hope it isn’t too cold.”

“I’ve heard that this winter has been particularly cold.”

“…….”

“Thank you for your concern.”

Geo realized that the child was not worried about himself, but about himself. He seemed more worried that something he didn't like would happen than about the person himself.

He was a child who thought too deeply and thus had a twisted side.

'It's such a shame that life will become so tiring. Just because you're mature doesn't mean it's a good thing.'

For Geo, who could completely forget a month's worth of worries with just one sweet potato, this was an unimaginable ordeal.

“It looks like the main event will begin soon.”

“…Okay, I’ll be going now.”

The child added as if saying goodbye.

“It was fun.”

“If that’s the case, then that’s good.”

Geo realized that it was a lie.

‘… Indeed, Hell Republic of Korea… .’

The children were no pushovers either.

'It's a tough world for a sloppy guy like me who knows how to eat well to survive.'

Today too, it was a haunted portrait that made me nervous.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (63)

Episode 63

I tried hard.

Isser was strong-willed and selfless, and he hated the existence of humans overnight. He tried to approach humans on several occasions.

I wasn't trying to make excuses by saying I did enough. Yeah, I don't want to be complacent about that, but...

“…….”

It was really okay.

“Are you hurt anywhere?”

“Huh, huh…! It’s a mermaid…!!”

It was sad to be treated with contempt and disgust even after saving someone's life, but I could bear it.

“I can cure you.”

“Don’t lie, how can I believe what a mermaid says?”

"but…."

“If you touch me, I will kill you.”

“…….”

It was okay for my best efforts to be taken care of to be trampled upon so easily.

“Mermaid? Isn’t that a monster?”

“…….”

“They say it eats people. Wow, that’s horrible.”

It was bearable to be criticized for not the sins I committed, but for my very existence.

“…….”

“…….”

“Isser.”

My sister called me.

“Giovanni has been brought to trial.”

“…He is a renowned priest of the sun, so it shouldn’t be any problem. We are allies.”

“You will be severely punished for being a traitor. You heard that, a traitor to humanity.”

“But, teacher… you have saved many people’s lives during that time.”

“What a forced move. When did a human ever care about such things?”

“I don’t understand. Didn’t anyone stand up for him?”

“I’m being criticized for hiding the mermaid. It’s no different from what we saw that day.”

“Why is no one….”

“Humans are such interesting creatures. You never know how fickle they can be.”

"…why…."

“When they praised Geo’s character and abilities and called him the Son of God, now that his light has been divided into the sea, they are making a fuss and calling him a disgrace to mankind.”

He was the only person who affirmed the sea. He was a noble being who waited with me for the day when the sky and the sea would become one, saying that mermaids and humans are no different.

I know how much mercy my mentor showed, how much love and affection he poured out there. He was a person who truly cared for his patients and respected his friends.

“…That’s ridiculous….”

That all was denied.

'That too to the same humans.'

It was too much even for a patient mermaid. She couldn't stand it, she wasn't okay, she couldn't bear it.

We mourned and dealt with his natural death for years, so why did you kill him yourself? How could you act so horribly?

“…….”

Isn't that person's suffering sad?

“I’m going to try an experiment.”

“…….”

“Do you still like humans? Do you think they are capricious but lovable creatures?”

"…no…."

“So do you trust them? Do you trust them to return the favor, to have your back?”

“…I don’t think so.”

“If everything is settled, come back to the sea with me.”

My sister whispered sweetly.

“You know, we can’t influence people with just a look or a touch like Giovanni. The cold touch of a mermaid would only give a creepy feeling to a creature of the sun.”

That was right.

“And that is why suffering can be soothing.”

"pain…."

That was also true.

“My brother, Isser.”

“…Yes, Sister.”

“Would you like to go together?”

So Isser decided to try to endure it just one more time.

"no."

It wasn't for humans.

“Let’s find another way.”

It was for Giovanni, who loved everything in the world until the end.

“The war between humans and mermaids has already begun, so it’s too late to take the easy way out. It’s going to be a much more vulgar and cruel war than you can imagine.”

“I know.”

“If that’s your choice, then I must respect it. Do your best until you have no regrets, Isser.”

"…thank you."

It's a very sad truth, but Giovanni was not a man with a nature to dream of revenge for being betrayed by humans.

'So, tormenting humans and gaining notoriety for my benefactor would be a double betrayal.'

I didn't want to use that noble person as an excuse to vent my anger in a shallow way like other humans.

“…….”

Isser endured dozens and hundreds of times after that.

He saved an innocent child during the war. The mermaids did not understand their eccentric compatriots and simply ignored them, while the humans instead attacked Isser with ridiculous accusations.

"one."

A pregnant woman who fell into the sea was pulled to land. However, the pregnant woman struggled to avoid the mermaid's cold hands and drowned. Seeing this, the humans screamed that mermaids were now even eating pregnant women.

"two."

I pretended not to see the soldier who was squirming without any reason to attack him. I didn't want to see blood, but the soldier came to me a month later and attacked me and swore at me. In the end, Isser had to see blood.

"three…."

The humans he had barely become close to were either dying or considering betrayal, and whatever Isser did was considered unclean, and his notoriety grew. The humans poisoned the sea. A child died. He treated a wound. He was stabbed in the side… .

"……."

And then one day I counted.

"…one thousand six hundred and forty-three."

It's already been over a thousand.

"…Ah, uh…."

On the last day of counting numbers, Isser ate my teacher.

"…Heh, heh heh heh…."

My whole body was aching.

"Haha, aaaah…! Aak…!!"

I was hungry.

I was so hungry.

"AAAAHH ...

* * *

"……."

Even though it was evening, it was as bright as day.

'It's just like the white night.'

This is a phenomenon that is often seen in polar regions, where the sun does not set even at night.

'This is Seoul, the city of romance. Dopamine is overflowing...'

Geo watched the procession of priests at the temple, enjoying the pounding of his heart.

The second part of the event was much more extravagant than the first. While the first part emphasized the solemnity typical of religious people, the second part of the event really felt like an 'event'.

Lights twinkled here and there, and the priests' white robes fluttered. There was so much to see that it was dizzying.

“How is it, is it worth seeing?”

“I really like it.”

"thank god."

Yoo Seong-un smiled his characteristically light smile.

“I was wondering if you were okay since the event was so long.”

“I’m definitely a little tired, but….”

Now that I was back at the cabin, I was going to be stuck at home for a week.

Geo's stamina had been running low for a long time, as he had started to feel a little tired from the moment he left the house.

“Still, it’s an event worth seeing.”

“Is it perhaps the influence of the god you are supporting?”

The question was whether I liked the ceremonies of the Solar Church, which worships the sun god.

“That could be the case.”

It wasn't as comfortable as my own house, but it was comfortable at my friend's house.

“…….”

“Geo?”

“…I thought about my old friends for a moment.”

These guys, it's been 31 years, are they still alive?

'I wonder how the kids are doing.'

It was something I thought about occasionally, but being out for so long made me think of people I knew from 31 years ago.

'The elders in the mountain villages of Gangwon Province are already old, so they don't have any expectations.'

Still, I might have been able to get a general idea of what the students I was teaching were up to.

“…….”

But what if I get caught and taken to the lab…?

'Usually in movies, a moment of carelessness due to memories sends a person's life off a cliff. Is there any guarantee that I won't end up like that?'

The evolution from a human to a possessed portrait was clearly a great feat, even in this hellish Republic of Korea, judging by the occasional reactions of the meteor clouds.

Geo decided again to just shut up and get himself into a coma.

'If it's meant to be, we'll meet even if it's not our intention.'

With thoughts full of such dreams and hopes.

“Ah… I guess it’s almost finished.”

“It was quite long.”

“This kind of initiation ceremony is also an event that shows the power of the religious order.”

Especially, if it was the Taeyang Church, which boasts a fairly large religious presence in Seoul, it would have had to display this level of extravagance.

'There was also an unpleasant missing person case recently.'

Thinking so, Yoo Seong-un glanced back at Geo.

‘… No matter how much I think about it, it seems like this incident is related to this guy… .’

Geo really seemed uninspired.

'Geo really doesn't know anything, or he knows but doesn't feel much emotion. Either way, it's more confusing because Geo has a unique personality.'

It was while I was watching the event coming to an end.

“…….”

A momentary intuition.

'…what?'

It's cool.

'It's not a glacier.'

As a gardener, I know the essence of energy.

I smelled the pressure of nature that was crushing the human body, and the pungent scent of blood that came out of it.

'Then this is….'

A cold, damp, dark, oppressive feeling.

'ocean?'

Yoo Seong-un soon realized that it was the energy of the sea.

Isn't this a feeling that can never be felt naturally? Yoo Seong-un instinctively looked for the culprit.

"ah…."

When his eyes met with the blue-haired 'Eunha', Yoo Seong-un felt a sense of defeat.

"this."

Gulp—…!!!

“Did I let my guard down too much?”

A fresh, cool breeze came rushing in.

The aura was not like a billowing fog. It had a ferocity that seemed to want to take life, and a ferocity that aroused fear in humans with its sharp claws.

He grasped the situation straight away.

“It’s a virtual dungeon.”

After Yoo Seong-un's quick judgment, the entire temple was dyed blue.

“■■■■■—…!!!!!”

There was a loud noise, as if the marble pillars were being scraped by giant fingernails, so loud it hurt my ears.

The whole world was thrown into chaos as if glass shards were exploding, scratching at eardrums, and waves covered in pure white foam greedily devouring people.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un, who always had an indifferent expression, distorted his face.

‘… I can’t predict the damage, but at least one thing is certain.’

I'm working overtime again today.

“Phew….”

Crunch-!!

“I’m already tired.”

The meteor cloud that created the ice spear embedded it in the ground.

'You must not be pushed too far.'

As an experienced hunter, Yoo Seong-un made his decision and supported his body with the spear he had planted on the ground.

The strong cold and waves made Yoo Seong-un look back at the portrait.

“Geo, be careful…!”

And there it is.

“…….”

“…….”

There was a huge 'eye'.

Yoo Seong-un felt a terrible silence, as if time had stopped.

What is that?

Is it snow?

“…….”

It resembled nature, but it was impossible to tell whether it was the sun or the sea.

I saw a vision of fragments of light, scattered and sparkling, glittering chaotically as if they were being born, illuminating deep waves of unknown depth. Yoo Seong-un couldn't take his eyes off the portrait swept away by the waves for even a moment.

There, in it, was a sea. It was a pure white sea distorted by light. The sea spoke.

『Where the sun doesn't reach…』

The voice was natural.

"I've come to the deep sea."

Why did it sound like God's judgment?

I didn't realize it even though I was looking at it. I thought I heard the sound of sunlight shining down. I heard the sound of warmth. The waves mixed with it and soon hid their teeth and shrank.

It was only after this that Yoo Seong-un came to his senses enough to notice anything.

“…….”

The sound was heard again, and time passed, breaking the silence.

The loud noise that had been hurting my ears and the tinnitus that was like the stubbornness of the dead disappeared, and the waves that had been as ferocious as monsters in the abyss died and became calm again… .

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

The landscape of the world has changed.

"ah…."

A bloody, eerie chill. Yoo Seong-un looked around.

People are visible.

“…Hey, where is this…?”

“Dungeon? What the hell, is this a dungeon?”

“Hey, is there a hunter?!”

This place, where people who had just come to their senses were making a lot of noise, was clearly a dungeon.

“…….”

The meteor cloud captured the dark blue space like a shadow in my eyes.

The pupil was so wide that the ceiling was not visible, and water scales of unknown origin were eerily reflected in it. Yoo Seong-un's gaze soon landed on the blue water pillars erected here and there in the pupil.

A sigh came out on its own.

“…Oh my….”

There were a bunch of chimeras that looked like underwater creatures.

“This is a problem.”

It felt ominous from the moment I entered, and the dungeon seemed to be quite difficult.

'There are an unusually large number of people dragged in for a typical virtual dungeon.'

Yoo Seong-un barely managed to keep his wits about him as he returned home and calmly assessed his situation.

The so-called 'virtual dungeon' forcibly drags people who meet certain conditions to another dimension to play a game. The number of participants and the bizarre nature of the game can be used to gauge the dungeon owner's capabilities.

'And if you just count the number of ordinary people gathered in this dungeon, it's close to 20 people... There may be people who were dragged in from other places as well, so it's excessive in many ways. You can see how much the owner of this dungeon has been gritting his teeth in preparation.'

And Yoo Seong-un, as an A-class hunter belonging to one of the top three guilds in South Korea, Collectors, was responsible for protecting these people and completing the strategy.

“…….”

With this ragtag bunch of citizens.

* * *

'Is he really a class A hunter?'

Eunha and Isser were secretly impressed by Yoo Seong-un's cool-headed attitude as he tried to grasp and organize the situation in an instant.

According to Earth's standards, it is said that hunters of class B and above gradually begin to deviate from the standards of ordinary humans in their way of thinking. It goes without saying that this goes even further for class A, which is a higher rank.

'I heard he's not a very famous public figure.'

It was indeed something that could not be ignored.

'but….'

What can a single hunter do in this situation?

'With all this luggage, at best I'll choose to die with the citizens or run away to save my life. Such foolish beings are humans.'

In the shadows of the pupils, far from the commotion, Isser watched the humans running wild in fear.

“S-save me! I don’t want to die here…!!”

“Where is this place? Where is this place? Over there, this is where….”

“Gyaaaah…!! There’s, there’s a monster! There’s a monster!!”

My ears are tired.

‘… You don’t know how to do anything but scream? You’re truly an idiot.’

The gurgling noise brought back a familiar unpleasantness that I felt dozens of times a day. It was a faded hatred toward humans.

“…….”

In this situation, Isser's role was only to open the door.

‘… Even if my predecessor hadn’t suddenly disappeared, I wouldn’t have had to step forward.’

Opening the deep sea gate in the Temple of the Sun, of all places, required quite a bit of skill.

'Because of that, we were already in a situation where we had recruited and trained one of the humans.'

Things got complicated when he was killed by a mysterious strong man.

The execution date was just around the corner. At that moment, the only person who could open the door was Isser… .

'There's nothing I like.'

Even though I mingled with humans for a short while, neither my body nor my mind were in good shape.

'This is a race that I shouldn't interact with for long. I feel like their incompetence is being passed on to me.'

I wanted to finish this work as soon as possible and then fall into the still sea.

“Hunter, you’re a hunter! How are you going to take responsibility for this!!”

“What… what does this have to do with me, stop talking nonsense like responsibility!!”

“The priests? What the hell, where the hell are all the priests!!”

“Yes, the prospective priests too… They’re priests, right? Right? Priests?”

“Someone help me, what the hell is going on!!”

How could I set my mind on something so frivolously raving?

“…….”

This place was located in the latter half of the path that the humans of Earth call 'the dungeon'.

‘… It’s too far to go back to the entrance, and the situation is not good for finding the exit, so everyone will probably die here. It will happen even if I don’t do anything about it.’

As I was thinking about finishing up the work like that, a man wearing a black cloak suddenly came to mind.

There was a sun god named Geo.

“…Phew….”

In a situation where all the humans were scattered to random locations, I felt stupid for unconsciously chasing the man's location.

Why would you do something so stupid if you're just going to kill them all anyway?

'Okay, let's get this over with quickly.'

If any individual remains intact, it will be given the honor of being used as my older sister's test subject.

Perhaps it wouldn't be a bad idea to ask for ownership of one of them.

"…then."

I took a step forward from the shadows.

It was when I was holding the staff in my hand and trying to do my job as a 'monster'.

“…….”

ah.

‘… Any sign?’

Isser looked back.

“…….”

Before I knew it, the black cloak was standing right behind me.

“……!”

That's ridiculous.

'I checked and there's no such thing here?'

Even if the opponent was something divine, this situation was unexpected for a mermaid who could even kill a god.

'Was I too careless?'

Isser stepped back. Perhaps because he was in the body of a child, he felt a strange sense of intimidation from the black cloak.

This large body moved, so it was right for someone among the humans to react, but no one turned their gaze towards Blackcloak and Isser.

'Why?'

Isser bared his sharp teeth at the indescribable discomfort. They were the fangs that had also eaten away at his mentor's body.

“What the heck are you…!”

“Isser.”

“…….”

…what?

“…….”

“Ah, Isser….”

My name was called.

“…….”

It was a call as soft as a corpse.

Isser stopped.

‘…called my name.’

He froze like a fish in icy water and couldn't move.

As a man as tall as a thick wall bent down and stroked the child's cheek, it was as if the small body was swallowed up by a shadow in an instant.

A pitch-black cloak descended like a curtain, completely enveloping Isser like a waterfall.

'how….'

That's why the young mermaid could see the face of the one looking down at her.

“Wasn’t it cold?”

“…….”

“Were you in a lot of pain?”

“…….”

“You must have been lonely and scared….”

A person like sunlight shining across the sea.

“…….”

That warm platinum hair and eyes like brilliant waves.

Those distant blue eyes.

"Sorry."

“…….”

"I'm sorry."

I'm crying.

"…ah…."

Giovanni.

My benefactor, who had suffered the most miserable death in the world, was now a corpse, crying in front of me.

* * *

Geo lost consciousness.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (64)

Episode 64

“Sister.”

“Yes, my foolish brother.”

“Yes, my foolish brother is here. How is your research going?”

“Not bad.”

My sister raised her head as she wrote something gracefully with a quill made of carved emerald, then put it down.

Her dark, wavy hair, like the deep sea, flowed like waves. She smiled like the ferocious deep sea.

“Of all the dimensions I know, the human race is the most diverse. The technology that utilizes the brain varies greatly from individual to individual, and the range is wide, from appearance to emotions.”

“You really like humans, Sister.”

“What are the limits of humanity? I thought this was the end, but then a crazy entity emerged from another dimension that surpassed those limits… I can’t stop researching.”

“Then, in the end, isn’t there no limit to the human race?”

“There are humans who have become gods in some dimension. However, we cannot say for sure that gods are the final destination for humans. So, isn’t it important to collect samples in one way or another?”

“That would certainly be the case.”

Isser's sister wanted to know everything about humanity. She even created the creatures of the sun herself with her cold mermaid hands.

Of course, it was more often than not that she would take on a human form. It was also because she hated humans that she was unable to form a complete form.

“But isn’t it really strange?”

“…….”

“There is one person who cannot be recreated….”

Isser knew.

His sister was a genius who could make the impossible possible, but there was only one person, Giovanni, whom she could neither revive nor clone.

In Isser's opinion, it seemed that she herself was rejecting it.

“…….”

The created Giovanni could no longer be called their benefactor.

“…The name of this dimension seems to be Earth. To be exact, it seems to be the name of a planet.”

Isser smiled calmly as always.

It was a loving smile, very much like the human named Giovanni, that sometimes caused both the siblings to feel both longing and discomfort.

“Is there a role for me this time?”

“If things go well, there probably won’t be any. The role of opening the door will be reserved for Earth’s seed, so you don’t have to worry too much.”

“I wasn’t worried.”

He smiled faintly.

“If I did, I would have worried about my sister.”

“Me too.”

Over the dark blue dress, my sister, wearing a strange doctor's gown, glared.

“Where do you think humanity ends?”

“How could I know something that even you don’t know?”

“Sometimes I get out of breath. It’s because I’ve been running too much.”

“Even if you say that, you will never rest, right?”

“I can’t help but be curious, but still….”

Her red lips were swollen.

“Someday I will be able to stop.”

From a very young age, she wanted to see the limits of humanity.

Now it seemed like there was a purpose to it.

“…….”

“Isn’t that so?”

If you know the limits of humanity.

Within it, there will definitely be Giovanni, who was a more noble person than anyone else… .

"…yes."

We were missing him in silence.

“I think so too.”

I prayed to the world to see my deceased mentor, but when I finally saw him again, it would not be as if he were Giovanni.

That's why the siblings never brought up his name, because they knew that targeting him would be a terrible contradiction.

“…….”

“…….”

Still, I was greedy.

“…….”

“Good morning.”

Like when the sun was trapped in the deep sea.

* * *

“…….”

“Hey, wait a minute….”

“Don't come any closer.”

“I’m sorry, but Geo is part of my party.”

“I told you not to come.”

“We can’t communicate.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly. He didn't know how to react to this difficult situation.

'She's not like a mother bird protecting her young.'

Even though their sizes may seem completely different, Eunha, who has the body of an elementary school student, was somehow hugging the fallen Geo tightly.

'No matter how hard you try with that small body, there's no way it'll all be covered.'

It was a truly desperate sight.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un also quickly finished assessing the situation.

'… Judging by that guy's overreaction, it might be related to one of Geo's personalities.'

It was already expected that his personality would exist in numerous dimensions as a side story to the central one called 'Portrait of Geo'.

Considering that, this guy who was showing his teeth while wrapping Geo in such a ridiculous way also seemed to be a humanoid monster from another dimension.

'Judging by the shape of the teeth, it is definitely not human. If that is the case, then it means that Geo's personality and this monster in front of me are acquainted... .'

I don't know whether to call this luck or misfortune.

'It's lucky that he doesn't attack at all even though he looks like the master of this dungeon.'

Yoo Seong-un looked at Eun-ha, who was hugging the fallen Geo with a trembling gaze.

“I don’t think you have any intention of explaining the situation. What’s your name?”

“I’m sorry, but I find this unpleasant. Please stop talking to such insignificant people.”

“Yes, this is the correct reaction for a monster. Thanks to this, I feel like I’m coming back to reality.”

Monsters are basically monsters that hate humans, so Geo, who always treated humans in a gentlemanly manner, was rather strange.

'Just looking at the way Eunha is responding to my words, it seems like she's very moderate.'

In this bewildering situation where you've been suddenly caught in a virtual dungeon, isn't there a way out?

Yoo Seong-un had hope.

“Anyway, the name Eunha is probably a pseudonym. What should I call you?”

“It’s not a pseudonym.”

“Then that’s your real name?”

“I created it by borrowing the form of the Earth and taking the meaning of my name….”

“That’s a pseudonym.”

The contradictory response of consistently giving sincere answers despite revealing this was very interesting.

'It doesn't seem like he's particularly bad at hating humans. If that's the case, then maybe he's answering because of Geo.'

Yoo Seong-un, who was once the research team leader of the association, looked at the other person without making him uncomfortable. Feeling this kind of interest in a situation where the lives of others, including his own, were at risk was a chronic habit of Yoo Seong-un, a gardener.

‘I don’t know what kind of relationship Geo and this monster had…’

This guy also had eyes, so he would know that Yoo Seong-un and Geo were acting together on Earth.

'They looked friendly enough that even a passerby who didn't know anything wouldn't find it strange.'

I think you have to be patient with that in mind.

'In that case, it means that this monster is looking into Geo's feelings.'

In short, it meant that Geo was of a higher rank than this monster.

“…Ah, I’m tired.”

I desperately wanted to leave work.

'As time passes, people are gradually calming down, but the atmosphere is still uneasy as if they know they have been dragged into the dungeon. Many of the people I saw at the event are nowhere to be seen… .'

Yoo Seong-un looked around and asked.

“Did you bring everyone who was at the event?”

There's no way I can pretend not to know now.

'On the subject of humans, he also said some pretty monster-like things.'

As if he was planning to reveal his identity right after the incident, Eunha was openly showing off that he was the owner of this place.

'It seems like other people are so confused by being suddenly dragged in that they don't even think about checking this side.'

At least, it was impossible to fool the eyes of Yoo Seong-un, a Class A Hunter.

The owner of this virtual dungeon and the main culprit who brought the people at the event here was the blue-haired kid in front of me.

“The condition was everyone within the Temple of the Sun?”

“…….”

“…Ugh….”

Are monsters really monsters?

'Life is so hard.'

It was such a murderous intent that I wondered how he could have acted like such a sweet kid on Earth.

Her eyes, as white as pearls, were bloodshot to the point of appearing red, and just meeting her gaze was enough to tire Yoo Seong-un mentally.

He felt awkward.

‘I don’t want to provoke the temper of a man who is the master of such a terrifying dungeon…’

Unfortunately, the only hunters in this group were Yoo Seong-un, who was an A-class, a man, who was a C-class, and a woman who was just below C-class. If Yoo Seong-un, who was an all-rounder, were to somehow cover for it, there was nothing he couldn't do... .

'No, I can't.'

This is all going to end in death.

'It might be possible to run away alone, but I can't do that leaving Geo behind.'

It was not natural to worry about Geo's safety. Yoo Seong-un was not the subject of concern for the safety of this unconscious portrait.

He just didn't want to see the cries of the Bisabul who lost one of his works, he didn't want to lose Geo, the special material related to the source, and lastly, he was worried that 'Geo's Portrait' might cause some ridiculous disaster while it was left unattended by Yoo Seong-un.

'I can't just leave the existence of an unfathomable, bizarre source in this crazy dungeon and run away. It's like planting a bomb.'

If there was one thing that was fortunate, it was that the monster's murderous intent was noticeably weakened after seeing Geo's face.

‘It seems like the pressure unique to dungeons has eased a little…’

I had to find a way out of this dungeon, but I couldn't upset the master who had finally found peace.

“…….”

Since it was difficult to expect cooperation from the monster, Yoo Seong-un spoke more indirectly, using Geo as a weapon.

“…I think you know Geo. Did you know that Geo hates evil and rude people?”

“…….”

“I don’t know how you and Geo know each other, but that’s how Geo is now. If Geo had that kind of personality in the past, then maybe you weren’t that evil or rude back then.”

“But now he is evil and rude.”

The monster continued speaking with an expressionless face that gave everyone who saw it the creeps.

“I don’t think he would approve of me as I am now. I’m not arrogant like you guys.”

“Oh, right. Geo was like that back then too, but now that it’s come to this, don’t you think you should try being a little kinder to humans?”

“…….”

The monster answered silently, then raised its head and faced the meteor cloud.

He saw somewhere the monster's eyes, like pearls. The eyes had vertically slit pupils, as if they were predators, and they were also jagged like diamonds struck by sunlight.

'Oh, no.'

Should I call it a hunter's intuition?

Yoo Seong-un instinctively knew what that meant.

'I'm thinking about whether to kill him.'

It was clear that he was thinking of killing everyone before Geo woke up, and then dealing with the situation after the accident happened.

'That's strange.'

It was like that just a moment ago, but now those pearl-colored eyes were sparkling even more clearly. They resembled the eyes of a beast that gleamed in the evening.

Perhaps the monster had a habit of having its eyes glow like water scales when it was angry or had murderous intentions.

‘… Then this side too.’

I can't just sit there and die.

'No matter how many times I die, I'm only here to collect Geo.'

It was when Yoo Seong-un gathered cold air in his hands, foreseeing how many people would die here in the future.

“…Ugh….”

“! Geo.”

"! teacher!"

teacher?

“Ah, that….”

Eunha looked flustered even after I brought it up. Her expression was like she realized belatedly that she was not in a position to call Geo ‘teacher’ in any way.

'What on earth is this sloppiness?'

Yoo Seong-un felt like his trust, which had never been there before, was hit rock bottom as he saw a face that looked completely different from the one just before, which had been so venomous but now looked sincere.

“G, Geo-ssi.”

“…….”

“Are you okay? You just lost consciousness….”

Is this monster acting coy?

'… Humanoid monsters are inherently coy towards humans, but that is part of a strategy to catch and kill their prey by making them let their guard down… .'

As he looked at the face of the child who seemed like a devout priest, Yoo Seong-un felt his already absent energy drain away. Suddenly, the murderous intent that had been softening was suddenly relieved.

Geo, who seemed to have a headache, sat up and looked around.

“…….”

“…….”

“……?”

Although it was hard to see because of the hood, the current Geo was definitely 'Sergio' judging by the black hair that was peeking out. He seemed to be wondering where he was and why he had fallen.

Galaxy must have noticed that too, because he asked Geo with a childish face.

“Mr. Geo, this is a dungeon. Do you remember what happened before you collapsed?”

“…before I fall….”

Surprisingly, Geo nodded.

“I spoke to the student, Galaxy.”

"ah…."

Eunha seemed a little disappointed, but also a little relieved.

Yoo Seong-un also roughly understood the situation.

‘… I think your personality is in disarray.’

Geo remembered the fact that he had spoken to Eunha, but he called her 'student'.

This was Sergio's way, so it seemed to mean that he had memories, but his personality was not that of the 'Geo' that the galaxy knew.

“…….”

Geo sat there for a long time with his head held high. Yoo Seong-un asked with concern, as it was an extremely exceptional situation for a portrait to show the essence of the being.

“…Do you have a headache?”

"…yes."

Geo answered in a rare, cloudy tone.

“I feel dizzy both physically and mentally.”

At those words, Yoo Seong-un recalled the situation when he had just been led to the dungeon.

‘… At that moment, Geo had the high status seen in the portrait.’

Could it be that the restrictions that had been in place during the process of moving from dimension to dimension were released?

'Is that restricted again now?'

It was difficult to accurately interpret Geo's condition since they still had not yet figured out his true identity, but there was one thing that was clear to Yoo Seong-un.

“…….”

“…….”

The gazes of the meteor and the galaxy crossed.

‘… This brat, it seems like the dungeon’s environment is affecting Geo’s personality… .’

To be honest, it wasn't a very pleasant story for Yoo Seong-un.

'I don't know what kind of relationship Geo and Galaxy had in the past.'

With such a vicious dungeon full of humanoid monsters, how could one welcome a change in Geo's personality, who was already a disaster in itself?

'If you're not careful, people might break Geo's rules that have become sensitive and get attacked, or Geo, who favors his old connections, might side with the monsters in the galaxy. Either way, it'll be a very disadvantageous situation for humans.'

It was clear that the galaxy had similar thoughts.

“…….”

“What the heck?”

Eunha used her small body to burrow into Geo's arms. It was clear that she knew Geo was weak to young creatures and wanted to take advantage of that.

“Galaxy, aren’t you falling? I didn’t look at you like that because I thought you were a polite guy, but this is really no joke.”

“I don’t really understand what you are saying.”

“I’ve never been this annoyed when I fought guys like you.”

“How immature of you.”

“I’m going crazy.”

Anyway, one thing was certain.

'The longer he stays here, the closer he keeps this brat around... Geo's personality changes.'

I have a goal.

I had to escape quickly with the time bomb called Geo.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (65)

Episode 65

Isser prided himself on not being stupid.

'… Of course, compared to you, I am nothing more than a tiny microorganism, but I can't be stupid, having learned so much from such great geniuses. My reasoning is strong enough, and that is something to be proud of.'

Especially since he spent a long time crossing dimensions with his cold-blooded sister, her coolness and dryness were transferred to Isser as well. It means that he has become a person who can prioritize reason over emotion.

So this situation has been going on for a very long time.

“…I’m sorry, I was out of my mind for a moment.”

“No, I think Mr. Geo was also flustered by the sudden situation.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

"you're welcome."

Inside Isser, reason and emotion were fighting fiercely.

Even in this brief moment of answering, he repeated similar concerns dozens of times.

'... I feel the energy of the sun god very strongly from this man. If so, then isn't it the sun god who knows about Nana and her sister's existence, who created our only weakness in human form and passed on the sun's divinity? It's ridiculous to meet my dead mentor so suddenly. It's too coincidental.'

but,

'This face, this gesture, this mannerism, this voice, and all the senses that are felt point to the dead teacher. And how did the sun god achieve the resurrection of the teacher that even the older sister who locked the sun god in the sea could not do? This person before my eyes is the teacher who was reincarnated through a natural process.'

Both of them sounded plausible, which made it even more confusing.

'If there's one thing that's certain, it's that no one is closer to Giovanni than this man.'

Even if the being before my eyes is an incarnation of the sun god who imitates my benefactor, or even if it is a reincarnation of my benefactor who has not yet established his own personality.

It was clear that this was something Isser could not afford to miss.

“I was momentarily dazed when the waves came crashing in. I apologize for showing you an ugly appearance due to the confusion.”

“…….”

“My head still hurts, but can you tell me exactly where this place is?”

"that…."

He seemed to know that this was a dungeon, but he didn't seem to know what exactly it represented.

'Should I say that it's fortunate?'

Even though he felt once again that his gift was not perfect, Isser was finally relieved.

“…….”

It was fortunate for both Isser and Giovanni that he had no recollection of the horrors he had endured here.

‘… The teacher’s personality is definitely not perfect.’

But the longer he stayed here, the more certain Geo's memories might become.

When I think about the reaction I saw as soon as I arrived at the Deep Sea Research Institute, there was no reaction at the Temple of the Sun… .

“As Galaxy-kun said earlier, this is a virtual dungeon, Geo.”

“…….”

“…I don’t know for sure since it hasn’t been that long since I figured out the situation, but I think it’s a dungeon related to the sea.”

Yoo Seong-un glanced at Isser and continued speaking.

“I don’t know how many people from the Temple of the Sun were dragged in, but the number of people that can be confirmed right now is quite large, and they are scattered all over the place, making it difficult to grasp the exact situation.”

“Where are the prospective priests?”

“First of all, it’s not visible in this pupil. Since it exploded during the final event of the initiation ceremony, it seems like it was a virtual dungeon with a high degree of intentionality, so there’s no way the prospective priests weren’t dragged here.”

“Then we need to gather people first. Don’t we?”

“It’s easier said than done….”

I don't know how it would look to Geo, but it wasn't easy to unite people who were so scared and scattered as they were now.

The only silver lining is that the dungeon owner's temper has softened, so the threat has diminished somewhat.

'The chimeras that looked like they would jump out and attack people at any moment are now lying down quietly, and if we do it well, we should be able to get out of the dungeon with minimal casualties... but is that possible?'

That was when.

"-honey."

“Huh?”

Something small and yellow popped out from Geo's hood.

“Gurrrr!”

Honey, a young bird from the new country who goes to bed early and wakes up early.

Honey flew into the middle of the shadow that had a cold light and soon began to shine brightly.

"…oh."

Almost… small, like the sun.

“Are you going crazy??”

Yoo Seong-un was dumbfounded.

'You were with Honey again this time? Why do I feel the energy of the sun god from a monster as small as Honey? Why? Is this right?'

Whether he was bewildered or not, the people who had been wandering around in fear began to calm down one by one in the warm light.

At least the lights came on in the dark and eerie lab.

“Wait a minute, what is this light…?”

“Is that a bird?”

“Hey, let’s all gather over there for now.”

People who were scattered in the vast pupils that could be described as vast instinctively gathered under Honey, following the comforting light. Some were already sobbing with relieved faces.

Seeing that sight, Geo looked back at Yoo Seong-un.

“Okay.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un seemed to hear a voice saying, 'How is it? It's easy, right?'

“…Well done….”

“Yes, I did well.”

“Wow, you’re talented.”

And then, just make sure you don't get caught for being a portrait.

'If your identity is revealed in this already chaotic situation, I don't think I'll be able to handle it.'

It was the 'Portrait of Geo' whose identity could not be completely figured out even by Bisabal, who had become an S-class with just one emotion skill. He could have been a human, a monster, a child of the Origin, or even a god.

'If that liquidity is discovered by the people of today, hostility may suddenly gather here.'

There were people who were excitedly shouting that even a C-class hunter with no special powers should take responsibility for this situation. If they saw something inhuman, or even something divine, there was no way to know how much chaos they would cause.

"……."

Yoo Seong-un, who was carefully looking at the unexpectedly gentle light, soon called out to Geo.

"Geo."

"Yes, I am listening."

"I didn't tell you in advance, but you were supposed to receive an A-class hunter license soon."

"Am I a hunter?"

"Isn't that place better for activities on Earth? I think the guild leader wanted to provide convenience."

therefore.

"Since you were going to receive a Hunter's ID anyway, when introducing yourself to people, explain that you are 'Sergio', an unofficial A-rank Hunter affiliated with the Collectors' Guild."

"okay."

“Your job is a trainer. You also take Honey with you, so it’ll be easier for you to get along with other people.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

“With something like this.”

So, I had a small wish that you would please behave like a human being.

'I am aware that my expectations are excessive.'

The existence of the source changes in its danger level depending on the size of the 'story', so Yoo Seong-un wanted to squeeze Geo into the category of humans if possible. He himself is imitating humans.

But recently, Yoo Seong-un felt that Geo had no intention of imitating a human. Regardless of his true feelings, Geo could never act like a complete human.

'So I was thinking of separating Geo as a human and Geo as a mystery.'

This was part of that work.

'… Geo's characteristic heavy atmosphere is still there, but he has been lowered to the level of an A-class hunter, so unless you are quite sensitive, you won't be able to confirm Geo's sense of discomfort.'

Of course, it's just a level of not being sure, but anyone can feel a strange sense of unease, but that 'not being sure' part is important. Because at that level, you can say that it's part of your power or skill.

“…….”

“…….”

The gazes of the meteor and the galaxy met.

“…Anyway, now that it’s come to this, are you going to keep acting coy?”

“I don’t know what you are talking about.”

“Things are turning out pretty funny. It’s completely different from what I thought….”

As he watched Geo approaching the crowd of people who were gathered together in a noisy manner, Yoo Seong-un asked in a voice that the crowd couldn't hear.

“I don’t think you have any intention of going out and killing people, is that right?”

“I just didn’t want to get blood on my hands. That’s all.”

“That’s really appreciated. I know what you’re talking about.”

“…….”

“You don’t want to look like a bad kid to Geo, right?”

Yoo Seong-un whistled.

“That’s quite enough.”

The monsters' behavior changed depending on the emotional state of the galaxy, and the atmosphere inside the dungeon was controlled. This was an integrated dungeon that came to life according to the owner's state of mind.

It was obvious that the difficulty of this dungeon would be lowered to match Galaxy's psychology of not wanting to be a 'bad kid' to Geo.

“Don’t worry, I will keep your identity a secret as long as you cooperate.”

“Humans have a terrible habit of rushing orders. You’d better not act so cocky, Meteor Hunter.”

“Be scared.”

Honestly, I was really scared.

“Wouldn’t it be nice if we could live easily?”

I didn't want to die in a place like this.

'If I die, there will be problems with maintaining the garden.'

Among the 'gardens' that could be called the bloodline of the origin, it was a meteor cloud that was roughly in charge of the position of the aorta. Even if they found a successor, they would be busy training him for a while, so they did not have the luxury of dying right away.

“…….”

Isser glanced at the meteor cloud and turned his stagnant pearl-colored gaze to the man in the black cloak.

Soon, a dream appeared in those eyes.

'…really….'

It's the same.

'There's no difference.'

Although the color may be different, the warm and loving appearance of comforting and soothing the sun's creatures was clearly Giovanni's.

No matter how suspicious it was, it couldn't be denied.

“It’s such a sacred sight that I feel sorry to see it for free. Doesn’t he look like a saint?”

“…I have no response to your worthless words, but I was actually called a saint.”

And yet, he had to die so cruelly. In a cold tank, his windpipe was torn off by the teeth of his student.

‘… Humans are truly disgusting beings.’

At the sight of Geo holding the lowly monkeys and showing mercy, Isser felt the smile that was always on his lips faintly distort.

It is still unknown whether the author is truly his benefactor, but the sight of such a being showing mercy to humans made Isser feel uneasy.

'Why am I seeing this?'

Suspicion of sudden good fortune. Longing and pain for recurring memories and nightmares. Anxiety to separate the black cloak from those filthy, verminous beings. Desperation.

The mermaid muttered to herself as she searched for a way to define this feeling.

'I wish they were all dead.'

It was at that moment that I thought that.

“…….”

“Galaxy Student.”

"…yes."

“Don’t be alone. Come here.”

The large hand, now cold, reached out towards Isser.

“You look lonely.”

“…….”

I couldn't bring myself to answer when he said that I seemed lonely.

The hand that Geo held silently was, as expected, cold. Compared to the warm hand of the teacher in those long-faded memories, it was no different from a corpse in temperature.

But they were still affectionate.

“…It’s cold and dark, and scary. This place is very barren.”

“Student Eunha, you are honest. Then I will stay with you.”

“Would you please do that?”

That's a lie.

“It gives me peace of mind.”

Even if you are children of the deep, I will be by your side. You told me that before.

‘… Saying something like that now only makes me feel sick. Now that everything has become cold… .’

Nothing can be undone.

I wanted to complain without knowing it, but the strong grip of the large hand that grabbed my hand gradually calmed my turbulent feelings.

As if it were a forgotten habit, I waited, and soon a voice came, calm and warm like the spring breeze on a quiet evening.

“Are you okay?”

“…….”

Giovanni was not the right person to be the recipient of the resentment of someone as cold as me.

“…I don’t think it’s okay.”

“…Where does it hurt?”

“I do that because I’m scared.”

I wanted to kill all the insect-like humans here. I still do. But I couldn't seem to reveal my feelings.

Because, whether this person who held my hand was a copy of my mentor or his reincarnation, it was clear that I had to hold on to him in the end.

‘… What should I do?’

A deep sense of murder and anxiety came to me at the same time.

'This person at least must be saved.'

So I have to have it… .

* * *

Meanwhile, Geo.

'The world has really advanced a lot.'

I had no thoughts.

“This is my first time experiencing a virtual dungeon, and it’s really exciting.”

“Haha, Mr. Geo, you’re really bold in this situation.”

“Isn’t it amazing?”

“Usually I’m more scared than curious.”

“I see. I understand.”

Geo was very interested because he opened and closed his eyes and felt like he had flown into a haunted house.

'Can something like this also be considered part of an adventure?'

It was a very welcome situation for Geo, who had been alone a lot recently, to be able to enjoy an adventure in a cozy atmosphere among people bustling about.

‘Even though I’m a little tired… .’

As soon as the huge program called the Solar Church initiation ceremony ended, a new content called the virtual dungeon walked into Geo's arms on its own two feet.

'Good.'

No matter how much I thought about it, the current situation was really far from a 'cozy adventure' or 'new content', but Geo's ultimate positive mind did not waver in the face of a mere threat to his life.

'Honestly, I feel like I'm on a well-made movie set, because I'm not in a situation where I'm on the verge of death. I guess I'm not very nervous, but I know how to be nervous.'

They say there is a way to escape, but isn't this just another well-conceived escape room concept?

'Taran.'

Geo, who came to a clear conclusion on his own without anyone's consent, felt a little excited by the commotion among people that he hadn't felt in a long time.

He responded positively to people who asked him questions or struck up a conversation to show their friendliness.

“So, Sergio, are you a hunter from the Collectors’ Guild?”

“That’s what happened.”

“Wow, I didn’t know there was such a tall hunter in the collection….”

Yoo Seong-un intervened in this.

“There are many hunters like me who don’t show their faces in the media. Since the collectors are a guild whose main job is to collect and manage the guild master’s collections rather than clear dungeons, there are many hunters like Geo who don’t show their faces.”

“No, you’re so handsome, why…? If you showed your face on TV just once, wouldn’t you have a fan club? It’s a sin, a sin, not to show your face to the world while working as a hunter.”

"haha…."

Yoo Seong-un forced a smile.

“…Because Geo is shy.”

Geo felt very wronged by those words, but Yoo Seong-woon thought that he had not said anything wrong. It was a natural judgment, considering the ‘Portrait of Geo’ where he showed an aversion to meeting people.

While worrying that Geo might make a mistake by showing that he wasn't human, Yoo Seong-un closely observed the reactions of the people whispering in the distance.

“As expected, the hunters of the three major guilds are different. This is my first time seeing a trainer….”

“But isn’t it a little scary? If I say something wrong, I feel like they’ll look at me with contempt.”

“Your actions and steps are noble. Are you perhaps of royal blood? Then there must be a reason you hide it even with that face.”

“Judging by his power, he seems to be a believer of the sun god…. He’s a trainer, so he probably isn’t a priest.”

“He’s kind, but for some reason it’s hard to talk to him. Is it because he’s so handsome?”

These were roughly the reactions I expected.

'... I was worried about how Geo would be perceived by the civilians, but the reactions were more friendly and favorable than I expected. I think I can cover it without any problems even if I go out like this.'

In that case, it would be necessary to officially acknowledge the existence of the hunter Geo, but both Yoo Seong-un and Bisabal had already expected it to some extent.

'That kind of value can't be hidden by locking it up in a gallery, and even if it could be hidden somehow... that's different from the collector's motto.'

Moreover, the conclusion was that it would be impossible to confine the ‘story’ of this portrait to the category of humans.

Since he couldn't hide it, whether Geo wanted it or not, people were eventually going to feel the distant feeling of 'Geo's Portrait'.

In that case, it would have been better to distinguish between Geo as a human and Geo as a monster.

'Geo, who treats himself like a human, will somehow try to get along with other people. If you have to keep Geo as a human anyway, you should separate out the more dangerous stories in advance.'

That was the purpose of his unofficial status as a hunter for the collector called 'Sergio'.

'With this identity, the part of Geo that imitates humans… could significantly reduce the risk of that story. It would be a much safer option than revealing Geo's entire portrait to the world.'

This sudden dungeon exploration only brought Geo's social life forward a little. It was just a matter of timing, so there was no need to panic.

Yoo Seong-un thought to himself as he organized it like that.

"……."

Everyone seems to be genuine.

'I don't think this is an absolutely normal situation, but should I consider this to be Geo's power?'

Just like in the case of the old Chaara Hunter, Geo had a strange ability to trick people. He couldn't even hide his eerie aura.

I don't know if it's the result of the situation or the individual's ability….

"Geo, I think it's time to move and check if there are any Cha family members or other survivors."

At Yoo Seong-un's words, people became anxious again and started murmuring.

"Sir, Sergio Hunter shouldn't be here?"

"There are already three other hunters, including Yoo Seong-un."

“While we’re here… you guys are going to go raid the dungeons and stuff….”

“Do we really have to move too?”

“What if they all die? Who will be left with the rest?”

Although these were expected reactions, the fact that the smile on Eunha's face, which seemed to hate humans, was gradually deepening was a danger sign no matter how you looked at it.

'If we keep going like this, we'll all die.'

As Yoo Seong-un sighed and tried to console the people, Geo stepped forward.

“Then I will leave Honey here.”

“Yes? But, Sergio Hunter’s summons are too small….”

“Honey is stronger than me.”

“No, don’t joke.”

“It’s true.”

Geo waved his hands as if he were innocent.

“Don’t worry too much, I’ll be back soon. I’ll help you.”

“…….”

“With such strong will, you will all be able to return safely.”

Although it was actually nothing special, people started to sniffle again. It seemed like Geo's words had comforted and reassured them, but Yoo Seong-un was a little taken aback.

'If I told you, you wouldn't have listened. Why aren't there people grumbling and saying that it's just empty words?'

In the meantime, Geo came and said.

“Let’s move now.”

“…….”

The nuance of the message was to run away before he could be caught any further, and Yoo Seong-un felt strange.

I don't know if what he said just now was just candy-coated words or sincere consolation, but the sight of Geo clearly distinguishing between public and private matters gave me a strange impression.

'It's so easy to sway people's hearts with just a few words.'

This is really a talent.

“You… would be good at something like being an idol. Like an actor, or something like a celebrity.”

“I know that’s too much to ask, but I think you have the right qualities.”

“It looks the same to me.”

“Thank you for taking my joke. How could someone as timid as me become a celebrity?”

“…….”

If you can control and sway a crowd with your words and face, shouldn't you really become a celebrity or start a cult?

‘… I also need to come to my senses.’

Yoo Seong-woon felt even more responsible for the dizzying talent displayed by Geo's new personality.

* * *

“…….”

“…Who, sis….”

"fizzle."

Cha Ara covered Chae Sol's mouth and warned her, and Cha Eun Hyuk nodded in agreement.

“Be quiet.”

Now was the time when I had to hold my breath.

Cha Eun-hyeok glanced at his two younger siblings hiding behind him, then turned his head forward to look around. He broke out in a cold sweat in the bloody atmosphere.

“Stomach, stomach, I’m hungry… I’m hungry… Stomach, stomach….”

“Kuaaaah…!! Aah, ahhhh!! Sa, save me…!!”

“Stomach, stomach, stomach….”

The sight of people eating each other's flesh. It was clear that there were infected monsters here.

Fortunately, Cha Eun-hyeok and his siblings were able to hide under the desk safely before the situation worsened.

Even though they were trapped and unable to escape, Eunhyuk Cha pushed his younger siblings, who were frozen in fear, even further into the corner.

“…….”

Here and there, prospective priests were seen hiding and exchanging glances.

“…Phew….”

Perhaps because of their small size, the only ones who survived in this cave were young priests.

The only adults that exist are Cha Eun-hyuk and Cha A-ra.

'It's like a dog.'

I don't know if I can survive.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (66)

Episode 66

It was perhaps natural that the Cha family's situation had become like this.

'Why is it a virtual dungeon where I have no choice in participating?'

Eunhyuk Cha, who was hiding under the desk while guarding his two younger brothers, had a distorted expression on his face, filled with disillusionment with the world.

'I'm one of the few adults left, and I'm not a hunter. And it's obvious that this piglet, Chaara, won't be of much help. But I can't ask the remaining reserve priests to spare my life...'

I don't know what the conditions were, but the virtual dungeon forcibly drags everyone who meets the conditions into it.

In situations like now where there are no proper hunters, it was common for all participants to be wiped out.

"……."

"……."

Eunhyuk Cha and Ara Cha, who were sweating profusely, exchanged glances without saying a word. Eunhyuk Cha nodded.

'You are the only hunter here.'

'Ah, okay.'

'That's what happened.'

But there was nothing he could do. They called them 'reserve' priests for nothing. The young priests here were no different from civilians, not hunters. The only hunter in this pupil was Chaara.

Eunhyuk Cha, who confirmed that there were no monsters nearby, whispered in a faint voice that could not be heard from far away.

“Hey, F-class porter.”

“Please, tell me.”

“Isn’t there a way to deal with this situation? Something that hunters learn….”

“I think now is the best time.”

The center recommends that if the situation is very bad, you do not stay in one place. That way, if something happens, you will not be easily wiped out, and if you spread out here and there, your survival rate will increase.

“…That’s not just a bait tactic….”

“Anyway, objectively speaking, it’s the method with the highest survival rate.”

“That’s true, but.”

I felt as uncomfortable as a dog.

'You're telling me to scatter and pray that other people besides me get caught.'

It was a coping method that the Cha family, who had a strong bloodline of Hogu, did not like, but they did not act rashly. They had no ability, and the only way to save people was to become bait themselves.

“…….”

Cha Ara, who realized once again how wonderful the situation was, hid the youngest child behind her even further inside.

“Hey, Chaisol. Come in further. Further.”

“There is no more room to go….”

“How can you be so small? Get better quickly.”

“Ugh….”

“Don’t make any noise.”

The place where they hid was under the stainless steel desks installed regularly throughout the pupil. Perhaps because there were quite a few of them installed, it seemed that the novice priests who were still alive were also hiding under the desks like them.

Even if you hide like that, I don’t know how long you’ll be able to avoid being caught by monsters roaming freely everywhere… .

'At least Chaisol will be safe while Nana Oppa is causing trouble.'

The youngest, who was so skinny that he had nothing to eat, would have died instantly if he had been bitten once.

It may be selfish, but I couldn't help wishing that my younger brother would live longer than the other children.

“Sister….”

“Hey, stop being cute and be serious.”

“Wow, no, that’s not cute. I feel wronged.”

“Use it.”

Cha Eun-hyeok, who was sitting at the outermost part of the desk, looked at his younger siblings’ grumbling as if it was absurd.

'Have you ever seen anything so tensionless?'

In fact, he already knew that it wasn't that he wasn't nervous, but that he was so nervous that he was pretending to be okay. Cha Eun-hyeok looked around with a stiff face and a cold sweat dripping down his face.

A monster was approaching with a sloshing sound.

“…….”

“Stomach, stomach, stomach, stomach, stomach… I’m hungry… stomach….”

“…….”

Did you get possessed by a ghost because you didn't eat?

'So that's why we have to set up a table for ancestral rites. If we die here, it will be because the world has become so cruel that it won't even set up a table for ancestral rites…'

It was nonsense, but Cha Eun-hyeok pressed his younger siblings back, taking the wisdom of his ancestors to heart.

The youngest, who was already curled up at the end, had nowhere else to go, so a rustling sound could be heard as he was being suppressed. It was surprising that he barely made a sound, as if he heard the monster approaching.

“Are you hungry? I’m hungry. I’m hungry. I’m hungry, I’m hungry, I’m hungry….”

“…….”

The monster, whose form he had not yet seen properly, was approaching him. Thanks to this, Eunhyuk Cha was able to see the wet legs of the monster without any desire to see them.

'Is it time for me to turn back?'

At least let's save our piglet and the youngest. Please remember me as the one who baked the cheapest and most delicious bungeoppang in Korea.

It was when I made up my mind like that.

“—You bastards!!!”

Hwaaaah!!!

The monsters were burned and turned to ash one by one.

“Uh, uh…?”

It happened so quickly that it almost felt unrealistic.

Instead of the sloshing sound, a soft, falling ash sound was heard, and the eerieness of my pupils was forcibly consumed by the heat of the fire.

“…….”

“…….”

The Cha family was embarrassed and looked back at the entrance to the pupil that they had not even noticed.

“What the…??”

“Burr….”

“Oh, wait a minute.”

Cha Eun-hyeok realized belatedly who the owner of the 'You bastards' who had been loudly ringing his bell was.

“…Father Kang Seo-dam?”

Kang Seo-dam, a priest with long, wavy blond hair and pale green eyes, was standing out with a disheveled appearance and grumbling.

The eyes of Kang Seo-dam, whose face was bulging with veins as if she was so angry, and Cha Eun-hyeok, who was quietly sweating, met. It was like they had come across something taboo that should not be seen.

“…….”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam, who had returned from the face of an evil spirit to that of a priest, asked in a clean tone.

“Are you okay?”

“No, I just told you to throw it away….”

“If you don’t call a burr a burr, what else can you call it?”

"and."

“I apologize for suddenly hearing you swear at me when you must have been scared.”

If I hadn't heard that distinctly accented 'you bastards', I would have been purely moved by the kind response from Father Kang Seo-dam, who calmly continued to speak.

“I too was dragged into a virtual dungeon out of nowhere and was a bit out of my mind, but I feel good because it seems like there are still a lot of survivors.”

Kang Seo-dam, whose once clean priestly robes were now tattered, looked around as if he had been through a lot.

Cha Eun-hyeok also looked around the pupils only then, but there was not a single monster left, no matter what Kang Seo-dam had done just now.

"hmm."

Kang Seo-dam quietly drew the sign with his characteristically cold, expressionless face.

“The goddess took care of it.”

“…….”

I bet you took care of it.

'Is it true that among the hunters, except for our pig, there is no one in their right mind?'

A priest who could officiate an initiation ceremony had to be at least a B-class hunter. Judging by his skill in burning and killing all the monsters in the pupil in an instant, he was probably an A-class or near-S-class, which made Cha Eun-hyeok feel a little relieved.

I have no other merits besides being physically strong, so I was relieved to have found a strong person whom I could entrust my younger siblings with even if I died.

'…thank god.'

Cha Eun-hyeok exhaled deeply and wiped his face. He could breathe a little easier now.

“Oh, my lord….”

“Hhhhh….”

“Father Kang Seo-dam…!”

Only then did the prospective priests who had been hiding here and there crawl out.

“Yes, Father Kang Seodam is here. If there are any surviving brothers, please gather around me.”

Familiar with the tearful clinging of such survivors, Father Kang Seo-dam skillfully sorted out the situation.

He looked back at Cha Eun-hyeok and Cha A-ra and added his words.

“The same goes for the guardians of Father Chaisol who are there.”

“Oh, yes….”

All the survivors of the dungeon gathered in front of Priest Kang Seodam, drawn by the steady voice that was hard to find in the dungeon, but the number was not that large.

Most of them died from being bitten by monsters, or they ate each other afterwards.

“…….”

Priest Kang Seo-dam opened his mouth, frowning as if holding back a heavy sigh.

“I would like to apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused at an event I hosted.”

“Oh, no. It was an accident….”

“It is also my role to prevent accidents in advance. I will arrange formal compensation as soon as the situation is resolved.”

The priest bowed his head in apology and continued speaking.

“I will set up a protective shield, so the survivors can go inside and rest. I will collect the remains of the others.”

“…I will help you too.”

Cha Ara raised her hand at Cha Eunhyuk's words.

“Oh, then me too….”

“If that’s true, then I will only accept Hunter Chaara’s help.”

Priest Kang Seo-dam looked back at Cha Eun-hyeok. After thinking for a moment, he opened his mouth.

“I appreciate the kindness of Eunhyuk Cha’s guardian, but this is not something that should be left to civilians, and more than anything, Eunhyuk Cha is the only adult left.”

"ah…."

“I ask you to encourage the younger brothers so that they will not be afraid any more. I will repay you for extending a helping hand even in difficult situations in the name of the sun.”

Chaara asked as she approached the corpse that had been transformed into a monster and turned to ash by the sunlight.

“By the way, you know all our names…? Is that how it is?”

“It’s an event I’m hosting, so I can’t neglect that responsibility. I remember the names of all the people who officially participated after I put their names on the list.”

“Wow….”

After meeting only shitty hunters for a while, I couldn't help but feel unfamiliar with such a responsible person.

'If only I had met hunters like these, I wouldn't have been abandoned in that damn cave, damn it.'

Cha Ara continued to talk to the light body that looked like it had been taken to a crematorium, feeling relieved for no reason.

“It’s been quite a while since I’ve seen you since you were dragged into the dungeon. Where have you been until now?”

"sorry."

“Oh, no, I’m not saying anything about not coming sooner….”

Shit, talk to me.

'Let's think about what we say.'

Cha Ara, who had been cursing her own intelligence, continued speaking, though she was stuttering.

“This pupil itself was quite large, and many people were dragged in, so we thought this was all the people who were dragged in.”

“…I fell alone into a different space from here.”

Father Kang Seo-dam answered while making the sign of the cross over the ashes of the body and blessing them with peace.

“It took a long time because there were so many monsters, their skills were considerable, and the escape gimmick was complicated.”

“Alone in a place like that…?”

“If you think about it that way, it seems like the people who gathered for the initiation ceremony were scattered randomly.”

“…Huh? Oh, then….”

“It didn’t seem like there were no standards at all.”

After fighting numerous monsters, Priest Kang Seo-dam continued speaking while wiping the blood flowing from his forehead.

“In my case, the most threatening force in the dungeon, I was dropped alone in a place where monsters were swarming. On the other hand, all the reserve priests were gathered in this cave.”

“All? Have you already checked that in the meantime?”

“I remembered their faces because they were my brothers.”

“…Huh? No, but if I remember correctly….”

“Yes, I understand what you are wondering about.”

Kang Seodam swung his wand as long as he was tall and blessed the entire pupil. The corpse that had been in the form of ashes soon transformed into a complete human being.

“…….”

Priest Kang Seo-dam, who had performed a small miracle with the power of the sun, soon opened his mouth.

“…I can’t see the Milky Way brothers.”

In this place where all the catechumens were gathered, only that one boy could not be found.

“I didn’t find the body of the prospective priest here, so I think it must be somewhere else.”

“…….”

“You’ll find out why he fell alone later. Hunter Chaara, do you still have some stamina left? You don’t seem to be injured by sight, but is there something wrong?”

“Oh, no, there isn’t.”

“Then let’s move. I came here because this was the closest crater to where I fell, but there are probably survivors elsewhere. There aren’t many hunters attending this event, so if we don’t respond in time, it could be dangerous.”

“My brother and the other kids….”

Kang Seo-dam nodded after checking the survivors on the shield side at Cha Ara's words.

“I can’t leave it here, so I think we should go together. It’s hard to maintain it if the distance is too far, and there’s also a time limit. It would be nice if there was a priest who was a little more skilled, but I’m not an expert in barriers.”

“You definitely don’t seem like a protection expert….”

The expression on the face of the priest Kang Seo-dam, who turned all the monsters into ashes with a single swing of his wand, was that of a demon crawling out of hell. If he had specialized in protection or healing, it would have sounded strange.

Kang Seo-dam nodded without saying anything else.

“As for the body, it has been collected and a blessing has been given, so there is no need for it to be torn apart or rotten any further.”

“So now what….”

“Fortunately, I have subspace skills. I’ll put them here, so I think there won’t be any major problems with the recovery process.”

"yes yes."

“If we delay any longer, something may happen, so please, Hunter Chaara, help the reserve priests move.”

“Oh, I understand.”

“Phew….”

Kang Seo-dam wiped his blood-stained face and looked around.

‘… Could this be the black god’s temper that I saw at the initiation ceremony?’

The man wearing a black cloak pulled down low. He clearly had a divine quality to him. Even if he wasn't a monster in the dungeon, he could open dungeons at will if he was of a god level.

If that's the case, then it means that even for an evil spirit, his authority is quite strong, but the aura I felt was close to death, so I had doubts for a moment.

'... No, but the goddess looked upon them with such favor. A god who seemed to have a high level of understanding of humans and was gentle in building relationships would never commit such a massacre out of nowhere.'

Rather, it was the Milky Way, the blue-haired acolyte, who was suspicious.

“…….”

Even though I felt a cold aura, I just thought, 'Is this a child who wants to serve a god who embraces coldness?' But given the situation, I couldn't help but be suspicious.

'The coldness I felt from the Milky Way Army is quite similar to the coldness filled with the energy of this deep sea. If I can tell at a glance, then the Milky Way Army also had no intention of hiding its identity until after the incident.'

Either they were all planning to die here anyway, or they were only planning to stop by Earth once and leave.

'In this case, it seems to be both. It's a very dangerous dungeon...'

It was when I looked around, worried about what would happen next.

"……?"

The air has changed.

'… is on the positive side.'

Unlike the previous atmosphere that seemed eager to kill anyone, a strangely warm atmosphere subtly permeated the entire dungeon.

"for a moment."

Kang Seo-dam left the survivors with Cha A-ra and came out into the hallway.

Not long after I started looking around, I saw something beyond the corridor that looked like a temple submerged in the deep sea.

"……."

"……."

A man wearing a pitch-black cloak took off his hood.

'…ah.'

In the deep shadows where it felt like there was nothing, platinum blonde hair resembling sunlight was revealed.

"……."

“Brother Kang Seo-dam.”

It was Sergio, a god who was believed to be friendly to humans.

“I was wandering around the temple, which was much larger than I had imagined, and I am glad to have met the Son of the Sun.”

“…….”

“Do you know where the other survivors are? They seem injured. I can help you.”

“…….”

“Brother Kang Seo-dam?”

“Excuse me.”

I was curious about what kind of god it was, and now I know.

‘There was a reason why the goddess looked down on me. Were we of the same lineage…?’

Looking at the strangely calm atmosphere, Kang Seo-dam thought that although it didn't seem to be of the same type, he was relieved by the familiar sunlight.

'It was an ambiguous situation where I needed help, but it seems like you performed a miracle even before I could ask for help.'

Sergio must have played a big role in making the dungeon milder.

Actually, it's a bit of a stretch to call it a miracle, but it wasn't a wrong guess.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (67)

Episode 67

It is not easy to change the air in an entire dungeon.

'That would only be possible if there was a change in the dungeon owner's status, and most owners who could assimilate a dungeon as if it were a part of themselves would be monsters that were stronger than average… .'

Thinking like that, Kang Seo-dam looked at Sergio in front of him.

“Can I ask you a question?”

“Yes, that’s fine. What are you curious about?”

“…Are you a hunter right now?”

The question was whether you could cooperate since you were now imitating a human.

‘…I hope that doesn’t sound too presumptuous.’

Kang Seodam still couldn't meet Geo's eyes, and was only looking at his lips. The lips, which drew a perfectly gentle curve, opened calmly, containing an affection that was almost foreign.

“By the way, I’m sorry for the late introduction. My name is Sergio, a hunter from the Collectors’ Guild.”

“…Is that so?”

Thinking back, I remember that the white-haired hunter who was by his side throughout the initiation ceremony was definitely a collector. He was a rare hunter who was not a public figure but an underground one, so he left a deep impression.

'So, is this person currently receiving help from the Collectors' Guild? It's rare for a god to put in this much effort to infiltrate humans.'

Even if a being becomes a god from a human, gaining divinity means giving up humanity. In many ways, in order to adapt to humans and society, receiving help from a capable group like now was also a kind of god's play.

'First of all, if it's a collector... is it a guild with a gallery of collectors? Since it's a group that pours out affection rather than control toward mysteries and strangeness, it's the perfect fit to help the gods play.'

I felt secretly relieved.

'Then the story becomes easier. If he has established his identity with the help of a group of humans, he won't easily cast them out. That must mean he has an open mind towards humans… .'

Kang Seodam asked without meeting eye contact.

“Are you a priest?”

“Yes, I… um.”

The black cloak, who seemed to be about to give an affirmative answer, paused for a moment. Then he smiled brightly and continued speaking.

“If you ask about my occupation as a hunter, it’s not a priest, but a trainer.”

“How can I know about your sexual power?”

“It’s just a power I’m grateful for as a child of the sun, it’s nothing grand.”

“You are a believer, not a priest. Thank you for helping me understand.”

Sergio, a hunter from the Collectors' Guild. He has platinum blonde hair and blue eyes. His occupation is a trainer.

The level would have been adjusted between A and B, as the pressure felt doesn’t seem that different, and the reason he can control the power of the Holy Spirit is because he is a devout follower of the Sun… .

“…….”

I remembered.

‘… Judging from the way it feels, it seems closer to something that was cut off rather than hidden. Your way of enjoying play is very extreme. It’s possible that you are under a curse.’

Of course, there was no need for Kang Seo-dam, a mere human, to analyze and ponder the story of God. He simply asked carefully to do his job.

“Can you help us find other survivors?”

“That’s exactly what I came here for.”

“Ah… thank you.”

Isn't he really a god who is kind to humans? He has a sense of a near-death aura, so it's possible that he's an evil god, but I couldn't help but ask for help from a god who comes to me so politely.

'I don't know exactly what kind of god you are, but you seem to care a lot for humans. Since you use a Korean name, Sergio is probably not your real name... I guess I'll have to offer a prayer to your statue later.'

For now, I'll ask about that later. From God's perspective, it might just be interesting, but the human situation is very urgent.

“Did you see any other survivors on your way here?”

“There were quite a few people where I was. The contracted man, whom I regard as my son, is guarding the place, so you don’t have to worry about him. I was trying to check if there were any survivors in other places besides the cave where I was.”

“I happen to be in a similar situation. I was dropped into a cave full of monsters, and there were no other survivors. The cave I just came out of had more people in it….”

“Is there any damage?”

“…….”

"okay."

It was a surprisingly sad tone. Kang Seodam quietly hid his agitation.

'Is there a god who mourns the death of a mere human? That is a very rare case.'

From the beginning, those so-called gods were such beings. Those who became part of nature and destiny. Even if such gods felt emotions about human death, they would only feel the level of interest that a toy had broken.

But the 'Sergio' in front of me really seemed to be mourning the death of a person. On an equal footing, as if he were mourning the death of a friend.

“…….”

“Did you give me your blessing?”

“…I tried to fix it, even if it was insufficient.”

“Would it be rude if I looked at it one more time?”

“Then the dead souls will be able to return to the sun with a lighter heart.”

God himself blesses death. It may sound a bit strange to deal with those who died to monsters, but it was truly a miraculous stroke of luck.

“Please give me some guidance.”

“Then this way….”

Leading 'Sergio', Kang Seo-dam felt a little relieved. Not all gods can be trusted, but if a god is putting in enough effort to imitate mourning, then he is trustworthy.

'Since the Goddess has also looked upon me with favor, I, the servant, have no reason to doubt. Let us empty our minds and follow the will of the God. That is what a priest should be like.'

Kang Seo-dam decided to give a rhythm to the name 'Sergio'.

It was a historic moment in which the secret human identity of the ghost story 'Black Cloak', 'Sergio', was created.

* * *

“I am.”

Yoo Seong-un stared blankly at the campfire.

“…….”

“I thought I would be dragged into a virtual dungeon while I was at the Temple of the Sun, and that I would end up in a gruesome survival game with blood splattering and tears flowing.”

Kang Seo-dam nodded in agreement as he heard those words.

“I had similar thoughts when I first fell into the pit of my stomach.”

“Is that so?”

“It seemed like a cold dungeon where sunlight could not reach, so I prepared myself to take responsibility for this situation, even readying myself to die.”

“Wow, that’s cool. Not all priests who awaken as priests will be as cool as Priest Kang Seo Dam.”

“I just do my best at what I have to do.”

“I’ll do my best, La….”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“So you’re cleaning the fish now?”

“…….”

Yes, Kang Seo-dam was cleaning the fish right now.

“…Can’t we just let him handle it himself?”

“Geo likes that kind of thing.”

“It is disrespectful.”

“No, really….”

A campsite had been set up here out of nowhere. With makeshift tents, a campfire, and even prepared fish, the atmosphere of the people gathered in a peaceful manner was truly peaceful.

'Geo, please.'

I had hoped that Geo, who was quite gentlemanly towards humans, would help me in this virtual dungeon as well. However, I did not expect this much comfort.

'It might feel like a fun picnic or game to you, but it's not like that to most people... What if you start enjoying it like this?'

The only fortunate thing was that few people found this situation strange, as they were swept up in the peaceful and warm atmosphere that Geo created.

Only Yoo Seong-un was nervous that Geo would be found out to be not human.

'The fact that most of them are civilians with little experience with dungeons or monsters may have also played a part in this situation.'

Yoo Seong-un muttered.

“It’s called a dungeon, but is this really allowed?”

“If you don’t like it, why don’t you just go out and hunt monsters?”

“The galaxy is quite dense.”

You were the owner of this dungeon in the first place.

“Are you okay?”

“…….”

“…I honestly think things are going a bit strangely.”

Even though he was smiling as if he was green, he was strangely avoiding eye contact, which seemed to be a bit stinging. Well, from the monster's perspective, how absurd this must be.

'It seems like he's struggling like that because he doesn't want to be labeled a bad kid by Geo, but thinking about it again, it's still an absurd situation. Is it okay for things to become peaceful like this?'

Fortunately for him, the only ones who knew Eunha's true identity were Yoo Seong-un and Kang Seo-dam, who was probably a high-ranking priest. The other survivors treated Eunha as just another prospective priest.

Geo came closer.

“Is the fish ready?”

“It’s almost over.”

“If you’re having a hard time, I’d rather be with you….”

“Don’t worry, I can handle fish quite well.”

“That’s not what I meant, but I understand.”

He spoke refreshingly with the face of 'Giovanni'.

“If they offer to help, there’s no reason to turn down free manpower!”

“…….”

How dare you say such worldly things as 'free manpower' with that noble face that just looks purifying.

'For some reason, the Milky Way army is looking at me with a longing expression.'

Was Giovanni originally like that?

'Even if you say it like that, he still seems like a faithful and noble priest, but somehow, somewhere, he seems a bit… shameless, maybe… mysteriously reckless… .'

But it was really amazing how that unique elegance never disappeared.

“Geo.”

“Yes, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“Why am I just going to stay still like this?”

“I think it’s also essential to check if a monster is approaching.”

“That’s true, but….”

Again, this place was a campsite. The dungeon owner himself kept his mouth shut, saying he didn't want to be a bad kid, so what kind of big monster would come looking for him?

“Isn’t it true that we don’t need to check if there are any other survivors?”

“We all looked for it together, but we couldn’t find it.”

Galaxy naturally answered Yoo Seong-un's question. I could hear the voice saying, 'There are no other survivors besides the people gathered here, so just dig around a little.' It was chilling.

'Seeing him making such sly threats, I think he's worried that his story will be revealed. Dungeons are usually designed to fit the owner's past and image... I wonder if he's worried that I'll find out about him and Giovanni while I'm investigating the dungeon.'

On that topic, it seems like Geo is 120% enjoying the situation where he is acting like 'Giovanni'.

'As expected of a humanoid monster, it has rich emotions. It has many thoughts.'

Geo patted Eunha's head.

“Student Eunha is really confident.”

“Ah, that….”

“I was worried, but I’m glad you seem okay.”

“…….”

Looking at that sight, Yoo Seong-un thought to himself.

'It's a landmine.'

I don't know the exact circumstances, but the reaction was clear. Geo was tap dancing on top of the galactic mines as if nothing happened, but Geo himself seemed oblivious to what he was doing.

‘Well… If we think about the safety of the humans, it would be better to distract them in this way.’

Yoo Seong-un looked around.

“…….”

People were pretty stable.

'I wouldn't say there were a few deaths due to the dungeon opening, but the fact that so many people survived the dungeon that was deliberately opened in the temple is close to a miracle. And the expressions of the survivors don't look that bad.'

Of course, there are still people who are anxious, but they quickly calm down after Geo approaches them and says a few words. In such a cold dungeon, the mere sight of Geo will be a great comfort.

“No matter what, you know….”

Yoo Seong-un spoke to Geo, who was wandering around without any rest.

“Aren’t you working too hard? Aren’t you getting tired?”

“Thank you for your concern.”

“Is it okay now that you said your head hurt earlier?”

I know he's not a pushover who's just busy getting chewed out, but no matter how tough he may seem, I feel uneasy if he acts too nice.

If we continue like this, we will grow tired of ourselves and become disappointed in humans, what will happen?

Fortunately, Geo's expression wasn't too bad. Giovanni answered with a gentle smile like a painting.

“It feels like things are getting sorted out little by little, so it’s okay.”

“Oh… Sort it out….”

Then that won't work.

'... If Giovanni's personality is really established here, won't it be a bit difficult? I don't know exactly how close the relationship between Eunha and Giovanni was, but it doesn't seem like it was an ordinary relationship. If he regains all his memories, he might end up on Eunha's side... .'

For now, it was a situation where we had no choice but to rely on Geo's kindness.

“Still, take it easy. I understand that you want to be nice to people, but sometimes there are people who think that kindness is a right. No, not just sometimes, but often.”

To his surprise, Geo nodded calmly.

“I know, too.”

“Oh, really?”

“But doesn’t the sun shine on everything?”

“Uh uh….”

“If the sun does so, so should I.”

“…….”

If you just listen to him, he seems like a really faithful priest.

‘… If I hear people say, ‘I’m just doing it because it’s my job,’ am I mistaken?’

Yoo Seong-un was worried that Geo would trust humans too much or show too much affection to them, and then commit a major accident after being betrayed.

But from the way you were talking now, it seemed like there was no need to worry about that.

'What should I say to this?'

ah.

'You look like a service worker.'

It was a model of a capitalist smile.

'In this situation, it's not like Geo can gain any capital gains, but for some reason, it feels like seeing an employee who is skilled at responding like a civil servant at the center... .'

I got the general feeling.

'Giovanni wasn't just a good priest.'

I felt strangely reassured by the fact that his expectations of humans seemed quite low. If he was showing such kindness despite not trusting humans that much, he wouldn't get angry right away even if some tactless idiots were to mess with him.

But before that happens, Yoo Seong-un will have to block it first.

“But how did you manage to catch a fish? I don’t know since it happened while I was away, but where on earth did you catch the fish? Was there a pond in this desolate place?”

“There was a deep pool of water near the edge of the third hole I found. The water quality was actually better than on Earth, and the fish living there didn’t seem to be particularly poisonous….”

“Did you ever think about eating it?”

“Aren’t you all hungry?”

“Aside from being hungry, I don’t usually think of calmly grilling and eating fish in a dungeon like this.”

“I think it’s because I’m not very hungry.”

“That’s really firm. It’s not wrong, though.”

I was a little worried, but Giovanni seemed like a pretty nice guy.

'As Geo said, it's not the personality that changes, but the character.'

It's just so peaceful it's ridiculous.

If a meteor shower is like this, how much more absurd must the dungeon owner be… .

* * *

“…….”

In the depths of the sea, bright red lips drew a vain smile.

"…under."

There are people who don't change even after they die and come back to life.

That's you, Giovanni.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (68)

Episode 68

He was recognized by the sea as soon as he was born.

Aria, a mermaid who had been a descendant of the deep sea since birth, was always curious about the place beneath the sun where she had neither the duty nor the authority to rule. And there, she met a human.

“Now, Aria. Look at this cross-section. Human skin has layers.”

“Is it different from a mermaid’s skin?”

“It’s a little different, a mermaid’s skin can withstand the deep sea….”

He was a teacher.

“What are you drawing now?”

“Aria, I was drawing you.”

“This is a picture of the sea.”

“The sea is a mermaid.”

We were friends.

“It’s good to understand people, but it’s not bad to empathize with them either.”

“I don’t think there will be any difference.”

“You can accomplish more by simply empathizing than by understanding.”

“…….”

It was a family.

Giovanni was the only one who was equal to Aria, or even higher in status. He was also different from his younger brother Isser, who had to be protected and looked after.

Aria could have interesting conversations with Giovanni. No matter what Aria did, Giovanni could handle her.

The existence of gears that mesh perfectly.

"aria."

"okay."

“Please do not harm humans.”

She thought so.

“Why does it have to be like that?”

“Because I don’t want it.”

“That’s selfish.”

“Aria, that ugly priest always said.”

“A relationship is about being considerate and adapting.”

“I’m glad you remembered.”

Aria thought of herself and Giovanni as cogs that would never break, but Giovanni didn't think so. He always talked about hatred.

“I am human, and Aria is a mermaid. We have different ways of thinking and expressing ourselves, but we have been able to become so close. Up until now, Aria has given me a lot of things and received a corresponding price in return.”

“So, do it like that this time too?”

“If you really don’t like it, fighting me and winning is also an option. I prefer to resolve differences of opinion through conversation rather than fighting, but Aria may like a more direct approach.”

“Geo, I don’t want to fight with you. So I’ll give in.”

“It’s really nice that we can still not hate each other despite our different opinions. Then, let’s try putting on Aria’s favorite clams for dinner tonight.”

It was fun.

“Is this the human way? It’s quite troublesome.”

“Not all humans are like this. I always say that humans are much more colorful and capricious than mermaids. If you want to interact with other humans later on….”

“I don’t want to associate with such shallow people.”

"okay."

It was fun being with him.

It was something rare that could not be found even among the same race.

“I wish you were a mermaid.”

“Unfortunately, when I die, I will return to the sun. That’s what I want.”

“Well, humans do feel the cold a lot. It would be warmer near the sun than in the deep sea. I admit it.”

“Thank you for your understanding.”

Well then, Geo.

“…….”

“…….”

When I finally let you go after showing my kindness, you should have returned to the sun.

“…Who, sis….”

“What happened to Giovanni?”

I barely managed to save my brother who was dragged into the temple while helping humans, and I destroyed all the temples on Earth, but for some reason I couldn't find even a single piece of Giovanni's bones.

After almost a year, my younger brother came to his senses and answered without even crying.

“I ate it.”

My brother was laughing.

“I ate because I was hungry. The humans put some kind of drug into that small tank….”

“…….”

“…The rest of that man’s body probably rotted and dissolved in the water. I ate most of it, though.”

"aha."

Perhaps because I had been expecting the worst, I wasn't that surprised.

'Geo always worried that I would be hurt after he died, but it wasn't as disturbing as I thought.'

It was pretty dull.

“I see.”

But he couldn't stop himself from searching for the last trace of Geo, even if it was just the water he had rotted. He continued to search for Geo's body, killing every human he saw.

And we could find Geo in the Pope's residence, the one most beloved of the Sun.

“…….”

He became water.

“…It smells really bad.”

It was like looking at sea water.

“Shall I clean it up, Princess?”

“Okay, leave it like this.”

"but…."

“If we just leave it alone, it will flow into the sea.”

How long had they kept the body there, and with what? When they opened the large coffin used as a torture device, his corpse, thick and melted like seaweed, flowed out.

There was no trace of human form whatsoever.

“…….”

No, it wasn't even a living thing.

“But it’s a long way from here to the sea.”

"doesn't care."

All that was needed was to bring the sea up to land.

"therefore…."

So deep that the sun is almost submerged.

“…….”

Just looking at the corpse that had become water.

“…….”

Left alone, Aria whispered.

“…I thought that when you died, it would be a natural death due to the limitations of the species.”

“…….”

“Humans have shorter life spans than mermaids. They age quickly and change easily. So if we were to eventually part ways… I thought it would be because your value had faded.”

“…….”

“Whether that noble character is clouded by greed, or that a weak body withers away with illness, or that he overcomes all the trials and dies completely and returns to the sun. That was the kind of separation

I had imagined. I understood and accepted that part properly.”

“…….”

“Why did you have to die like this? It was not because your own value was blurred, but because you were beaten by the hands of demons who could not see even though they had eyes… You were not even in the sun, but spread out in the deep sea.”

“…….”

“Humans are truly worthy of study, to be able to hate someone so casually.”

I couldn't help but ask.

“Don’t you hate humans?”

The mermaid hated humans.

My hesitation in dealing with our separation came from your mortality, so I had no idea that the ending of this story would be so funny and miserable.

“Isn’t it cold there?”

You should have gone to the sun, you idiot.

“Nobody won.”

Even though he died trying to protect the mermaid, he ended up shivering from the cold.

Your values weren't meant to be destroyed because of such a stupid racial conflict.

It was not right for us to be unable to go to the sun and only be a part of the sea.

“…….”

The only mermaid who defended humans, my sister, kept her mouth shut.

"ah…."

Giovanni, the only human who could hold the mermaid, lost his mouth.

"…yes."

“…….”

“There’s no one who can stop me now.”

It was such a shame.

“…….”

“…….”

"hey."

Can't you feel my sincerity?

* * *

“…Mr. Geo, you’re good at cooking too.”

Sergio smiled at the words that Isser had difficulty speaking.

“I’m glad you said that.”

“Are you particularly good at cooking seafood?”

“Overall, everything is good.”

“Where did you learn this recipe?”

“Well, just….”

Her platinum-blond hair, almost silver, catches the eye.

“I wanted to try eating it like this.”

"okay."

A blue-green sea appears, resembling a surface of water where sunlight scatters.

“It was just something I cooked over a campfire, but it was so delicious that I had to ask about it.”

“If it’s something like that, feel free to ask me anytime.”

“Isn’t it a pleasure to share what you know?”

“…Is mind reading a skill among the students of Galaxy?”

“I had a feeling you would say something like that.”

Giovanni always had those words on his lips.

'As expected, a little bit… .'

No, not a lot.

'They look too similar.'

This is why even my own suspicions about 'someone else who looks quite similar' don't work.

'I can't keep acting like this.'

I was fully aware that I was doing something stupid. When a human named Yoo Seong-un looked at me like, “Are you sure you’re okay like this?”, I felt so pathetic that I couldn’t even bring myself to call him arrogant.

“Mr. Geo, where is your hometown?”

“I don’t know if you know, but it was a really rural area.”

“Because it’s the countryside….”

“Sometimes I farmed and stuff.”

"okay."

For a priest of noble birth, he was also strangely easygoing.

‘Ah, that won’t work… .’

I don't have the energy to talk anymore.

'… Judging by the fact that the atmosphere in the entire dungeon has become lighter, I can tell that my older sister is flustered as well. If even my older sister is flustered, I can't be okay either. This wasn't supposed to drag on like this… It's better to leave Earth quickly… .'

It would be a way to regain the calm reason of the past.

“…….”

but.

Is that okay?

‘… Is it really right for us to leave Geo alone in this dimension?’

Although I've traveled through countless dimensions, there was no one I could tell for sure was Giovanni just by looking at them. However, no matter how much I thought about it, this person seemed to be Giovanni's reincarnation.

'But why is there divinity? It must be some kind of sun god from some dimension doing something. No, but… a being as great as the sun god wouldn't necessarily care what happens to humans.'

It was a confusing situation, but one thing was certain.

“…What do you plan to do next?”

These people had to be sent out quickly.

'Looking at the situation, it's hard to keep Geo alone. I'll just send everyone away, and it won't be too late to discuss it with my older sister, gather my thoughts, and come up with a new plan.'

It was Yoo Seong-un who answered that question.

“First, we need to find a way out.”

“There’s a way out….”

“Usually, in cases like this, there are three methods.”

Yoo Seong-un, whose stomach had been roughly filled with fish, continued speaking.

“The most orthodox method is to succeed in the conquest. However, we do not have many hunters, and above all, there are many civilians who will die if we take our eyes off them for even a moment. There is no way we can solve the difficult conquest with this number of people without anyone to guard them.”

“Then what other way?”

“It would be nice to have an item that would allow you to exit the dungeon, like a return stone, but this isn’t exactly a wise choice. After looking around, it seems like this isn’t a dungeon where low-grade items would work… and even if they did, how many items would there be? Only a few of us would be able to barely escape.”

“That’s true.”

“The last method is, of course….”

Yoo Seong-un's gaze fell on Eun-ha and Isser, who were still smiling colorlessly.

“…….”

“…….”

The momentary gaze dispersed, and Yoo Seong-un continued speaking.

“The dungeon owner himself opens the door.”

Isser clicked his tongue inwardly.

'Have you read my mind?'

No, it might have been too obvious an ending even before the thought was read.

To both the mermaids and the humans, Giovanni's presence was extremely unexpected. It seemed to mean that both sides were confused, so they should regroup and fight again.

The C-class hunter, who had been quietly listening to Yoo Seong-un's words, asked with an anxious look.

“Is that so? If something happened at the Temple of the Sun, then it seems like the dungeon owner did something intentional as well… And the number of people captured is quite a lot. He must be a strong owner.”

“It’s not completely impossible.”

Kang Seo-dam responded in the gentle tone characteristic of a priest.

“There is a saying that dungeons are like theater stages. The higher the dungeon level, the more closely it is connected to its owner, and the more players can look into the dungeon owner's story."

"Uh… why is that…?"

"In short, if you just follow the story, there are times when the door will open with luck. The stories of civilians who escaped the dungeon because they were moved by the dedication of the raider who learned the story of the dungeon are not just empty boasts."

"Oh my, I thought that was a flyer…."

"It actually happens quite often. Especially when the owner is intelligent enough to be close to a humanoid monster, the possibility of such an escape increases. In a dungeon of this scale, the owner is definitely close to a humanoid."

At that point, Yoo Seong-un intervened.

"We've already seen similar phenomena. There were quite a few casualties right after we were dragged into the dungeon, but look at it now. We're having a meal by a campfire, and no monsters are attacking us."

"It's strangely stable considering that so many raiders have entered this dungeon. Perhaps it means that the owner who caused this incident has changed his mind. I get the feeling that he's being very lenient."

"Considering that, the third option would be the one with the highest probability of success in our situation. If we just rub it well, the door might open."

"I have similar expectations."

Oh, yeah.

"……."

Isser decided to just keep his mouth shut.

'What bad luck.'

The conversation skills of pretending not to know my identity were very high-level.

'Even though Yoo Seong-un has already spoken directly with me, I don't think that Priest Kang Seo-dam doesn't know my identity. I have previously revealed my deep-sea energy openly without any intention of hiding it... I can't come here and pretend to be an ordinary young human.'

Isser looked back at Geo.

“I hope it goes well either way. The fish here is delicious, though….”

“…….”

“I really want to go home.”

Isser asked him.

“What kind of place is Mr. Geo’s house?”

“Oh, it’s just an ordinary cabin.”

“It’s a hut.”

“It’s a cabin in the forest where there are few people.”

“…….”

Doesn't this house suit you so well?

‘… Hearing something like this… .’

I can't just keep holding on to it.

Isser decided to release the humans caught in the net.

“…….”

Anyway, I'll just catch him again.

Isser knew of human greed for mermaids.

* * *

People who were dragged into a virtual dungeon of unspecified rank have returned alive.

The number of survivors reached 80% of the total, and everyone unanimously praised it as a miracle.

“If this is a miracle, then it is a miracle.”

“I don’t know what you are talking about.”

“Geo, you stay the same.”

“I don’t know what you are talking about.”

“Yeah… That’s what I’m saying now.”

Yoo Seong-un was thrilled by the effectiveness of ‘Portrait of Geo’.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (69)

Episode 69

“Isn’t that a miracle?”

Visabal smiled brightly and greeted Yoo Seong-un.

“…….”

“Hey, hey, don’t go out again. Just come back in. You shouldn’t do that in front of people.”

“Oh, I really don’t want to go in….”

“I’m sure you know I’m the one paying your salary, don’t you?”

“You know, but you still made it to the door, right?”

“If you know, why don’t you come in right away, Curator Yoo Seong-un? The guild leader is waiting.”

Finally, Yoo Seong-un came into the office and muttered while sitting on the staff sofa.

“I have to save up money and quit my job.”

“Did you really think that would be possible?”

“If there is a justifiable reason, shouldn’t the resignation be accepted?”

“Remember, I may accidentally forget to accept your resignation letter.”

“It’s a deep-rooted evil….”

“How can you make such a naive statement, saying that there has never been a time when there was no corruption in the Republic of Korea?”

“Oh, I really hate it.”

Yoo Seong-un roughly wiped his tired face with both hands, let out a deep sigh that seemed to pour out his soul, and then slowly raised his head. His eyes were as sunken as a panda’s.

“So what are you curious about? I gave you a full report in writing just yesterday. What are you curious about that made you call this poor employee?”

Visabal said in a concise manner.

“Looking at the report, it seems unfortunate that Geo did not cause any casualties.”

“Unfortunately?”

“I accidentally got the truth out of it. I was wondering how the portrait worked.”

“How do you want me to react? Should I just clap my hands?”

“So let’s skip that part for a moment, I have a question about Geo’s portrait.”

“I knew it, go ahead.”

“I found the part about it being mutated in response to dungeons and monsters really interesting, but who exactly is Giovanni?”

"that…."

Certainly this part was not reported in writing.

“As you know, the part about ‘Geo’s Portrait’ is confidential even within our guild, so I didn’t include it in the report to prevent any possible leaks. I wonder if it would have seemed rude.”

“Who are you, Giovanni, who are you, rude and shameless?”

“Yeah, that’s the kind of person you were.”

“Giovanni….”

“Please wait a moment so I can speak. I also need to gather my thoughts.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was scratching the back of his neck, continued speaking.

“…I believe it is one of the ‘Geos’ from another dimension. I was dragged into the virtual dungeon this time, that is… I got some information while wandering around the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’ and became certain of it.”

When he went to check if there were any survivors who had fallen elsewhere, Yoo Seong-un wasn't just looking for people. If he had found a new dungeon, basic investigation was a natural duty for a hunter.

“As a result, I was able to find traces of a person called ‘Giovanni’. He was probably in his early 30s, a priest and doctor serving the sun god, with blond hair and blue eyes… He matched one of the appearances of Gio that I reported to you before.”

“Then Geo must have a big connection with the source. It must be qualitatively different from the existence of general sources or monsters.”

“I think so. After being reincarnated into another ‘Geo’ in another dimension, and ending his life as a human, he will return to the portrait and take some time to reorganize… I think he will repeat the reincarnation process once he is done with all the maintenance, for now.”

It could be something that happens simultaneously, without being bound by that kind of temporal order. It could be a process that happens between dimensions.

That is why 'Geo's Portrait' was neither a human, a monster, an item, nor even a child of the most veiled of beings, the Origin.

However, that doesn't mean we can simply express it as God.

“A ‘Portrait of Geo’ could be anything.”

Like a painter who can express everything with paint and sculpture.

“And that kind of thing, well… how should I put it….”

“I think it’s a hasty judgment, but wouldn’t the word ‘origin’ be the most appropriate?”

“…That could be the case.”

If it weren't for the close connection to the 'Source', which is said to be the world's greatest secret, Geo would not have been able to maintain its current vast status.

“But I guess it’s fortunate that he didn’t give up on his humanity, even though it was a little bit left. I don’t know if I should say that he had great willpower, or if I should see this as one of the systems of the origin….”

Yoo Seong-un asked, rubbing his chin.

“Do you have any further questions?”

“Oh, it’s over already?”

“I’m not a parent who tells you fairy tales. If you’re bored, find someone else to talk to. Even though it looks like this, I’m busy dealing with the aftermath of this virtual dungeon.”

“I'm sorry.”

Visabal let out his characteristic thin laugh.

“Aren’t you busy creating Geo’s identity? You’re creating an A-class hunter out of thin air, which is nothing more than that.”

“Even if you belong to a guild of collectors with a lot of unofficial hunters, there are still a lot of things you need to explain. You’ll have to convince the association somehow.”

“I will take care of persuading the association, so you just need to focus on the basics. I am sure they know about ‘Portrait of Geo’.”

“Thank you for taking the pressure off me. Thanks to you, I can finally sleep in my own bed tonight for the first time in a while.”

At the center of this incident, in the dungeon named 'Temple of the Deep Sea', Geo was openly active. The only person who recognized his divinity was the priest Kang Seodam, but it was not like he could hide his divine power.

“At that point, I can’t say that he’s not a person….”

“What can we do with so many witnesses? If we had just killed them all from the beginning, things would have been much easier.”

“Are you telling me to become a Red Hunter? To be demoted to a 5th-grade citizen? So suddenly?”

“No, I was thinking of Geo when I said that. Then wouldn’t I have been able to appreciate Geo’s attack style?”

“For now, I’ll pretend I didn’t hear that. For some reason, Geo seems to think of the guild leader as a relatively good person. Please take care of his image.”

“That’s what I do best. It’s one of the weapons that helped me establish the three major guilds with this weak body.”

“But there are certainly many witnesses. Because the atmosphere was so harmonious, survivors’ eyewitness accounts are spreading much more actively….”

The survivors continued to send messages of thanks to the Collectors' Guild regarding 'Sergio Hunter', saying that they had received great comfort from the dungeon.

In this situation, it was impossible to say that there was no such person as 'Sergio'.

“Because of that, the staff members are a little unsettled. The official document that the guild leader sent clearly had an employee named ‘Geo’ written on it, so I wonder if it’s the same person….”

“Of course it’s the same person. I don’t remember bringing in such inconsiderate employees.”

“Everyone has guessed. No one wants to pretend to know because it seems like things will get complicated, but at least the ‘Geo’ in the official document and the ‘Sergio’ of this uproar are the same person.”

“You’re saying that even though you know everything, no one talks to me?”

“I don’t want to take on extra work.”

Yoo Seong-un let out a long sigh.

“Like me.”

“I’m giving you money.”

“Fucking capitalist society.”

In a world where you can buy a full lifespan if you pay money, there is no such thing as labor rights. Yoo Seong-woon rubbed the back of his neck, which was stiff from fatigue.

“However, since the official document already said that he was an employee, some people thought, ‘Then he must really be an employee,’ and let it slide. Most people wondered if the guild leader was trying to hire a monster, not a human….”

“While we’re on the subject, should we try it next time?”

“Isn’t this how you act, deepening the distrust among the employees? It’s not for nothing that you’re called a ‘crazy guy who only looks at works’. Please take care of your reputation as the guild leader.”

“I’m very sorry to say this, but there’s no such thing. You’re a really funny person, aren’t you?”

“It would be expected for someone of that age, but why isn’t it there? Seriously, why isn’t it there?”

Yoo Seong-un wiped his face again and continued speaking.

“Anyway, Geo will be officially uploaded to the collector’s homepage soon. Since he is already known to be blond and blue-eyed, if Geo wants to move around without wearing a cape, he will have to move as ‘Giovanni’, but I think Geo will understand that much.”

Geo didn't seem to have any particular aversion to his personality changing. He nodded his head in agreement with that fact, as it was something that was typical of the original being, but he was willing to accept it since it wasn't a big burden to him.

“In short, Geo is now able to actively participate in human society.”

“Can we go to the amusement park together?”

“…'Portrait of Geo' dislikes noise and commotion, so I would appreciate it if you would refrain from doing so. He is still incredibly gentlemanly towards humans, but that doesn't mean he doesn't hate rude and mean people.”

“Of course I know. That’s why I was thinking of renting it out.”

“Please do that to your lover….”

“A lover? Who would go to an amusement park with an old person like me?”

“Then why did you think Geo would go? It doesn’t make sense now.”

I know it's just nonsense just to see the reaction of my collection of meteors, but it was hard to just sit there and listen to those comments. I was already tired, and my energy was completely drained.

“Anyway, if you don’t have any more questions, I’ll be leaving now. I still need to give Geo the Hunter ID I made this time, and I also have a lot of things to teach him, like textbooks and such….”

“Oh, just a moment.”

“What is it?”

“There is something strange in the sea.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un touched his forehead.

“When you say the sea, are you talking about a topic related to that strange phenomenon I went to investigate before? Right now? Right now, after you’ve spouted off a bunch of nonsense and are about to get up?”

Visabal nodded coolly.

“I forgot for a moment.”

“Don’t lie, it makes me sick.”

However, Bisabal would not stop this kind of prank, even if it was just to enjoy and observe Yoo Seong-un's own reactions. It was an eternal truth, but it was still easier to give up.

Yoo Seong-un wisely gave up and sat down on the sofa again.

“So what’s going on?”

“There may not be an official announcement yet, but if there’s one thing that’s the best among the three major guilds in South Korea, it’s their ability to quickly gather information.”

“Oh, yes.”

“I have just asked for some hot information that the association has just confirmed.”

“So what is it?”

“I observed a new dungeon appearing in the sea.”

“…in the sea, a new dungeon….”

Yoo Seong-un turned pale.

“…At this time?”

“At this time.”

The visa holder smiled broadly.

“Does something come to mind?”

“Could it be… that this place is related to the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’?”

“It seems like it’s the same dungeon.”

The visa was approved.

“A few brave hunters from the Association have come to check the interior, and they say that the deeper you go, the more the environment resembles a temple.”

“It’s just like what I saw at the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’. Was there another dungeon connected to it?”

A sigh escaped me.

“If there’s even a strange phenomenon in the sea, then is it really a villa dungeon? A… temple was built?”

“No, it’s just a normal entry dungeon.”

“It must be so dirty and wide.”

One of the characteristics of the entry dungeon is that there is no limit to its scope. Among the entry dungeons confirmed so far, the largest one is as large as a country. And it is as large as Russia.

Because of this, the entry dungeon is the most stable, but it is also known as a dungeon that is more cumbersome and troublesome to conquer. This is especially true when it is expected to be very large, like this one.

“The ‘deep-sea temple’ that I confirmed seemed to be a mixture of a temple and a research lab. The hunters’ reports you mentioned stopped at the temple shape, so the place we saw was probably much further inside… deep underground.”

If that's true, then this guy, Eunha, didn't he just throw people there to die?

'It's common sense that the deeper you go into a dungeon, the lower the survival rate becomes.'

Anyway, no matter how much I accepted the monster's hatred and malice, I could never get used to it.

“Ah, the child I reported to you about, Eunha….”

“We couldn’t find it after your return. It was probably left in the dungeon or changed its form. It is highly likely that it changed its form to resemble a human child in order to take on the appearance of a prospective priest during the initiation ceremony.”

“I see.”

Perhaps because she had decided that it would be difficult to pretend to be human now, 'Galaxy' disappeared.

The scribe asked him.

“Didn’t Geo show any other confusion about that part? It seemed like he was trying to save it.”

“…….”

“It wouldn’t be a shock if the cause of this situation was actually a child named Eunha.”

“That part… looked okay.”

“Hmm.”

Visabal tilted his head and expressed interest.

“You knew that, didn’t you?”

“…We don’t know how far you’ve sorted out your personality, so we can’t say anything, but it looks like you didn’t show any particular shock or surprise after that….”

“Did Geo know from the beginning what kind of existence the galaxy was?”

“Isn’t it inevitable to interpret it that way?”

No, I didn't know.

Geo in the dungeon was just absent-minded, and when he came out and learned the identity of the galaxy, he didn't show any confusion because of his stiff facial muscles.

The certainty that Isser and Eunha in Giovanni's memories were the same person was also gained after escaping the dungeon.

“I would like to know a little more about ‘Giovanni’, who could be said to be the key to peace in a dungeon ruled by humanoid monsters. Is that possible?”

“I’ll give it a try.”

“Oh, and….”

“What now?”

“…….”

Visabal looked at the meteor cloud as if he felt sorry.

“According to a hunter belonging to the association, he witnessed the ‘Portrait of Geo’ in the sea dungeon I just mentioned.”

"…yes?"

“To be exact, it wasn’t ‘Sergio’, but the figure of ‘Black Cloak’. The hunters belonging to the association were able to escape with the help of a tall man wearing a black cloak….”

“Oh please….”

Yoo Seong-un grabbed my head.

“Please, just say something as shocking as I can….”

“Oh, how pitiful.”

“Euuuu….”

I could clearly see myself working overtime in the future.

* * *

Of course, Geo didn't do this just to have fun.

“I didn’t know there would be other people in the dungeon I went to see the faces of my mermaid students.”

“Kurururuk.”

“Even if my dad is so talented that he can even bake sweet potatoes with watercolors, he can’t predict every future.”

Geo thought about the sturdy hunters he had encountered in the places he had visited, thinking, 'Of course there would be no one in that dungeon by now.'

They looked quite scared.

“Just like when the Collectors Guild staff encountered me at dawn.”

“Kung.”

“Even though they seem like very smart elites, those healthy employees are scared….”

“Kung-kung.”

“…I’m scared….”

“Kung, kung, kung.”

“…….”

Let me say this in advance, I thought Geo was capable of grasping reality.

And I also found out that there was a ghost story called 'Black Cloak' in the Collector's Guild. It was partly due to the prank of the guild leader, Bisabal, but it was mostly due to the fact that the employees who believed it seriously were terrified.

"…ah."

A black cloak standing alone in the hallway of a company after everyone has left work, and a black cloak suddenly appearing in a dungeon where there should be no one and showing them a way to survive.

Geo felt a sense of deja vu at the incredible synchronization. Only then did Geo regain his sense of reality and exclaim, “Oh no.”

“…Did I have an accident?”

“Cur.”

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.”

That's what happened.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (70)

Episode 70

“…….”

"so…."

Yoo Seong-un asked Priest Kang Seo-dam, who was sitting in the chair across from him.

“If possible, I would like you to treat ‘Black Cloak’ and ‘Sergio’ as separate characters.”

“Are they separate people?”

“If we separate the ‘stories’ like that, there will be fewer problems in coexisting.”

“I understand what you mean.”

Kang Seo-dam nodded.

“The hunter I saw in the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’ was none other than that ‘Sergio’.”

“That’s right, and the man in the black cloak that the Association’s hunters witnessed this time is someone they don’t know at all. You probably know that it’s the same person, but….”

“If that is God’s will, I will accept it. The Goddess has also expressed her desire for fellowship with him, so it will not be difficult if you just keep your mouth shut.”

He readily accepted Yoo Seong-un's request. It was not simply because it was the will of the goddess he served.

“I didn’t intend to say that I saw a god in the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’ either. I don’t think he wanted to reveal his identity, and if I said that a god appeared at the initiation ceremony I hosted, I would be in trouble for a while. For my own sake, I will not reveal it.”

Although quite some time had passed since he had escaped from the 'Temple of the Deep Sea', Kang Seodam had not properly reported to the religious order about 'Sergio'.

As a priest of the sect, this was an independent action that he would not have taken without the will of the goddess, but it was a decision that would not have been possible if the priest himself had not been flexible. Yoo Seong-un also recognized this and attempted this kind of contact.

Yoo Seong-un let out a sigh of relief.

“Thank you for saying that. I know that the staff within the same guild are the ones who are in charge of the guild leader, but I was worried about how to keep Priest Kang Seodam’s mouth shut since he is a member of the religious order.”

“It’s a bit harsh to say that you’re keeping your mouth shut. However, I also agree that we need to be careful about the ‘Black Cloak’ case. The person I met back then didn’t seem like a normal god.”

Not all gods could enjoy playing around with human impersonations.

“Could it be that he was some kind of demon? I know that there are quite a few demons among beings who can adjust themselves to human standards enough to enjoy play. If so, then this separation measure is also a huge gamble.

“We’re looking into it too.”

“This time again, the collector has responded haphazardly, saying, ‘It’s a beloved piece.’ I still can’t understand the attitude of the guild members who feel safe and secure just because the guild leader thinks it’s cute and safe.”

“But we can’t send Geo to the lab, right?”

“It is true that unethical behaviors are rampant in the Association’s research lab, but if we think about the safety of humanity, it is better. Of course, this is in the case of an evil spirit. Since it is unlikely that someone like him who values peace and mercy would do so, I swear to the sun once again that I will keep this matter quiet.”

However, the fact that the existence of 'Sergio' is never safe for humans has not changed. The mysteries of such great magnitude have destroyed entire dimensions of humanity without any malicious intent, and have also created countless living hells.

“And what’s more, I can go into a dungeon that is inhabited by humanoid monsters as if it were my home and save people….”

To that extent, it far exceeds the authority of a normal god. Even if he is a god, he cannot be omnipotent in all aspects.

Basically, the existence of a god is close to an intangible fate or nature with a will, so not only can it not enjoy the pleasures of a human form, but it can also not enter a dungeon without a problem.

This can be said to be a task that requires strong will, deep experience, and great ability.

“It is an extremely ungrateful story from the perspective of someone who has received so much mercy, but it doesn’t change the fact that ‘Mr. Sergio’ is a dangerous being.”

Kang Seo-dam saw a meteor shower.

“Isn’t it the case that even the collector with the best eyes in the world cannot perceive it?”

“It may seem like a very frustrating situation for the religious order or association, but we are also trying our best to understand it.”

“Isn’t it possible that he is hostile to humanity? I remember the aura he felt was quite close to death.”

“Well, if you get angry, it will be a disaster. You might unconsciously harm humanity. Couldn’t the Earth be destroyed?”

“That’s difficult.”

The Earth is barely hanging on by the mercy of a few strong people.

“…I’ll say it again, I have no intention of interfering with Mr. Sergio’s play. That’s why I didn’t report it to the church, so you know that, Hunter Yoo Seong-un.”

“I know, that’s why I came here. I know that Father Kang Seo-dam has no intention of revealing that guy’s identity, but… I still wanted to hear a proper confirmation because of the situation.”

In order to create a world where one can coexist with this terrifying portrait, and so that the day will come when more of its appearances can be appreciated, Bisabal hoped that 'Sergio' and 'Black Cloak' would be successfully separated. The same was true for Yoo Seong-un.

“The appearance of the blond, blue-eyed Geo has already been revealed in the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’, so we cannot deny its existence, but this time, the only one the Association has officially identified is the ‘Black Cloak’.”

“I understand what made you make that decision. A mere human being cannot stop the play of such a powerful god. It is clear that the future will only result in innocent victims.”

“We came to a similar conclusion. We think it is quite irresponsible neglect, but the collector wants coexistence rather than control. It is our guild’s long-standing motto.”

In any case, the accidents caused by 'Portrait of Geo' cannot be prevented by humans. In that case, let's officially manage the collection of 'Giovanni', which has already been revealed, while quietly trying to persuade Geo behind the scenes to reduce the conflict between humans and him.

“I’m not saying that you should just sit back and do nothing because you’re a collector. I think that if you pay attention, you can reduce the level of agitation among people.”

“How do you plan to reduce the noise?”

“They’re turning ‘Black Cloak’ into an urban legend. They’re making it into a normal story that people can enjoy and have fun with.”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam's expression distorted subtly. It seemed like an expression that tried to politely suppress irritation, discomfort, and absurdity.

“…I don’t think that will work. If things go wrong, the name ‘Black Cloak’ will become an object of fear, and he may become an even stronger disaster.”

“For now, that’s fine with the collectors. Right now, our staff treats

‘Black Cloak’ like a ghost story, and has found a balance that fits their rules.”

“I think that’s because of the nature of the Collector’s Guild. I’m sure it wouldn’t be easy to take into account everyone in the city, in Korea, and even in the world at large.”

“But isn’t it better than doing nothing?”

“…Phew….”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been furrowing his brows with a tired expression, either because he thought it was not a topic he should be arguing about, or because he found it difficult to continue talking about the same topic, immediately asked another question.

“…But, is it okay to call God so friendly? Like that guy, or Geo….”

Kang Seo-dam's reaction was a bit tired.

“How dare you treat that giant being imitating human skin like that.”

“Geo wants that.”

“…….”

“I guess it must feel awkward from the priest’s perspective.”

“…It can’t be helped.”

Regardless of religion, there were three rules required of priests who served God.

“First, do not look into the eyes of God. Second, do not call the name of God. Third, do not test God… I think even the Meteor Cloud Hunter knows this well.”

“It’s a famous rule.”

“It’s not that we should try to know the nature of God. Priests basically try to keep a certain distance when dealing with God. Treating God too friendly can also be an infringement on His nature, so we try to prevent that in advance.”

“…….”

“In this day and age, faith is certainly being used as a means. Because of this, the human attitude toward God has become more intimate than before the great disaster, and their image has become much more worldly… but even so, the fact that those who possess divinity are an intangible disaster remains unchanged.”

Although they are traditionally categorized as gods and evil gods, in reality, if we look at the absolute standard, it is quite ambiguous. In other words, a divinity that is clearly harmful to humanity is evaluated as an evil god.

But how can nature and destiny be divided into good and evil? No matter how much a mere being like humans tries to measure and classify them, it will only result in troublesome problems.

“Willful or not, God can be a disaster to humanity at any time.”

The priests should have known this better than any human being.

“If you forget that, it is as if you are not qualified to be a priest.”

“It’s quite profound.”

“It meant that Mr. Yoo Seong-un should also be careful. I have seen countless people who called out the true name of God and burst under the weight of fate. That is what it means to receive the gaze of God.”

“I know that too.”

Rather, Yoo Seong-un may have known better.

“This side is also somewhat of an expert.”

From the perspective of a gardener, the gods of the present generation are classified as a kind of 'children of the origin'.

An intangible, silent disaster that is closely connected to the source and can exist in any dimension. A destiny with a will and a living story. All of these conditions fit the description of the 'Child of the Source'.

'But I can't tell that part to the priest.'

I would be happy if I only heard that it was blasphemous.

In the first place, the existence of the gardener and the knowledge related to it were dangerous information that only a few people could know and handle, so I couldn't bring up Geo's story to save face.

“Anyway, don’t be too surprised if you see Geo active in society soon. I think Geo will be quite flexible and have a good personality at that time, so he won’t cause any trouble. His status will also be secure.”

“…….”

“I meant that I would be introduced as a trainer who is a devout believer who can handle the power of the Holy Spirit, so please adjust your rhythm. The essential energy may be different, but Geo is primarily closer to the sun god lineage.”

“That’s why I’m telling you not to talk like that. It’s embarrassing to hear.”

“How can I do this when it’s my way?”

"ha…."

“Oh, by the way.”

Yoo Seong-un asked, blinking.

“Has the Association formalized the information about the ‘Black Cloak’?”

One of the things the association does is to establish rules for hunters regarding the existences they should be aware of. Yoo Seong-un thinks that the 'black cloak' that was seen this time was enough to make it official.

“If you open the floodgates first, it will be easier for us to make it look like a ghost story.”

“Now that the newly discovered entrance dungeon has been named, we’ll probably get a summary of the ‘Black Cloak’ soon.”

“As expected from a priest of the Sun Church, you’re quick with information. What’s the name of that dungeon?”

“It’s not much different from the places we’ve visited.”

Kang Seo-dam continued speaking.

“They called it the ‘Land of the Deep Sea.’”

“What….”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“It’s intuitive and good.”

It was a name that suited him well.

* * *

“A true hunter.”

“…….”

“Are you ready, Jeongdaun Hunter?”

“…….”

The woman with flowing brown hair nodded.

“…Yes, I’m ready.”

“We will now have a Q&A session about what happened in the ‘Deep Sea Country’.”

"yes."

“Jung Da-woon, who was the team leader, will take questions on behalf of the hunter, but if he lacks information, he will also receive help from Jung Da-woon’s colleagues.”

"yes."

“For now….”

The man in the doctor's gown sitting across from Hunter continued speaking.

“Let’s start with a light story.”

“…….”

“You seem very nervous. It’s been about three days since you finished your exploration of the ‘Deep Sea Kingdom’. Perhaps you haven’t had enough rest?”

“…….”

“I’m not asking you why you haven’t recovered yet, so please feel free to talk. Only when the mind and body of the Jeongdaun Hunter are stabilized can we answer your questions.”

"…yes."

The hesitant hunter spoke with a hollow laugh. His voice was recorded on the recorder.

“I’m sorry, I’ve fully recovered.”

“I repeat, there is nothing to be sorry about.”

“It’s just… I can’t get it out of my head….”

“If that’s the case, are you referring to the ‘black cloak’ that was witnessed this time?”

“Yes, that’s right. It’s a black cloak.”

The woman raised her head.

“Oh, so the name was decided to be ‘Black Cloak’?”

“It was temporarily named that way, but we don’t know how the name will change in the future. The Association has absolutely no information about the Black Cloak.”

“I am the first discoverer…?”

“We asked the Hunter Associations of each country for cooperation, but we have not received any information regarding the being you witnessed. We will have to check it out a bit more, but I believe that it is highly likely that this is the first sighting by a Jeongdawoon Hunter.”

"…okay."

In fact, the first discoverer was Bisabal, who had already discovered his true identity, and even if it was witnessed by ordinary people other than those involved, Cha Ara was there, but because it was so peaceful, information about him was not relayed to the association.

“Then my answer will become very important.”

“Yes. I don’t want to burden you, but since you are known to be a very high-ranking being, the response method the Association has come up with will vary depending on how accurate the information you, Jeongdaun Hunter, provide.”

“…….”

The hunter nodded.

“I am ready.”

“Then, let’s begin the questioning.”

The man, a researcher at the association, began to ask serious questions.

“Where was the first place you saw the ‘Black Cloak’?”

“…It was a temple in the ‘Deep Sea Country’.”

“Let’s continue from there. The ‘Deep Sea Kingdom’ is said to have the structure of a 1st stage, above the sea. 2nd stage, a submerged city under the water. 3rd stage, a gigantic temple. Is that correct?”

“Yes, that’s right. When you first enter, the hunters will be standing on the sea. If you don’t intentionally try to enter, you won’t fall in. If you move a little too aggressively, you’ll fall in… but you can also come back up.”

“Then, the ‘Deep Sea Country’ is structured so that the risk increases the further down you go.”

“Yes, there were no monsters to speak of on the sea. I confirmed that it was possible to breathe even when going under the water surface. However, the tension of the water did limit their movements.”

“They say monsters have been sighted since stage 2.”

“It felt like a zombie living in the water…? There were also strange slimes that looked like chunks of flesh. There were other things as well… But I think my team members reported on this.”

“Yes, I checked it again.”

The researcher nodded.

“Now let’s move on to the temple. Is there a big difference between the monsters in the second stage, ‘The Submerged City’, and the monsters in the third stage, ‘The Temple of the Deep Sea’?”

“The fact that they looked more vicious? The species itself looked similar. However, the monsters found on the temple side were much more vicious and vicious. Naturally, they were also more dangerous.”

“Then, this is where the main topic starts.”

The researcher took out a photo from between the files and showed it to Hunter.

“This photo was taken by Hunter Kim Yi-yeon, one of our team members.”

“…….”

The person in the photo was a man wrapped entirely in a black cloak.

“You described this being as male, but in fact it may not have a gender at all. It is wearing a cloak all over its body, so there is no guarantee that it has a human form.”

“…That’s right.”

“Is there a reason you described him as ‘a man in a black cloak’?”

“Because that’s how it felt.”

Even as a skilled hunter, she knows well about the ambiguity of monsters. Just because someone has a deep voice or is tall doesn't mean they're male. She's never seen the entity inside the cloak, so she doesn't know if it's human form.

Even the 'Black Cloak' didn't make a sound when it walked. All you could hear was the sound of very light grass rustling, but it was strange that I was certain that inside it was a heavy human body.

“…….”

Yeah, that's weird.

“…But still, it felt like a ‘human’.”

We know that they are not human, but we still say that they are 'human'.

“As if it were such an obvious fact….”

If Geo had heard this, he would have felt a little wronged, thinking, "I'm human after all."

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (71)

Episode 71

Going back in time a bit, after Geo returned to the cabin after leaving the 'Temple of the Deep Sea'.

“I knew that the Earth today was a much more dangerous place than I remembered 30 years ago….”

“Gurrrr….”

“I never thought that a terrorist attack, not a terrorist attack, would happen at such a large religious event. It was the first terrorist incident I’ve ever experienced in my life.”

Geo was calming down.

“What a scary world. At the tender age of 29, I almost lost my family.”

It wouldn't be easy for him to die, having enjoyed a miracle greater than the miracle of becoming one with the Source in a mere human body, but since he himself really doesn't know anything about it, he'll just ignore it.

It was surprising that the student Eunha met at the initiation ceremony and the Isser in Giovanni's memories were the same person, but it was even said that he was the one who led this terrorist incident.

“…….”

Giovanni became very upset.

“He wasn’t like that originally, so why did he become like that?”

“…….”

“…If I had to find a reason, it would probably be my fault, right?”

“Kuru.”

“Oh, sun.”

Yeah, honestly, it was a bit too much to die like that. Giovanni also knew his guilt.

“Isser especially thought of me as a father figure. He was such a kind and honest friend, so the incident at that time must have been even more shocking. It’s scary when good kids decide to go astray….”

He groaned.

“I should at least pack some food for you.”

And these Geos were not the type to think deeply. They were a combination of two guys whose basic creed was 'What should I do?'

He was a good man, if anything, but he knew how to make objective judgments that were even colder than that. He didn't blame himself or regret things that weren't his responsibility. This terrorist incident was no different.

It seemed like it was an incident that happened because the disciple was shocked by his master's death and went astray, but that doesn't mean it was the fault of the dead master, Giovanni. There was no reason to be scared when there was someone else who caused the accident.

“This teacher knows everything. He’s just sensitive because he’s hungry.”

“Ugh…?”

“People need to be well-fed themselves to be able to care for others.”

Geo sorted out the state of his disciple, the mermaid Isser, with a considerable degree of guilt.

“Most incidents and accidents that are committed as crimes committed by humans are said to be caused by the mental health of the people who commit the crimes. Most people who are living a stable life do not commit such acts.”

Would this have happened if Isser, who originally couldn't even handle fish, let alone people, had remained happy and mentally healthy?

Geo, who returned with black hair, asked.

“Honey, you should remember this too. There are few people who are irritable when their bodies are healthy and their stomachs are full. If you just fill their stomachs, people tend to become gentle.”

“Kkukkung?”

“People who still get upset are really weird, so just ignore them. If you give them food and they repay the favor with enmity, then either the person who gave them the food killed their parents, or the person who ate the food is weird.”

“Kkuk.”

“Then, now is the most important time for me to deal with it. How should this incompetent master react to the disciple who devoured him? It’s really a headache to know that he grew up to be a terrorist, so I could just live the rest of my life without seeing him….”

Of course, Geo couldn't do that.

“I’ve fed those kids so much, you can’t just look at them once and say you don’t know me.”

He doesn't care if it's not something he's responsible for. The recent Solar Cult initiation ceremony terrorist incident was definitely not his fault, but Giovanni was definitely responsible for his former disciple Isser growing up like that.

“It may have been the best it could have been at the time, but if he hadn’t been eaten alive, Isser wouldn’t have become so twisted.”

“Kururuk.”

Honey nodded. Her face said, 'I guess you're right,' so Geo had nothing more to say.

“…Anyway, so….”

In an effort to deal with the aftermath of his actions as a human, an adult, and a teacher, he devised a way to meet the mermaid siblings again.

“I remember that ‘The Breathing Sea’ and Isser’s Dungeon had a similar atmosphere.”

But even so, it seemed difficult to find the 'deep-sea temple' through the 'breathing sea'. Who would do something so reckless knowing where and what could be in that vast world? The two might actually be connected.

Geo nodded.

“Fortunately, I have the ability to visit other people’s dungeons at will.”

“Kururuk?”

“Okay, let’s try drawing a picture.”

Didn't you already experience it once with 'The Vein of Jewels'? At that time, you failed to achieve your goal of a desirable social life, but thanks to that, you were able to save a young student named Cha Ara.

“This is a pretty useful ability.”

If Yoo Seong-un had heard of it, he would have made a petty comment, saying, "It's probably not that useful," but Geo was a reclusive loner.

“You can also eat sweet potatoes…. If you put a little butter and salt on top of the sweet potatoes and drizzle honey on them, they’re really delicious.”

“Gurrrr!!”

“It’s similar to honey-sweet potato stir-fry, but a little more moist and soft. Oh, and if you add a little whipped cream on top, it’s really fantastic….”

A lonely young man stuck in a shack with no internet access could not possibly know such common sense. To him, his drawing ability was no different from the food truck that filled his stomach.

Geo went to see his father.

"father."

“Kyuu.”

At some point, a teddy bear version of the sun god began to live in the cabin.

“You were playing with Danawa.”

“Kukuku….”

“I’m glad it looks good.”

Last time, the jewel cat, Anticat Dana, who I brought from the 'Jewel Vein', was cold. So I wondered if she would get along well with the teddy bear that was warm from the sun, but it seemed like a perfect match.

“It’s just that I wanted to meet Isser again.”

“Kyuuu.”

“Thank you for your support. I’m thinking about drawing a picture to make a passage, but I think it’ll take a lot of time….”

“Kukuku.”

“Thank you for your consideration. I’ve put the snacks in the storage room, so please eat them at your convenience.”

Even during my recent trip to Seoul, I thought, 'Hehe, I'll just see the event and come back home right away,' but I ended up spending a lot of time at the shrine.

In case something similar happens again, Geo has made all the necessary preparations to ensure that the cabin can remain peaceful even without him.

“…….”

Geo, who was sitting in the studio, blinked his eyes twice. He muttered.

“…Come to think of it, that temple, maybe….”

The 'Temple of the Deep Sea' that Geo had seen seemed familiar for some reason.

“Is this where I died?”

“Kuruk.”

“I don’t remember that part in detail.”

Fairness rate 94.5%

“…….”

Still, I remembered exactly what the dungeon looked like.

“Let’s draw.”

Geo started drawing 'The Temple of the Deep Sea'.

A laboratory with pure white pillars and high ceilings that hold a sense of sacredness, and yet not incongruous.

The air is filled with rippling water scales and countless monsters roaming the streets… .

“…….”

Geo is absorbed in the painting.

* * *

A warehouse where finished works are covered with black cloth.

“…….”

The sun god, who was sitting in the middle of the warehouse holding the anti-cat Dana in his arms, raised his head and looked to one side that was emitting a cold light.

“…Kkuu.”

“?”

“Kukuku….”

The 'Breathing Sea', which could be called the home of the sun god, was resonating.

"dream."

May that story come to an end.

The sun immersed in the sea prayed earnestly.

* * *

“…….”

Geo, wearing a black cloak pulled down low, was in the 'Temple of the Deep Sea'.

"oh."

This works.

“I felt this way when I went to the ‘Jewel Vein,’ but it’s a really convenient means of transportation.”

“Kururuk.”

“Let’s take a look around.”

Perhaps because the place itself was so large, he didn't think about going straight to Isser. Strictly speaking, it was trespassing, so Geo decided to look around a little more cautiously.

I had just come back from painting in my studio, so my feet were still bare, but they weren't that cold. The shallow seawater on the floor made a pleasant splashing sound.

“…….”

Giovanni felt a brief sense of guilt as he entered the house of his well-dressed disciple without permission.

“Should I buy another cell phone?”

“Kung….”

“Yeah, the signal won’t go through.”

It was inevitable due to the nature of portraits, but it was also the case in the gallery of the Collector's Guild, and Geo was destined to have no choice but to adapt to unauthorized intrusion.

'No one would expect a living person to jump out of a portrait and bring it into their home.'

Geo humbly accepted his fate of continuing to surprise countless people. It was a bit funny, so it was okay.

“It doesn’t look much different from the last time I saw it.”

“Kururuk.”

Fortunately or unfortunately, finding the way wasn't that difficult.

“Something… familiar.”

It was all thanks to Giovanni's memory.

“Because that’s where I worked.”

“Huh?”

“Oh, I see. That’s where I worked. I remember.”

Giovanni nodded.

“I wasn’t originally stationed here, but I did receive training here. Only after I was properly recognized as a priest would I be allowed to go to other regions and conduct my own activities. Until then, I had to receive training at a temple like this.”

“Kuru.”

“Don’t worry, my memory isn’t perfect, but I haven’t forgotten the path itself. I’ve spent time here with other people before, and things have come to mind….”

Geo, who was walking down the street, looked around.

“But it still feels unfamiliar.”

The temple he remembered had no such research facility.

“…….”

After feeling the difference in time, Giovanni's temper softened.

“Let’s go to the exit.”

“Kururuk.”

Geo found the stairs to the temple and climbed them.

Then, I met someone.

“…….”

“…….”

“……?”

Why are you coming out of there?

* * *

“…….”

Back again, Hunter Jung Da-woon of the Association continued speaking.

“…Does that still sound a little strange?”

“To be honest, yes, I don’t quite understand.”

The researcher nodded.

“But I understand what the gentleman hunter is trying to say. You are saying that even though you clearly know with your mind that the other person is not human, you instinctively feel that the other person is human, right?”

"yes that's right."

“Then there’s no chance that it’s that kind of brainwashing?”

Among monsters, especially humanoid ones, there were many with mental skills.

“There are many monsters that try to disguise themselves as humans, even if they are not humanoid monsters. It would make more sense if they covered themselves with a cloak to keep their true identity from being revealed, and used mental skills to make themselves appear human.”

“…I don’t think that would have been the case.”

The hunter shook his head as he recalled the memory.

“It was a dungeon that was created in the sea right after the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’, which was judged to be a dungeon with a high level of danger. At the time, I didn’t know that the two dungeons were connected, but I tried to enter it, assuming that there would be at least some connection.”

“I guess that means you prepared thoroughly before entering.”

“Yes, among the things we prepared, there was an item for brainwashing. As you’ve already heard, this item is an A-class item that can nullify the mental skills of up to 10 people. Of course, you could say that the ‘Black Cloak’ used a skill higher than A-class….”

The hunter hesitated for a moment and then continued.

“I’m sure, the item didn’t react to ‘Black Cloak’ in the first place.”

“Not even a little bit?”

“It’s not just that we didn’t defend ourselves, it’s that there was no such thing. ‘Black Cloak’ never used any mental skills against us even once.”

“And yet, you’re saying that the Jeongdaun Hunter felt the other person as a human being? And that was with someone so alienated from him that he felt a sense of alienation.”

“It was a feeling that was almost certain. I thought it was impossible for me to deny it.”

That was absolutely ridiculous.

“For some reason, I felt reassured, as if I were lying in a cozy bed, but at the same time, I was surprised and got goosebumps at the sight of myself. I felt a little more reassured… I’m sorry, I can’t describe it in detail.”

“I understand.”

The researcher, who had offered some simple consolation, continued asking questions.

“Then let’s go back to the topic we had earlier. Instead of focusing on the identity of the ‘Black Cloak’, describe its behavior. How did you first encounter it?”

“…It was after I entered the third stage, the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’. Since it was a place where people were once eaten in the form of a virtual dungeon, I could definitely see traces of other people. Of course, in the end, there was no one who could be called human….”

The hunter said, still feeling dizzy.

“While wandering around the temple, I came across a humanoid monster.”

“The report says ‘Mermaid Isser’. Do you think it is the same being as ‘Galaxy’ that Priest Kang Seodam of the Solar Cult reported?”

“I guess that’s inevitable, right? Oh, of course, the being we encountered wasn’t a child, but an adult. It was our first time encountering a humanoid monster, so we were all nervous.”

“Well, it’s been a really long time since a humanoid monster has been officially sighted.”

The hunter nodded as if to express his gratitude for understanding and continued speaking.

“He introduced himself as a mermaid, and his name was Isser. He had pearl-colored eyes and bright blue hair, just like Priest Kang Seodam described. Based on the photo of the ‘Galaxy’ he reported, it seemed like it was definitely the same entity.”

The weary-faced hunter folded his arms and leaned back in his chair.

“As you probably already know, the story of the dungeon….”

“The report described it as ‘a monster born from the tragic loss of a dear human being.’”

“Like all monsters, they have a strong hatred for humans. However, they are very good at disguising themselves as humans, so at first we thought they were priests who couldn’t escape.”

The way he approached with the priest's characteristically benevolent smile clearly made him look more human.

“But we didn’t continue the pretense. We were confused for a moment, but we quickly realized that our opponents were monsters, and it seemed that the mermaid Isser didn’t intend to keep acting for too long… The battle began.”

“And you said you escaped safely. Right?”

“For some reason, the enemy entity showed a strange reaction. Our team at the time concluded that there must have been some kind of problem in the dungeon. They made the other monsters in the dungeon fight us and then went off somewhere.”

“But the cause is….”

"yes."

The hunter nodded as if to say that what you were thinking was correct.

“The reason Yser ran away was probably because of the ‘Black Cloak’… I knew it the moment I saw its existence.”

“I’ll ask again, but how did you meet him?”

“…they asked for our identities.”

I still remember it vividly.

“He asked… what your name was.”

The eeriness at that time was indescribable, Hunter added.

As expected, it was a statement that made Geo feel wronged, saying, "Can't I even make a statement?"

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (72)

Episode 72

Of course, public statements were a popular and convenient way to socialize.

“But, you know that… what should I say… feeling like something that’s not human at all is imitating a human?”

“Monsters often try to imitate humans in order to lure them. In the case of the Jangsanbeom, a monster that has yet to be subdued, it imitates human voices. Among the monsters overseas, there are some that wear human skins or learn human language.”

The hunter shook his head at the researcher's words.

“It didn’t feel that awkward. Like I said earlier, I was sure that it was human even though it was obvious that it wasn’t human at all.”

“Yes, you said so.”

“It’s something along the same lines.”

The hunter explained with an embarrassed look on his face as if to say, 'How can I make you understand this?'

“Obviously, ‘Black Cloak’ wasn’t human. But there was no frills in acting like a human. In the case of the monster you just gave as an example, that short story may seem perfect, but… it doesn’t seem like a perfect human, right?”

“…….”

“On the other hand, there was no such sense of incongruity with ‘Black Cloak’. There was a strong sense of discomfort, but he was definitely a perfect human being. That was….”

“A perfect human being.”

The researcher stared straight at the hunter.

“Humans cannot be perfect.”

“That’s the problem.”

The hunter nodded.

“It was too perfect.”

The behavior of the 'black cloak' I saw that day was definitely not out of place for a human, but it did feel quite uncomfortable.

“It’s as if they weren’t human when they were born, but became human afterwards….”

“That’s not a specific description.”

“They call it a hunter’s intuition. Should I say it’s strong? Even though there’s no clear evidence, I think I just had this intuition that made me think, ‘Wow, this is really weird. I can’t just ignore this.’”

The hunter laughed in vain.

“Actually, anyone who looks at it would think that he is not a human being, even if he is called ‘tactile’.”

Regardless of age or gender, if you throw it in front of anyone, they will think, 'Hey, that's not a human being,' so it shouldn't be defined by a vague sense called intuition.

It was very polite. The voice that permeated my ears as if teaching someone seemed to be whispering through my brain rather than my mouth, and the voice was so quiet that it was embarrassing to even call it a 'sound'. He was like a peaceful tomb.

“I just meant that, um, the feeling I had was so contradictory and ambiguous. It’s too hard to explain in detail. I think you’ll know what I’m talking about when you see the ‘Black Cloak’ yourself.”

“Hmm….”

The researcher asked, seeming puzzled.

“Surprisingly, you are friendly towards ‘Black Cloak’?”

“…Huh? Me? Did I do that?”

“I don’t think you realized it, but what you just said didn’t sound like ‘You should try it too’, but more like ‘I want to introduce it to you too.’ Did I misunderstand?”

“…….”

The hunter, who had been hesitating for a long time, finally opened his mouth.

“…I think it would be better to be friendly.”

“Don’t worry, I’m not criticizing you, it’s just a genuine question. I’m just curious how you could have such kindness toward someone who is obviously a target of fear.”

“Ah… It’s so difficult….”

The hunter sighed and continued.

“…I wonder if saying this is a sufficient answer, but I think it was because the other person was very kind to us.”

“A monster, to a human?”

“Didn’t you write it down in the report?”

“I understand how you acted, but that alone doesn’t quite make sense. Can you explain?”

“…….”

The hunter, who had been pondering, nodded.

“I think it would be better to talk about it from the first time we met.”

She recalled what had happened in the 'Deep Sea Country'.

That big black cloak.

* * *

“Team leader.”

It was when I was running away from the humanoid monster 'Iser' and the monsters he was with.

“There are no other monsters around.”

“Are you sure? What about the trap?”

“There’s no such thing. We all checked together, so we’re sure.”

“It’s a little strange….”

Team leader Jung Da-woon Hunter knew that the situation was strange.

“It’s not like the dungeon master doesn’t know where we are, so it doesn’t make sense that there are no monsters in this area. This isn’t a safe zone.”

“Even if you look closely, it’s not true….”

Safe zones are literally 'safe areas' that exist in some dungeons. Sometimes, when there are multiple owners of a dungeon, monsters avoid these areas to avoid conflict with other entities.

'There are some safe zones that are placed there as exceptions where there is no issue with territorial disputes, but it can't be said to be that kind of atmosphere.'

Moreover, there was objective evidence.

“There are too many traces of monsters passing through here to call it a safe zone.”

“In a place where there were originally a lot of monsters, the monsters suddenly disappeared?”

It wasn't a good sign.

“Then wouldn’t it only be the case that a stronger monster invades…?”

If you think about it that way, the reaction of 'Iser', who we confronted just now, was also somewhat strange.

“There was something strange in the dungeon, so he looked confused.”

“Yes, if you think about how the air throughout the dungeon shook, then there must have been a problem. This dungeon seems to be closely connected to its owner.”

“If it’s not even a monster, but a humanoid monster, that’s enough to shake things up, then it would have to be a much stronger monster to be considered a demon. But if that’s the case….”

“…We won’t be safe either.”

“Oh, this is totally screwed.”

I was running away without thinking, so I didn't even realize that this place was dangerous.

“You came into the tiger’s den on your own two feet.”

The place where a monster so strong that it shook the humanoid monster 'Iser' seemed to be the space where they were.

“No matter how bad it is, it’ll be nearby.”

“…I was so out of it….”

“Yeah, if I hadn’t come here anyway, I would have died.”

They had to come here even though they didn't think there was anything strange on their way here. With their bodies in such bad condition, they wouldn't have been able to defeat the other monsters around them and successfully conquer them.

“…Phew….”

Jeong Da-un tried to smile.

“Well, it could be a monster that can communicate.”

“That’s true too.”

The hunters snickered among themselves, even though they knew that the chances of that happening were slim. They had already realized long ago that they could die here, and that was why they had prepared themselves mentally in advance.

“Do you know? If you beg me with all your heart, I might save you.”

The hunters took a break while joking like that.

“Hey, hey, get some rest. If you leave here, it’ll be war again.”

“Yeah… Well, if you don’t rest now, then when will you rest again?”

“Ahhh, Daria… Does anyone have a potion?”

Thanks to that, I was able to have time to reorganize, but as time passed, my anxiety grew.

“…Why don’t monsters come here?”

“…How strong a monster must it be to refuse even the food that has been laid out for it….”

The most frequent attacks by monsters were when hunters were semi-forced to regroup. Hunters who were almost at their limit and had weakened weapons were a good snack for monsters.

“But you still don’t come this far?”

Even the humanoid monsters that were confronting us were flustered and fled their positions. It was to the point where I couldn't understand what was happening in this dungeon.

“I can’t just sit still like this.”

“But if you move rashly, you could upset the minds of two monsters at the same time.”

“But just staying here is a problem in its own right.”

“You’re right, but….”

“…….”

"…ah."

The gaze of the gentle hunter who was comforting his teammates was focused somewhere.

“Team Leader? Why….”

“…….”

“…….”

Something very black entered the hunters' sight.

“A, a person?”

“Are you a survivor?”

“No, that’s….”

It was a man wearing a black cloak over his head.

"hello."

“…….”

“I am a portrait.”

"…uh…."

“What is your name?”

“Uh, uh….”

“I wonder what your name is.”

That was my first encounter with the Black Cloak.

“Would you like to talk to me?”

* * *

“…….”

The researcher shrugged.

“Just from what you said, I don’t feel any favor at all?”

“That’s true. It’s scary to have something that isn’t human ask for a human’s name in the first place. It was the same for me and my team members.”

“…….”

“But maybe I was a little relieved that it seemed like a conversation was possible.”

In contrast to 'Iser', whose will to tear humans apart and kill them was as vivid as a color, 'Black Cloak', who approached silently and asked for conversation, did not seem to have even the slightest animosity.

“If you were to ask if I wasn’t afraid of its very existence, I would say that’s absolutely not the case….”

Still, I felt relieved.

“…I guess I should say it feels like I’m receiving the favor of something very… high-class.”

“…If you say something of a very high rank, are you referring to a god? If so, it would be difficult to say that it is a monster. Although rare, there are gods that visit dungeons in a form that humans can recognize, so please answer with that in mind.”

“No, I also know what God is. He is a being close to fate or nature with a will. But from my perspective as a believer of the sun, I would say that he was definitely not God. I felt the divinity, but it wasn’t.”

Rather, it may have been a being higher than that.

“I felt the energy of the sun on him. It was really warm. But it was also cold, like a corpse. I definitely felt the energy of death. But it wasn’t rough, and it was all just a shell… No, no, that kind of… More like, just….”

“…….”

“…For the ‘Black Cloak’, rank and authority seemed of no use. We sometimes call God fate and nature with will, but he didn’t even seem to have will. He thought and moved… but could you call that will?”

“What does that mean?”

“He just seemed to exist.”

He had no intention of saving anyone, no intention of harming anyone, no intention of being honest, no intention of being greedy. But he was clearly thinking and able to communicate.

“…….”

“…….”

“…I don’t know how to explain this either.”

Birth and death. Living and nonliving things. The very act of trying to find 'will' in the way they think and act feels impure. A sense so great and vivid that it is impossible to explain from a human perspective.

“And those, those eyes….”

Oh, that's it.

"…that…."

“…What could it have been?”

“…….”

She answered after a while.

“I felt like anything could happen.”

I can't believe how vast and expansive things are contained in those small eyes.

It couldn't be expressed with the hackneyed word 'space'. Between the endless black and blue space, the stars that were densely spaced, fate, nature, and destiny moved as if they had their own will, and at other times, they became quiet like mere inanimate objects.

How could a human being express that? It couldn't be done. That's why it didn't work.

“At least I can’t.”

An area that humans should not see.

“It seemed like it was itself.”

“…….”

“So, I guess we can’t call it… God, right?”

It was more like a structure.

“…Or the system? Or maybe… No, I don’t know.”

"…okay."

The researcher nodded.

“But in the end, it was thanks to his kindness that you were able to survive.”

“Yes, he did. He didn’t seem to know that we were scared, but he was still quite gentlemanly. I understand that it would have been difficult for something that wasn’t human to perceive human emotions.”

“The ‘Black Cloak’ introduced itself as a portrait….”

“I thought that was the most fitting introduction.”

A portrait that is human but not human, real or imagined, and that contains someone's death or life. The introduction of 'Black Cloak' was very appropriate.

“Well, and….”

"and?"

“I used that method too.”

They came back to life through paintings.

* * *

'Black Cloak' asked the hunters who had calmed down a little.

“Then you want to go out, don’t you?”

“That, that of course….”

“Let me help you.”

He brought a picture frame from somewhere and showed it to the hunters.

“…….”

“Do you know this place?”

It was a landscape painting that seemed to depict an alley deep in the city. It probably looked like a slum, but the hunter who knew the complex structure of the slum, which was intertwined like an ant hole, was not there.

“…….”

“Do you know this place?”

“Oh, no. Sorry.”

I couldn't help but answer when he asked me twice in the same tone, as if he didn't like it when I didn't answer on time. Jeong Da-woon gave them a look that said, "Do you know?", but they shook their heads.

He was anxious. He had to solve this mysterious riddle to survive. No, even if that wasn't the case, for some reason, Jeong Da-woon wanted to live up to the expectations of the being in front of him. He wanted to catch his eye.

“…….”

And so, she couldn't lie. Jeongdaun shook her head in awe and fear that made it impossible for her to even imagine such a thing.

“…I’m sorry, we… don’t know.”

“You don’t have to be sorry.”

It was a steady voice that conveyed no emotion, but did not feel cold either. 'Black Cloak' swept the top of the frame with his long, pale hands.

Then the landscape changed.

“Do you know this place?”

"ah."

I definitely knew this picture.

“Yes, yes, I know. That… the Collector’s Guild Station… the subway, yes, the subway station.”

"you're right."

"ha…."

Jeong Da-un was greatly relieved.

Although his hands were visible, his entire body was covered by a black cloak, and his opponent, who was only a shadow, did not feel like he had any real body.

“So, then… will you let us go?”

“You don’t have to be afraid.”

“…….”

“Yes, I will help you.”

A black cloak that seemed to symbolize a funeral, like a grim reaper, stroked the painting.

“Can I draw you?”

'Black Cloak' melted the hunters into paint and painted them into landscapes.

“…….”

"…uh…."

“…That’s ridiculous….”

When they opened their eyes, they were at a subway station.

It was an unexpected comeback.

* * *

“…….”

“…….”

“Is this enough of an answer?”

“…Yes, for now.”

The researcher nodded.

“I will report to the association.”

It was the moment when the 'Black Cloak' was officially registered in the world.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (73)

Episode 73

“It was a miracle.”

The researcher nodded at the woman's voice, which sounded like a machine.

“Yes, it is a miracle.”

“Do you think the entity that Team Leader Jeong Da-woon witnessed was a monster?”

“I’ll have to ask the gardeners for their opinions, but no, it’s not a monster.”

The researcher shrugged.

“A monster… basically has to have a hatred towards humans.”

They are not called monsters or freaks for nothing. Humans call these other-dimensional beings who hate humans endlessly monsters with fear and contempt.

“This case is completely different. We examined the hunters who returned alive, but we couldn’t find anything abnormal anywhere. If ‘Black Cloak’ was a monster, we wouldn’t have let him out alive in the first place, and we would have brainwashed him to get him out.”

“But I think it would be better to say that the announcement itself is a monster."

"Yes. The 'Black Cloak' has shown too much interest in human society to be a god. It's possible that he's an evil god, but… whether he's a true god or whatever his true identity is, since he's shown to have the power to directly influence humans, it would be wiser to explain him to the Hunters as a monster."

"That way, I can make them feel alert."

Gods and monsters have become quite familiar entities in modern times, but there is a big difference in perception.

In the case of gods, there would be people who would consider it a glory just by seeing their form, but in the case of monsters, they would try to keep their distance and be on guard.

"If it backfires, the very existence of a 'human-friendly humanoid monster' might appeal to the romantic sentiments of the citizens, but for that to happen… there would have to be a significant increase in such favorable cases and exposure. And the probability of that happening is low."

It seems to be a mystery that is quite closely related to the source, but the closer the being is to the source, the more ignorant and indifferent they are to humans. They would not easily show up on this small planet.

"Of course, 'Black Cloak' may actually create many good-natured cases and thus be talked about by citizens. However, it would be difficult for citizens to simply accept the goodwill of such an entity. 'Black Cloak' would not be able to become a friendly image to people."

"We should also keep in mind that the 'Black Cloak' may be able to control his temperament well and have a high level of understanding of humans. However, the story of declaring him a monster is valid. Since the existence of the source is close to a natural disaster, we should at least be on guard.”

“Actually, there is no difference between gods and monsters in terms of their threat to humans, but I guess that’s why image is important. If we tell people that they are monsters and not gods, then even if ‘Black Cloak’ shows hostility towards humans in the future, his survival rate will increase.”

The researcher continued, gently stroking his chin.

“However, even if someone witnessed it, they wouldn’t believe it even if you said it was a monster. Even the most polite hunter said it was a monster, but his reaction was almost like someone who had been touched by a god.”

“Did you see any sign of admiration?”

“I wouldn’t say we’re at that level yet, but if we don’t come up with any countermeasures against the ‘Black Cloak’, I think we could really create a religion. Especially in this day and age, superstitions like this can easily become popular.”

“It would be good to make it clear that the ‘Black Cloak’ is a monster. I would appreciate it if you could work with the information processing team to proceed with this part. I will create a project under my name, so please notify me.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

The woman nodded.

“This incident was a great miracle, so I understand Team Leader Jeong’s reaction.”

“…That is… definitely true.”

The researcher hesitated for a moment, then quickly agreed.

“Whether the ‘Black Cloak’ is a monster, a god, or a being of the origin, it’s hard to believe that he saved so many people without any compensation. In any case, none of them are kind to humans.”

Monsters hated humans. Gods treated humans as toys, and the Source Being was indifferent to humans.

It was amazing that we could communicate, but to receive help was ridiculous.

“…I think this part may be a problem. People still have fantasies about monsters being friendly to humans. The existence of the trainer profession is encouraging such fantasies.”

“It can’t be helped because there is a lack of formal education. This is something that needs to be addressed gradually as we expand public education, and it’s not something that can be solved right away.”

“That is true, but….”

Among the Hunter professions, trainers could make contracts with monsters and borrow their powers. Because of this, there were fools who dreamed of being able to tame monsters as their own pets.

'Time is the best medicine after all.'

It's only been 31 years. South Korea shed as much blood as possible and grew as quickly as possible, but its civic consciousness has not grown in line with that growth.

Since enough time has passed since the great disaster for a generation to be born, many people are unaware of the horror and cruelty of monsters, but public education has not been easily established, making it difficult to inform people of the dangers of monsters.

“Rather, people from the provinces are more thorough in that regard.”

“The people of the countryside will have to be on their guard since they don’t have the same protection as the city. They don’t know when monsters will descend on their village and slaughter the people, or which mountain they will climb and which dungeon they will fall into.”

“I guess there is nothing more certain than learning through physical experience.”

However, it was not possible to put all the citizens of the city in the dungeon and let them experience the monsters, so it was a headache for the association staff. It was because there were many idiots who couldn't understand the topic no matter where they went.

“Anyway, I will take this into consideration and try to create an atmosphere where people will not easily approach ‘Black Cloak’.”

“…….”

“I think it’s really ridiculous… but if the ‘Black Cloak’ is truly a being that does favors to humans, then there will be people who have delusions that are impossible.”

There is a reason why they say that when you do something good, you should do it well. There have been more than a few cases where a monster that was quietly staying quiet got upset and ended up bleeding on a large scale.

'There are always those who, when a monster does them a favor, will have a stupid sense of superiority. Like they're special and deserve this favor... It's always these guys who cause accidents and natural disasters.'

Not all monsters want to kill humans. There are definitely monsters that hate humans, but because of that, they live in hiding.

However, it was only half a year ago that nearly half of the countries overseas were divided because of a hunter who took such a monster lightly and messed with it.

Even though staying still doesn't mean you're weak, you could say that it's a really stupid judgment.

“Should I assume the worst and post the information?”

“Yes, please.”

“Then I will report back later.”

The researcher bowed his head in respect to the eternal symbol that supports the world.

“Association President.”

“…….”

The association president smiled brightly.

It was a mechanical smile, devoid of any emotion.

* * *

Identification Number

0S-328-D

Response level

S(-)

Object Type

Humanoid

Object name

Black Cloak(-)

warrant

artist(-)

A humanoid entity first discovered by the 183rd Search Team 3 of the Korean Hunter Association.

It is the appearance of a man who is completely covered with a thick black cloak. The face cannot be seen. Inside the cloak, he is wearing a black shirt and suit. He is estimated to be about 185~9cm tall and in his late 20s to early 30s.

The temporary name 'Black Cloak' was given due to its external characteristics, but it appears that the individual name will need to be adjusted after additional information is obtained.

The first discoverer, Jeong Da-un, testified that he heard a slight noise when walking (the sound of dry plants hitting each other). Team member Kang Eon-seo, who has an enhanced sense of smell, testified that he smelled the scent of the forest, so it is possible to suspect that it is a plant-type monster. More information is needed about the type of this entity.

First sighting situation

He assisted the first discoverer and Hunter Association search team leader, Jung Da-woon, and his team. When asked a question during a conversation, if the entity does not receive an answer, it will not move on to the next situation and will repeat the same question exactly the same. Its intelligence is considered to be much higher than that of humans.

As it has been discovered, the power of the 'Black Cloak' is that of a 'painter', and it can create a frame out of thin air or turn a human into paint and use that material to draw a 'picture'. Some of the team that first discovered it are complaining of mental distress.

Although he did them a favor by rescuing the first discovery team out of the 'Deep Sea Country', he showed his ignorance of the limitations of the human mind by turning the team into paint. It seems necessary to adjust the response level after acquiring additional information.

Based on the testimony of the first discoverer, Jeong Da-woon, it has been confirmed that the 'Black Cloak' showed a friendly attitude towards humans. However, since the 'Black Cloak's' rule is understood to be 'to respond obediently', there is a high possibility that it will show hostility if the emotion of the subject changes negatively. Special care is required when responding.

Additionally, based on the clothing inside the cloak, voice, and behavior, we are reviewing the possibility that he was a high-ranking member of that dimension. Due to the lack of information in various aspects, a continuous attack on the 'Deep Sea Country' has been approved, and any related requests will be accepted.

Total comments (1,352)

– Attack type confirmation required

– You need to check the language you are using

– Request for reconfirmation of response level

– Please recheck the response level.

- Please check the habitat

– Recording is required during the exchange… .

– The exact reaction… .

…….

….

…….

* * *

"oh my."

Yoo Seong-un, who was checking the monitor floating in the air, cleared his throat.

“This came out.”

“What's the problem?”

“No, that’s….”

Yoo Seong-un, leaning against the wall right next to 'Geo's Portrait', continued speaking while looking at the screen.

“Your information has been posted on the Korean Human Rights Association website.”

“If it’s the Hunters Association, then it must be the Hunters Association.”

“Yeah, that’s one of the main things we do there. We organize monsters that pop up here and there and need countermeasures, or that are threatening on their own, and post them on the homepage.”

Yoo Seong-un said that and looked back at the portrait with an awkward smile.

“That doesn’t mean you’re a monster.”

Although we've been hanging out together recently and have let our guard down, that doesn't mean that the danger from Geo, the source, has diminished.

In particular, Yoo Seong-un clearly remembered the way nature sometimes took on the form of a human being.

'It's not like a guy who thinks he's human would feel good when someone calls him a monster.'

Yoo Seong-un added.

“But from a human perspective, there’s nothing you can do. Normal people don’t live inside portraits like you do, right? If that’s possible, then at least you’re not human, well, that’s what it feels like….”

“That is a sufficient answer.”

“If that’s the case, then that’s good.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been skimming through the contents of 'Black Cloak' posted on the homepage, opened his mouth again.

“Judging from the description that the face is unrecognizable, it seems the face was definitely not sold.”

“That’s fortunate.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-woon, who had been thinking for a moment, asked.

“Geo, is it possible to change the face in the portrait?”

“I didn’t quite understand the question.”

“The portrait you’re in now shows your face as is. As I said before, in order for you to live together with people without being threatened, it’s necessary to separate the identities of ‘Black Cloak’ and ‘Sergio.’”

The existence of the source changes its level of danger depending on the 'story'. So, although Yoo Seong-un created an environment where 'Portrait of Geo' could act like a human, Geo often acted as if he was not human to anyone's eyes.

'It's so much so that I doubt if they really intend to imitate humans.'

Because of that, Yoo Seong-un had to distinguish between 'Sergio', who people saw as a human, and 'Black Cloak', who they saw as an unidentified ghost story. This separation was possible because 'Portrait of Geo' sometimes acts like a human and sometimes not.

By separating them in this way, we could reduce the risk of some of the 'Portraits of Geo'. And for that to happen, the appearance of the 'Portraits of Geo' had to be unknown to the world.

“Since the ‘Portrait of Geo’ has your exact face in it, even if you go around as the blond, blue-eyed Giovanni outside… everyone will eventually realize that the Black Cloak and Sergio are the same being.”

Even if the hair or eye color or personality changed, the face itself did not change. A pale-faced 'Geo' had the same appearance no matter what Geo it was.

It's possible that you didn't notice that the exact physical structure had changed a bit because it was covered by the billowy cloak, but at least the face.

“And you also travel through portraits, right? If your portrait is hung in a public place, and a black cloak is seen nearby, and it becomes known that your face is the same as that of the Hunter ‘Sergio’ of the Collectors’ Guild, you’ll be in a lot of trouble.”

“I think that is a valid opinion.”

The portrait, which had been silent for a moment, as if it was thinking about something, soon began to change.

He raised his hand and stretched it out… .

Iron Buck-.

“…….”

"…uh…."

“At this point, won’t you be able to see the face?”

Geo's face in the portrait was no longer visible, covered in paint as black as ink.

“…I can’t see your face, but….”

I felt a little disappointed.

“…This is a portrait of your face. Is this okay?”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un said that it was a problem that my face was exposed.”

“I thought maybe I could just turn the cloak inside out.”

It felt like someone had painted over a once-in-a-lifetime masterpiece.

‘If I were to do this, the leader of the Visabal Guild would go completely crazy… .’

I was a bit creeped out by this, as I am someone who sometimes gets distracted when it comes to art and works.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un looked at the portrait covered in black paint with a pitiful gaze. The paint was applied with strokes made by a large hand, but Geo’s black hair and lower face were clearly visible.

Even that is gradually being covered up by the dripping paint.

“…So you can see ahead?”

“It looks good from my side.”

“Will it stay like this even if the portrait is placed somewhere else?”

“It will stay like this unless I wipe it out.”

“Then there is definitely no chance of the face being revealed.”

“The staff here know my face.”

“Oh, that’s okay.”

The staff of the Collectors Guild were particularly tight-lipped. There was no danger of information about the 'Black Cloak' being leaked.

'As such, Geo's story will be confined within this collection and will grow even bigger. If things continue this way, there is a high probability that Sergio's story will not be diminished within the collection building or in front of our employees.'

In the collection building where people who already knew the identity of the 'Black Cloak' resided, the sense of discomfort would not be dispelled even if this portrait walked around in the form of 'Sergio'.

But that alone was enough.

“Those people never leak information to the outside.”

“Is there any basis for this?”

“I’ve gathered together only those people who really hate getting involved in big things….”

“I wouldn’t spread it, even for my own sake.”

“Besides, if I tell you that, wouldn’t the leader of the Bisabal Guild know? If he finds out that you were talking nonsense, you could be dragged to some lab, but I don’t think anyone would open their mouth.”

One of the characteristics of the Collector's Guild is that the relationship between the staff members is very close, perhaps because each and every one of them has been scouted by the Visabal. They are all reclusive and avoidant.

“There is absolutely no chance of information spreading from here.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled bitterly.

“If I hadn’t been involved right away, I would have just gritted my teeth and pretended I didn’t know, but what about the leak….”

"okay."

“Even if they demand a leak with a promise of compensation from the outside, the guild already takes good care of it, so there is no one in this guild who would take that risk and seek profit. In a similar vein, threats won’t work either.”

One of the most distinctive features of the Collectors' Guild was that everything from the building to each and every employee was a collection of Bisabae's collectibles.

Although Visabal took particularly good care of his employees' welfare, no one was foolish enough to touch his 'collection'.

What are you trying to do?

“So I’ll tell you again, everyone will really grit their teeth and pretend not to know. They’ll really throw a tantrum.”

These are people who just want to finish their work, go home, and rest. They have a strong sense of responsibility, but they also hate being bothered, so you can rest assured about this.

"but…."

“Is there a problem?”

“…It’s nothing special.”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“You’ve become more scared.”

“…….”

“Because of the paint….”

Only after a long time did Geo react.

"ah."

He rarely looked pitiful.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (74)

Episode 74

That doesn't mean Geo wiped the paint off again.

“Even without the paint, everyone was already scared.”

“I guess that’s… that’s how it is.”

“More than anything, I don’t want to reveal my face.”

It was a scary thing to have one's identity exposed. Sergio, who was timid and powerless to fight back, did not want to sell his face.

'It's problematic from the very beginning because it's a portrait that's already possessed by a ghost.'

Sergio was proud of living his life with integrity, but he had to be on the lookout for anything since the portrait had been possessed by a ghost.

There is a huge difference between selling something with your face covered and selling it with your face and name revealed.

“Wow, we have a connection.”

Therefore, Yoo Seong-un also felt relieved.

'You might get annoyed and think, 'Why do we have to think about the circumstances of humans?' But when you see things like this, you can clearly see that Geo is a gentleman. Even if it's consideration that comes from forcing himself into human standards, it's still exceptional.'

It was truly a miracle. As a gardener, Yoo Seong-un felt an overwhelming sense of gratitude and affection. He was the source of something worth caring for, and all the gardeners in the world would envy him.

'Well, anyway….'

Since we have obtained your consent, the scope of action the guild can take has also expanded.

“The auction house you were in before will probably have records of your face, but I, the guild leader, will take care of that.”

“Yes, thank you.”

“That doesn’t mean I can do anything about the memories of the guests who were there… but it’s better than not doing anything.”

“Please.”

“No problem.”

And then you leave the gallery.

Yoo Seong-un, who had started working to erase the information about the 'Portrait of Geo' that had been put up for auction, blinked when he encountered an unexpected situation.

“……?”

Yoo Seong-un, who was looking at the monitor, went up to the guild leader's office.

“Guild leader.”

“Oh, I was just about to call you.”

“…Has the guild leader also been checking it?”

“Was Mr. Yoo Seong-un also in the process of erasing the records regarding ‘Portrait of Geo’?”

“Because that’s my job. I didn’t know that the guild leader was also involved, but I guess it’s okay since he was checking.”

Yoo Seong-un said as he handed over a thin document that he was hastily organizing.

“Geo’s face has been erased.”

The records remaining in the auction house have changed.

A portrait painted in black ink so that the face cannot be seen.

“I couldn’t tell if it was just the information online that had been altered, so I went out and looked for myself, but it wasn’t just the records that had been altered. Even the records documented on paper and the memories of the customers who attended that day were unclear.”

“…….”

Visabal's face was rarely expressionless. He rolled his sharp, reptilian-like golden eyes.

“What did Geo do?”

“…I asked if I could cover the face in the portrait, and after thinking about it for a moment, I covered the entire screen with black paint. I also said that the portrait would remain like this unless I wiped it off.”

“This could also be one of the characteristics of the portrait.”

“What would you say are the characteristics of a portrait…?”

“After all, a portrait is a drawing of a person.”

Among the documents that Yoo Seong-un brought was a printed image of ‘Geo’s Portrait’. As expected, it was covered with a thin texture like ink, so that the face could not be seen.

“Then, shouldn’t the photograph of the portrait, rather than the original portrait painted with watercolors, be called a portrait? What about the paper on which it was printed?”

“… Since I didn’t draw it myself, wouldn’t it be possible to say no?”

“Or you could say that it is true. After all, it is a ‘picture’ of a ‘person’.”

A picture is 'a representation of the shape or image of an object on a flat surface using lines or colors.'

“So, what I’m saying is, whether it’s an image that’s been printed like this, or a photograph of a portrait, or whatever, ultimately, it could be called a painting.”

“If you think about it in a very broad sense, that may not be wrong, but….”

“At least that’s what Geo thinks.”

Visabal narrowed his eyes and smiled broadly.

“It’s a truly remarkable portrait, that just by thinking about something you can have such a direct impact on the world.”

“…….”

“…Ah, as expected….”

The smile disappeared and the beggar muttered softly.

“This is why art is good.”

As catastrophes struck, the world changed, and absurd abilities emerged, the scope of 'art' expanded. Bisabal dared to believe that if there was one field in the world that was the most interesting and colorful, it would be art.

“It’s definitely a shame that his face is covered. I’ll have to go see his face later, but it’s still such a shame. But when I think of this as one of Geo’s performance art pieces, my heart is filled with emotion.”

“You’re saying such perverted things with such a serious face….”

“You’re serious, so you’re going to have a serious face. My goodness, the performance art that a portrait artist does is something that you can’t expect from other artifacts. It’s hard to even consider this as a piece of art.”

“There aren’t that many things that have a self in the first place.”

“I have a good feeling about the new year.”

Winter will soon pass and spring will come.

“I have a feeling something is coming….”

It seemed like really interesting things were going to happen.

* * *

“…….”

“What were the results?”

"well…."

Her hair flowed down like waves.

“The test isn’t going well.”

Mermaid, Aria said, adjusting her oversized doctor's gown.

“We are conducting various experiments using the hair samples left behind by the human named Sergio, but the results are inconsistent. Because it is constantly changing and moving, the test itself is difficult… and it is not fixed either.”

Isser said to him.

“It’s definitely not human.”

“Yeah, not human.”

“…….”

“That doesn’t mean he’s not human.”

Sometimes it took on the appearance of clearly human cells. It could literally be anything.

“That’s fun.”

Despite her expression of interest, Aria's face was as inorganic as a mineral. Even though she always had her usual smile on.

“There are traces of Giovanni among them.”

“…So is he really your teacher?”

“At least there’s a very big connection.”

They were not simply examining material things like cells. They had passed through multiple dimensions and had firmly established themselves as the masters of this place.

Aria's abilities as a doctor and researcher had long since been pushed to their limits.

'But this is the first time the result has been so unclear.'

Aria said to her sister.

“Isser, my brother. I need your help.”

“Please speak.”

“Bring him back here. I need to talk to the teacher.”

“…….”

Aria smiled faintly at the sight of her silent younger brother, Isser.

“Of course I know how difficult a request this is.”

It was only a few days ago that the 'Black Cloak', presumed to be Giovanni, had visited their dimension and snatched humans away.

It would be difficult to keep him, as he was so quiet that it was hard to detect his presence, and he was like a ghost who would disappear in an instant.

“I’ve been avoiding you for a while now. I couldn’t talk to Giovanni without being sure.”

There were too many uncertainties to face it right away without any preparation.

But now I am sure. It was the only human teacher in their lives. It was Giovanni. But for some reason, he has changed a lot, grown bigger, and become too strong to be stolen.

I couldn't grab it rashly.

“Even the other person doesn’t seem to have many memories of this place. He said he couldn’t remember this temple.”

“I think I remembered some of it, but maybe….”

“Then it would be difficult to appeal to his feelings. Well, he was originally a cold-hearted person.”

Aria muttered.

“I won’t be human anymore.”

“…….”

“That’s definitely… I guess I should say it feels a little strange….”

It was Aria and Isser who had learned knowledge about human emotions and their way of thinking, and now it was a strange feeling to think that Giovanni, his dear teacher, had lost all that.

It was almost a sense of deprivation. The most precious memories of the mermaid's life, resurrected from death and flowing in a form unknown to us… .

“…….”

“Still, please.”

The two siblings never lost their smiles.

For what may have been hundreds, thousands, or even more years, I never once did not laugh.

“Call that person somehow.”

“…….”

“And hold on.”

"…yes."

“I believe you will do well.”

“You don’t have to worry.”

The hunter wearing a black cloak, 'Sergio', was particularly caring and considerate towards children.

“There are many ways.”

Isser thought of a child who had been speaking to him in a friendly manner.

I think it was called Chaisol.

* * *

The new entry dungeon, 'Deep Sea Kingdom', has officially opened.

“Deep Sea Country? It has the word ‘country’ in its name?”

“If it is a name officially designated by the Constitutional Court, then it has the word ‘country’ attached to it….”

“Fuck, this is going to grow so big.”

Originally, the dungeon that was considered the most difficult to complete was the entry dungeon, and if the Hunter Association used a clear word like 'country', it meant that the map was considerably large among the entry dungeons.

“But the difficulty level of this is, man… very…”

“It’s connected to the virtual dungeon that exploded in the Temple of the Sun last time? Are you crazy?”

“It seems that even the Constitutional Court staff didn’t investigate it properly.”

“You managed to avoid dying and disappearing. You were the first official team to enter the country.”

Of course, the difficulty level was set quite high at S-class.

“But they said no one died. So it’s not that dangerous?”

“Hey, you’re just asking for one piece of information, right?”

The purpose of opening up the 'Deep Sea Kingdom' this time was not for conquest, but for exploration.

“Do you have a main list?”

“Oh, there are two. They even have names.”

“Wow… Is this a humanoid monster?”

“Hasn’t it only been a few years? It deserves to be called S-class.”

“So what kind of monsters are there?”

“Where should I look….”

The main list requested by the Hunter Association consisted of two people.

“Mermaid Isser, and….”

“'Black Cloak?'”

The freelance hunter tilted his head.

“Is it an appeal to you to pay more attention to me since I only have a nickname and no name?”

If the Hunter Association determines that it will not be able to finish the dungeon quickly within the Association, it will open the entrance to the identified dungeon after a certain period of time. In that case, it is called the 'Exploration Season' and a bounty is offered for information about the dungeon.

“I’m going to relax for the first time in a while.”

“No, but even so, it’s a bit much to step forward as an S-class….”

“It’s exploration season after all. If we’re going to do a raid, we’ll need an S-class, but we can also do things like ask for information.”

“Well, the bounty offered by the association is quite lucrative.”

“It doesn’t have to be information about these monsters, right?”

“It’s a dungeon that just opened, so maybe not.”

Even if the information was not a bounty offered by the association, in the case of newly opened dungeons, monetary rewards were given depending on the importance of the information.

If you get caught by a dangerous monster, your head will fall off in an instant, but it was worth a try.

“Besides, hasn’t anyone bought this dungeon yet?”

“Honestly, who would buy an S-class… unless it was one of the three major guilds.”

“Besides, there is no strategy information for this dungeon yet, so it is very risky in many ways.”

“Because you never know what resources might be inside.”

“Anyway, you don’t have to pay to enter a dungeon that no one bought.”

If a dungeon contains some useful resources or is deemed necessary for the self-development of its member hunters, guilds with money may purchase ownership of the dungeon.

Those dungeons required a fee every time you entered them.

“Compared to that, this dungeon is nothing….”

“Fuck, don’t let your guard down. Do you know whose dog’s name is S-class?”

“Don’t you know that? Don’t worry, kid.”

Not all hunters joined a guild, so dungeons that offered bounties by the Hunter Association also became a major source of income for freelance hunters.

“Wow, there’s already a waiting list….”

“Can’t I go without it?”

“They say there’s an entrance in the deep sea, but how are we going to get there?”

“Swimming might be a bit too much.”

“Okay, it doesn’t cost anything to wait.”

Even if the Hunter had superhuman strength, it was difficult to find the entrance, which was located deep enough to be called the 'deep sea', with only his bare body. Since he had to ride a submarine prepared by the Association, the line quickly became long.

And after a while, strange rumors began to circulate.

“Oh, you want to go to the ‘Deep Sea Country’?”

“It’s still the hunting season. The bounty hasn’t even gone down yet. Go and earn some money.”

“They say it’s dangerous there… So, make sure you remember this.”

“What are you talking about all of a sudden?”

“No, really. He said that was the only way to survive.”

The hunters whispered.

“If you don’t want to die, go to the portrait and beg.”

“What…? A portrait?”

“Black Cloak likes kind and polite people.”

"The Black Cloak Gives Gifts to Good People"

“…….”

“You understand? Just remember.”

It was the moment when the name 'Black Cloak' spread among the hunters.

“…….”

“…….”

“Oh, I got it.”

The association, which had been trying to instill a sense of wariness about the existence of the 'Black Cloak' by declaring him a monster, was troubled.

This is because the image of the 'black cloak' spread throughout the world is quite favorable.

“The romantics will come out again.”

“Ah, I’m already tired….”

The association staff members were already thinking of hunters who would cause all sorts of creative damage by believing in only one monster that was friendly to humans.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (75)

Episode 75

I was lost on the street.

“Fuck, where the hell am I….”

It wasn't called 'country' for nothing, the 'Deep Sea Country' was incredibly large even for an entry dungeon.

However, that doesn't mean the monsters were weak. I was able to somehow get through stages 1 and 2, but once I entered stage 3, where the shape of the temple began to be revealed, it was difficult to even breathe.

“The map, the map… the map….”

Unfortunately, this was a new dungeon with not even a basic understanding of its structure.

“…….”

All of the hunter's companions who were wandering the road now are dead.

“…What should I do….”

What can I do? What can I do? I have no choice but to die.

The hunter sat down on the street, mocking himself inwardly. The water scales on the ceiling of his pupils, rippling coldly, felt like the shadow of a monster, and it was so eerie.

“…I asked you to come for nothing.”

When I was left alone, all sorts of thoughts came to mind.

In fact, it was not he but the team leader who had strongly requested that he come here, but he couldn't help but feel guilty for being left alone after all his colleagues had died. The man tried to swallow his tears and moved his feet.

“Fuck, is this a temple or a cave… The path is complicated too….”

They all look similar, but they never find the same path.

It was true that I was moving, but it felt like I was heading deeper than the exit. But if I stopped and hid somewhere, there were dangerous monsters and traps everywhere.

“See….”

I held back my tears and grumbled for no reason.

'The country needs to survive before it can apply for rehabilitation.'

When a guild-affiliated hunter dies in a dungeon, the guild usually steps in to collect the remains, but this does not apply to freelance hunters or civilians.

If a freelance hunter wanted to recover the remains of a colleague, he or she had to personally prove his or her identity and apply to the Hunter Association.

‘I, I don’t have the ability to train… .’

The only reason he's still alive is because of the man's stealth skill.

“I have to survive first, yeah, and get paid… anything….”

It was a time when I was trying to calm my mind by thinking about the benefits of escaping.

“…….”

A portrait caught the man's eye.

“……?”

It was a portrait smeared with black paint so that the face could not be seen.

It was creepy.

“…What, what is this?”

If it had been just any other object, I would have guessed it was one of the decorations in the dungeon, but this portrait seemed so out of place in the background of the temple, which seemed to be filled with the same pictures over and over again.

A portrait in which one can sense a gaze even though the eyes are covered and cannot be seen at all.

“…….”

Just passed by.

'It could be a dangerous item. A monster that looks like a portrait...'

The portrait itself had a creepy, heavy atmosphere. Unlike the pure white stone of the temple or the pupil, it was framed in wood.

It seemed to be covered in gold, but it had a warm feel to it that was completely different from the dungeon, and because of that warmth, I didn't want to approach it even more. The feeling of discomfort was too great.

“…….”

But when I came to my senses and looked around, the picture frame was there again.

“…It wasn’t here, it wasn’t here….”

It wasn't once or twice.

“You were in the hallway earlier.”

I still felt the gaze.

It felt as if the portrait was following me.

“…….”

Maybe that was right.

His hands and feet were shaking and his breathing was getting harder and harder, but still, a ray of hope appeared in the mind of the hunter who had been pushed to his limit. He knew that it was a strange trend, but he couldn't help it.

It was a phenomenon that no one could say was positive, but he thought about it stubbornly. It seemed like he just wanted to believe it.

'Is this... an item that is the key to escape?'

In dungeons where the story was important, one item like this could be effective and help in clearing the battle. Even so, it wouldn’t increase the chances of surviving, but the hunter, whose thinking ability had been reduced, approached the portrait.

“I wish I had emotional skills… This is…”

"hello."

“…….”

Pause.

The hunter stepped back.

“…Uh, uh…?”

“I am a portrait.”

"uh…?"

“What is your name?”

“…….”

“I wonder what your name is.”

The lips of the lower body, not covered in black paint, bit again.

“Would you like to talk to me?”

"…now…."

What is this?

'Does a portrait speak? Does a portrait speak?'

Even in a world where superpowers are a part of everyday life, a portrait that speaks is not something you see very often. At least, this is the first time the Hunter, who is currently trapped in the 'Deep Sea Country', has seen such a portrait.

“Who, who….”

“I am a portrait.”

Same voice, same lines.

“…….”

I got goosebumps.

The voice, which was so perfect that it sounded terrible, was incredibly sweet and gentle. It was as if the devil were speaking to him, but the hunter barely managed to come to his senses and answer.

“Park Yoon-shin… is….”

I was aware of the dangers of telling my true name, but I was too absent-minded to think about it. All I could think about was that I had to obey the being in front of me.

I felt fear and mercy.

“Yes, that’s Park Yoon-shin. Park Yoon-shin….”

“Nice to meet you, Park Yoon-shin.”

“…You… are a portrait?”

“Yes.”

The pale lower body continued speaking.

“I am a portrait.”

“…….”

Only then did the hunter realize that no monsters were approaching him.

‘… Things are taking a strange turn… .’

I felt like I was possessed by something.

The portrait, which was just a painting, had a heavy atmosphere that was so bizarre that it was almost uncanny. It was qualitatively different from the atmosphere of the temple. It felt like I was invited to the Pope's funeral. I had such a strange feeling.

“…….”

It was around the time when I became so dazed.

“Excuse me.”

"yes yes?"

The black paint began to pop out as if it was wrapping something.

As the hunter stepped back in shock, a human figure wrapped in a pitch-black cloak appeared right in front of the portrait. The portrait was hung halfway up the wall, so even though the figure fell down, there was no sound of footsteps on the floor.

"ah…."

Just a rustling sound.

“…….”

“Nice to meet you, Mr. Park Yoon-shin.”

I heard footsteps.

It was so human-like.

“…….”

No, the footsteps are like that, so why do I think it's human?

'Am I crazy? Am I under the influence of a brainwashing skill?'

While he was in confusion, something occurred to the hunter.

“Ah, ah, ah…!”

Black cloak.

“That, black, black cloak… cloak.”

“Yes, I am wearing a black cloak.”

“…Black Cloak….”

It was clearly a monster that the association had put a bounty on for information.

‘…This is a monster?’

A question suddenly occurred to me.

'this…?'

The hunter hesitated and looked at the black cloak again.

It was wearing a pitch-black cloak that was pulled down like a grim reaper. When the cloak was slightly removed around the shoulders, the body inside was revealed to be wearing a pitch-black suit and shirt, but it was strangely dark.

“…….”

It definitely has a shape, so when it wears a cloak, it would have a round head like that.

‘… The hand… is pale, but you can see the skin. That means there’s a human body inside… .’

Still, it didn't seem like there would be a face inside.

'No, just.'

It seemed like there was nothing at all.

“…….”

“Ms. Park Yoon-shin.”

“…Over there, yes, I….”

If this calls my name three times, will I die?

'They say that if the grim reaper calls your name three times, you die.'

I didn't really think that the black cloak and the grim reaper were the same being, but it was true that there was an atmosphere that was terribly close to death.

The hunter lowered his head, feeling confused and awe-struck at the sight of something he could not dare look at.

“Wake up, sorry for waking you up. I just….”

“You are a good person.”

It was a kind of declaration, a granting of something. At first glance it sounded divine, like a prophecy from God.

“…….”

“So let me help you.”

The black cloak held out something.

“…This, this is….”

It was a round bead that seemed to be made of gold. It was quite heavy and gave off a strong, brain-boosting scent.

“What is this…?”

“It’s an apology for surprising you, and a gift to you for your suffering.”

"gift…?"

“It's yours.”

"…that…."

“Please eat.”

Eat it?

'This?'

It didn't look like something you could eat at all. But still, I felt a strong desire to put it in my mouth and make it mine. It was such a beautiful bead.

I want to eat.

“…….”

The hunter, entranced by the scent, put the bead in his mouth.

'ah.'

An ecstatic sweetness gently swept over my whole body.

The feeling of each and every cell stabilizing was vivid. I even felt joy at the sensation, which was like the spring breeze in the afternoon as it was fading away.

The freshness, as if the juice was condensed into a fruit, went very well with the gentle golden beads.

“…Uh, uh?”

“Has the bleeding stopped?”

“This, this… yes, how is this. Why.”

"okay."

“…….”

The black cloak looked down at the hunter with an inorganic gaze, like a researcher who had expected a set value to be given. He cringed in a sense of discomfort that was definitely not human, but at the same time, he felt embarrassed for some reason.

I was glad that he showed me the value I expected. It was a feeling I didn't realize myself and couldn't understand.

“Do you want to go out?”

“…Are you going out?”

My bowed head was lifted on its own.

“Can I go out?”

“I can send it to you.”

"ah…."

It was only then that I remembered the information that had been posted on the association's website.

'It is said that the first discoverer escaped the deep sea country with the help of the black cloak.'

It was when I suddenly looked up at the part where the face was with hope.

“…….”

“…….”

Our eyes met.

eye?

Yes, it's an eye. I can see the pupil and the iris.

But it wasn't a sphere. Was it flat? No, maybe it was three-dimensional. But I saw lines. I saw those flowing lines. It wasn't one. It was many, intertwined like the roots of a tree, but at the same time it looked like one.

What color is it? Gold? No, it's dark. It's so dark that it looks bright. Then black? But it's closer to silver. Where did the silver thing come from? It's so dark. It's so bright. What the hell am I looking at?

'Is it okay for me to look at it in the first place?'

It was a time when I was so bewitched that I couldn't even feel fear.

“Ms. Park Yoon-shin.”

“…….”

“I have a question.”

"…question…?"

Oh, yeah, I have something to ask.

“Yes, yes, yes. Yes… of course.”

“Can I draw you?”

“…You’re drawing a picture of me…?”

I don't remember much after that.

My mind was in a state of utter confusion, incomparable to when I first saw the black cloak. I had lost the awareness that I was a living being.

My whole body was melting, but there was no fear in it, and I felt a sense of comfort, as if I were lying in the middle of a forest with a spring breeze blowing.

And when I came to, I was in the middle of the city.

“…….”

It was only then that I realized that this was a miracle.

* * *

“…That’s it….”

Park Yoon-shin continued speaking in front of the researchers.

“This is something that happened to me.”

“They say you can make people into paint and use it to paint pictures.”

“At the time, I didn’t really think anything was strange.”

Park Yoon-shin said in a bewildered voice.

“The fact that you can talk to monsters in the first place… is a very rare thing, and I know that, but I wasn’t really surprised by it. It just felt like a wise and intelligent being that seemed to know everything about the world, including me….”

The researcher asked.

“Do you feel a desire to adore him?”

“…A little bit. That guy showed a miracle.”

“It was a miracle that turned people into paint. There was no pain involved.”

“After I came to my senses… I was very confused.”

A human being with a sane self became paint and a painting, and then returned to being a human again. The aftereffects were bound to be small, as he was forced to perceive the perspective of an inanimate object that he could never have imagined.

“…But I don’t have any negative feelings towards Black Cloak….”

It was just scary, dizzying, and wonderful.

“It’s so, so beautiful….”

Even though it was a life that could not be said to have been lived close to art, I was able to see that this was art and a work of art.

The vast presence and geometric and splendid structure, which felt sacred and noble, were enough to make the heart beat.

“Black Cloak is definitely kind to humans. No, it’s more like mercy than kindness. He shows mercy. He doesn’t take anything in return.”

“Yes, thank you for taking the time to interview me.”

The researcher nodded.

“Thank you for your information on the Black Cloak. You can receive your rewards right away at the Association Lobby Counter. If you have any further information or inquiries, please contact the counter at any time.”

"hey."

“Yes, Hunter Park Yoon-shin.”

“Is that guy a monster?”

“…….”

The researcher asked.

“Hunter Park Yoon-shin refers to it as a ‘person’.”

The conversation ended there.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (76)

Episode 76

“That’s why.”

Leaning against the wall of the gallery, Yoo Seong-un asked Geo.

“Is it because you are a painter that you turn people into paint?”

“…….”

“If it’s a difficult question, you don’t have to answer.”

As a former research team leader of the association, Yoo Seong-un had a deep connection with the Hunter Association. As such, there was a lot of information he could find out, including the recent rumors of Geo being seen in the 'Deep Sea Country'.

“You never said you were an artist, so I was just curious.”

Witnesses said 'Black Cloak' was a portrait and a painter.

“It’s also amazing that living creatures are made with paint.”

“It wasn’t as great an act as you thought.”

Geo answered in his usual, mechanical, low voice.

“To answer your question, I am just an ordinary person whose hobby is drawing. I am not qualified to be called a painter.”

“After all, an artist is someone who draws pictures, as you said. Well, to be exact, that’s a job… but isn’t it something similar?”

“Then it’s okay to think that way.”

Unlike when he stepped outside the frame of 'Portrait of Geo' and imitated human behavior, Geo's voice in the portrait was strangely businesslike. Geo continued speaking in an inert voice that showed no emotion at all.

“I made them out of paint simply because I could draw them beyond the frame. However, I judged that if I were to draw existing life forms with ordinary paint, it would be closer to creation than movement, so I had no choice but to make them out of paint.”

“…Yeah, that’s….”

Yoo Seong-un recalled the conversation he had previously had with 'Portrait of Geo'.

“Isn’t it because from your perspective the painting is not you but us?”

“I have not forgotten that you are not ordinary paintings or paints, but living beings with egos, but I have been thinking about how I can help them, and I have chosen this method. Do you think it will be helpful?”

“Thanks to that, the survival rate has increased.”

With the frame between them, Geo and humans see each other as paintings in Geo's world and in the human world. So Geo, as a portraitist and a painter, seemed to be able to exert arbitrary influence through his paintings.

“Just, what should I say….”

Yoo Seong-un hesitated for a moment before continuing.

“That’s because everyone is scared.”

“Are you scared?”

“You don’t look friendly.”

“Yes.”

“It’s not common to be painted alive.”

It wasn't just something that was 'uncommon', it was something that was hard to experience even once in a lifetime. The hunters were grateful for the 'Black Cloak's' unknown kindness, but they were also afraid of him.

“Anyway, as long as you’re not treating us like mere paint, that’s fine.”

“I didn’t think of it that way.”

“Yeah, you just wanted to help in this way.”

That's what makes it so inhuman.

'From a human's perspective, the favor bestowed by the Source Being does not necessarily feel like favor.'

If it's pure, it's a pure way of thinking.

It's like a child who doesn't understand dog physiology feeding chocolate to a cute puppy. He may have wanted to share a sweet treat, but the puppy ended up eating poison.

'Perhaps it's because he himself is a portrait artist, but he has no qualms about turning people into paint. The only good thing is that people seem to think it's a favor… .'

That's probably why there are hunters who feel awe.

"…uh…."

Yoo Seong-woon said after thinking for a moment.

“Are you still going to the ‘Land of the Deep Sea’ these days?”

“I went to see if I could meet Isser, but I only encountered humans, not mermaids.”

"oh my."

Perhaps Isser, that sly mermaid, is avoiding Geo. I'm not sure if she needs time to gather her thoughts or if she's hatching another plan.

“Anyway… thank you for helping people.”

“No, you don’t need to thank me. I would rather apologize because I think I surprised them. Was my behavior rude?”

“It’s not that I’m being rude or anything, it’s just that there are a lot of people who are scared.”

In fact, it may not be to the extent of being called 'a little', but it still doesn't change the fact that Geo showed mercy and saved the humans. The Hunters seemed to know that it was a favor, so this was no problem.

'If the existence of the Black Cloak becomes too familiar to the Hunters, there will be problems, but for now, it is not a situation where a major incident will occur.'

If possible, I would like to thoroughly distinguish between the affectionate and kind hunter 'Sergio' and the mysterious ghost 'Black Cloak', but it seemed like Sergio himself had no intention of doing so, so it was a bit difficult for me as a greedy human.

Does Geo want to be intimate with other people even while in his 'black cloak' state?

“I’m not saying you shouldn’t help people, just in case you misunderstand. I’m not saying you shouldn’t help people. It’s better for them to be a little surprised than to die. I came here because I was curious about how much you knew, so don’t be too offended.”

“I’m not hurt.”

“Well then, that’s good. But….”

Yoo Seong-un trailed off.

“I have a question.”

The reason he visited the gallery today was not simply to tell the story of the 'Black Cloak' ghost story.

“Can I ask you a question?”

“If it’s a question I can answer, I’ll try to answer it.”

“Then, you know, by what criteria can you adjust your level?”

It was a question that arose based on eyewitness accounts heard here and there and a small number of witnesses such as Yoo Seong-un and the Cha family. The 'Black Cloak' in the rumor and 'Geo' when he was human were so different in status that they could not be considered the same being.

A portrait painted in black ink with no eyes was returned.

“What does that mean?”

"uh…."

Actually, Geo doesn't know how high his own rank is.

'I guess it was my mistake to bring up the word 'class' since he thinks of himself as a normal human being. He's the guy who explained that people being afraid of him was just a resolution issue… .'

After gathering his thoughts for a moment, Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth.

“… Of course, the ghost story of the Black Cloak and the person called Geo are the same person, but even though they are the same being, there are times when they show different judgments or speech patterns. When you were working as ‘Sergio’… I don’t think you even had the idea of turning people into paint.”

This is the part that's problematic.

“Even though you’re the same Geo, I think your way of thinking changes depending on your status.”

“…….”

“Maybe I was mistaken. If I was being rude, I apologize.”

After a moment the portrait answered.

“I think what Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is right. I often have different thoughts and tones.”

"ah."

“I try to live as uprightly and politely as possible, but when I am, as you say, ‘black cloaked,’ I make arrogant and rude judgments.”

The portrait also seems to have been aware of this part.

“But I have no intention of harming anyone. I will not harm you, so you don’t have to worry about that.”

“I understand what you mean.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

'But human thinking and the original thinking cannot be the same.'

Even if they are the same being, there may be differences in their way of thinking depending on their status.

'Geo said it was an arrogant and rude judgment, but in reality, it was probably a natural behavior for this guy. If you think about the dignity that Geo's portrait holds, it's not strange.'

It was natural for humans to look down on ants.

'It's amazing that he's even trying to bend down and meet my gaze in this way. It must be possible because Geo has a high level of understanding of humans.'

Of course, even if Geo 'attempts', he won't be able to become completely human, but it seemed meaningful that he was chastising himself for his 'arrogant and rude judgment'.

"……."

A shiver ran down my spine.

"Do you have any further questions?"

"Huh? No, just…."

Every time I feel that Geo is not human, I get goosebumps.

"…I thought you were really amazing."

Yoo Seong-un still doesn't know 'what' Geo is.

Except that this is just a portrait.

* * *

"Ssuhhh…."

"?"

“Tsuhhhh….”

“Yeah.”

Honey tilted her head at the sight of Geo sucking Dana's belly.

“Crunch?”

“I think I’ll survive.”

“Huh?”

“It was healing.”

There is no hobby that improves the quality of life as much as sucking cat pears.

“Of course, Dana is neither soft nor warm….”

“Krrrr.”

“I’m still a cat. Thank you for stepping on me, Master.”

Two cotton bats pushing against your face couldn't be more adorable.

The teddy bear sun god who was looking at the sight looked a little disturbed, but neither Geo, Honey, nor Dana were affected at all. Geo asked seriously in the place where the whole family was gathered together.

“So, what should I do to see Isser’s face?”

The subject was Isser's deviation.

“For some reason, he doesn’t come to see me. I’m sure he doesn’t know I’m here, so what’s going on?”

“Kyuu….”

The teddy bear furrowed its brow as if to say, “Don’t you know that?” and Geo nodded.

“I know that too. I think it’s similar to how a dog that has been hit by an accident avoids its owner’s eyes. Humans have a bad instinct to avoid things when they do something wrong and are likely to get in trouble.”

"dream…."

The sun god wondered whether it was right to call Isser, a mermaid, a human, and whether it could be compared to the avoidance of a puppy or a child. It didn't seem like Isser was avoiding Geo because she was afraid of getting scolded.

The form is clearly 'Giovanni', but strangely enough, there is a strange sense of alienation and an unidentifiable, lofty status within it. In addition, the deity of the sun, which cannot be helped but be hated, has been added, making it an object that is difficult for mermaids to encounter in many ways.

But Geo was a young man of conviction. He was steadfast.

“When I was little, I would draw maps on the blanket and secretly wash my clothes by hand all night long, keeping an eye on my grandmother. I knew it was a natural phenomenon for a child, but I felt guilty and ashamed so I didn’t tell anyone.”

"dream…?"

“But I got caught in the end. Even if the child tried to wash the clothes by hand, how good would it be? It would get soaked in water and wouldn’t dry overnight. That’s why no matter how much Isser tries to avoid me, the child won’t be able to escape me.”

“Kuuu…?”

The teddy bear expressed its doubts, saying, 'Is that really the right metaphor right now?', and Geo let out a small sigh.

“It is true that Isser chose a path too cruel to be justified by such a simple metaphor….”

“Kuk kuk, kuk.”

“In my memory, Isser was just a young student. Now, it doesn’t seem real to call him a terrorist or anything.”

It was inevitable that Giovanni would feel nervous just from the fact that he had been implicated in the terrorist incident, but more than that, he remembered his young disciple. It didn't feel real.

Even if you were to suddenly hear, "Your precious little student has been terrorizing religious facilities since your death," the only reaction you would get would be, "Huh? Oh? I see?"

“But that is why we must catch Isser… no, meet him.”

“Crunch?”

Honey looked at me with suspicion, as if to say, 'Didn't you just say you were going to catch me?' Of course, Geo ignored me, and Dana yawned loudly.

“How can I get Isser to come see me? I couldn’t help but worry.”

"dream…."

“The ‘Deep Sea Country’ is not a large mart. You can’t turn on the Mia broadcast, and you can’t call Isser, who is a fully grown adult, Mia. She’s like this cute mermaid who knows where the exit is but doesn’t come looking for it….”

Geo blinked a couple of times at his disciple who had become a coward and was not even showing his face. He then continued.

“Let me tell you in advance, I don’t have no plans at all.”

“Kung?”

“If you cause a huge accident in the ‘deep sea country’ that can be called the home of those children, they will show you their faces.”

“Kururuk?”

“If things go well, I think we can definitely take the initiative. So, what is the plan….”

The bird who heard Geo's story tilted its head as if to say, "Is that okay?", the cat flipped over as if it wasn't interested, and the teddy bear made a subtle expression as if to say, "Are you sure that's true?"

At that sight, Geo saw the sun god.

“What's wrong?”

"…dream…."

The teddy bear nodded as if to say, "Is that so?" at Geo's calm appearance. It wasn't that he made a subtle expression because he knew what was going on, but rather, he thought, "If Geo is okay, then that's what it must be."

“Kuu, kukukukuku.”

“Thank you for your support.”

It was truly the scene of a warm family meeting.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (77)

Episode 77

“We ate rice cooked with various vegetables from the garden and grilled fish with a spicy sauce,” Geo said.

“Ghost story?”

“Kururuk.”

“It wasn’t bad.”

Honey was worried about Geo's rumor about the 'Black Cloak', but Geo was okay with it. It was partly because of his originally calm personality, but it wasn't the only reason.

“If you think of me as a ghost story, you’ll probably be less worried about being attacked.”

This was the reason why Geo tolerated the collector's non-manipulative works.

“I’ve come to realize after going back to Earth a few times that even if the Earth were turned upside down and the environment was reorganized worldwide, a haunted portrait is still a rare thing. It’s not a joke. It’s not strange if you take one to a laboratory and torture them.”

He considered himself to be a 'slightly unusual case of an awakened person'.

It couldn't be said to be completely wrong since he was directly connected to the source, unlike regular hunters who access the source through the system, but the problem was that the people of the world wouldn't see it that way.

“I feel like in the 31 years that South Korea has not seen, it has become even closer to hell. A boneless chicken like me will fall into the abyss without lasting even a day.”

“Crunch?”

“Yeah, I’m not chicken, but that’s not what Dad’s argument is about. The problem is that a weakling like me will soon be dragged into a lab full of mad scientists and experimented on.”

In that sense, the 'Black Cloak Ghost Story' wasn't bad.

“At least it won’t look easy. There’s a lot of room for imagination.”

Not only did the Black Cloak seem to have significantly higher fighting power than the main character, Geo, but his name itself was also quite cool. There was something about nicknames like this that filled a man’s romanticism.

“First of all, if you call it a ghost story, it’s something that can be observed but not studied… It feels like an intangible smoke. I don’t know what it would be like in today’s harsh world, but I think the probability of being attacked by a dog or cow would be lower.”

“Kku, kkuru….”

“As expected, Mr. Yoo Seong-un. You are truly an all-rounder, suggesting this path after recognizing my weaknesses. You are the kind of person I should emulate. I should become closer to you by giving you food and snacks. And then I will kidnap you someday.”

Geo, who had casually said something that would make Yoo Seong-un faint if he heard it, continued talking while giving Dana some fish meat that was splitting apart rather than a freshly made castella cake.

“So, the emergence of horror stories about the Black Cloak is actually a welcome thing. Should we call it a bluff for survival?”

It wasn't that I introduced myself as 'I am a portrait' to the hunters I met in 'The Land of the Deep Sea'.

“At first, I couldn’t bring myself to introduce myself by my real name, so I used a portrait instead, and it worked well.”

“Curr….”

“To survive in this crazy world, I too will have to get involved in these horror stories.”

“Huh?”

“I think I need to think a little more about how to help….”

It would be nice if it lived up to the reputation of being a haunted portrait.

“Don’t portraits of ghosts often hang in schools?”

"…? dream…?"

“Well, I guess you don’t know much about Earth’s culture. Or maybe it’s because I was a teacher and I can only think about school.”

“Ku, kukukukuku.”

“Oh, is there anything you can advise me on?”

The teddy bear nodded. In the world he originally came from, there were few school-related ghost stories because public education was not active, but there were a few stories about ghost stories related to the mansion.

“It’s a mansion….”

Geo listened with interest and nodded.

“Surely, subjects like portraits hanging in abandoned mansions are also popular as ghost stories. I understand what you’re saying.”

“Kyuuu.”

“Yes, each piece of information like this will later help me be reborn as a great ghost story. The ‘Black Cloak’ that is known to the world right now is lacking in many ways to be called a ghost story….”

Geo nodded.

“If we keep trying like this without giving up, one day we will be able to create a great ghost story that will instill fear in people.”

"dream…?"

“That’s how we can make a living, Father. People these days are so scary that without some kind of bravado, it’s hard to survive in that niche.”

It didn't seem like something Geo, who was a harmless portrait, should say, but the Sun God said he understood and let it go anyway. He knew that he was not a great man who would actually harm humans, even though he only said things like that.

Anyway, Geo promised to solidify the concept as a ghost story.

“I’m glad that the first person I met was the leader of the Bisabal guild.”

Even though I still refuse to talk to him because just seeing his mouth talking like a machine gun makes me feel so discouraged, Bisabal was a good person.

The fact that he treated Geo, the portrait of a ghost, as a person proves his noble character.

“…….”

“What’s wrong, honey?”

“Kung.”

Honey thought, 'That might be a matter of taste rather than personality,' but she didn't say it out loud. She knew that although Bisabal was not a harmless person, he was a person who was extremely devoted to works of art.

If nothing else, the Visaval had become extremely harmless to his collection. That much was true.

“Kururu, kkukkung.”

“You wanted to eat fish too. Should I spread it on you?”

“Gurrrr.”

“Cute guy.”

“Geo said, cutting off a thick piece of flesh that was steaming hot.

“Anyway, I plan to proceed with the plan I mentioned soon. I’m tired of wandering around the ‘Deep Sea Country’ without any results and creating silly ghost stories.”

“Muuuung.”

“Can you eat thorns? Here, here. Eat carefully.”

Geo continued, giving Dana a fish bone.

“Do you have anyone to accompany you?”

“Kururuk.”

“There’s no one else like you, Honey. Do you know that Daddy loves you so much?”

“Kkuk.”

Honey had no intention of showing Geo, who was soft and fluffy, to the world alone.

"honey…!"

“Gurr.”

Geo, who was moved by the warm heart of the son he gave birth to, covered his mouth to show the depth of his emotions, and the Sun God decided to eat the fish in silence. Dana was already not interested.

I keep saying this, but anyway, they were a good family.

* * *

And Geo wasn't the only one planning something for their meeting.

Coincidentally enough, the mermaids had also prepared themselves.

“Hey, piglet.”

“What is it?”

“Where did the youngest go?”

“Not in the garden?”

“I can’t see it.”

“Are you crazy?”

Chaisol was kidnapped.

“No, he didn’t even get to rest….”

Normally, the prospective priests who had completed the initiation ceremony would have entered the dormitory temple, but due to the recent 'Temple of the Deep Sea' incident, they had a short break. In short, they were kidnapped while at home.

“Is it important to rest now?”

“That’s right.”

This news was immediately relayed to Yoo Seong-un, who was in the office of the Collectors' Guild.

“Huh? Kidnapping?”

"yes."

“Why…? Who? Where, how…?”

“We don’t know what their intentions are either….”

Cha Eun-hyeok, the eldest son of the Cha family, offered a bungeoppang (fish-shaped bread) as a bribe and said:

“There was sea water sprinkled on the garden.”

“If you say it like that, anyone who hears it will know that the culprit is a mermaid. But what is this fish-shaped bread?”

“I see, right?”

“You don’t have to give me any more bungeoppang. Stop it, it’s overflowing.”

“Please give some to Mr. Geo too.”

"uh…."

“I received an official document from Cha Ara and looked at it together.”

Cha Eun-hyeok continued speaking with a blank expression.

“I heard that Sergio has a 1:1 rule. If you receive a favor from someone, respond with a favor, and if you receive a rude response, respond with a rude response.”

"…so…."

Yoo Seong-un asked seriously.

“Should I offer you a fish-shaped bread and ask you to save my little brother?”

“…I thought there would be a higher chance of Isul-i returning alive than if I offered nothing… So I thought it would be better for me to do this even if Sergio didn’t actually step forward.”

“It’s almost like offering a sacrifice to a god. And it’s a bungeoppang.”

“I have nothing to say.”

“No, Geo really likes bungeoppang. Sometimes he gives me something a bit scary as a gift….”

In today's world where religion is popular, many people visit temples and make small offerings. Even if nothing comes in return, it makes them feel better.

“I know it’s a bit odd to say this, but Geo isn’t a proper god. He’s just something with the characteristics of a god. Unlike traditional gods who sometimes show mercy to their followers, there’s a high chance that he won’t live up to your expectations.”

“That doesn’t matter. I brought it as a gift.”

“I’ll tell you first….”

Yes, Geo had rules.

'I wonder if I can get hired as a fish-shaped bread seller.'

When he thought about the reaction he had shown once, Geo knew that he was bound by rules. Even so, when he cooked and shared food, he tried to find a 'price' from Yoo Seong-un.

Cha Eun-hyeok said.

“It doesn’t matter if it wasn’t for Sergio and the Black Cloak. But if the seawater we found really is the trace of a mermaid from the ‘Deep Sea Country’….”

"okay."

“Isn’t this an interesting story even from the perspective of a large guild like a collector?”

Cha Eun-hyeok desperately tried to persuade Yoo Seong-woon with his characteristically blunt face.

“No monster from the ‘Deep Sea Kingdom’ has ever come out of the entrance. I think this could be a sign, and I could use this to find out more information. So….”

“Calm down, Eunhyuk Cha.”

Yoo Seong-un consoled the young man.

“Even without saying that, I was planning on going to rescue Chaisol. The ‘Deep Sea Country’ is a dungeon that has a lot to do with me, and Black Cloak also seems to be interested in it… I was planning on visiting it soon.”

“…….”

“I think you can think of it as going a little earlier.”

"…thank you."

“Okay, then….”

Yoo Seong-un, whose voice was trailing off, looked back at Cha Ara, who was pale and exhausted.

“Would you like to come with me, Hunter Chaara?”

“…Um, um… Can I come with you? I’m only an F-class….”

“I can take you as long as you sign a contract stating that you are prepared to die.”

“…I’m shameless, but I beg you to do me a favor.”

Bringing an F-class hunter into a B-class or higher dungeon, unless it was intended to be used as a meat shield, was a huge burden to other hunters. In effect, they ended up becoming manpower to protect the F-class hunter.

So this was Yoo Seong-un's consideration. Even though he knew that it would be of no use to Cha Ara if she went anyway, he still asked her to accompany him.

"sorry."

“It’s a family matter, so I understand how you feel. You don’t have to feel sorry.”

Fortunately, the Collector's Guild had a high degree of freedom for its member hunters, so no one said anything even if Yoo Seong-un was away for a while.

It's just that Yoo Seong-un has more days to work overtime. And for the sake of peace on Geo and Earth, Yoo Seong-un endured it.

“I want to go too, but I guess it would be a bit too much??”

“What are you talking about when your physical abilities are at the F-class level? Please stay.”

“It’s a pity.”

The support itself was plentiful, although the visa was used in a different sense.

“…….”

“…? Why is Priest Kang Seo-dam here?”

“The Collector’s Guild Leader has requested assistance from our temple.”

“They are providing better support than I expected.”

“Even if it wasn’t a request, I should have stepped forward. Brother Chaisol is my student and I have to take responsibility for him.”

Kang Seo-dam said with a tired face.

“Even if I am not taking formal classes yet because of the accident, that fact remains.”

“Wow, that’s trustworthy.”

“Rather than that….”

Kang Seo-dam saw 'Sergio' gathered in front of the port.

“…Sergio Hunter… was he going with you too?”

“Because I have a connection with student Chaisol. In the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea,’ thanks to the energetic student Chaisol, many people have received help mentally. This is a way to repay the burden she has eased for me as a doctor and a believer.”

"aha…."

“The parents of student Chaisol also gave us bungeoppang (fish-shaped bread).”

“Bungeoppang.”

Kang Seodam also received an official document from the Collector's Guild regarding the 'Black Cloak'. He also knew that his rule was simply '1:1', so he was able to quickly understand Geo's participation this time with the word 'compensation'.

But I was also worried.

'This part could be exploited by humans.'

It may sound nice, but if we were not careful, many humans could end up forcing a price on 'Black Cloak'.

'And if this person gets angry... then... .'

Kang Seo-dam, who was worried about future disasters, nodded.

“I understand. Thank you for your company.”

“There’s nothing to be thankful for. I’m just doing what I can.”

“I see. Where is the yellow bird I saw last time?”

“Here it is.”

Just like in the previous 'Temple of the Deep Sea', Honey's face peeked out from under Geo's hood, who was wearing a black cloak. Honey looked closely at Kang Seo-dam, who felt the strong energy of the sun.

“…….”

“…….”

“……?”

When Kang Seo-dam started to express her doubts, Yoo Seong-woon noticed something and stopped Honey.

“No, honey, I’m not eating it.”

“…Are you eating?”

Geo shook his head.

“I don’t eat.”

“But just now, Mr. Yoo Seong-un….”

“Why would you eat unseasoned meat when the food I make for you will be more delicious?”

“…….”

“Honey is a gourmet, she doesn’t eat just anything.”

Kur.

A cries of affirmation were heard from inside the hood.

"…okay."

I didn't feel particularly reassured.

'You were looking at me with such sparkling eyes.'

Kang Seo-dam felt even creepier as he recalled Honey's greedy gaze.

“…….”

“Then shall we go?”

"…yes."

In this way, the rescue team for Chae Sol was formed, led by the A-class Yoo Seong-un, Kang Seo-dam, Cha A-ra, and Sergio.

Actually, this portrait doesn’t need anyone’s help… .

‘… Helping Geo with his social life… .’

Yoo Seong-un thought it was a bit funny.

“…….”

Sarcasm is correct.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (78)

Episode 78

There was a reason why Yoo Seong-un was always by Geo's side.

'If you come to your senses, you will realize that you have been saying and doing strange things.'

It would have been okay if it had been a poorly imitated human-like monster. Because no matter how it behaved, you could tell it was a monster. However, 'Portrait of Geo' was strangely good at imitating humans.

'That makes people even more confused.'

Even though they clearly don't seem human in their heads, they are convinced that they are human in their hearts, and that sense of disparity makes them feel eerie. It is different from the fear felt from monsters or the children of the Origin.

'This is truly a ghost story.'

It was Yoo Seong-un's role to enable Geo to get along well with humans.

“What the heck.”

Iron Buck.

A meteorite stepped onto the soft floor.

“This is like jelly.”

“That’s definitely true.”

Kang Seo-dam, who entered the dungeon following him, also nodded.

“It looks like a low viscosity slime, but it holds its weight well for that kind of thing.”

“If you try to scoop it up with your hand, it’s just sea water.”

Yoo Seong-un shook off the water he had in his hands and saw Geo and Cha Ara entering together.

“Oh, you came in?”

“Yes, yes yes… yes.”

“Don’t be so nervous. There are only three A-class hunters here. How can you not protect one Hunter Chaara?”

“Three people….”

“That’s three.”

“Ah… That, that’s right.”

Cha Ara, who had eaten some of the naughty food, quickly received Yoo Seong-un's words. As she was doing so, she glanced at Geo, who was looking around the dungeon, and it seemed like she had remembered the rule that 'you cannot point out that he is not human in front of Geo.'

'That's right, Hunter Cha Ara also received the official document.'

The official document also contains several recommendations along the lines of, “Do not doubt Geo’s identity.” It seems that Cha Ara also decided that there was no need to go against Geo’s wishes.

'By the way… .'

If my prediction is correct, this dungeon will be like a home to 'Giovanni'.

“…Geo, are you okay?”

"it's okay."

“This is my first time entering a dungeon officially, so I’m a bit worried.”

“I was a little nervous, but not as nervous as I thought I would be.”

Geo, a platinum-haired man with his black hood pulled back, smiled his characteristically kind smile.

“The scent of the sea is quite pleasant.”

“Come to think of it, did you like the sea?”

Yoo Seong-un looked down after saying that.

“…….”

A country was seen, completely submerged in the sea.

“…Going down here would be a lot of work, but Geo, can you swim?”

“To be honest, I can’t!”

“What’s so confident about this?”

As the name suggests, the hunters who visit here are basically those who can swim. In the first place, it is rare to find a hunter who cannot swim.

“I didn’t think of that….”

Yoo Seong-un looked back at the other two with an embarrassed expression.

“What about Hunter Cha Ara or Priest Kang Seo Dam?”

“Huh? Oh, it’s possible… but it’s an F-class….”

“It is possible without any problems.”

“Oh my.”

Yoo Seong-un looked at Geo again.

“Then it seems like Nana Kang Seodam should help Geo. Is that okay?”

"no?"

"oh…?"

“There are plenty of ways to get there without swimming.”

“Why are there so many of them??”

“I learned some good skills from my elders.”

“…….”

No, wait a minute.

“…Your family elders?”

"yes."

“That, that old man. That….”

“I will make you feel comfortable.”

“What the heck??”

Without answering Yoo Seong-un's question, Geo placed his hand on the floor.

That moment.

“…….”

-Kurururururuk!!

“…….”

“Okay.”

With a loud noise, a path appeared inside the sea.

“You can just walk now.”

“…….”

“Let’s walk.”

The hunters, including Yoo Seong-un, looked at the tunnel that had formed in the sea with blank expressions.

"uh…."

In the open space like a long straw, a staircase was kindly built. The path led to quite a deep place, and with the hunter's good eyesight, he could see that it reached the 'Temple of the Deep Sea'.

Yoo Seong-un, who prides himself on being the person who receives Geo's greatest affection, asked.

“How did you do this?”

“Sea water is also water, so wouldn’t it evaporate if heated?”

“So you evaporated it?”

“Yes, it’s convenient, right?”

“Because you don’t want to swim?”

“It’s not that I don’t like it, it’s that I can’t do it. It’s not a matter of my taste.”

“So I changed the dungeon….”

He changed the shape of the sea because he couldn't swim. Yoo Seong-un looked back at Kang Seo-dam, the child of the sun.

“…….”

“I can’t.”

“I guess so.”

Please, Geo.

'What hunter in the world remodels a dungeon just so he doesn't have to swim?'

In the first place, the fact that a dungeon can be remodeled is already beyond the Hunter's realm. That Hunter had no reason to come to the dungeon. The dungeon's existence and the Hunter's purpose of visiting it disappear.

'The head of the Bisabal guild, the richest man in South Korea, makes his part-time workers collect waste paper and earns 5,000 won for his own pocket money.'

If this is going to happen, then why does the identity of 'Sergio' exist? Is there really no intention of imitating humans? Is this a warning to stop making such absurd remarks? Yoo Seong-un is in a deep quagmire.

'The good news is that Priest Kang Seo-dam and Hunter Cha A-ra are doing their best to avoid eye contact and pretend not to notice…'

He looked at Geo again after confirming their willingness to cooperate and keep quiet about everything that happened today.

“Geo, I’ll speak frankly since everyone here is trustworthy.”

“Please speak comfortably.”

“This is a bit far-fetched for a human domain.”

“But I am just an ordinary human being….”

“Oh, I know, I know. Everyone knows that very well, so you don’t have to worry about that. Just….”

Yoo Seong-un took a deep breath.

“I would like you not to show off your abilities too much in front of people other than us, because other people might be afraid of you or misunderstand you. Do you understand what I mean?”

“I understand, thank you for your consideration.”

"okay…."

Cha Ara looked at Yoo Seong-un desperately trying to persuade her calmly, as if she felt sorry for him. And Yoo Seong-un also thought that his own situation was a bit miserable.

'You're teaching social skills to a being whose identity you don't even know, using a mere human body.'

Outside of the collection, 'Sergio' had lowered his status to a human level, and that was about it. No, in fact, it was so burdensome that I felt like my whole body was going to explode.

‘It’s fortunate that Geo thinks of himself as a human… .’

I guess you could say that the plan to separate 'Sergio' and 'Black Cloak' was a success. It wasn't a bad situation.

'It's definitely less stressful than being in the office building, so yeah, to this extent.'

In the case of differences, it was possible to compare them to S-class hunters. At that point, it was close to a human disaster. The problem is that Geo is not even human, and this is where Yoo Seong-un had to put in effort.

“Usually, hunters can’t just change other people’s dungeons like this.”

“I see, that must be inconvenient.”

"…yes…."

“You don’t have to worry because I’m here.”

And Geo didn't think anything of it. It wasn't like he was doing anything unethical by changing the dungeon a little.

No one died, no one was injured, no one was hurt. Geo's ultimate positive mind did not yield to the limitations of human beings.

Limits are meant to be overcome. Giovanni overcame his limitation of not being able to swim with the power of the sun. He was proud of his remarkable growth.

“Let’s go now.”

If this makes my concept more solid, then that's a welcome thing.

'Taran.'

Anyway, what was good was good.

* * *

Giovanni is dead.

“…….”

If you were to ask whether I was in my right mind after that, I would say no.

The farewell that Isser was preparing for was a little warmer. In Geo’s hands that had grown old, wrinkles would appear around his eyes, his back that had been straight like a statue would bend, and his once strong body would become infinitely thinner.

Geo would die while watching countless people express their gratitude for his life. Slowly, his breath would become shallow, his eyelids, which had always been affectionately bent, would close, and his heart, which had been beating slowly, would calm down… .

“…Where was the teacher’s body?”

“It must be in your stomach.”

“…….”

“And, it’s in the sea.”

Nothing was accomplished.

“…How old were you, teacher?”

“I lived a little over 30 years after I was born.”

“How long has it been like that?”

“If a human is well managed in a good environment, he or she can live to be over 100 years old.”

“What if I can’t manage it in a normal environment?”

“If it weren’t for the constant abuse, I think he would normally be around 80 years old.”

“Teacher, you didn’t even get to enjoy half of my life.”

He was too young.

“It’s only been 30 years.”

“Yeah, it was only 30 years.”

“I thought it was longer than that.”

I felt empty.

“100 years, or 200 years. It’s too crazy to say that all that happened in 30 years at most… There was so much going on….”

Giovanni spent his entire life saving people.

“Why didn’t anyone defend the teacher? He really saved so many lives. He saved the dying and the damned. Those who were saved by the teacher… didn’t they say they were grateful at that time? They even shed tears of joy at his touch.”

My sister agreed.

“Yes, Geo was a very kind person. He saved many humans and mermaids.”

“But when he died, no one was left by his side.”

He wasn't the kind of person who deserved to die like that.

“The teacher should have closed his eyes in a slightly older body, lying in a warm bed, with so many people around him. Shouldn’t that be so? He was someone who lived so devotedly for others. A person like that should be warmer, in the sunlight….”

“The death you imagined seems to be something that only happens in fairy tales.”

“…It didn’t have to be a fairy tale…. What I was talking about wasn’t necessarily a fairy tale, but it was a situation that could happen at any time. That’s… that’s all. I wasn’t hoping for a miracle. I wasn’t hoping for humans to live as long as mermaids, nor was I hoping to bring the dead back to life.”

How great is that?

“Humans die anyway. No matter how good an environment they grow up in or how well they are managed, their lifespan is so short that they die quickly. If they live such a short life without resting and shedding blood and sweat, shouldn’t they enjoy that level of benefit?”

“So you got that benefit?”

“…….”

no.

"…no…."

I respected my teacher, a man named Giovanni.

Geo was a priest and a doctor. Isser learned his priestly nature from him, and Aria learned her abilities as a doctor from him.

As they had learned from Geo, they both treated humans very well.

“No, it wasn’t. In the end, it was just….”

But no human being knew how to be grateful.

“…They are a group of people who, in the end, throw away even the affection of Geo, a fellow human being, in an instant.”

“Humans are so fickle. They are different from mermaids in many ways.”

Mermaids live for over a thousand years. Perhaps because they were born to live that long, mermaids are indifferent to the stimuli they encounter, are not sensitive to emotions, and do not change easily.

And that's why, when mermaids get a stimulus, an emotion, a change, they hold on to it for a very long time.

"…ah…."

Isser already knew that 'it' would be Giovanni.

“Please, why… why, if you do this… if you do this, it won’t work….”

“…….”

“This isn’t right, Aria….”

So I hoped he would have a very sweet and gentle death.

“Why on earth do I have to carry this memory with me for the rest of my life…?”

I knew that every moment of that short life of that person who resembled the sunlight, that person who was as soft as a warm blanket, was ultimately something I had to embrace.

So I was relieved. At least, I thought that someone as cool and wonderful as Giovanni was worthy of being embraced by a mermaid.

“Aria, I ate that man.”

The mermaid ate a human.

“Why? Because I was hungry. Those lowly humans locked me and him in a small tank…! Geo couldn’t die! Giovanni was rotting in pain and cold, and I was hungry! I ate him!!”

The children of the sun laughed at that.

“In the end, even if a mermaid imitates a human, they are still just mermaids, monsters that eat people…!!”

“…….”

“…Are we monsters?”

The only sister answered.

“Everyone is a monster.”

“…….”

“Only, except for the teacher… everyone was a monster.”

"…okay."

Geo was human.

That was certain.

“…I miss you, teacher….”

"so do i."

For a very long time, Isser could not open his mouth. If he opened his mouth, it seemed as if the Giovanni he had swallowed would spill out.

It felt like his guts, which he had chewed and swallowed, were running away, his eyes were shedding tears, and his mouth was screaming or spewing resentment at the mermaid.

And now that Isser has opened his mouth, the one he is holding in his arms is Giovanni.

“Sister.”

“…To be honest, I think I hate you.”

“I think this is the first time I’ve seen you hate someone.”

“I’m not even sure if this feeling is real.”

“I will gladly accept it. Even that is a change brought about by you, teacher.”

“I will cover the sun with the sea.”

Her words were mad, but Isser knew they would soon come true.

“If the whole world is covered by the sea, Geo can also remain in the sea.”

“…….”

“And mermaids too… are part of the sea after all. Just like the pictures of mermaids that person always drew….”

“…….”

“…There is.”

Aria was wearing a pure white gown.

“…I don’t know what I want either, Isser….”

It was Giovanni's.

“…….”

“…….”

A long time has passed since then.

A very, very long time… .

* * *

“Did you have another nightmare?”

“…….”

Round black eyes.

“…Father Chaisol.”

“I’m not a priest yet.”

“I am not human.”

“Why not?”

"…well…."

Why not?

“What if I were human?”

We had a future.

“…I do have such delusions.”

“You’re still human now.”

“I am a mermaid, as I told you when I brought you here.”

“But you’re human?”

“…….”

“What’s the difference between humans and mermaids? I don’t really get it.”

"that…."

There were many differences, but perhaps because it was the day I met my teacher, my mouth was particularly tight.

“…That’s what I mean.”

What on earth was the difference?

What a difference.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (79)

Episode 79

By the way, Chae Sol was kidnapped.

“The Milky Way’s eyes are beautiful.”

I had no thoughts.

It wasn't for nothing that Geo and I got along so well.

“It just flashed.”

"under…."

“It’s like a dragon!”

“It’s probably a reptile, after all.”

“No, it’s much cooler!”

“Dragons are also a type of reptile.”

“Oh really…??”

Chaisol asked with a serious face.

“Then, Eunha, do you also hibernate when it gets cold…?”

“I don’t catch it. Strictly speaking, it’s a fish.”

“There are no fish.”

“What does that mean…?”

“It’s not a fish?”

"ah…."

It seemed to mean that it was difficult to find the characteristics of a 'mermaid' in Isser's appearance.

“…So my eyes looked like human eyes?”

“Isn’t that a mermaid? Those, legs… legs… fish legs….”

“…….”

“You don’t have legs.”

“…You know….”

Human children are truly curious about many things.

“I can explain that part.”

“Oh, sister.”

“Is it hard to take care of a child?”

“I can’t say no.”

The current Isser was not the 'Galaxy' that Chaisol remembered. Isser, who had the clear form of an adult, was different from what Chaisol knew, but he was distracted by her overly friendly words and actions.

Even though he was being treated gently, he must have been kidnapped, so he was quite brave. As Isser slowly stepped back, his sister, Aria, approached him.

“Hello, gentleman.”

"pretty!"

“Thank you for the compliment.”

Aria smiled politely and greeted them with an elegant look that made them ready to go out into society right away.

“In fairy tales on Earth, mermaids have fins like fish legs, but not all mermaids are like that. The mermaids on our planet all had different characteristics as mermaids.”

“…It’s hard to say!”

“There are mermaids with mermaid tails, and mermaids without. In Eunha’s case, she was born without a tail.”

Aria, who had said so, called her younger sister as if to ask for an example.

“Isser.”

“…….”

Isser lifted the hair from his ear with a hint of fatigue over his signature smile.

“Now, can you see the ears of the galaxy?”

“Uh… it’s different.”

“Unlike human ears, mermaids have separate ear fins that are unique to mermaids.”

She continued speaking like a teacher.

“In addition, they have webbed feet that can be seen when they spread their fingers, and they have scales all over their bodies. And they have a separate tail that they hide now, which helps them swim more skillfully.”

“Then what about you, sister?”

“I have a mermaid tail, as you may be familiar with. However, fish fins are inconvenient for moving around in places like this where there is no water, so I split my tail into two and created legs that allow me to walk upright.”

"wow…."

“It’s an ability that any mermaid on my planet can demonstrate. Contrary to what humans think, mermaids have evolved to be able to live on land.”

"amazing…!"

Chae Sol was just thrilled. It's not that he doesn't feel nervous in an unfamiliar environment, but it didn't seem like Eunha had any intention of harming him.

Although he knew that this was a kidnapping, he had a firm belief that his brother and sister would come looking for him anyway. Rather than being scared, Chae Sol was excited as if he had come to an amusement park.

"however…."

That appearance of Chae Sol certainly felt special to Aria as well.

“I guess you’re not afraid of mermaids, gentleman?”

“…? Then that won’t work?”

“I know that humans on Earth would be terrified if they ever met a mermaid in person.”

Since the event called 'The Great Disaster' on Earth, 'mermaids' have been seen on Earth hundreds and hundreds of times. Naturally, since they are monsters, they have attacked humans, so most people on Earth are afraid of mermaids.

“Even the gentleman was kidnapped by us.”

“Uh… I know.”

“But can you tell me why you can smile like this?”

“You didn’t hit me…?”

"oh."

Aria tilted her head.

“Can I hit you?”

“…Are you going to hit me? Then I’ll run away.”

“Oh, poor thing. It’ll be hard to run away now.”

“You’re not going to hit me, are you?”

“There is nothing more foolish than abusing a precious hostage. But how can you believe that we are not causing pain and suffering to the gentleman?”

“If you don’t do it, then it doesn’t mean you’re not doing it…?”

“…….”

Aria, who was speechless for a moment, looked back at her younger sister.

“What a formidable opponent.”

“He’s a strong opponent.”

“He is indeed the kind of person Geo would like.”

“I thought they cared for me just because I was a child.”

“That could be the case, because he was a person who held the young and weak in his arms.”

Aria raised her head.

“It’s coming soon.”

I could hear the sound of the sea breaking up.

“…….”

“The response was this good. Even if Geo loves his child, it’s still pretty fast.”

“…It probably means that they were also preparing.”

“I’m not the only one who was mentally prepared, so I won’t feel wronged no matter what the outcome is.”

“It means that we weren’t the only ones who cared.”

Isser suddenly realized that it had been a long time since he had heard the word 'heart' from Aria. Isser, who was looking at his sister with a smile on his face, soon reached out to Chaisol.

He was not a mermaid who was afraid to reach out to humans. With Giovanni as his teacher, he could have easily become an ideal priest.

“Shall we go, Father Chaisol?”

“So we’re not priests yet….”

“I am correct.”

I just hate it.

“Aren’t your hands cold?”

“It’s so cold. Can I put a hot pack on it?”

“…No, your skin will get dry.”

“Then you won’t get cold hands and feet?”

“Mermaids, whose body temperature is lower than that of humans, don’t have that.”

It took some time, but we were finally ready to welcome Geo.

And, I have no intention of fighting.

“…….”

“Are you having nightmares again?”

“I don’t want to borrow it.”

I wish that were the case.

* * *

"Nice to meet you!"

Geo is dead, and even if he came back to life, he was still Geo.

“Do you have any mermaid friends who have received the grace of the sea?”

“Oh my god, who is this?”

Aria smiled elegantly as she walked down the steps of the temple entrance. Her gorgeous mermaid dress billowed like waves down the steps.

“Isn’t that the new sun god, Mr. Black Cloak, who trespassed without the landlord’s permission?”

“Black Cloak, Sergio now. Be careful not to make the same mistake later.”

“Yes, Geo.”

“Actually, it’s Giovanni.”

“…That could be the case.”

Aria replied with a smile and looked back at the humans with bewildered expressions.

“It looks like they’ve all come rushing in to save the human child.”

“…Are you a member of the Milky Way family, Mermaid Miss?”

“Yes, I am Aria, Isser’s older sister and the true owner of this dungeon.”

"oh…."

Yoo Seong-un looked at Geo.

“I think I’ll have to suggest raising the level of the dungeon when I go back.”

“Why? I understand it’s still quite high….”

“There are two dungeon masters. This is not a common case.”

Yoo Seong-un sighed while maintaining a smiling face and looked at Aria again.

“If the true master of the dungeon came out in person without any tension, does that mean he has no intention of fighting us? Can I take it that way?”

“It’s good that we can communicate well.”

Aria rolled her eyes. She was a monster who knew how to act coy.

“I’m sorry for bringing your little sister here without permission, Hunter Chaara.”

"uh…."

“I only used it as a device to summon you, and I didn’t leave any traces behind, so don’t worry and go check on your brother.”

“Uh, uh uh… uh….”

“It seems that the weak hunter is afraid to go alone. Wouldn’t it be nice if the other two of you could go with me? That would be polite to the lady, wouldn’t it?”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“I’m not a gentleman, you know.”

His job was to take care of the existence of the source and supervise the management of the gallery's works. Yoo Seong-woon looked back at Kang Seo-dam and Cha A-ra.

“I’ll be with Geo, so Priest and Hunter Chaara, you should secure Army Chaisol first. Since Mermaid Isser is nowhere to be seen, there’s a high chance that she’s with them.”

“The odds of a fight are low.”

“Chaisol was probably bait to draw Geo in. Since the situation is not emotionally tense, it must be true that Chaisol is safe. How about we make a move before we upset the mermaids?”

“That would certainly be the case.”

Kang Seodam led Cha Ara, who was very nervous, into the temple. After that, Aria kindly guided her.

“I will be with my brother in the last room in the hallway.”

“…Thank you for letting me know.”

As soon as the two hunters disappeared from sight, Aria turned her gaze to Geo.

“…….”

Her lips, as red as blood, opened heavily.

“They look so similar.”

“Don’t you think of it as you?”

“What do you think, Sergio?”

“That might not be true.”

“When you say it like that, it actually feels like it’s the Geo I know.”

Aria rolled her eyes.

“That guy always kept the possibility open.”

“Was it like that?”

“Even my own death.”

“I’m so embarrassed.”

“…….”

Aria, who was looking down at Geo and Yoo Seong-un from the stairs, turned around.

“Come in, gentlemen.”

“…….”

“Enjoy the mermaid’s invitation to your heart’s content.”

Yoo Seong-un muttered softly.

“…If I hadn’t been with you, Geo, it probably would have sounded like a battle start line.”

There was something eerie and creepy about Aria's voice.

Even though he was smiling softly, his hatred and contempt for humans were so clear.

* * *

Aria guided Geo and Yoo Seong-un to the banquet hall.

“Wow, it’s a seafood party.”

Yoo Seong-un was speechless.

“Is it okay for a mermaid to be like this?”

“Humans are really narrow-minded. Do humans not eat any land creatures?”

“I want you to think about how a human feels when he or she is treated to a seafood feast prepared by a mermaid in the deep sea. It’s scary. I wonder what message this table, devoid of any meat, is conveying.”

“What’s the problem with not having humans on the table?”

“It’s really scary….”

Aria's tone had suddenly become more relaxed.

‘Is it because it’s a space that can be called a home, or…?’

Yoo Seong-un glanced at Geo.

‘…I wonder if it’s just comfortable to have a meal with this guy.’

It could have been both.

Geo went to his seat without paying attention to what the two were talking about. It looked quite familiar, and Yoo Seong-un looked around the banquet hall, which felt luxurious and splendid for a temple.

“There are a lot of things to do in this temple.”

“Because this Solar Church does not consider frugality a virtue.”

“Uh… yeah?”

Yoo Seong-un looked at Geo again.

“Do you know where this is?”

“I couldn’t help but know, since that was where I was educated.”

“When it comes to education….”

“I learned a lot as a priest. You could think of it as a training school for young priests.”

"aha."

It seems that the method of raising priests was similar in every world.

Yoo Seong-un, who saw Aria staring at him intently as he listened to Geo's explanation, forced himself to swallow his sigh and sat down next to Geo. Aria sat down across from Geo instead of at the top seat, as if it was natural.

“…? You should be the owner of this seat, so why aren’t you sitting in the seat of honor?”

“The owner of that seat was not me, but the Pope.”

Aria rolled her eyes.

“I ate it.”

Geo looked at Aria in surprise.

“Are you feeling sick?”

“No… Wait, Geo, is that important right now?”

“How much saturated fat was in that human’s stomach….”

“So, is that important now?”

Is that really all there is to say about a monster eating a person? Aria seemed to be thinking similar thoughts.

“You don’t seem to have any regrets.”

“How can I possibly say nice things when I’ve suffered so much because of that person?”

“You have that noble face, and you speak quite sarcastically.”

Her blue hair also fluttered along with her smiling lips.

“I guess you are really my teacher.”

“Maybe so, maybe not.”

“If you can’t define it yourself, let me define it for you.”

Aria smiled.

"teacher."

“…….”

“The human teacher of the mermaids. Father Giovanni, the incarnation of the saint. Savior and traitor of humanity.”

“It’s gotten a lot more grandiose without me even realizing it.”

Geo also smiled at him.

Yoo Seong-un suddenly realized that the smiles of Giovanni, Aria, and Isser were quite similar. Although they were clearly smiling faces, they felt more heavy than joyful… .

In the meantime, Geo continued speaking.

“What are you going to call me now, Aria?”

“Anything is fine.”

Exactly!

When the mermaid snapped her fingers, the temple filled with seawater.

“…….”

There was no breathing difficulty.

“Welcome back to your sea.”

Hair that resembled the deep sea was scattered like coral.

The mermaid's dress moved like fins, resembling leisurely waves. Her pearly eyes sparkled dazzlingly, and the tiara on her head emitted a mysterious light.

The seafood in the banquet hall, completely submerged in seawater, raised their already dead heads and opened their mouths to welcome the guests and intruders.

“…Yeah, that’s right….”

There was a manifestation of the sea in that place.

“…….”

“Geo.”

Eyes that could never be human contained the most human saint in the world.

“Come talk to me.”

“Okay.”

“If you don’t like it, I’ll eat all the humans.”

For thousands of years, the Little Mermaid has been angry.

“You too.”

Only towards 'humans'.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (80)

Episode 80

Geo saw the mermaid princess grow up to be strong and beautiful.

“…….”

The hair, strangely colored like the deep sea, the eyes that resemble pearls just like in the legend, and even the dress that resembles waves symbolize the sea... but the doctor's large white gown that she wears over them stands out in particular.

Back then, we often played pranks like that. They were just trivial pranks.

“…….”

“…Yes, I am human too.”

So Giovanni could be sure.

“Let's talk.”

In the end, this was a place where humans had no choice but to win.

The Little Mermaid's ending (0/1)

I was sure of that.

* * *

Aria didn't blame Giovanni.

He was the only human Aria could think of. He was the most genuine human among all of them, and at the same time, he was kind and gentle, like something out of a fairy tale. Rare things deserve to be loved.

“I respect you, Giovanni.”

But it's been too long.

“There was too much going on to be covered up with the shallow word “respect.”

“Now that I think about it, it seems like the little mermaids were causing trouble.”

“I’m not young anymore, unfortunately.”

Aria loved Giovanni, but she hated humans. She loathed and despised them.

“I have learned so much from you. Human emotions, human life, human judgment….”

“The human biological structure was also something I taught you.”

“That helped a lot, especially after you died.”

“Are you blaming me?”

“It’s probably closer to love and stubbornness. That’s a little different from resentment.”

“Mermaids are such creatures.”

“Aren’t we a foolish race that lives our whole lives with memories of the past?”

To such a mermaid, the existence of Giovanni was too cruel.

“Since your death, I have encountered countless people. Some were sacrificial, some were selfish, some even drove their children into the abyss, and some gave their lives for others whose faces they did not even know.”

“Such diversity is what shows human potential.”

“I agree too. That’s why I couldn’t give up on this life. I’ve analyzed, researched, and studied countless people, believing that it would end someday.”

“It must have been a very long time.”

“I’ve been waiting for this day to come for quite some time. I keep venting my anger in vain, and sinking the suns of those countless dimensions….”

“I understand.”

“And now it feels like the end has come for me.”

That was the ending of the name Giovanni.

“The fairy tale of the Little Mermaid of Earth ends with the mermaid turning into bubbles and disappearing. Giovanni, is the ending you are drawing like this?”

“Every child is free to imagine what they want to do. Even if the mermaid in the fairy tale turns to bubbles and is forgotten by everyone, in some child’s head, she is living a happy life with a prince.”

“I’m sorry, but there are no more children here. The only ones left here are the princess, who has shed blood red to see the limits of humanity, and her loyal subordinates.”

“Then what kind of ending does the Little Mermaid Princess want?”

“Human suffering. Human despair. Human annihilation. I never thought I would meet you on this planet that came here to sink one more sun… but for now.”

“Did you eat humans, Princess?”

“The seas of all dimensions have already devoured countless human beings. Even at this moment, the seas are taking away the lives of greedy humans and are also devouring innocent humans.”

Giovanni's noble face appeared. It was the face of a saint who was called the savior of mankind and the son of the one God.

“Isn’t the sea cruel to humans, as you said?”

“But it’s beautiful. It’s like I, who can’t even swim, built a house by the sea and lived there for half my life.”

“Do you still think the sea and mermaids are the same thing?”

“Do you want to hear that you are beautiful?”

“I can’t say no. I wanted to show you how much I’ve grown, my teacher.”

But this may not be what you were hoping for.

“How do you feel when you see the mermaid you raised with your own hands growing up like this?”

“…….”

There was sorrow in his blue eyes.

“…That’s sad.”

"okay."

“I’m glad to see you again, and I’m sad to see you go.”

“Why is that?”

“Because you are a mermaid.”

Who was that mourning for?

“I am human.”

“…Giovanni, you always talk about the differences and limitations between humans and mermaids.”

With a smile that made it seem like he would sing only fairy tales his entire life, Giovanni always spoke of the harshness of reality.

“This is where the main topic starts.”

Aria looked at the white-haired hunter sitting in his seat with a tense expression, then back at Giovanni, who was still smiling gently.

"I am…."

It was a smile she had been trying to create her whole life but had never been able to. It was a smile that her sister had tried to imitate but had never been able to. It was a smile that she had tried to have again but had never been able to create… .

So in the end, it was a smile that was given up.

“…For thousands of years, I have studied humans endlessly and tried to figure out their limitations. However, I confess that my lack of ability has not been able to define a clear goal. I just wandered around, not knowing what to do.”

Giovanni said.

“And it is the teacher’s role to show us which way to go.”

“Giovanni, I’m at a crossroads. You have to help me.”

What will you choose?

“This foolish, stubborn mermaid can either spend the rest of her immortal life hating, despising, and loathing humans, or… yes, she can disappear like a fairy tale here on Earth and turn into a bubble.”

Is it the death of a human or the death of a mermaid?

“Okay, teacher.”

“…….”

“What should I do?”

Aria admired the man named Giovanni. She loved his name.

I find him mysterious in his humanity, and I revere his boundless wisdom and gushing affection. If there was a man who could bring sunlight to the sea, it was Giovanni.

“Teacher, you wanted the land and the sea to become one.”

Aria placed the sea in the sky and devoured the sun.

“Even if our choices were the same, the results would have been different, right?”

Instead of this cold, bloody reality, Giovanni would have created a warm fairy tale that smelled of sunshine.

But Giovanni was betrayed by humans and eaten by a mermaid. Aria saw his kind face filled with warmth.

“…….”

“Now give me the end.”

You became the sun for that.

* * *

Yoo Seong-un tried to hold his breath as he watched the situation unfold.

‘… things are going a little strangely.’

When the first Chaisol group was kidnapped, and as a result, until they arrived at the 'Deep Sea Country' with this group, I thought there would be a big battle. After all, it's only natural for a battle to break out when a hunter enters a dungeon.

But this mermaid named Aria really seemed to want to talk. This place was created solely for the purpose of debate.

'That too… is forcing Geo to choose between being human and mermaid.'

I felt sincerity.

'What would Geo do if he chose humans? Would he rather harass humans because he finds them annoying? Or would he really want to die?'

Depending on what 'path' Geo would show her in the future, Aria would either torment humans for the rest of her life or die on the spot.

‘That’s how all monsters are…’

Aria's hatred for humans also seemed to be extremely strong.

'It sounds like you're saying you're going to liquidate your previous life of studying and researching humans. Of course, thousands of years have passed, so it's about time for a conclusion to be reached, but does it make sense to leave that choice up to Geo? It's not something else, it's something that determines the fate of humans and mermaids.'

There are so many selfish symbols.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo.

“…….”

“…….”

He was still smiling, looking at the mermaid named Aria.

‘… I’m curious as to what choice I’ll make.’

First of all, it is true that the entity called 'Portrait of Geo' is extremely friendly to humans.

But just as he had worried when he first came to the 'Temple of the Deep Sea', Giovanni, who had a deep connection with these mermaids, could have chosen them.

'Even now, I can't even call myself human. Even if I choose to be a mermaid who has become a monster instead of a human, I can define that monsters are on the same side... I don't know what choice Geo will make.'

Besides, it was more reasonable. Objectively speaking, it was much less damaging.

'If you choose a human, Aria, the mermaid you were close with, will die right away, but even if you choose a mermaid, you can't suddenly kill all the humans in all dimensions. If Geo chooses a mermaid right away, it would be objectively more beneficial for him to spend time with them and defend the humans a little.'

Clearly, Aria was acting like she would eat Geo if she got upset, saying, 'You are human after all', but Geo had his own class and he wouldn't be easily swayed.

If we were to be that picky, the few humans in this dungeon would die, but wouldn't the majority of humans and beloved mermaids live? I was even more worried because I knew that Giovanni was not always kind and had a shameless side.

"……."

However, since it was not a place where he could step forward, Yoo Seong-un kept his mouth shut.

'… In the end, it's up to Geo to choose.'

It was when I waited for some time.

"Phew…."

Geo laughed.

"To be honest, I thought it was a little funny."

"…What?"

"They say family members resemble each other, and I guess that's true for us too."

Unlike the blunt, black-haired Geo, Giovanni, with his bright colors, even his light smile, which seemed to have a hint of playfulness, seemed natural.

The mermaid named Aria had a blank expression, but her smile seemed to steal my attention.

"……."

As if I couldn't help but recall a time I really missed… .

Geo curved his lips as if he was embarrassed, as if he was troubled, but still found it funny.

“I also thought about it. There must have been a way to get to the ‘Deep Sea Country’ without having to ride a submarine, but no matter how much I searched and waited, I couldn’t find even a single strand of Isser’s hair.”

It seems that the reason this portrait visited the 'Deep Sea Country' was to meet mermaids.

“Maybe he was avoiding me?”

“I couldn’t say no, I was too scared of being punished by the new sun god.”

“The sun god….”

“I don’t think you were trying to hide it. With such a passionate divinity in your heart.”

“I took it on without thinking, but to be honest, I don’t really know what I should do.”

“Isn’t this to kill me? It’s amazing how there are things you don’t know.”

“Because I’m human too.”

“…….”

“We always hit a limit.”

Geo smiled his characteristically straight smile.

“So, just as you kidnapped Brother Chaisol and called me, I too have been trying to come up with a way to call our dear mermaid friends together. I hope we can talk without having to run away.”

“So what method did you use?”

“Compared to what you have prepared, this is a very modest plan. I should say it is rough. I am very embarrassed that I have not been able to show you something great in order to save face as a teacher….”

- Kwajijijijijik…!!!

"ruler."

A spear of light appeared, accompanied by a ferocious roar that did not match the bright light that hurt the eyes.

He spreads out both hands.

“…….”

"look."

It totaled over ten.

The window's edge, embracing the heat of the sun, was pointed at Geo.

“This is how humans communicate.”

“…….”

Before we knew it, the sea water of the temple had dried up and was filled with a terrible heat like a desert.

“…Human conversation? What does that mean?”

“The good man cannot always be rewarded.”

“…I know too.”

“I should have known better.”

Geo continued speaking as if he was teaching.

“There is no guarantee that favors will be repaid, and notorious villains cannot always be punished to melt the hearts of their victims. The world is not a fairy tale, and reality is created by overlapping moments.”

“…….”

“Because humans are always changing. They can grow and deteriorate. It is foolish to expect that all the endings of these capricious creatures, who cannot stay still for even a moment, will always be the same. If you are smart, you will surely know this.”

The banquet hall was engulfed in a sweltering heat that made it hard to breathe.

“But that’s why humans created so many rules. We learned how to face each other, how to talk.”

“…….”

“And we have decided to punish the horrific murderer who has killed countless people.”

“…You’re going to accuse me of something now? You’re bringing up human rules to me, a person who isn’t even human….”

"aria."

A face as warm as the sunlight.

“Humans are diverse. They have no limits, and you are no different. They say that humans are something that cannot stay still for even a moment and is constantly changing.”

“…….”

“You weren’t like that? You didn’t change at all? You just grew and deteriorated, so you had the illusion that you were the same as you were thousands of years ago….”

"…I am."

“We can talk.”

The voice was firm.

“If you get what you deserve.”

Like a teacher teaching young students.

“…What kind of punishment is this? I don’t understand.”

“We use some pretty lethal tactics to get what we want. This time, let me ask the question.”

“I don’t know. I don’t understand.”

“There is no reason for me to stop your hatred towards humans, Aria.”

The teacher who was guiding the students asked.

“Is there any reason why I should not take ‘Giovanni’ away from you?”

“…….”

Geo chose humans.

And since according to his words, humans and mermaids are no different, it seems that he did not give up or choose anything.

The mermaid's face crumbled at the greedy adult's fatal declaration.

“Whether to choose humans, including you and me.”

"…ah…."

“It is up to you whether you choose the mermaid’s wrath.”

What was revealed was not the sea, but a less mature student.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (81)

Episode 81

One day the little mermaid said,

“I’m going to eat you.”

“…….”

Giovanni laughed awkwardly.

“…Are you saying that to someone who has just been to the market?”

“I’m going to eat you.”

“I guess you didn’t like the fact that I left Aria alone and went to the market.”

“Yeah, I don’t like it.”

“It was you, Aria, who said you would stay home alone because you were so absorbed in a book.”

“Eat it….”

“Okay. Let’s go together next time.”

Isser kept looking behind Giovanni, wondering if his sister was angry. Giovanni patted Isser and handed him a bag of groceries. It wasn't that heavy.

“Can you bring it to the kitchen?”

“Oh, yes, I will do that.”

“Thank you for always helping me, Isser.”

Giovanni, who had been watching Isser go into the kitchen, sat down next to Aria.

“Looking at it this way, it doesn’t seem like he’s that angry.”

“Do humans express this as being angry?”

“As expected, mermaids are quite emotional. Maybe it’s because they live among sea creatures with whom they rarely communicate.”

“Sea creatures do communicate. It’s just that stupid humans don’t realize it.”

“That is indeed true. But it would be different from creatures on earth.”

The blue eyes widened.

“Perhaps what you are feeling right now, Aria, is anger.”

“The story about a mermaid getting angry is quite strange.”

“I’ve never seen a mermaid get angry before. Mermaids always have a blank expression on their face, even when they fight humans.”

“I guess so.”

Even when humans killed the mermaid's baby, the mermaid did not get angry. She just responded with a cold, expressionless face, and people said that they were monsters who did not care if their own children died.

“By the way, I heard that there was a fight between humans and mermaids in the next village. Did you see it, teacher?”

“I haven’t seen it, but the mermaids I’ve seen so far have always been expressionless.”

He laughed.

“As Arya knows, the conflict between humans and mermaids is so old that no one knows who started it first.”

They didn't even know who started this conflict. The humans simply saw the mermaids as terrifying sea monsters, while the mermaids saw the humans as stupid and threatening beasts.

The conflict was escalating. Now the mermaids were drowning innocent humans in the sea, and the humans were drowning innocent mermaids in the square.

They look at it and shout at each other.

“Everyone says, ‘We must kill the mermaids. We must kill the humans…’ How could anyone but the devil create such a terrible situation?”

“…….”

“I have seen the conflict between mermaids and humans with my own eyes. I have lived as a son of the sun, traveled here and there, and encountered many mermaids along the way.”

“So you pride yourself on knowing a lot about mermaids?”

“It may have been an inappropriate amount of confidence to show in front of a mermaid, but even I am not used to seeing Arya angry.”

“We might see each other more often in the future.”

“Oh my….”

Giovanni carefully stroked his dark blue hair.

“As far as I know, the idea that mermaids eat humans is just a superstition that exists in some regions, so why did you say you would eat me?”

“When I said it like that, everyone listened obediently.”

“I understand, this is the result of learning.”

Giovanni understood the learning of such mermaids. The indifference of mermaids, who did not even feel the need to choose the means and methods because they could achieve the desired results, further fueled the fear of humans.

But Giovanni hoped that this would not be the result of mere learning, for he wanted the mermaid, who was curious about humans, to become a more friendly and social adult. Giovanni continued.

“Then it must be a joke.”

"joke?"

“You’re not really planning on eating me, are you?”

“Mermaids don’t eat humans, they give them stomachaches.”

“Then let’s just treat it as a joke.”

I didn't want to put too much weight on the mermaid's cruel learning. Up until now, humans and mermaids have been giving too much meaning to each other's 'incomprehensible actions', which is why they have come into such deep conflict.

He just gave advice, the kind of advice you might give as a teacher and friend.

“It would certainly be convenient to scare people into obeying orders. But if you just scare them, a lot of them will run away from Arya.”

“Is that a bad thing?”

“At least it wouldn’t be a good thing for Aria, who wants to learn about humans. Humans aren’t creatures that only show colorful reactions when they’re scared. On the contrary, they show much more reactions when they’re happy and joyful.”

Giovanni hoped that the mermaid would not be left alone one day, and that the day would come when the sea and the sun would become one, just like her brother had hoped.

Mermaids live for a very long time and stay in one memory. Maybe this young mermaid who likes her current daily life could grow up to be a mermaid who helps humans someday. She would be the beginning of peace.

I don't know if it will really happen, and I didn't want to force it. But I definitely hope that this mermaid, who has to live her entire life embracing her short life, will become more gentle.

“If you keep playing pranks like this, there will be no one left by Aria’s side.”

The arrogant mermaid asked him.

“What about my brother?”

“…….”

“And, what about you?”

“…We will probably always remain by your side.”

"always?"

“As long as I don’t die.”

“You’re going to die.”

The mermaid complained.

“Human lifespan is too short. The sun that created you was stupid.”

“Isn’t it possible that because their lifespan is short, they show more colorful aspects?”

“I don’t understand. Isn’t it obvious that the longer you live, the more you can learn?”

“If you spend time with it, you will slowly understand it.”

"what?"

“Desperation.”

Giovanni knew the limits of humanity, and he also knew the infinite possibilities that came from them.

“Because we are creatures with short lives, humans are the ones who work harder than ever. When humans become lazy, they are easily eliminated, the situation easily worsens, and humans cannot welcome such a situation.”

“Are you going crazy because it’s more desperate?”

“Maybe so. Is there a point here where we can think more? What might it be? Aria, think about it.”

“…….”

The mermaid princess, who was worrying with her small head, asked.

“So, when mermaids are desperate, do they become colorful like you?”

“Yes. Mermaids are just more familiar with water than humans and have slightly longer lifespans. They’re not that different.”

“So many things look different.”

“If humans were given gills to breathe underwater and live a life closer to eternal life, people would call them mermaids.”

“Are you saying we are the same?”

“No one is wrong. We just have our differences. If there’s one thing I’ve felt while spending time with you, Aria, it’s that you’re just like me.”

Giovanni had no doubt about that fact.

“Aren’t mermaids also creatures that create precious things?”

“What does that have to do with future diversity?”

“Because any living thing evolves to protect what is precious to it.”

“Any living thing?”

“Even four-legged animals that cannot speak and fish that are often eaten by us use all kinds of tricks and become strong to protect their young.”

“It’s an instinct to preserve the species.”

“You could say that innate instincts are also precious.”

The mermaid didn't seem to understand.

“Then is human greed the same?”

“If it is important to you to keep that greed, then yes, it is.”

Everyone has something precious to them, so they become diverse. However, since humans have a shorter lifespan than mermaids, they try harder to achieve their goals.

“So the mermaid will be like that too.”

“…Then what is the difference between humans and mermaids?”

“The truth is no different.”

We just don't understand each other.

“So, we don’t need anything great. If only more people could understand each other’s differences….”

“…….”

“If more people start to speak out for understanding and compromise, this long conflict will eventually come to an end.”

The mermaid complained with a blank expression.

“That sounds strange.”

“That’s what it sounds like.”

“I don’t like it.”

“Is that so?”

“I’m going to eat you.”

“You’re really grumpy, but you wouldn’t do that….”

“I’m going to eat you.”

“Of course, I understand.”

But there was something you absolutely had to remember.

“Aria, if you’re going to scare someone into eating you, you need to know this.”

“What is that?”

“Whatever Arya’s purpose was, humans will react differently, and Arya must take responsibility for those reactions. A creature that does not take responsibility cannot learn anything.”

“…….”

It's responsibility.

"…okay."

The mermaid obediently agreed.

“I will take responsibility.”

“That’s cool.”

“I will eat you.”

“Oh my… What else did you not like?”

So, it was a joke.

“I’ll put it on my table.”

“This priest has no taste.”

An extremely light-hearted prank.

* * *

“…….”

“…….”

The mermaid blinked and saw a dazzling light.

It belongs to the sun.

"…I am…."

Why am I wavering? It was the moment my heart wavered. I never wanted to lose, since I had waited for so long.

But the light was hot enough to dry up even the great ocean. It was the same sharp heat that had once dried up the tails of mermaids on the sea.

My stomach lurched. I felt seasick, something I had never felt before, even in the deep, dark depths of the ocean, or on the surface of the water tossed by a typhoon.

“…I don’t quite understand.”

“What don’t you understand?”

“Well, this is….”

Is this also desperation? If so, what is the desperation directed towards? The mermaid then found something to say.

“Why do you think I would want you not to die?”

“Aria, because you didn’t create me.”

Giovanni's voice sounded no different than it had thousands of years ago.

“I saw your lab. You were trying to create and combine countless lives. I taught you how to dissect and organize living things, so it was only natural that I could tell.”

Aria suddenly thought that it was so strange. It was a voice that she had chewed over and remembered for countless years, but it was strange because she knew that this voice had been absent for some reason.

You ran away to the sun. Or melted into the cold sea. How can someone who returned to nature come back alive and speak to me in the same way as before?

“Some even succeeded, and some were intentionally ruined.”

“…….”

“I was wondering if it wasn’t meant to be a life that didn’t feel like a life lived.”

The priest of the sun, who seemed to have been stuffed in his most beautiful time, asked.

“But why didn’t I do that? Why didn’t I revive it?”

“…No matter how hard I tried, I couldn’t succeed. Since they were dead, there wasn’t enough material to study.”

“I guess it’s because you respect me.”

“If you had died in a more normal manner, the outcome would have been different. It was not intentional, it was simply beyond my ability.”

“If emotions are also abilities, then they are not false. I know that mermaids feel emotions too.”

Giovanni was sure.

“You love me, Aria.”

“Why do you think that is?”

“Your voice is weak.”

"no."

It was a meaningful reunion with an old friend.

I never intended to proceed in such a stupid way, but it didn't work out so well as I had decided that it was the end for me.

I haven't been this stupid in hundreds or thousands of years. I've killed, tormented, toyed with, and…

“…….”

But I couldn't say anything because I only saw one face that I missed. The only thing that had changed was your presence, Giovanni.

It was only then that I remembered that you were not only my friend, but also my teacher. An adult I could never defeat, and my milestone.

'Yes. That's right, that's right.'

Surprisingly, Aria had never defeated him before. I realized something I had forgotten for a while.

I opened my mouth with difficulty.

“In the first place… Giovanni, who holds divinity, do you think you will die like this? This is clearly just a trick to embarrass me.”

“If this is a lie, I can die a thousand times over in front of you, and if this is true, ‘Giovanni’ disappears from this place. He is nothing more than a human being.”

“…That’s true too.”

I found myself laughing at myself for not having thought that such a counterattack would come back. Unlike Aria, who couldn't even touch the fingertips of her teacher whom she had encountered by some absurd miracle, Giovanni could ruin himself as much as he wanted.

'If he had cared for his own body and life, he would have lived longer than that.'

But Giovanni was a man who could do anything he wanted. For a very long time, Aria had not been able to beat her teacher.

“…….”

Now that they've come this far, Aria can't lie to Giovanni that she doesn't love him. Whatever confidence he has, Giovanni is certain that the mermaids love him, and unfortunately, it's true.

"ah…."

From that moment on, the outcome was already decided. Aria knew it, and that was why she placed her end entirely in Giovanni’s hands. Nevertheless, the teacher chose to torment himself rather than swing the leash.

Because he knew that it would be more effective in punishing Aria. It certainly was.

“Why do you have to be so cruel?”

A reflexive question was answered as is.

“Why were you so cruel?”

“…….”

“To me, and to the countless people I’ve met.”

“…I’m angry.”

“So you have to take responsibility.”

I know.

“I know.”

He asked me to take responsibility.

“You’ve been telling me that for a very long time. Be prepared to take responsibility for everything you do.”

No matter how much time has passed, there is no way I could have forgotten your teachings.

But she didn't take responsibility for anything. She didn't want to take responsibility for the death and suffering of a mere human being. If she was going to measure the weight of her anger, she wouldn't have even started in the first place.

“If I take responsibility for what I’ve done, doesn’t that mean there’s no point in venting?”

Ah, I hate humans. I hate them. Even this feeling of anger was so precious to Aria that she couldn't bear to let it go. My resentment and disgust were as heavy as the feeling of love I had for you. It was truly precious.

So it was natural that I should not take responsibility either. If I were to take responsibility, if I were to atone, I would have to decide that this feeling was wrong. I did not want this terribly precious memory to be tarnished and dulled.

“Nobody told me to take responsibility.”

“I think quite a few people would have wanted to take responsibility.”

“That must have been the case, countless people have died and been injured by my hands.”

I would have hoped that this terrible sea monster would suffer the most miserable death in the world, and atone for his sins by living through days more horrible than death.

“But isn’t that a funny story? How can you expect human emotions from a monster like me?”

She looked at the white-haired hunter with a blank expression for a moment. Was he a meteor? Aria asked him.

“Do you hunters want the monsters that inhabit the dungeons to be judged by the law? Or do you want them to apologize and feel sad?”

“…Monsters are just targets for subjugation. I don’t waste my emotions on them. I don’t have enough resources to bring monsters who aren’t criminals to justice.”

“Yes, that’s right. Most humans kill monsters without any emotion because it’s their mission. I also kill humans because I hate them.”

Aria looked at Geo.

“Why should I be responsible for this? Giovanni, you taught me to be human… but now I’m just a monster.”

“When you say that, this priest’s heart really breaks. I taught a man to love the sea, but in reality, he was a monster.”

Giovanni said.

“You know this is all just venting.”

“I know, but I don’t know.”

I know it well.

“I didn’t want to justify my actions with your death.”

"thank you."

“That’s why you, being so… merciful, wouldn’t have wanted something like this.”

“I see.”

“It just wasn’t appropriate to use as an excuse.”

I asked just to confirm.

“Don’t you still resent them?”

“I resent and hate you.”

“Then how can you drive me?”

“Because I don’t resent them enough to take responsibility for their deaths.”

Although he resented it, he did not wish for it to die. It was an answer that Giovanni could give because he believed that if he influenced someone in some way, he had to take responsibility for all of their reactions.

He said.

“Please select.”

“What on earth?”

“Are you human or a mermaid?”

"…what…."

That's a difficult question to understand.

The sharp light of the sun was visible, ready to pierce Giovanni at any moment.

“Taking hostages? That’s so clever.”

“I am writing this myself, so wouldn’t my responsibility be lighter?”

“You are right.”

There is nothing more cost-effective than consuming oneself. Aria also knew this. That is why she has used herself to instill fear in countless people up until now.

It wasn't the first time I'd seen a human make this choice. There were countless humans who traded on themselves, and they were just... not Giovanni.

So I harassed him.

“…….”

Of course, she doesn't regret it. Aria knew from the beginning that her and her brother's actions were nothing more than venting anger based on favoritism and injustice.

However, they vaguely hoped that one day their master would come back alive and scold them and punish them so much that they would end this long life. Only Giovanni could do that. Without him, these mermaids had no meaning.

‘… But in the end, it turned out like this. How could it not have changed so much?’

He rarely let his disciples sway him. The reprimand he received when he was truly reunited with his teacher was quite different from what he had imagined, and he was speechless.

“To be honest….”

“You can be honest with me.”

“I don’t know what to say.”

“Oh my, how pitiful.”

“I was full of confidence.”

I felt empty.

Until the moment when Giovanni was forced to make a choice, I was certain that the 'ending' was right in front of me.

“…I’m not sure what to do right now.”

Kkwaddeok-!!

A window fell out.

“…….”

“…….”

Blood flowed from Giovanni's shoulder.

Whether it was because she was his disciple, or because Aria was simply smart, she instantly understood the meaning of that action.

It meant that it was not the correct answer.

“What should I do?”

Crunch-!!

The second window fell down.

“Should I apologize for my rudeness…?”

Quaz-!!

It was the third window.

“Don't die.”

“You are wrong.”

bang!!

“Don’t die in front of me.”

“You were wrong.”

Crunch-…!!

"I…."

“Do you think you will respect me now?”

“…Are you angry, Giovanni?”

“Did you expect me not to get angry?”

His voice was still gentle and soft, but Aria could tell that he was very angry.

No, rather than that.

“Did you expect me not to be disappointed?”

He seemed disappointed.

“…….”

“…It’s pretty creepy.”

With just a few gestures, Giovanni was covered in blood. He had many holes and cuts. His body was weak and unworthy of the honor of the new sun god.

That was scary. There was a terrible smell of flesh roasting in the sun. It was the stench that told the mermaid that her old friend was turning into a mere piece of meat.

“…Was it like this back then too?”

Seeing him so injured under the sunlight reminded me of that day.

“You said you were tortured.”

“Yes, it was.”

“Did it hurt as much as it did just now?”

“It seems more painful now.”

“Then just stop. That’s not smart.”

“Emotionally swayed people are not wise by nature.”

"that…."

“You too, Aria.”

“…….”

“That’s why you did such cruel things.”

It was so funny and speechless that Aria couldn't help but laugh.

“…Why me….”

“…….”

“They still see me as a human….”

But I was crying.

“How can that be?”

Pearls fell to the floor, over the hem of the dress.

“Why hasn’t anything changed?”

This is how we have changed.

“Isn’t this a deception towards the humans who died because of me, because of my brother? How can they be so affectionate?”

“I don’t treat you like humans because I’m kind to you. I treat you like humans because that’s the truth.”

“It’s really funny. It’s a funny story. No one sees us as human. So you’re still being affectionate.”

She didn't look particularly sad, perhaps because the pearls were still falling from her eyes, which were as pale as wax and not reddened. They seemed to be mere decoration.

“I am not human, Giovanni.”

Aria found that a little unpleasant. She didn't like it. She wanted to be comfortable even if it meant eating everything.

“But it could be human.”

“It’s natural for monsters to eat and torment humans.”

“It is nothing more than an excuse to say that being called a monster makes it natural for one to commit monstrous evil deeds.”

Giovanni still had a smiling face, and his voice was soft. The smile that remained intact despite being messy and broken was eerie, like a stuffed painting.

It was like looking at a portrait whose expression did not change even when burned. The bloody body containing something that could be alive or dead continued to speak.

“You could have stopped eating humans and stopped tormenting them.”

“…….”

“You could have avoided being called a monster, Aria. You could have.”

The mermaid, unaccustomed to fear and anxiety, did not know exactly what she was feeling. She had never felt this way even when her teacher, who had been the only meaning in her long life, died.

She just asked. Unfortunately, she looked stupid because the other person was Aria's only meaning.

“Don't be mad at me.”

“Aria is my student.”

"…still?"

“It’s still like that.”

If you're this angry because I'm still your student.

“…Then isn’t that too cruel?”

I know, it's not right for someone who is proud of being a monster to say such things. Those who died by her hand will laugh and despise her. But if I had followed the right path, I would never have thought of becoming a monster in the first place.

Aria repeated to herself that only her heart was precious. You know, I've missed you for so long that I can't even count the number of times.

“Don’t be so hurt in front of me, you can’t do that.”

“If you’re a monster, then this is okay.”

“…….”

The mermaid eventually had to admit it.

“…I am still your student.”

“Yes.”

“I, who am not a monster, can be confused in some other way?”

“Of course. This is a human conversation.”

Giovanni spoke in the gentle yet firm voice of a teacher.

“I have always treated you as human beings, as beings like myself.”

“…….”

“I know you’re a mermaid and I know the difference, but that doesn’t mean you’re a monster.”

It was such a long story, I thought it would be the perfect moment to end it, but it seemed like Giovanni had no intention of ending it here.

“Why isn’t killing me the perfect ending?”

“Because that is also a choice to avoid responsibility. It is cowardly.”

“I will never consider my sins as sins in my entire life.”

“But as long as you are by my side, you will consider sin as sin.”

“It is a great honor to be able to remain by my old friend’s side.”

I asked, finding it funny.

“Do you think that would be enough punishment? Giving me back someone precious to me?”

“First, I will not be the subject of your punishment, and second, I will not give you anything in return.”

“But why do you keep me alive if you don’t punish me? How can you stay by my side if you don’t give me anything in return?”

“My existence will be a punishment to you. I like good things, so you will be interested in good things, and one day you will be inspired.”

“That would never be hell for me. If the people I’ve killed and tormented all this time found out, they’d be crying tears of blood. For something like this, there’s no punishment for it….”

“I tell you again, I am not the one to punish you. I have no responsibility or obligation to do so. Am I not?”

He continued.

“But as time goes by, one day you will see yourself as a human being, not a monster.”

“This is ridiculous.”

“When that day comes, even if no one comes forward, I will go to hell on my own. I will punish myself.”

“How do you know that?”

“I raised you. I taught you. I protected you. I know how good children you are when you are by my side.”

Giovanni spoke calmly, as if discussing the very obvious fact that the sun is hot.

“You guys are so curious and smart. You have the will to improve and you’re not afraid to try new things.”

“…….”

“That’s who I know. So stay by my side. Take responsibility for what happened.”

Aria surrendered at a banquet hall that was a mess from the blood of noble priests and the fire of the sun.

“…Then it’s fine.”

He admitted defeat.

I have no regrets about the long, meaningless venting, but it was just too long. Still, the hatred and anger were endless, so I couldn't stop and didn't want to.

So, if possible, Giovanni, I wish you would come back and give the mermaid's story an ending. Only you could end the mermaid's life. Only you were qualified to finish this crazy fairy tale.

“I wanted to win, but I lost.”

“I guess it’s because even in a country like this, there are people who are called teachers.”

“So give me time.”

“It’s time.”

“I need time to think about how I will remain by your side.”

“Me too.”

At that moment, the few remaining windows of light disappeared. Aria looked into the empty space with a face filled with regret.

“…I should have killed the monster.”

“I keep telling you, it’s not my job. Why are you asking me to punish you?”

“Are you going to call me a coward?”

“Yes, don’t be a coward. Don’t stay in the time I died, and behave like a proper adult.”

“What if I keep killing people?”

“That is none of my business either. I have never incited you to murder, nor have I ever tried to stop you.”

“Then how can you call this the ending? Nothing has ended.”

“But now that I’m here with you, nothing will end, but that doesn’t mean nothing will change, right?”

“I won’t deny it.”

“Personally, I think this isn’t such a bad ending. You know what?”

Giovanni laughed.

“In the fairy tales of Earth, mermaid princesses sometimes turn into bubbles and disappear, but sometimes they become human and live happily ever after with princes.”

“Yes, my prince. I thought so from the first time I saw you. So, will you live happily together with me now?”

“If you want to do that, then do it. Anger can end in reconciliation, forgiveness, or destruction. It depends on how much responsibility you take.”

“It’s probably not a story that has anything to do with you, teacher. I don’t know if you’re being affectionate or indifferent.”

“Oh, no. I’m sorry to say this, but I’ve done enough. I just wanted to cut ties with you and pretend not to know you, but you kept causing trouble on all fronts, so I endured the hardships and came to see you.”

“Please be spicy.”

“So… let’s take our time and think about the rest. From now on, it’s up to you to decide what kind of story to create.”

Geo finished it.

“Because we have a lot of time.”

“…….”

"yes?"

* * *

The Little Mermaid's Ending (1/1)

Fairy tale rate 100.0%

Obtain Batlan Giovanni

Links: 'Deep Sea Kingdom' and 'Breathing Sea'

Palette Residents: Aria, Isser

Linking completed successfully

Achievement: The Law of Equivalent Exchange

Achievement: Painter in the picture

Achievement: Picture in Picture

Achievement: Man in a Frame

Achievement: … .

…….

.

.

.

Completed the tutorial

The painter who draws dungeons

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (82)

Episode 82

Identification Number

0S-761-SS

Response level

SS

Object Type

Humanoid_Mermaid (Female)

Object name

aria

warrant

The land of the deep sea

A humanoid entity first discovered by the 175th raid team of the Collector's Guild Authority.

Unlike 'Mermaid Isser', who is identified as a blood relative, her hair is long enough to touch the floor, and is dark blue. She is wearing a white doctor's or researcher's gown over a blue dress, but it is assumed to be related to the story of 'The Land of the Deep Sea' as it is a man's gown that does not fit her physique.

The entity reveals itself as a mermaid and reveals its name as 'Aria'. It testifies that it did not feel like a lie. The entity's name of 'Mermaid Aria' is confirmed.

As a special feature, it has been confirmed that the color of the eyes and hair changes depending on the physical and emotional state. This entity has made several statements identifying itself with the sea, so it is presumed that it can influence not only the 'Deep Sea Country', which it is the owner of, but also the seas of any dimension.

First sighting situation

It is understood that they came out of the dungeon and kidnapped the reserve priest (Solar Cult) to see the reaction of humans. The exploration team formed with the authority of the Collector's Guild witnessed it at the entrance of the 'Deep Sea Temple'. They did not show any particular aggressive tendencies and when they requested to talk, they were reported to have a strong aversion to humans.

As far as I know, 'Aria' is the owner of the 'Deep Sea Country', and 'Isser' is a false owner who deceives humans. Both entities have repeatedly committed acts of physical and mental pain, such as transforming humans into monsters, due to their hatred for humans.

It is understood that they have set a goal that they find attractive on Earth's level. It is expected that they will stop actively attacking humans until they achieve their goal. It seems that they should be especially careful not to cause any particular provocation, such as visiting dungeons and making a fuss.

Due to the nature of humanoid entities, the response level is set to SS.

No strategy has been found. The Guild Collector has requested that the basic response to this be 'avoidance'. Accordingly, the Hunter Association will also be extending the exploration period indefinitely instead of the strategy, so many hunters are advised to exercise caution.

Total comments (1,043)

– Aren’t S-classes going to try to attack?

– Please specify the exact deadline for the exploration season.

– Request for reconfirmation of response level

– Attack type confirmation required

…….

….

…….

* * *

In the end, the 'Deep Sea Country' was not conquered.

“Even with three A-class hunters participating, you still couldn’t complete the mission?”

“I heard you bought ‘The Kingdom of the Deep Sea’ from a collector. Is that true?”

“Please tell me if the information about the monsters confirmed through this exploration is certain!”

“What resources does the collector want in the ‘Deep Sea Kingdom’?”

Yoo Seong-un, one of the exploration team members, had to deal with reporters.

“Yes, the conquest failed. And it is true that I purchased the S-class dungeon ‘Deep Sea Country’ from the collector, and the information about the monsters I reported to the association is also confirmed.”

“Then the resources are….”

“For further inquiries, please contact the collection administration team directly.”

“No, wait a minute….”

“Just a moment, please don’t block the road.”

The reporters tried to catch Yoo Seong-un, but he couldn't hear them because he had to stay up all night for almost a week to finish up this dungeon exploration. The dark circles under his sunken eyes almost reached his chin.

Yoo Seong-un was a very busy person.

“I would like to ask you again to contact the administrative team.”

In fact, from the reporters' point of view, the easiest thing to do would have been a meteor shower.

Kang Seo-dam, the senior priest of the most powerful religious order in Seoul, was not easily able to get time for questioning even though his identity was revealed. In the case of Cha Ara, the Hunter Association and the collectors were providing personal protection.

'But if you try to approach Sergio, the other hunter, he's nowhere to be seen.'

Of course, the 'Sergio' they were looking for was sleeping in the gallery of Bisabal.

'So it's natural for them to catch me commuting to and from work.'

I understand, but I was really tired. I had to report to the guild and the association, check the state of the ocean, hide Geo's information... I was so busy that I had to postpone my main job as a curator for a week.

“Meteor Cloud Hunter!”

"no."

“You are here!”

“I told you there isn’t any.”

Even though most reporters these days are awakened, they are no match for the A-class hunter, Yoo Seong-un. Yoo Seong-un leisurely left the place and ran away to the guild lobby.

The administrative team staff who had been waiting for him greeted Yoo Seong-woon.

"Thank you for your effort."

“If you were watching, wouldn’t you have pushed me away?”

“These days, if you treat reporters like that, the guild will get criticized.”

“Well, the guild image is important….”

“It’s hard for us to respond unless they push back too hard.”

“I’m okay for now since I figured it out and came out.”

The employee nodded.

“We will take action if we determine that there is excessive attention being paid to this.”

“I guess I’ll have to stay inside the guild for a while. Is the break room empty?”

“There won’t be any new students for a while, so there should be some room in the dorms. I’ll find an empty room for you.”

“Anyway….”

Yoo Seong-un sighed.

“I don’t know why everyone is so interested in ‘The Kingdom of the Deep Sea’.”

“Could it be because this is the first dungeon in a long time where a humanoid monster has officially appeared in Korea?”

“Actually, humanoid monsters have appeared several times, even though they were kept quiet. That’s because they were all unofficial.”

“More than anything, it’s a dungeon I bought from a collector.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un, who was sweeping his neck, asked.

“Did it catch your attention?”

“Since you’ve purchased an S-class dungeon that we don’t even have proper information about yet, you must be wondering what the collector knows.”

“I wonder if they’re monopolizing special resources here. It’s not like there haven’t been any cases like that. Will the ants gather soon?”

“The stock price will go up.”

“It’s not exactly what they’re expecting, you know.”

Rather than a special resource, I purchased it because I thought I couldn't release a dungeon that was too deeply related to the 'Black Cloak' into the wild. It would also be a good thing for the Black Cloak itself.

The employee shrugged.

“If only it could be used as a tourist attraction.”

“It is certainly a great merit that the sea is one in which you can breathe even inside.”

“So in the end….”

The employee who had just glanced at the meteor cloud asked.

“What is the connection between ‘The Land of the Deep Sea’ and ‘The Black Cloak’?”

“…….”

“Based on the information I have, the Deep Sea Country and the Black Cloak are not monsters that go together. The Black Cloak is too out of place in that blue dungeon.”

“…Sometimes there are monsters that pop out here and there.”

In completely different dungeons, there were times when exactly the same monster or creature would appear. The gardeners named it the 'Child of Origin', but from the hunters' perspective, it was just a unique monster.

“That’s something I need to look into.”

“You must be busy.”

“You don’t plan on taking over for me, do you…?”

“I’m not a curator.”

“That is true, but.”

A tongue-licking meteor went to the elevator.

“Then please respond.”

“Don’t worry and go check the condition of the works.”

“That’s right, I haven’t checked for a while.”

As soon as he finished his urgent work, the place Yoo Seong-un went straight to was, of course, the gallery in Bisabal.

I put my employee key in the elevator heading to the gallery and pressed the button for the fifth basement floor, which was at the very bottom. Thanks to the fact that the building of the collection store was famous for spending a lot of money on state-of-the-art facilities, I was able to arrive at the very deep place quite quickly.

"hmm…."

The gallery in Bisabal, which I visited after a long time, had an overwhelming feeling, as expected.

'This place is truly suffocating.'

Even for Yoo Seong-un, a top-class hunter, it wasn't a very refreshing space. Should I say it was creepy or heavy?

A strange atmosphere was permeating this gallery, sending shivers down your spine as if you were experiencing muscle pain, while also ripping off your human instincts.

‘Especially the works on the 5th basement floor mostly have bad personalities… .’

Yoo Seong-un stood in front of a portrait while thinking about this and that.

“…….”

His face was covered in pitch-black paint, so it was impossible to tell whether his eyes were open or closed.

‘…I even forget faces often.’

He had seen 'Sergio Hunter' a week ago, but even though his memory was not bad, he could not recall the face. All that came to mind was the black paint in front of him.

'Could this also be one of the effects of covering the face in the portrait?'

With that thought in mind, Yoo Seong-un called out to the portrait.

“Geo, are you here now?”

"there is."

"oh…."

It was a quick answer.

“It’s not dawn yet, so it’s rare.”

The current time is 3:00 PM.

It was a rare time for 'Portrait of Geo', who always insisted on being up around 4AM, to be awake. Yoo Seong-un, who had been worried that he might ignore the rule, was able to feel a little relieved.

'If there was no immediate answer, I was just going to go back and come back at dawn.'

Of course, I was a little curious.

'Wasn't it the rule that we had to talk at 4 in the morning? It's strange, considering that I saw it often back then…'

Anyway, since it has come to this, I thought it would be a good idea to have a little conversation.

“Were you awake the whole time?”

“I heard Mr. Yoo Seong-un coming, so I was waiting.”

“Can you hear that too?”

“I can detect the sound of someone approaching the frame.”

“It’s amazing that you even detected that.”

“It’s been a while.”

The portraitist asked in his characteristically gruff voice.

“Have you been well?”

It had already been a week since I visited the 'Deep Sea Country' to rescue the little priest Chaisol. 'Portrait of Geo', which was more of a painting than a real person, seemed to remind me of that.

“I was worried because I hadn’t seen you for a while.”

“Don’t worry too much, usually if you don’t see me, it just means I’m overworked somewhere.”

“I think it means to worry.”

“I was just joking.”

Although he had entrusted the care to another curator, he could not let his guard down. Yoo Seong-woon, who was examining the precious portrait, soon asked if there were any damaged parts.

“What about you, Geo?”

“Please tell me the exact intent of your question.”

“It’s hard to say for sure, but for now… the mermaid siblings.”

“He’s still out of the sea, but he seems to be doing well.”

I heard that the mermaid siblings are still hiding in the 'Deep Sea Country' and haven't shown their faces. Geo said that it's probably because 'they got scolded and it's awkward to come see their faces.'

"……."

Yoo Seong-un was speechless for a moment.

"That's what you call being confused."

"Maybe it seemed a little extreme."

"I can't say it wasn't like that."

"It was a natural thing for Giovanni to do."

"Yeah, it's natural for a teacher to scold a student, but… that's… that kind of…."

Do normal teachers really scold their students like that, Geoya?

'I wondered if the strange aspect of Geo's personality was caused by his death and becoming a portrait, but is it just that Geo's originally had a slightly strange side even when they were human? Even if they live as humans, their roots are still the same?'

That terrifying indifference often startled even the meteors.

'Apart from the mental aspect, it must have been Geo who was ultimately hit hard by that situation. He doesn't seem to care about that at all. That level of indifference must mean he has no intention of imitating humans.'

I still remember it vividly. The scorching heat that could evaporate all the seawater, the spear of the sacred sun, and the black cloak that was left in shambles, yet still smiling like 'Giovanni'...

The beautiful and bizarre sight caught Yoo Seong-un's attention. He guessed that the mermaid named Aria must have felt the same way.

‘… Anyway, it’s not at the level of a scolding.’

Or maybe, from Geo's perspective, that was just appropriate discipline. I was already worried about what would happen if this guy really harbored feelings of anger or disgust.

Geo asked what Yoo Seong-un thought of the silence.

“Shall I call you?”

“Huh? Ah… no, I don’t have anything else to talk about with you.”

“I don’t think there is any need to be afraid because they are trying to restrain themselves now, at least out of consideration for my feelings.”

“Oh, okay….”

Yoo Seong-un thought to himself.

'I can't say it's that safe, since they're literally just hiding their bodies to keep an eye out.'

It was Yoo Seong-un who overheard Giovanni and Aria's conversation in the dungeon. He realized that Giovanni was the only meaning left for the mermaids.

If they were to notice, to try to restrain themselves, or even pretend to reflect, it was only through Giovanni.

'Without Giovanni by their side, the mermaid siblings are nothing more than intelligent monsters who can only mimic interactions.'

Monsters have been considered enemies of humanity because they do not hold any significance for humans. They are not given as much attention as a bug that has been stepped on in passing.

'If you look at the dungeon's story, it's a context that you can roughly understand.'

I could understand the cause of his hatred towards humans by observing the atmosphere flowing in the S-class dungeon, 'Deep Sea Country'. Since the only human he loved was taken away in such a miserable way by a human like him, I could understand.

'That's why I don't want to talk any more.'

I understand that you were very angry that Giovanni, the only meaning of being a mermaid, was taken away from you, but was it really necessary to take that out on humans in another dimension?

It was even more absurd because they seemed to have realized that their actions were childish. After all, they were monsters. Their way of thinking was completely different from that of humans.

'Right and wrong aren't important values to monsters. They only do things that are meaningful to them. In that sense, Geo can't be considered a monster anymore... .'

Basically, the monsters couldn't talk. Yoo Seong-un asked with an awkward smile.

“…Even if you’re a mermaid, are you okay? You were hurt badly that day.”

“I am a priest of the sun and a doctor. I can recover from that level of injury quickly.”

The portrait asked.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, were you worried about me?”

“Does that make you uncomfortable?”

“There’s no need to be offended. I’m sorry for startling you.”

“Well, I was a little surprised….”

It was not that I was worried about Geo's portrait itself, but rather that I was surprised by Geo's choice and visual stimulation. It is true that I felt that way, but it is true that I judged rationally that there was 'no need to do that.'

'Even if Giovanni had died on the spot, this portrait would not have been destroyed.'

The boundary between death and the existence of the origin was particularly vague. It didn't seem to be much different from 'Portrait of Geo'. He seemed to be a being particularly close to the origin.

“You are a skilled priest, and you have a father at home. I vaguely thought it would be okay.”

“It was rude of me to come back early that day without even saying goodbye to you to recover. I apologize again.”

“No, that was something that everyone else understood. If we had left you injured like that, we would have been the ones getting cursed at by the mermaids.”

Perhaps more than being persecuted, they were met with hatred and contempt.

“The injury was serious, but what are the aftereffects?”

"doesn't exist."

“You weren’t sick that day?”

“It didn’t hurt as much as I thought.”

“That’s surprising news.”

The tattered appearance of Giovanni that I had seen back then came to mind.

'Is it because I have a high pain threshold? Or maybe I'm literally insensitive to pain. But… .'

Thinking about how the usually neatly dressed 'Portrait of Geo' had been ruined like that, I felt a little uneasy.

"…hmm."

Yoo Seong-un added shortly.

“I think he did it because he could handle it, but I can’t help but be worried from his perspective.”

Didn't Geo hold his own life hostage to have a 'conversation' with Aria?

'It wasn't just a scare.'

The intangible spear that was burning hotly was embedded in Geo's body. Perhaps because he controlled it with his sun god-like skills, Yoo Seong-un didn't feel the intense heat, but wasn't it enough to evaporate seawater in an instant?

Even though I knew that he was not a human but a portrait, I couldn't remain indifferent to the smell of blood and flesh burning black.

“That’s pretty upsetting.”

Yoo Seong-un recognized Geo as a pretty good friend and a great piece of work, and he was still too human to calmly accept that such a being was being ruined.

“I was worried. It might be funny to say this to you, who recovered so long ago, but I was definitely heartbroken at the time.”

“It’s been a week.”

“That’s why I’ve been running so hard. I’ve been so busy that I’ve neglected my work as a curator, and I haven’t had a way to ask about your well-being….”

“I should have sent a letter saying I was at peace.”

“No, um, anyway. I couldn’t come right away, but I was worried about many things. I’m sorry I couldn’t take care of you right after work, but I’m glad.”

“Thank you for your concern.”

The portrait, covered in black paint, continued to speak.

“But I am a portrait. The blood I shed is ultimately just paper and paint, so there is no problem with recovery.”

“…….”

… Is that so?

Just when I was starting to get convinced, 'Portrait of Geo' asked in his characteristically dry voice.

“Wasn’t it fun?”

“Were you joking?”

Even the joke was so creepy that I wondered if anyone would call him the source of the being.

'It's in this part that I definitely feel like he's not human.'

Yoo Seong-un tried hard to change the subject.

“Come to think of it… Wasn’t that the first time you saw Aria in a long time?”

“Yes, it’s my first time seeing it.”

“But in that situation, you managed to talk to Aria so calmly. It must not have been easy.”

Yoo Seong-un felt that Giovanni's personality was close to human, but had a twisted side.

From Giovanni's perspective, the situation at the time was not something that could be passed over so easily. Wasn't it like the disciple he had taught in another dimension had turned into a vicious monster?

Even after his death, after he had been resurrected, not resurrected, this happened. And yet, Giovanni treated his students who had become monsters as if nothing happened. He was definitely not an ordinary person.

“That mermaid even said something like she was going to eat me.”

“It’s okay, it was a joke.”

“…It was a joke?”

“Aria often played such pranks when she was young.”

"uh…."

“He said that if he didn’t like it, he would eat it.”

The portrait continued to speak in a steady tone.

“That’s a joke. I think Aria knew that too, which is why she made that statement.”

“…Because it’s a joke?”

“If things didn’t go his way, he would just pretend it was a joke like before and forget about it.”

“…….”

“Likewise, Aria must have prepared to talk to me, but I won before she could do anything, so she couldn’t say anything.”

Yoo Seong-un hesitated for a moment and then asked.

“If it wasn’t a joke, what were you going to do?”

“It didn’t matter. They are mermaids.”

“Why are those guys mermaids?”

“Mermaids are a species that lives their entire lives with memories from a past life.”

In that calm and deep voice, Yoo Seong-un suddenly remembered Geo's 'eyes' that he had seen once.

“I knew they wouldn’t give up on Giovanni because he was a mermaid.”

It could never have been human.

“When Arya forced me to choose between the two, did I have the option of dying?”

"…that…."

If Geo had chosen a human then, Aria would have committed suicide, and if he had chosen a mermaid, she would have continued to live a life of tormenting humans.

“…But didn’t Aria threaten to eat you, saying that you were human too?”

“I just said that it was a joke. She admitted that she couldn’t kill me.”

"oh."

“I was sure of my victory there, because I knew that Aria still loved me.”

“…I understand.”

The mermaid princess, who always left room for playfulness, put strong pressure on the humans by even setting up a banquet hall in order to seize the initiative.

And Geo, who figured out all of that in an instant and predicted that they wouldn't be able to give up on him because he was a mermaid, attempted suicide.

“…You’re both cunning….”

“Whether it’s family or friends, fighting is how you become closer.”

Geo continued speaking in a gloomy, calm voice that showed no emotion at all.

“Especially since it had been quite a while since they had met again, I think that openly resolving the conflict helped a lot in breaking the ice.”

“Conflict resolution….”

Yoo Seong-un asked cautiously, feeling a little strange.

“So you want those mermaids to be happy?”

“It’s okay if they’re happy, it’s okay if they’re not. I just want them to take responsibility for their actions and their record.”

“Then you don’t forgive me?”

“Yes, I have not forgiven those who were my students. The day will not come when I fully accept them until I take full responsibility.”

“Don’t be sad, their misdeeds weren’t your fault.”

“I know that very well. I don’t have to take responsibility for their past. But without me by their side, they will never change.”

“So you gave me a chance?”

“It is not appropriate to say that I gave them a chance. I just took responsibility for my part. The rest is up to them, and because of me, they will experience at least a minimal change.”

“You’re not being favoritism?”

“I think I have to take responsibility for the amount of affection I put into favoritism. If I hadn’t loved, I wouldn’t have tried to take responsibility even to the minimum.”

“Well, it’s neat.”

Anyway, they were scary guys.

‘… This kind of eerie and indifferent attitude is the reason why humans should be wary of the existence of the source.’

It was not easy to figure out.

The painter who draws dungeons

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (83)

Episode 83

The highest floor of the collection, the office of the Viceroy.

“It is a dangerous nature.”

“Are you a hothead?”

“You could say that too.”

After hearing Yoo Seong-un's report, Bisabal asked while rubbing his chin.

“You took yourself hostage and threatened the mermaids?”

“…To summarize, it would be like this.”

“You must be hot.”

The smile of the poet who was humming like that seemed somewhat bitter.

“My collection is about to walk into the fires of hell.”

“That hellfire was the light of the sun. Please refrain from bringing friction with the Sun Church.”

“That’s why you’re not doing it in front of them. That’s fine.”

“I knew that word would leak out somewhere. And it could even be heard as blasphemy…."

"Anyway, the saying that people are crazy about religion doesn't make sense."

"Isn't that how it is for priests to exist?"

"Our Mr. Giovanni shouldn't be that big…."

"That guy named Giovanni is all grown up. He's so grown up that he's dead."

"Please don't kill my lovely work, Curator Yoo Seong-un."

The sullen Visabal soon smiled faintly, seeming to like this unusual conversation.

"You could say that they have no regrets about their own destruction and suffering. Even the gods are very sensitive to destruction, so it would not be an exaggeration to say that humans have lost their most traditional way to deal with disaster."

"In the first place, we shouldn't have created a situation where we would have to fight the 'Portrait of Geo'. If the situation worsens to the point where we have to find a way to subdue Geo, it's not a disaster that can be solved with a few sacrifices, like with evil gods."

"If he had been an ordinary god, it would have been a little easier to prepare for. However, Geo is not a traditional god, but something with the characteristics of a god, so thinking in this way won't give an answer."

"That's true, but Geo also has human characteristics. It's also something to think about that he didn't get swayed by emotions even though he clearly had a human personality. It's something we need to keep thinking about as to how to subdue him."

The scribe asked him.

“Considering that they didn’t kill or punish him at all, wouldn’t it be fair to assume that they were treated with consideration for old ties?”

“It’s a separate issue from what the outcome was. I observed Geo from the side, but it wasn’t an eye buried in the past.”

It seemed that Giovanni had made that choice because he thought it was the natural course of events and also the right thing to do. He seemed to truly believe that tormenting him would be the greatest punishment for the mermaid.

“Geo felt like he had taken on the most appropriate responsibility he could. Giving Giovanni to the mermaids, who were dull because they were monsters, gave them meaning and made them suffer endlessly.”

“That’s the punishment.”

“Because with Giovanni by their side, the mermaids will have to take responsibility for everything they do. It seems like that’s what Giovanni wants and that’s what he’s trying to do.”

Yoo Seong-un said, recalling Giovanni at that time.

“He was very firm. If what he said is true, those mermaids were the ones Giovanni raised like his children when he was human. He must have been angry or something….”

“…….”

“It was quite creepy to see him continue to smile even though he was bleeding and had broken limbs. He was really no different from the portrait. He continued to do his work even though the mermaid named Aria cried and begged him.”

“The story about the mermaid crying is quite interesting, but threatening?”

“That may be true, but it was a way for Geo to suffer along with it, yes, well, maybe. No matter how you beat around the bush, it’s hard to change the essence.”

It's hard to even say that it wasn't a threat.

“But what’s unusual is that he took himself hostage.”

“If things had not worked out properly back then and Giovanni had died, would it really have seemed like his personality had died?”

“He said it himself. He said that the personality called Giovanni could die, and if not, he would die in front of her dozens or hundreds of times.”

“Either way, it’s creepy.”

“It certainly seemed like the mermaid thought the same thing. Maybe it was because she said it with a gentle smile, but it sounded even scarier. Even to me, Giovanni’s words didn’t sound like mere bluff….”

“It would have been a decent punishment for the mermaids.”

Visabal shrugged.

“That doesn’t mean they won’t harass humans anymore, though.”

“But as long as Geo is by their side, I don’t think anything bad will happen….”

“I think what we need to focus on is making sure that nothing ‘big’ happens.”

If it weren't for the level of mass murder, Geo wouldn't have said anything about the mermaids' cruelty.

'Portrait of Geo' is a being of gentlemanly origin who likes good and polite things, but he himself is not good.

“He is not a hero. He may have once been a hero, and he may have a ‘Geo’ with such qualities, but at least ‘Portrait of Geo’ is a nature and destiny.”

Visabal continued speaking with a smile.

“As gardener Yoo Seong-un would know better, it is one of the characteristics of beings close to the source. Unless it is due to a special malice, for Geo, human life and death are not much different from the blooming and falling of flowers.”

The pitch-black portrait pretended not to be interesting and judged the death and suffering of myself, my surroundings, and the outside world as a state and information. I did not feel any sympathy for the things that were being destroyed and broken down outside my hands.

Of course, 'Portrait of Geo' loved humans equally, but to say that it loved everything was like saying that it loved nothing in the first place.

In some ways, he was cold and indifferent. He let things flow as they were, unless he became interested.

“As evidence, the entrance to the ‘Deep Sea Kingdom’ has not been closed yet. If the mermaids truly reflected on their past and wanted to respect humans, they would have closed the entrance and sealed the dungeon to prevent any more humans from getting hurt.”

But even after a week, there was no sign of that happening. It meant that mermaids, as monsters, could not stop their hatred for humans, and Geo did not unconditionally support humans either.

“If either of them had come true, the dungeon would have been closed.”

“Because the source of existence is not something that humans can manipulate. They are nature.”

“So in the end, we had to buy them. We didn’t know who else would die from the mermaids’ anger.”

The visa holder smiled happily.

“Of course, there was also the concept of a gift for our Sergio Hunter!”

“…I think the media will take care of it, but is it okay to spend money…?”

“This collector Visabal won’t be affected by buying just one dungeon.”

“In today’s capitalist society, you seem really trustworthy.”

“I was originally a trustworthy guild leader.”

“Oh, yes.”

“However, Geo cannot be said to be on the side of complete humans.”

Visabal smiled as he looked at the meteor shower.

“Just like gardeners like Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-woon shrugged his shoulders at the word ‘gardener’ that came up after a long time.

“The Source that has been revealed so far is closer to a system than a personality. He is fair to all personalities in the universe, including humans, monsters, and the children of the Source. So the gardener who manages the veins of such a Source must also have a fair perspective.”

The most important virtue of a gardener is the sense of balance that does not take sides. They are the signposts that maintain a minimum balance and the bystanders who live in the garden.

“In that sense, I sometimes feel like Geo is similar to a gardener.”

“What part made you feel that way?”

“Chaara Hunter was the first human to visit the inside of ‘Geo’s Portrait’. The Geo cabin he described looked similar to the garden we manage.”

“Then maybe Geo is a gardener who was eaten by the source.”

“How can a gardener who has been eaten by the root maintain his self…?”

Yoo Seong-un made a weary expression as he tousled his snow-white hair. His sky-blue eyes narrowed.

“This is ridiculous.”

Can a gardener maintain his ego even if he is eaten by his garden? That is impossible. A gardener who has become the property of his garden can no longer be called an intelligent life form.

“But when you think about it this way, it’s clear that Geo wouldn’t take sides between humans and monsters. Considering that, you can see that Geo doesn’t just want to punish the mermaids.”

He only solved the problem in front of him. He only took on the responsibility that Giovanni should have taken on, and he put minimal control on the mermaids who had the power and thoughts to threaten humanity.

That was all. As Bisabal had said, Geo was not a passionate being who would do something he was not interested in even at the risk of losing money.

“Geo loves kind and polite beings. That’s what makes the portrait interesting.”

“The mermaids may not have been particularly good. Even though Geom hates evil, he showed such mercy. It could be a kind of favoritism, as Mr. Yoo Seong-un reported.”

“Saving people must have been a lighthearted act. I have a rough estimate.”

Yoo Seong-un looked into the sky as if he was assessing something and brushed his neck.

“I like things to be simple and peaceful. This is the basic attitude of ‘Portrait of Geo’ toward the world, with two exceptions.”

“The first is a past relationship, and the second is a person of interest.”

“The object of interest would be a good and polite being. ‘Portrait of Geo’ basically seems to follow these three directions as its rules, but that is….”

“It’s too early to tell. This is only the second ‘Geo’.”

“Yes, I guess I was lucky this time. In the case of ‘Giovanni’, he was a gentle and compassionate priest. We should also consider the possibility that ‘Gio’, who has a hostile orientation toward humanity, will appear.”

“I don’t think there will be any major problems since ‘Portrait of Geo’ values peace and has a strong will to communicate.”

“So, the being of origin shouldn’t treat you like a person. Anyway, what I want to say is, um….”

He, who seemed to be sorting out the nuisance that was encouraging him to work overtime, soon opened his mouth.

“We also need to find a way to coexist with mermaids in the future.”

“…….”

“Guild Leader, I think we need to come up with a plan.”

The old guildmaster really hated doing anything that wasn't related to his collection, Bisabal said bitterly, slumping in his chair.

“…What if we just close the dungeon entrance forever? No one will ever come in.”

“Would that work? What you purchased, Guild Master, was the right to enter the dungeon, not the dungeon itself. Above all….”

“There might be some resources in there, but if we don’t allow anyone to enter, at least the Hunter Association won’t stay silent.”

“Why would someone who knows so well do that?”

"ha…."

Bisabal, who had been buried deep in the chair, raised his upper body with a jerk.

“…Even if there are no resources in it, no one will believe it?”

“There are already rumors going around that the collector is trying to monopolize special resources in the ‘Deep Sea Country’, so even if he says something like that now, it will only seem like a deception.”

“That's right.”

Visabal smiled faintly.

“Then what can we do? We should just leave them to find a place to die on their own.”

“Oh, would you like to do that?”

“I plan to set a toll soon. I will respect those brave souls who crawl inside in search of that special resource I found in the collector. It won’t be my fault if they die inside, right?”

“Then I will make sure to keep that in mind.”

Since there was a scuffle with Geo, the mermaids in the 'Deep Sea Kingdom' would not necessarily come out of the dungeon to do anything, but they would not leave the humans who entered the dungeon alone either.

“I don’t think Geo will be able to help that easily anymore. The reason Geo has been going to the deep sea country so often was to talk to the mermaids, but now that he’s achieved that goal… he won’t go that far to help the hunters anymore.”

“The ‘Portrait of Geo’ we saw wasn’t such an altruistic and dedicated being, was it?”

“That’s right, they’re just considerably more friendly and gentlemanly than other sources of existence.”

There are probably some fools who crawl into S-class dungeons just believing in the existence of the 'Black Cloak', but it's about time they get a taste of the spice.

“This is the right direction.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“The current hunters are treating the ‘Black Cloak’ like a convenient vending machine. Those hunters who feel so sorry for themselves didn’t really get any help from Geo in the first place….”

“Anyway, there’s no way that such an easy image would help Geo.”

“Yes, so it is time to realize that the ‘Black Cloak’ is a natural disaster that cannot be moved as they wish. If they die in the ‘Deep Sea Country’ without even seeing the ‘Black Cloak’, they will also come to realize the reality.”

There are still many fools in the world who think they can compromise with monsters, or the beings of origin, and use them, even though they are clearly not a resource but a disaster.

“I’ll leave this part up to Geo. Maybe Geo, who enjoys drawing and rescuing humans, will step forward to rescue more Hunters, but I think it’s unlikely since he’s not that active of a portrait.”

The bailiff said to him.

“I can speak well too.”

“No matter how well you talk, Geo himself refuses, so what are you going to do?”

“If this continues, I might end up laying down a sleeping bag in front of the portrait.”

“Then Geo gets angry….”

“Tsk.”

The tongue-licking Visabal quickly changed the subject.

“By the way, is the prospective priest who was kidnapped back then doing well?”

“You’re asking now. I heard you’re finally moving into the dorm next Monday.”

“The Sun Church has never been in such chaos. If things had gone as they were, we would have been accepting and raising students long ago, but we ended up being prey to mermaids and our schedule was ruined.”

“I think that priest Kang Seo-dam was very stressed out because of that. You know? It was on the news this time too….”

“But now that things will proceed as planned, the situation at the Solar Church will get better.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“The prospective priest you mentioned, Chaisol, did not seem to have any major psychological problems.”

“Is that cynicism, like a ripe fruit, the talent of a collector I haven’t brought in yet?”

“You’re already a priest of the Sun Church, so why would you join a private guild that isn’t a church? Above all, you’re far from the kind of cynicism you’re thinking of. Just….”

"a little?"

“The nerves are really thick.”

Even though I knew I had been kidnapped, I went to see the mermaid's life and watched it with calmness.

“It doesn’t seem like he didn’t know because of his childish innocence. He just seemed quick-witted but had a strong spirit that didn’t get easily hurt.”

“Do you have the qualities of a fool? Or the qualities of a tyrant? Either way, I don’t like it. I heard that Geo likes you.”

“First of all, we have generously compensated the victims. No matter how well you act, the victims are still victims.”

And that was when it happened.

“Oh.”

“Did you get a text?”

“Yes, that’s right… Cha Eun-hyuk.”

“Are you the older brother of the prospective priest we were talking about just now?”

"you're right."

Yoo Seong-un, who checked the text, was speechless for a moment.

“…….”

“Is there a problem?”

“…Geo is there.”

“…Where?”

Yoo Seong-un answered Visabal's question with difficulty.

“This is Mr. Chaisol’s house.”

“…….”

Although he had originally thought that it would be a good idea to leave work, Yoo Seong-woon smelled the familiar scent of working overtime.

Why are you there again?

* * *

“This, this is….”

Cha Ara asked hesitantly.

“What happened?”

“You have to trust me.”

“What is it then?”

“There is that, sis.”

Chae Sol answered honestly to her older sister's reaction of not being able to believe it even after seeing the reality.

“I drew a picture and Geo hyung appeared….”

“What is this?”

“Really? I drew a picture and Geo hyung appeared in it?”

“No, what….”

Cha Ara, who was at a loss as to what to do with her bewilderment, soon looked back at the black cloak with a subtle expression on her face.

“…….”

"Nice to meet you."

“…Ah, yes….”

Is today the day I die?

It didn't look like it had any hostility, but it was a dirty and scary black cloak anyway.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (84)

Episode 84

Before the incident occurred.

The Cha family in a rural area has finally found peace after experiencing a series of difficult incidents, such as terrorist attacks and kidnappings.

“Flower pig.”

Cha Eun-hyuk saw his younger sister, Cha A-ra, entering the kitchen.

“What meat?”

“Oh, this.”

“Why are there so many?”

There were various ingredients that I rarely saw on a regular basis, as if they were planning to cook. Thin pieces of meat that would never be caught by hunting, and round, ripe pears in the middle of winter… .

“Crazy, there’s a kiwi too.”

“I’m going to make bulgogi with this.”

“Where did the money come from?”

“I got a reward from the collector.”

“…….”

At Cha Ara's words, Cha Eunhyuk looked at his younger sister with subtle eyes.

“…Was there anything you wanted to compensate for…? Wasn’t it a situation where we should have been giving them the money?”

“Uhm….”

“No matter how much I think about it, I can’t help but think that you saved my family from dying among monsters.”

"uh…."

“Is this what it means to ask for a bundle after saving someone from drowning? They even extort money from large corporations. Society has really taken a hit.”

“Oh, I didn’t open it, you just gave it to me.”

Cha Ara continued to speak hesitantly in response to her brother's reasonable question.

“No, that, I didn’t quite understand it either… Anyway, the black cloak and the mermaid princess have a deep connection, and the black cloak is under the responsibility of the collector… So… I feel like there’s a connection….”

“……?”

Cha Eun-hyuk's face crumpled.

“What does that mean?”

“Anyway, you worked hard, so eat something delicious and rest. I’m sorry.”

“Is this a scam? Have you been scammed? I knew you would do this someday.”

“No, that’s not true. How can you be so great that you’re yelling at me?”

“I think I’m better than you.”

“Don’t talk nonsense, you little punk.”

“Do you think I’ll lose my sense of caution just because I get cursed at like that? No, my little brother, you’re so insensitive to safety.”

Eunhyuk Cha grabbed Ara Cha's shoulders with both hands and spoke seriously.

“The people of the world only think about exploiting fools like us.”

“But I gave you money. Money is not a crime, and if you gave it to me, you should use it.”

“No, you should give it back. What are you going to do with this as an excuse? Why on earth did you give it to me?”

“Bounty…? No…?”

Eunhyuk Cha smiled kindly at his younger brother's innocent words.

“Piglet, piglet. You became a hunter and got hit in the back of the head like that, and you still fall for the word reward?”

“Huh…?”

“I don’t know whoever decided to give us a reward at the collector’s office, but all the employees there are probably first or second class citizens, so why would they think that?”

“Oh my….”

“No city’s people would show mercy to a third-class citizen without a reason. Let’s sort out the situation step by step. Who exactly gave that?”

“You, Hunter Yoo Seong-un….”

“Meteor Cloud Hunter.”

Cha Eun-hyeok nodded.

“Then this is closer to condolence money than compensation.”

“Are we going to die? Did you spend too much? Maybe you shouldn’t have bought kiwis?”

“That’s not the problem.”

He seemed to know why Yoo Seong-un had given him money.

“We are one of the few people who know the true nature of the ‘Black Cloak’ that has been making the internet buzz these days. And how many people in this world would want to use and study the ‘Black Cloak’? So how valuable is this ‘Black Cloak’ related information?”

“Uh… Uh….”

“That value cannot be equaled even by stealing the organs of third-class citizens like us. The reason Mr. Yoo Seong-un gave me this money is more like a condolences for learning the truth about the terrifying ‘Black Cloak’.”

“So we die?”

“If you just keep your mouth shut, you might not die, or you might just die….”

Cha Ara's face became sad.

“Then what should I do?”

“What should I do? I should enjoy the money I was given and keep my mouth shut.”

“Is it going to work out if we just ask?”

“If we’re unlucky, information might leak out from the Kang Seo Dam priest or the collector.”

“Then die?”

“Life can get very tiring.”

In the worst case scenario, he could have been dragged somewhere and forced to reveal information about the 'Black Cloak'. Although he could have died in the process, Cha Eun-hyeok accepted the current situation quite calmly.

“Anyway, it doesn’t seem like the money that Meteor Hunter gave was given with bad intentions.”

“Really…? I’m starting to get anxious.”

“When I look at it, it seems like the money was given to me to encourage me, knowing that our future with the ‘Black Cloak’ would not be smooth, so I guess it’s okay for you to keep cooking like this.”

“Uh… no, but still….”

“The kidnapping of Chaisol must have been included as compensation. It’s true that you and the youngest suffered, so just use what you received.”

Cha Ara crumpled her face.

“Are you telling me to calm down or not?”

“I’ll take care of the worries, so just keep cooking without thinking about anything.”

As long as Cha Eun-hyeok, who was not without wisdom in life, was alive, it was okay for his two younger brothers to be a little stupid. This money was not malicious either, so there was no need to be overly anxious right now.

Based on the personality of the meteor hunter that we learned through conversation and the actions of the large corporation collectors, there was probably a separate escort team assigned to them.

Since he had a history of being kidnapped once, it may have been for protection, but it might be more accurate to say that he was a surveillance force for information control.

Anyway, it doesn't matter.

“You like cooking.”

“That… that’s true, but….”

“If you finally get some money, it’s okay to spend this much, right?”

Of course, I could have saved up this money to fix up the house or pay for the youngest's dormitory. I could have helped Cha Eun-hyeok with his bungeoppang business, and I could have bought equipment to keep Cha A-ra from dying.

But if you only spend money on things you absolutely need, is that really how you live?

“We were already earning the money we needed on our own anyway. Plus, we were lucky enough to have some spare cash, but we can’t ask them to use that for essential purposes.”

“Ugh….”

“If I don’t relieve my stress like this, when will I ever be able to?”

People need to have these big and small pleasures in life. Cha Eun-hyeok knew that if he just lived by eating, he would eventually consume his physical health and mind and die.

“So how much compensation did you receive?”

“Oh, right.”

“Oh, right? Piglet, are you still alive and kicking?”

“I, I just got back from Seoul so I was out of my mind….”

Cha Ara spread out her fingers.

"cloth."

“…A thousand? A thousand without any negotiation, that’s pretty strong?”

“It’s been a while since I’ve done some grocery shopping in Seoul, so.”

“Dinner will be bountiful tonight.”

“Hehehe, right.”

“Please show your skills.”

Cha Eun-hyuk looked at one side of the room where a cold wind was coming in.

“I’ll go and see the youngest.”

“Not doing it together?”

“I don’t really like cooking, and what if my youngest gets kidnapped?”

“…Seo, surely it won’t happen again?”

“When I look at it, our youngest’s life is not ordinary.”

This was an intuition that could be felt because Cha Eun-hyuk saw strange monsters differently from others.

“I feel like they’re going to have a much harder life than we did. I’m anxious. My heart is pounding.”

“No shit, what the hell are you cursing? He’s going to be a second-class citizen soon, and if he ends up having a harder life than us third-class natives, then that’s not a problem.”

“No matter how much I think about it, it’s not going to be an ordinary life. That bastard Chaisol keeps getting involved in strange things… and his personality is like that too.”

It seemed like the fact that he was so fearless also played a part. He was a uselessly cheerful and sociable child.

“If you’re a fool and have no fear, then what’s the big deal? You’re twisting your own fate.”

“Oh, is that okay? Did we raise the child wrong?”

“What can I do? It’s already so big. But if I join the Solar Church, I’ll learn a lot of things and receive some protection. I’ll be careful because I have to save face for the church.”

“Hi….”

Cha Ara waved her hand.

“Hearing that makes me feel even more uneasy. I was going to feed him something delicious before he went into the dormitory, but you should go next to the youngest and talk to him about this and that.”

“What are you doing?”

“Don’t live like a fool….”

“Will it work? We started it first.”

While saying that, Cha Eun-hyuk went straight to the youngest, Cha Sol. He was very anxious about leaving the youngest alone because of the kidnapping he had had last time.

“Youngest.”

“Hyung, what are you doing, big sister?”

“They said they were making bulgogi.”

“Wow, bulgogi! Isn’t that expensive?”

“It’s expensive. The ingredients are crazy. Just hope your sister doesn’t ruin dinner.”

“Should we pray to the sun god first?”

“No, we’re not that close yet, so what….”

“Is that so?”

Cha Eun-hyuk sat down next to the youngest, who was holding a pencil and looking happy. He had no idea what he was drawing. Cha Eun-hyuk loved his younger brother, but he couldn't love his drawing skills.

“When you go into the dorms, you’ll eat a lot more delicious food than this.”

“Should I bring it out?? Do you want to eat it together??”

“They say that you won’t be able to come out well until you officially become a priest.”

“I’ll come out secretly.”

“…After you finish your course, buy me a meal. I’ll wait.”

If it was Chae Sol, he could really sneak out of the dorm and walk all the way to this remote countryside, so Eunhyuk Cha postponed the promise to the future. Eunhyuk Cha, who was stroking his younger brother’s head, looked down a little.

“Were you drawing?”

"huh."

“What were you doing?”

Something black and spotted on the back of the paper caught my eye.

“Black Cloak!”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyuk remained silent.

"…what?"

“Huh? Black Cloak!”

“You… what… do you know what that is?”

“Aren’t you a good ghost who gives gifts to good people?”

“What is that, um, uh?”

“I was embarrassed to pray to the sun god, so I drew a black cloak first!”

“What does that have to do with anything? After all, Black Cloak is a monster….”

“Isn’t that it?”

"no."

Cha Eun-hyuk is broken.

“Who told me about the black cloak?”

“Inseoga.”

“Inseo… the village chief’s daughter?”

“Everyone in our neighborhood knows Black Cloak.”

“Why on earth…?”

“It’s cool.”

“…….”

Eunhyuk Cha, who knew the true identity of the black cloak, took a deep breath for a moment.

“…I don’t know much about this, but is the black cloak really popular these days?”

“Huh? Yeah, that’s right.”

“What exactly is a black cloak? Do you know?”

“Actually, I don’t know either….”

Chae Sol continued speaking, drawing a black lump with a blunt pencil.

“Maybe something like Santa?”

“…the old man who gives presents to children who don’t cry?”

“He said he likes good people and that he really likes it when you talk to him. He said that if you are polite, Black Cloak will give you a gift.”

"oh…."

Eunhyuk Cha was thinking about how to answer this.

"……."

"…uh?"

The two men's gaze fell on the 'black cloak' in the paper.

"…Didn't you just stop moving?"

It was a wriggling black mass drawn with the clumsy skills of a child.

"……."

Cha Eun-hyuk broke out in a cold sweat.

A secret portrait whose identity has not yet been identified even by the great guild known as the Collectors' Guild.

And sometimes, such unrealistic and dreamy beings, including the gods called Fates who have a will, have their own summoning rituals.

'… No way… .'

Didn't Chaisol, who had awakened as a priest, draw a black cloak instead of the sun god? Chaisol smiled brightly, not knowing that his brother was burning up with fear.

"Wow, it looks like the black cloak is here!"

"Wait, wait, Isul-ah. Please wait… This isn't right."

"Be my friend!"

"please!"

Cha Eun-hyeok held onto his younger brother and begged, but it was already too late.

"and!"

In the picture.

The clumsy drawing moved and took shape.

“Black Cloak…!”

“…….”

“…Black…net…??”

He was wearing a pitch-black cloak.

The deep shadows, hidden by the deeply pulled-down hood that made it impossible to see the face at all, were so dark that they seemed strangely dark.

The black shirt and suit visible under the cloak did not allow any light to be felt, but the long, well-proportioned body was recognizable.

“…Is this Brother Geo?”

That was the 'Sergio' that Chaisol knew.

“Brother Geo?”

“Yes, my name is Sergio.”

“Oh, it really is Geo hyung.”

The tone was blunt, as if it had been translated by a machine, and the air was strangely heavy. It was no different from Sergio Hunter, the God of the Sun who had eaten with Chaisol.

“Why are you here?”

“Didn’t you ask me to be your friend?”

“I didn’t do that to you, hyung.”

“I’m sad. Don’t you want to be my friend?”

“You’re my brother, aren’t you…?”

Eunhyuk Cha, who was watching the situation, touched his forehead.

“…….”

“Nice to meet you, Eunhyuk Cha.”

“…Yes, it’s really nice to meet you. It’s nice to meet you, but….”

Eunhyuk Cha, who had been hesitating, asked.

“Is this how you are usually called?”

“Student Chaisol called me.”

“…….”

Cha Eun-hyeok suddenly remembered the compensation that Cha A-ra had received.

‘… Was this what you were planning for?’

Cha Eun-hyeok, who had learned the Black Cloak summoning method without even intending to, naturally took out his cell phone.

This information was too dangerous to keep to themselves. His fingers were naturally searching for the direct number of the meteor hunter.

'Please save me.'

Perhaps Yoo Seong-un also gave money to do this.

“Excuse me, I’m going to go out for a moment.”

“You may do whatever you wish.”

“…In the meantime… my younger sister, Cha Ara, will take care of you. It’ll only take a little while.”

“I apologize for the sudden visit. Please make yourself at home.”

“Yes, thank you.”

That's how Cha Eun-hyeok came to ask Yoo Seong-woon for rescue.

Not long after, Yoo Seong-un arrived at the Cha family's house.

“Where is Geo?”

“You are talking to the youngest.”

“Who didn’t die?”

“Why on earth… are you… asking that question…?”

“Oh, just in case.”

“…That, yes….”

It was a fucking tiring day.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (85)

Episode 85

Kang Seo-dam, who was reviewing the curriculum for the new priests who would soon be coming in, received a phone call.

“Yes, Meteor Hunter.”

“Is there anyone among the gods who can draw and summon them?”

“I don’t know what you’re talking about all of a sudden, but I’m busy, so let me answer for now. Yes, it is possible. The letters and patterns that are often used in rituals are also a type of picture.”

“It wasn’t a very professional painting.”

“How unprofessional was that?”

“What level did the child draw?”

“It’s not impossible, though. Even if it’s very crude, if the purpose is clear.”

Kang Seo-dam continued speaking while writing a document, holding the cell phone between her shoulder and chin.

“The most important thing is the will of the subject to do something through the ritual. If the will of the person who performed the ritual is strong and clear enough, and if the subject who receives the sacrifice is broad enough to accept such an imperfect ritual, then it is possible.”

“Why doesn’t that work?”

“This is usually the case with evil spirits…. I know that in cases like this summoning ritual, it is often possible even if you don’t specifically target a god. This is because mysterious beings with their own summoning rituals exist everywhere. If it’s a being with a very high tolerance, you can get the target’s attention just by calling its name.”

“No, why?”

“It may be difficult for a mere human to understand, but those who are close to God can know where they are being called and seen. God is the being that can respond to the prayers of believers from anywhere in the world at the same time.”

Kang Seo-dam rolled his eyes as he checked the documents.

“Even if they are not gods, there are times when mystical beings of a lower rank spread their summoning rituals here and there. In any case, there is nothing that can elevate one’s status and strengthen one’s divinity as much as the faith of one’s followers.”

“What if you are already a being of significantly higher rank? To the point where you don’t necessarily need faith? In fact, you probably don’t even want your rank to rise any higher.”

“I was so busy that I tried to ignore it, but is it really about him? The pitch-black guy? The cloaked guy? The guy who evaporated the seawater in the dungeon to make stairs and then cleaned it up with a single wave of his hand? Him?”

“Thank you for finally pretending to know.”

“There is no such thing as a disaster.”

The beings that have a will and are called fate and nature are called 'gods'. And they clearly know what they are for and what they want to do. They also know what kind of beings they are to humans.

But 'Black Cloak' is not like that.

“If you accumulate faith without realizing it, you will not be able to learn how to handle your own level. His summoning ritual seems so easy and simple that even a child can draw it?”

"you're right."

“Then I guess I can only hope that he never gets angry again. At least when he’s not angry, he’ll be able to control himself and be considerate of weak humans, so there won’t be any major problems then. He really likes humans to begin with….”

“What if you get angry?”

“As even the Meteor Hunter knows, there is only destruction. Those who have eaten meat know how to eat it, and those who have been angry know how to express their anger. If God does not know how to express his emotions safely without hurting anyone, it will be a disaster.”

Kang Seo-dam thought for a moment and then asked.

“The existence of ordinary gods is clear. If they did not inherit divinity from an existing god, then the one who created the summoning ritual was the god who was summoned in the first place. The reason summoning rituals and sacrificial rituals were created from the beginning was to elevate their status.”

“But that’s not what we’re talking about.”

“If you received the corresponding ritual when inheriting divinity from an existing god, then it is possible. Is the mysterious being that Yoo Seong-un Hunter is talking about now a case like that?”

“It’s not that it doesn’t have such characteristics, but it’s not completely the case. It’s a qualitatively different being from God.”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam took his eyes off the monitor for a moment and then continued speaking.

“It is very rare, but there are some who are naturally elevated in the laws of nature simply because they are mysterious beings who follow certain rules. To give a simple example, the act of breathing itself can be an act that raises the faith of a mysterious being.”

“I’m sorry, but I still don’t quite understand. What does that mean?”

“To put it more simply, there are people who become stronger simply by existing. It’s a natural rule that as time passes, the past, the history, becomes deeper.”

Kang Seo-dam's fingers began to type again.

“In our Solar Church, we do not call such people gods.”

“Then what do you call it?”

“It’s just nature. It’s the rule. It’s fate.”

“Other gods also have their own will….”

“It is nature and fate, but it is in a different context.”

The reason was simple.

“As the Meteorite Hunter said, they have a will and a goal. But the mysterious beings I’m talking about now don’t have that. They don’t want to be gods, they don’t even know that they’re defined as ‘gods,’ they just… exist, flow, and become stronger.”

“It’s a disaster.”

“From a human perspective, even an earthquake caused by a shift in the Earth’s crust is perceived as a disaster. They simply exist. They may have egos or preferences, and they may or may not have been aware of humans.”

"hmm…."

Yoo Seong-un asked after a while.

“The Sun Church must have observed such a mysterious being before, so they can say such things. Something so powerful that it can’t even be called a god.”

“It’s confidential. There are a few confidential things like that in the collection.”

“Okay, I understand. Can I come back later with a gift, Father?”

“Don’t come, I’m busy.”

“I will send it by courier.”

The call was disconnected.

“…….”

Well, you can say it like this.

“…I don’t think it would be a big disaster for him.”

It was clear that Kang Seodam felt divinity from the black cloak. Judging from the energy he felt and the various situations, it seemed like he had inherited it from a previous god. If that was true, then it meant that he had parents who could tell him how to act as a god.

Even if there were no parent gods, there was still the sun god of this Earth. His goddess was quite friendly to Black Cloak, so she could have helped him a little.

“It wasn’t my fault after all. Tsk, I was busy.”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been humming softly, soon quietly continued checking the curriculum.

It was a night shift that I had become accustomed to recently.

* * *

And here was another hunter continuing his night shift.

“Yes, Geo.”

"Nice to meet you."

“You’re really active.”

Of course, it was a meteor.

“So our Chaisol Army summoned Geo?”

Chae Sol, who had finally figured out the situation, voluntarily paid his taxes.

“I’m sorry for making you work overtime.”

“If you apologize like that, what will become of me, Chaisol?”

In fact, the situation wasn't that damaging.

“Well, anyway, the time I usually talk to Geo is around 4 in the morning….”

“Are you tired?”

He made a gesture as if he was touching his chin with a black cloak. It seemed like he was imitating a human's surprise, but since his face was invisible, I couldn't really feel any emotion, so the back of my neck hurt a little.

“I apologize for the inconvenience. I thought you liked the time you spent there so often. If you would like, I can reschedule our conversation.”

“No, I have a lot of things to do before and after that anyway, so even if I change the schedule for the conversation, it doesn’t mean I’ll sleep earlier. It just changes the order of things I have to do at that time.”

“I'm sorry.”

"so do i…."

Anyway, it's 7:41 PM now.

“Has everyone eaten dinner?”

“Oh, I was just about to make bulgogi….”

“That’s how things turned out.”

Even though she's a hunter, how much experience does Cha Ara have as an F-rank? Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo, who didn't even understand why something like this had happened.

“Before we get into the real conversation, Geo.”

“Please speak.”

“I wish you could lighten the mood a bit.”

To put it bluntly, it was a story that meant, 'Please lower your level a little,' but if you say that, Geo, who considers himself a human, will feel uncomfortable.

Yoo Seong-un, who had become more alert through his conversation with Priest Kang Seo-dam, had no intention of doing so. He intended to treat it as if he were dealing with a god who had no awareness of being a god.

But Geo expressed his doubts as to whether this was also a difficult statement.

“I didn’t understand what you meant.”

“You look so scary right now, you don’t seem human.”

“I understand.”

Then Geo threw back his hood.

“…….”

“Is this okay?”

What emerged from it was Giovanni, with his bright, platinum-blond hair.

“In my experience, doing this makes the atmosphere a little better….”

“That’s right for now.”

“I guess the color of the cloak is the problem.”

“That might be the case too.”

Yoo Seong-un secretly sighed in relief.

'... I'm glad there's a way to lower my status in this way. I'm also glad that Geo doesn't feel bad about lowering his status. If I were a normal god or a child of the source, I'd feel bad and tear me to pieces right away... .'

I don't know how lucky I am that Geo is this friendly to humans.

“Is it okay if I try to explain this phenomenon?”

“You can do whatever you want.”

“Thank you for understanding.”

Yoo Seong-un finally started talking.

“It seems like it was Chaisol who summoned Geo.”

“…I thought that might be the case, but how is that possible?”

“Mr. Cha Eun-hyeok’s question was valid, and I also did not quite understand it, so I asked Father Kang Seo-dam, who has more experience in this area than I do, and he said that it is something that can happen often.”

Of course, I omitted the parts about Gyeok and Shin out of consideration for Geo.

“It is said that there are mysterious beings that, in extremely rare cases, have their own summoning rituals that they did not intend. In Geo’s case, the condition for that ritual was ‘draw Geo.’”

Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo.

“Geo, why did you come here in the first place? What do you know?”

“I knew I was drawn. I also naturally found out that the person who drew me was Brother Chaisol. During that time, he told me a cute story about wanting to be my friend….”

“You appeared like this?”

“I’ve been wondering how you’ve been doing lately. I was worried about Brother Chaisol, who left the dungeon without even saying hello, so I thought it was a good thing. Didn’t you get kidnapped?”

The platinum-haired Geo asked with his signature affectionate smile.

“Brother Chaisol, how are you? Are you feeling well?”

“That, the one in the black cloak was Geo-hyung…?”

"oh."

Giovanni looked back at the meteor cloud.

“…….”

“…Even if you look at me like that, there’s no way you’ll get an answer, Mr. Black Cloak.”

“I wanted to protect the child’s innocence in this harsh world.”

“Wouldn’t it be better to preserve your childlike innocence by knowing that Santa doesn’t actually exist?”

Chaisol was shocked.

“There is no Santa?”

“It looks like the two of you were raised with great care. I’m sorry that I was the first to break your innocence.”

“I was going to give you a massage when I met Santa Claus…!”

“Oh my, be kind.”

“I was going to ask you if you could live with me when you retire…!”

“I have a strong sense of self.”

Anyway, Chae Sol wasn't as shocked as he thought that Geo was wearing a black cloak.

“But why did it turn out like that? Does Geo-hyung really give gifts to good people?”

“We try to be as considerate and respectful as possible to anyone who needs it.”

"why?"

“I have the time and ability to do so, and the people I am favoring want the gift, so there is no reason not to grant it.”

“Wow….”

Cha Eun-hyeok thought to himself.

‘Where will you be sold to, being so naive?’

As the eldest son, it seemed inevitable that he would stay sane.

“So… So, we did something wrong….”

“Huh? No, no.”

Yoo Seong-un looked back at Chae Sol.

“Did Mr. Chaisol just draw the black cloak because he thought it was cool without any intention?”

“Yes, I heard it’s really famous these days.”

"okay?"

The collector who made the ghost story famous was speechless.

“It doesn’t matter if this ritual isn’t specifically known. Geo, if someone draws you, do you have to know about it or be summoned to it?”

“I can understand, but as far as summoning… I think it’s just my choice.”

“If it’s to that extent, then it really doesn’t matter. This incident is so absurd and has so much room for abuse that I came here in a hurry.”

Chaisol bowed his head once again.

“I'm sorry for the accident.”

“What is this? If you apologize like that, I will be too embarrassed.”

"but…."

“It’s really okay, Geo-do probably wanted to see Chae-sol anyway. Even though nothing bad happened, everyone was worried because he was kidnapped by monsters.”

“I’m fine.”

“That looks pretty impressive, what a great mind. I feel bad for him already, thinking about how great he will become with that kind of mind, but anyway, everything is fine and there are no problems….”

The meteor shower was just ridiculous.

“…I wish you would stop spreading this summoning method around.”

Then a lot of people will get tired.

There was a 100% chance that it contained a meteor cloud.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (86)

Episode 86

Although it was not intentional, the Cha family, who had somehow reunited, seemed surprisingly peaceful despite having been kidnapped by mermaids.

“If you get scared by things like that, you won’t be able to do your job as a hunter….”

Since Chaara was an F-class, she thought people were scarier than monsters. Compared to the other mermaids she had met so far, the mermaids were extremely polite.

“I had fun too. Next time you see Eunha, can you call me? I want to be friends with the tall Eunha. We were supposed to be friends, but you gave me my partner and then took it away.”

The thick nerve cord of Chaisol is already a famous story.

“…Yeah, well, raising these kinds of guys….”

Cha Eun-hyuk, who sees monsters that others cannot see, also had an unusual indifference.

If his younger siblings had suffered mental and physical damage due to this incident, Cha Eun-hyuk would not have been this calm. However, since neither of them seemed to have any major problems, there was no need to bother him.

Yoo Seong-un accepted the Cha family's reaction quite normally.

“Such indifference is also an important virtue of modern people.”

“…….”

“The Cha family will live long. They have a strong will to survive.”

It seems that he has good survival skills rather than good vitality. Today, Geo was deeply terrified by the terrifying scene in his home country.

'These days, it is considered a virtue for modern people not to be scared even when they are kidnapped.'

Even if there was no direct damage, isn't it still a kidnapping case?

'What on earth do hunters see and how do they live that they don't panic when their beloved younger sibling is kidnapped? How do they live in the modern world that the victimized child keeps talking about being friends, and the guardians of the two just say it's okay and let it go?'

31 years ago, there wouldn't have been such a mess. I don't know, but Geo's collar would have been easily grabbed, and it would have been featured in the news.

But Geo's collar was stiff, not to mention intact, and Yoo Seong-un said the news didn't even come up.

'It's a really scary world.'

I feel like I want to feed them five or six meals a day to help them survive in this world, but I hope the Cha family is safe.

To be honest, I really wanted bulgogi, but I thought it was rude to barge into a cozy family meal without prior notice, so I went back to the portrait in good conscience. Geo praised his own uniqueness.

“…….”

Warm.

“I think something was omitted.”

“Muuung.”

“It’s okay since Dana is cute.”

The possibility of omission was gained through the cute Danaro.

“Tsk tsk.”

"net."

Geo sucked Dana's belly. At first, Dana expressed her pure curiosity, saying, "Is this crazy?" but she gradually got used to Geo's antics and seemed to have accepted, "My dad is crazy."

Soon after, Dana was released from Geo and headed straight to the teddy bear.

“It seems like you two are still on good terms.”

“Kyuu….”

“You feel like a granddaughter to me.”

"dream."

“Yes, Father, indeed it is so.”

He became a member of a family with his own genealogy, including a grandfather, a father, and two sons and daughters.

“Hmm….”

If you add two mermaid friends here, they'll be perfect for the role of neighbors.

“…….”

Even though I told them how to get there, the mermaids still had no intention of visiting Geo's cabin.

'We live next door, guys.'

When did you get excited and say you were happy to see the teacher? No, why don't you come when you're so close?

“If they’re your neighbors, shouldn’t you come over and visit them on the first day you move in with some rice cakes?”

The warehouse where Geo's 'Breathing Sea', one of his paintings, was stored was quiet again today. Geo looked at the wooden stairs that no one came down and looked back at the teddy bear.

“Do Aria and Isser still need time to think?”

“Kuk kuk kuk.”

“It seems like quite some time has passed, but I haven’t heard of anyone coming to my house to visit. Since ‘Breathing Sea’ and ‘Deep Sea Kingdom’ are connected, it would definitely be convenient to visit….”

The system told me that the tutorial and all was over. It said that the 'Breathing Sea' that Geo had drawn and the mermaid dungeon 'Deep Sea Kingdom' were connected, and when I checked, Geo's drawing was hanging in the temple.

Even during that time, I didn't see any mermaids.

“When I see things like that, I wonder if they aren’t coming because they’re afraid of getting scolded.”

Geo's perception of the mermaid siblings was that of a child who doesn't come home because he doesn't want to get scolded.

“You’ve become more and more mischievous since I last saw you.”

“Crunch?”

Honey briefly wondered if that was really just a tantrum, but soon gave up thinking about it as mealtime approached.

Honey poked Geo's forehead painfully and appealed to her hunger.

“Kung kung kung….”

“Are you hungry?”

“Kkuk.”

“Then you should eat it.”

Sergio, who inherited his grandmother's hands and heart that were raised in the mountains of Gangwon-do, has never seen his baby starve.

"hmm."

Geo, who had been thinking for a moment, looked back at the teddy bear.

“Father, do you like clams?”

"dream…?"

“Well, I guess you’ve never tried it.”

"dream."

What kind of a bold priest would offer clams as a sacrifice, of all things? At that time, clams were not such a valuable food ingredient.

‘… There were shellfish that were sold as a famous specialty, but I don’t know if they were really valuable or rare enough to be offered on an altar… .’

Before he met Geo, the sun god had no appetite at all. Even if he ruled over a world where the sun and the sea were close, the probability of him ever tasting clams was zero.

“You didn’t even let me taste that delicious clam? Isn’t that blasphemy and heresy?”

“…Kkuu….”

“This son cannot tolerate such unfilial conduct. I should have offered you the delicacies of the sea long ago, and I regret it so much. Please wait a little while and I will treat you to grilled clams and tomato stew, the pride of the Edlan region.”

"dream."

“Calm down, I wasn’t excited in the first place.”

Geo packed his bags one by one and headed to the 'Breathing Sea'.

“I still remember vividly where the village of Edlan was. And even if I don’t go to that area, I’m sure the clams I’m looking for are everywhere. If you just wait a little bit, I’ll have them dug up for you right away.”

Honey followed Geo. Honey, the creature he created, always wanted to be by her parents' side, and also wanted to remain in a form that suited his taste.

“Kururururuk.”

“Will you help me?”

“Cur.”

And Geo loved kindness and politeness. Honey could help her creator in any way she wanted. Anything that didn't ruin that cute and lovely appearance.

That's how the clam-finding expedition was formed.

* * *

A good pig knows how to eat anything with pleasure, but at the same time, he has to know how to enjoy gourmet food.

“In that sense, I can be called a real pig.”

“Kuruk.”

“Yes, you too. A pig without stubbornness is not a real pig.”

Geo managed to find the village of Edlan where he had lived in this ruined world. It was thanks to Honey, who had grown to a large size, that Geo was carried and flown away.

“Is this the mindset of hunters who conquer dungeons?”

It was a little different from that, but it was fun, so I liked it. I was very proud.

“It’s been a while since I’ve been here.”

“Huh?”

“Oh, no. Can’t I just say it’s been a while?”

“Curr….”

“Well, it doesn’t matter since we both are me.”

Geo's hair had now turned platinum blonde.

“I said it’s a countryside with a lot of emotion.”

There was no sign of life.

The beach is long and shallow, and just a little way out, there is a green lawn. Inside, small houses are visible, with white bricks and orange roofs, in keeping with the old traditions of the village of Edlan.

“…….”

On the corroded windows of the now-uninhabited house, which was submerged in water, seaweed grew and swayed.

“…It’s amazing that the village still exists despite the depths of the ocean. If this had happened on Earth, the houses and everything would have been destroyed and broken.”

“Gurrrr?”

“It feels strange that the space that was real to me has turned into a fairy tale. Now, instead of people living in this town, fish and jellyfish are living there.”

It was a terrifying and beautiful sight.

“The light is dim too.”

The teddy bear in Geo's cabin was, strictly speaking, the soul of the sun god. The light of its empty body, or perhaps its remains, grew weaker and dimly illuminated the sea.

“Is it darker than before?”

“Kururuk.”

“It feels like night has come.”

“Cur.”

“The stars are also floating.”

I looked up to see the sky, but in the deep sea, something sparkling and dotted around was floating.

“It’s like the Milky Way.”

It was a swarm of jellyfish that glowed on their own.

They had small, round bodies and moved very slowly, forming long lines like rivers.

Even in this dark depth of the ocean, I could see ahead thanks to the halo of light that seemed to pour down, something that can only be found in the middle of a desert where there is no light at all.

The ecstatic emptiness was truly beautiful.

“I couldn’t see them when the sea was bright because my father was there, but there were jellyfish like that. Now that it’s dark, I can see things like this….”

“Gulp.”

"hmm."

Giovanni thought.

“I think it would sell well if it were turned into a tourism industry.”

Yes, this priest has not been emotional for a long time. Even after seeing his destroyed hometown, all he can say is business items.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un said that he bought all the tickets to the ‘Deep Sea Country’ from the collectors. If only the monster problem could be solved, wouldn’t it be a good tourist attraction? Isn’t the idea of breathing inside the sea amazing?”

“Kung….”

“I’ll try adjusting the brightness. If I can change the themes for day and night, there’ll be more to see, and since I inherited my father’s license as the sun god, I think I can adjust it to that extent… Isn’t it a really good business idea?”

Geo's hair had turned black again.

“Let’s think about all this when we’re full.”

“Gurrrr.”

Honey agreed vehemently.

“Gurg? Gulp?”

“Where are the clams here?”

Geo looked around.

“I’m sure it’s all under the sea now, so I wonder if it’s still intact, but seeing as the beach and the village are still in their original form, it seems like it’s going to be fine there too.”

“Huh?”

“There’s another place where you can dig for clams. It’s an underground cave on the eastern side of the village. I don’t know exactly how it works, but… there’s mud there.”

There were a lot of clams there.

“Clams can live in a variety of places. Some live on sandy beaches, some live in mud, and some even live in fresh water. Depending on where they live, the types can vary considerably….”

Geo walked towards the underground cave he remembered.

“For your information, there are no clams on the beach in Edelland Village. It may be because the beach is not that wide. So the people of Edelland usually catch fish in the sea area and dig up clams in Donggong to sell.”

The pupils were not that far away.

“This is the entrance.”

As I lightly brushed away the seaweed that had grown like a bush, I saw a set of rugged rock steps that looked like they had been carved out of solid rock. The entrance was dark, but there was no need for a separate light thanks to the warm glow of the honey.

“Let’s go down.”

“Gulp.”

"however…."

Geo saw Honey.

“If you want to go down, you should reduce your body size.”

“Huh?”

“It’s gotten too big.”

Because she brought Geo here and because she was soaking up all the seawater, Honey had swollen up bigger than Geo.

“It’s cute as is, but it’ll be difficult to dig clams together. As you can see, the entrance to the pupil isn’t that wide, so you’d better adjust it, son.”

“Gurrrr….”

Honey was convinced and shrank. Geo, who couldn't swim, almost floated away because of the pressure of the water draining out. Honey's father was relatively light even in the water.

The path leading down to the basement was neither too wide nor too narrow. It was long enough for an adult male to pass through with some room to spare.

“See those holes in the wall? They used to put lights in there to light the way. Oh, I see it. Who knew the remnants of the lights were still there.”

“Kuruk, guruk.”

“…Is a piece of mossy glass also a prop that suits your taste? Well, over time, the sharp edges have become blunt, so a piece of round glass like this shouldn’t be dangerous.”

Geo, who was watching Honey stealthily pick up a piece of glass and put it in his pocket, had already arrived at the underground cavern.

“…….”

An endlessly high ceiling, and sea water rising to the very tip.

“…That’s not it.”

I stuck my tongue out.

“Well, it’s not salty.”

“Kung-kung?”

“Freshwater.”

Geo nodded.

“Because it was close to a spring with fresh water flowing out.”

People living along the coast have always had difficulty obtaining water, but this was not the case in the village of Edlan, thanks to the endless supply of fresh water from this vast cavity.

“Perhaps the seawater was purified by some means and became drinkable water, and it filled the crater. It was clean water without any limestone, and was the pride of this village.”

Geo stepped onto the floor of the pupil.

“This is mud.”

The fresh water of this cave, which had high and low tides, came and went like sea water, creating this pure white mud. The clams hidden between the mud and the mud are delicious and of good quality, making them a specialty of the village of Edlan.

“And often I bring mermaids here too….”

“…….”

“…we enjoyed a lively clam hunt together.”

Geo, who still had black hair, took in the sight of a child sitting in the center of his pupil.

"aria."

"long time no see."

"okay."

It was still Sergio's form, but soon Giovanni's smile appeared faintly on his face and then disappeared.

“It’s been a while.”

A mermaid in the shape of a child.

It was a long time ago, a time Giovanni remembered.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (87)

Episode 87

“I’m imitating like this.”

Aria continued speaking in her characteristically bright and slightly faded voice.

“Why don’t you even imitate?”

“Just because I have black hair doesn’t mean I’m Geo?”

"well…."

Aria looked her opponent in the eye.

A person wearing neither the golden robes that symbolize the sun nor the white cape that represents the priests of light, but a black cloak.

A man with jet-black hair and a gloomy face without a hint of a smile, unlike what she remembered.

A creepy feeling that cannot be called human.

“…….”

Still, it couldn't be said that he wasn't 'Giovanni'.

“…I still don’t quite understand.”

“I don’t know what you’re talking about.”

“Is this what you call reincarnation?”

It's really strange.

“It’s not that I’ve never seen such cases before, but they seem different. They don’t seem to have simply been deified by the sun god.”

How should I explain the Geo that is right in front of me?

“I heard that the Earthlings call you ‘Black Cloak’?”

“I got that name.”

“Can that be called your identity now?”

“It’s just one of my names.”

“Yes, Giovanni.”

The little mermaid moved her bare feet toward him.

“You were originally… a portrait?”

“I am human.”

“…….”

Only after a long time did Aria answer.

“…That could be the case.”

Even the knowledgeable Arya could not properly define the black cloak before her eyes. He looked like a painting, or a god, or maybe he was really human.

“How did you come to this town?”

“I came to dig for clams.”

“Well, yeah, I understand since you really liked eating.”

“I also remember that Aria liked my cooking.”

“Then shall I invite you to dinner?”

“If you could help me dig for clams.”

“…Anyway, he’s just a worthless person….”

Aria walked around the mud, dragging a white gown that was too big for her. The gown had been magically treated so it wouldn't get dirty easily.

“I'll help you.”

"thank you."

I used to spend time like this often in the past too.

“It brings back old memories.”

“What do you think?”

“Just, this and that… trivial stuff.”

Giovanni would bring mermaids who were curious about humans to places like this: a beach full of fishermen, a market bustling with shoppers, or even a bank where they could deposit money.

As I dug through it with my bare feet, the pure white mud, unlike that of Earth, slowly turned over.

“What are you going to eat?”

“I’m going to try grilled clams and Edlan stew.”

“You make something delicious. Are you thinking of putting clams in the stew too?”

“That would be fine too. Since there is meat, you can put that in too.”

“Hmm….”

Geo was a great cook.

“Now that you mention it, you must have been a nobleman, so why did you enjoy cooking so much?”

“You didn’t even ask when you were young, so what change in your thinking has occurred?”

“I thought it was wise at the time. Human lives are so short and complicated, I thought if I nudged them thoughtlessly, blood would come out.”

"now?"

“I know now that you’re not the type of person who’d stab me and make me bleed.”

“Yes.”

Geo, with his pitch-black eyes, approached and folded Aria’s sleeve. The gown, which was designed to fit a grown man’s body, had to be folded several times to reveal her hand. It was the hand of a small, delicate child.

“The reason I enjoyed cooking even though I was a nobleman was because I simply wanted to eat delicious food.”

“That’s not really a great reason. But you can always eat delicious food if you ask someone else to make it for you.”

“I wanted to see for myself what ingredients went into what dish.”

As Geo lightly blew the honey off his shoulder, it flew up to just below the ceiling of the pupil and brightly lit up the underground. The mud, which was already white, became much clearer, almost dazzling.

“I wanted to develop myself further.”

“That’s a very typical answer.”

“Where is Isser?”

“Hide in the temple.”

“Why don’t you come with me?”

“We need someone to guard the house.”

“Who would turn that ominous house into a house….”

“Like a black cloak.”

“…….”

Geo felt a little wronged. Raising one eyebrow, Geo asked.

“Are you scared of me, Aria?”

“Aren’t you scared?”

“Why?”

“The dark and gloomy atmosphere is oppressive.”

“I have never been overbearing.”

“It will be there now.”

“It’s still unfair.”

“Well, plus….”

Aria said, looking up at her shrunken body.

“…I couldn’t easily go see you because I was wondering what kind of face you had.”

“Well, as soon as we met, we started fighting.”

There was no time to feel the emotion of reunion or anything.

“From my perspective, it felt like my nephews, whom I raised like my own children, had been traveling abroad for a few years when they committed mass murder in Korea and even kidnapped children.”

“If you look at it that way, from my perspective, it’s similar to my beloved teacher who I thought was dead being reincarnated as a black lump of monster that isn’t even human. He even has the divinity of that annoying sun god, so I wondered who was trying to make us mad.”

Geo nodded at those words.

“I think I was more shocked.”

“I missed that kind of shamelessness.”

The mermaid smiled brightly.

“Aren’t you angry?”

“Should I be angry?”

“At least what we’ve done so far, Giovanni, hasn’t been to your liking.”

“I don’t think there’s any need for me to be angry and take responsibility for the changes in the children I raised, who are already dead.”

“This is quite spicy….”

“At that dinner party, I let out all my anger.”

Geo continued, with his jet-black hair and numb eyes.

“As for the rest, Giovanni has no duty or authority to investigate since he died a long time ago.”

“…….”

Then the mermaid spoke.

“Okay then.”

Aria wasn't curious anymore either.

“Because you said we had a lot of time.”

“That's it.”

Above all, Geo was the type who didn't worry too deeply. Geo wasn't the type to be scared by the fact that his beloved mermaid disciples had grown into crazy mermaids.

“It’s not a good habit to think about something when there’s food right in front of you.”

“I wonder if it’s something weird about you, Geo. Why do you like to eat so much?”

“Why don’t you like to eat that much?”

“You can’t live on food alone.”

“It’s probably something you can’t live without eating.”

“…Okay, if you’re happy, that’s fine.”

“You give up more easily than I thought.”

It was unexpected.

“In the past, I used to try so hard to win.”

“I’m an adult now.”

“For something like that, I think I cried at the dinner table.”

“…Do you remember who made you cry?”

“Do you remember who made you angry?”

"…oh…."

“I won this time too.”

“…You really have a shameless side….”

“That’s my charm.”

Geo looked down for a long time to see the mermaid, who had become so small that he could only meet her gaze.

“Can you dig clams with that body?”

“Even when I was this small, you came here often, so what do you mean now?”

“The question was whether you felt any discomfort about your body getting younger.”

“That level of etiquette is easy now.”

“Hmm.”

After a while he asked.

“Those clothes are mine, right?”

“…….”

The mermaid answered immediately.

“This doctor’s gown?”

"yes."

“Yes, it’s mine now.”

“I was originally planning on passing it down to you, so it’s okay.”

“…….”

After quite some time, the mermaid asked, pretending to be calm.

“Was it so?”

“Did you think you had it stolen?”

“…….”

“I see you didn’t answer, so that’s what happened.”

It really was. Aria couldn't deny Geo's words.

“I never thought you would pass it down to me.”

“I was going to give the doctor’s gown to you, Aria, and my priestly robe to Isser.”

“Unfortunately, your priestly robes have been torn. By the authors of the Sun Church.”

“I thought so. Fortunately, the doctor’s gown ended up in my master’s hands.”

“It’s really unexpected.”

Aria continued to laugh.

“Because we, mermaids, ruined your life as a human.”

“All the tragedies of that time were close to humans destroying themselves.”

Giovanni could have refused to help the mermaids. The humans could have had a huge emotional fight with the mermaids, with no right answer. There was a time when humans and mermaids could have lived together in this world.

“Aria, you have never taken anything from me.”

“Is that really so?”

“That’s just something I passed down to you.”

“You’re still so affectionate.”

“You wish it hadn't happened?”

“That might have been the case.”

“But unfortunately….”

Geo was Geo after all.

“I really don’t change easily.”

It could be because I don't tend to think deeply.

“In that sense, should I go dig for clams again?”

“You have a knack for breaking emotions.”

“I have to prepare dinner before it gets too late….”

"her."

The mermaid grumbled as she fumbled to adjust her gown, which continued to flow down despite Geo's help in folding up the sleeves.

“I thought you came to talk to me, but you’re just a glutton.”

“It’s good to be humble.”

“You really just go with the flow, just like Giovanni.”

“I guess you still don’t know that life is the most enjoyable when you live it roughly.”

“…….”

After a while, the mermaid asked.

“…Are you happy now?”

The answer was not difficult.

“It’s always been like that.”

“…Why?”

“Because I always did my best.”

“…….”

“So now the clams….”

“Oh, please.”

Despite her irritation, Aria faithfully participated in the clam expedition.

* * *

“We are here.”

“Kyuu….”

The teddy bear saw four creatures, each carrying a basketful of clams in their arms.

"dream?"

“Yes, I caught Aria and Isser too….”

"dream."

“I brought it.”

Since there had been no news for a while due to digging for clams, Isser also came to the village of Edlan to find out what was going on.

And he found his sister, crouching down in a dress, digging for clams. Geo realized for the first time that her already pale face could turn so pale. So Isser was forced to join the clam digging team.

Isser looked at the sun god in the teddy bear mask with a subtle expression.

“…….”

“Kyuuu.”

“…You’ve gotten a lot cuter since I last saw you….”

“Kukuku.”

“Are you laughing?”

sincerely?

'What am I looking at?'

Isser, who was holding a basket of clams in his arms, was already in a state of confusion.

It was confusing to see Aria, of all people, digging for clams with her hands covered in mud, and Isser himself, who was naturally dragged along and ended up digging clams with them and dragged to the hut, was also confused.

“Why is the sun god here…? I felt like the sun’s presence had disappeared, but this is.”

“But he’s your grandfather, so don’t do that. It’s not okay to show your discomfort to someone who is already well-behaved.”

“No, no, ah.”

Although Isser was speechless, the situation was not much different for his sister Aria.

“A teddy bear?”

"dream."

“Are you serious?”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

“Are you laughing?”

In the midst of the calm chaos, Honey walked along the floor, croaking, croaking, and approached the teddy bear. Then she spat out all sorts of shells, big and small.

“Kkuk.”

“Kyuu.”

“Gurrrr!”

“Kukuku….”

The teddy bear laughed like an old man watching his grandson's tricks and clapped his hands with his cotton pad. When Honey proudly puffed out her chest, Dana, who was watching, stood next to her and struck the same pose. The sun god was very pleased.

“Wonderful things.”

Geo liked it too.

“…….”

“…….”

Geo called out to the mermaids who had lost their voice.

“Let’s go clean the clams, kids.”

“…Is it your dad?”

“I’m already a father of two children. It’s a bit much to add more.”

“Then, uncle.”

“So, nephew, should I give you some pocket money?”

“Is it fun?”

“That’s interesting.”

"oh…."

With a final exclamation like a flood, Aria became a stone statue, and Isser turned his gaze to Geo while holding the basket of clams that he had almost dropped without realizing it.

"teacher."

“Yes, go ahead.”

“Do you have any plans to destroy the Earth…?”

“Why are you suddenly asking such a terrible question?”

“I guess it’s the members.”

“……?”

Geo looked around.

“…….”

I couldn't understand.

“There’s only one teddy bear, one bird, and one cat. What’s wrong with this cute and harmless composition?”

“Oh, so that’s how you treat it… I understand.”

“I don’t think you could do it.”

It was a very noisy family even before the clams were cleaned.

The painter who draws dungeons

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (88)

Episode 88

Isser was confused.

'The sun god is in a teddy bear…? Why…?'

It seemed that Geo had inherited that divinity, but even so, his status as a god did not disappear completely.

Isser knew that the teddy bear with its soft, golden fur before his eyes was inhabited by the god he had once worshipped.

'I can't say anything about it since it seems like it was what he wanted, and now that he's the only believer left, he doesn't really have to fulfill his role as a god. He'll do it, but no matter what, he's called the one and only god, so it's embarrassing...'

As someone who once learned the capabilities of a priest and still imitates a priest, I couldn't help but worry about the dignity of a god.

'Why is God inside a teddy bear in the first place?? Inside a teddy bear of all things??'

I didn't understand.

“…Your Majesty the Sun?”

“Kyuu.”

“…….”

Why is crying so cute?

“…Do you, do you… like the shell?”

"dream."

“Can I hear your intentions inside the teddy bear?”

“Kuku, kuku… kuku.”

“…….”

Geo interpreted for Isser, who couldn't understand at all.

“He said it was to eat.”

“…Appetite…?”

“I heard you were there.”

“Why?”

Does it make sense for God to have an appetite?

“God, that is… God.”

“Could it be that God is telling me not to eat rice right now…?”

“That’s not what I meant.”

“I understand what you mean.”

“Do you understand?”

"sure."

Geo's hair had now turned platinum. He nodded with a noble smile typical of priests.

“Strictly speaking, isn’t it strange that God, who neither needs nor feels the desire to eat, would use the body of a teddy bear to eat?”

“…That’s it.”

“I can’t really give you a proper explanation about that part. I just brought a meal without thinking, but at some point, I started to get greedy about the food….”

"…ah…."

Isser let out a sigh of relief, slightly convinced. He looked relieved after hearing the answer to a difficult problem.

“As expected, the cause was you, teacher.”

“Why do you always say that I am the cause of something you don’t understand?”

“You’re not really asking because you don’t know, are you? No way?”

“Well, anyway.”

Geo smiled faintly as he stacked the basket of clams that Isser was holding on top of his own basket.

“Let’s adjust gradually and prepare a meal first.”

“Preparing dinner….”

“It’s almost dinnertime, so I think we should start cooking quickly to prepare a hearty meal.”

“Yeah, that’s right.”

In any case, Isser, who was invited, immediately agreed. In their culture, an invitation to a house meant that they would soon treat her to a meal. Isser was more used to the idea of bringing up the subject of a meal right away.

“I haven’t heard the exact story, but what’s on the menu?”

“Well, it would be grilled clams and tomato stew.”

“Edlan stew?”

“I guess so.”

In the village of Edelland where they spent their childhood, tomato stew was called 'Edelland Stew'. It was a stew made with fresh water and seafood, which were special products of the village of Edelland.

“Ah, that’s good….”

Isser's face, which had been stiff for a long time, relaxed at the thought of hearing the name.

“The stew in that town was really delicious. The stew that the teacher made was especially great….”

“Time has passed, but my cooking skills haven’t rusted, so you can look forward to it.”

Geo nodded and asked, “Ah.”

“I wish at least one person would help me.”

Two pale hands rose at the same time.

"I am."

"I."

“…….”

“…….”

The mermaid siblings looked at each other.

“…I will do it.”

“I guess I’m better at cooking.”

“Wasn’t the cooking originally done by the teacher and our role as assistants? In that case, I think I would be better than my older sister.”

“I’m not sure in what sense you’d be better. It’s said that a good cook is also a good assistant, Isser.”

“I will not back down on my honor as a mermaid.”

“Then there’s nothing we can do. According to the tradition of the sea, when opinions don’t match, we use force….”

At that point, Geo intervened.

“I think this story will be long, so I’ll just take care of it.”

At those words, the mermaids quickly reached an agreement through rock-paper-scissors.

“I won… I will assist you.”

“Is that right?”

I was wondering if this was right, but it was actually quite a funny sight, so I liked it anyway.

“Come to think of it, we also have rock-paper-scissors in our region.”

“Oh, you said that there is a similar culture on Earth.”

“That’s right. I know it’s a game that exists in quite a few countries.”

"okay."

Aria, left alone, could only click her tongue.

“I should have trained more.”

“Huh?”

“Excuse me, sir, but could you please stop being so friendly?”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

“Are you laughing?”

Geo led Isser into the kitchen.

“Then shall we clean the clams?”

“This is why it feels just like the old days.”

“Iser has grown a lot for that though.”

“It can still decrease now.”

“My little Isser is not only small but also cute, so it’s too much for him now.”

“Ah… Are you not cute anymore?”

“It’s a bit cute to think that a grown mass murderer mermaid is shrinking….”

“Everything the teacher said is correct.”

Isser readily agreed.

“Now, how may I help you, sir?”

“Um… It’s definitely not cute.”

Giovanni felt a little sad at the sight of the skilled gentleman who showed no sign of shyness.

“Is this what a parent feels like?”

“My parents are living separately….”

“Mermaids aren’t that obsessed with blood relations in the first place.”

“In that sense, the teacher was definitely closer to the word ‘guardian.’”

“I can’t believe you’re joking. How did you grow up to be such a boring adult?”

Geo laughed lightly and took a clam out of the basket.

“It’s been a while since I’ve seen the sunshine.”

“Is that so?”

“There was a time when I wondered why it was called a sunshine flower when it grows underground.”

The underground caverns of Edlan Village had several small holes through which sunlight and moonlight entered. The Sunshine Cave was usually hidden in areas where such light entered.

“Where should I look….”

Sunshine sky

A conch with a transparent shell and body. Only females exist, and they mate with the male Moonlight Conch to reproduce. When the sun rises, they come out once every two hours to bask in the sun and then hide under the water. When boiled in hot water, their bodies turn white, but their shells remain the same. The longer they live, the better the medicinal properties of their shells and bodies. They only live near Jeongsu Rock.

Method of preparation: If you take the body out without boiling it in water and dry it in the sun, it will turn into a hard and transparent pebble. If you take it like a pill, it is good for recovering eyesight. If you leave the shell in the sun, it will retain its warmth. If you grind the very hot shell into a fine powder and take it, it is good for heart disease.

“…….”

"teacher?"

“I didn’t know it had such medicinal properties.”

As a doctor, I was a little shocked to hear that it was used to restore eyesight or treat heart disease.

“Heart disease….”

"teacher…?"

“Does your heart hurt, Isser?”

“You look like your older sister looking forward to being a test subject, but unfortunately, you are very healthy.”

Isser said with a neat smile.

“Of course, if you want, I can catch you right now.”

“Are you going to harm someone right in front of me, a doctor and a priest? How much more responsibility do you want to take?”

“Wouldn’t a beast with human form be suitable as a test subject? A beast that doesn’t qualify as a human….”

“If it was a beast that committed child molestation, I might be able to accept it.”

“You’re still the same, I’ll keep that in mind.”

“But it is still surprising.”

He could not have imagined that the 'Sunshine Sora' of the area he was in had such weak properties. Although it was a specialty of Edelland Village, it was not that expensive and was common as it was spread all over the place.

“There were many people who ground up the bark and used it as paint.”

“Didn’t you do the same, teacher? Especially when drawing mermaids, you mainly used seashell paint.”

“That’s right, when I paint the sea, I think it would be nice if the paint had the scent of the sea.”

But I didn't know that the powder could cure heart disease.

“…….”

I have studied it separately, but I have never found such an effect.

“…I wonder if this is the effect I can see now because I have changed….”

“…Have you changed?”

“It has changed in many ways.”

It turned out to be a portrait of a human being.

“Anyway, what’s good is good.”

Warm.

Geo stopped thinking.

“My ultimate positive mind does not change according to the meaning of my own existence.”

“I don’t know what the ultimate positive mindset is, but I think it might change a little….”

“Do you really have to live so tiringly? I don’t think so, Isser.”

“How can you be confident that you are an ordinary human being with that kind of mindset?”

“Because my life doesn’t change because of other people’s gaze.”

Geo continued to observe Haetsal Sora, only to have his self-esteem reaffirmed.

“It’s been a long time since I’ve seen it, and I can really feel that it’s a pretty clam.”

It was a snail shell that shone as pure as a jewel, and its pentagonal pyramid-shaped shell had numerous cracks, as if it had grown several times. It sparkled as if a picture had been painted on it.

“Because it was so pretty, it was often made into accessories.”

“Yes, I think you made a toy out of it to hang on the window.”

“It really shines beautifully in the sunlight.”

It radiated colorful light here and there, as if it were a triangular prism.

“Oh, no.”

The guy living inside hid his already transparent body inside, but because his body was so transparent like glass, he couldn't be seen well even through this prism-like shell.

“Since the shell won’t be damaged even if you boil it anyway, it’s fine to boil it like this. Since it doesn’t swallow mud and survives only on sunlight, you don’t need to take any special measures; just clean it and boil it to eat.”

“I remember too….”

“I just thought of it, so don’t worry too much about it. It’s been a while since I’ve cleaned these clams, so I’m excited.”

The next thing Geo saw was the guy stuck to the wall of the pupil.

'This is similar to abalone.'

The shell was much darker and smoother than that of an abalone, but otherwise it was quite similar to an abalone, especially its wide, white flesh.

“This is probably the name….”

“It must have been a black razor clam.”

“Oh, right.”

Black scallop

A clam famous for its white flesh contrasting with its flat, black shell. It is a high-quality food ingredient, and is a delicate clam that will cook even if the temperature rises slightly. The shell is also known as a material for paint because of its beautiful black color. Be careful not to touch the flesh with your hands, as it will cook.

“It looks like it couldn’t possibly be delicious.”

Geo smiled happily and cleaned all the black clams. This clam also didn't eat mud, so no separate cleaning was needed.

“Next up is this guy. Do you remember him, Isser?”

“I remember that the teacher especially liked it.”

“Because it has a good texture. When eaten raw, it’s soft like pudding, and when cooked, it’s chewy like meat….”

club or trumpet

A brown shell clam that lives vertically hidden in the mud. Its flesh resembles a wooden club and its shell resembles a trumpet, hence its name. The inside is filled with light yellow flesh, and its texture is very soft. However, be careful not to apply too much heat, as it will quickly become tough.

In short, it was close to a 'clam with a long, whole shell in it'.

“Oh, this needs to be sold in Korea.”

“Calm down.”

Today too, it was the secular priest Geo.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (89)

Episode 89

Sunshine sky, black clam, club trumpet.

These three were the representative specialties of the village of Edlan.

“The club and trumpet need to be used for the sunset….”

“If you just eat it, you’ll end up chewing on mud.”

“That’s right. Isser, can you help me?”

“Yes, of course.”

Isser skillfully picked up the basket containing only a club or trumpet and began to work on the seam. It had been so long since he had done it that he stuttered a little, but his hands quickly found their way and continued working.

“They do similar work on Earth too.”

“Oh… is that so?”

“There are some differences though.”

These representative specialties were made by using freshwater from the village of Edlan, which had to be desalinated to remove the mud. This was slightly different from the desalination method on Earth, where the clams would wither in water from other regions, and the salinity of the water had to be adjusted with salt.

Isser nodded as if surprised.

“It’s spitting out mud even though it’s not the local water.”

“Yes, I think it’s okay if you just adjust the salt content to the right level and they’ll spit it out.”

“Isn’t it that your ego is weaker than that of the clams in the Edlan region?”

“Let’s not put our egos on the clams that are about to be eaten.”

The basin full of clubs and trumpets was soon covered with a black cloth.

“Now all I have to do is leave it until the stew is done.”

The club trumpet, the pride of the village of Edlan, was famous for its ability to set the sun early.

Maybe it was because his entire body was closer to flesh than internal organs, but the amount of mud he swallowed was not that much, so he only had to wait for at least 30 minutes, or at most an hour.

“It would be better to change the water in the middle, but….”

“I’ll do that. Once every ten minutes or so would be okay?”

“Yes, that’s right. Please.”

Once every ten minutes might be a bit excessive, but it can't hurt to be cautious.

'Nothing makes me more angry than chewing sand while eating.'

Isn't that Geo, a self-proclaimed gourmet and a big eater? He aimed for thorough cooking that would not be disturbed by anything while eating. If he felt uncomfortable while eating, it was not worthy of being called cooking.

“Then it’s stew now….”

Simply put, stew was a Western-style soup.

“Just put anything in and see.”

“I know how to cook it too….”

“So, did you do it yourself?”

“…….”

“Please listen to my class quietly.”

Sometimes people ask about the difference between stew and soup, but it's easier to think of stew as the main ingredient, while soup is the broth itself. In short, stew is a dish that uses liquid to boil ingredients.

“Would you like to follow me?”

“Huh? Where to….”

“To the garden.”

That's how Isser saw Geo's garden.

“Taran.”

“…a garden?”

“Yes, what’s the problem?”

“No, the garden….”

“It’s a garden.”

"…All right."

Isser was convinced.

“There is no way you can farm normally.”

“What did you say?”

“As expected, the smiling tyrant of the sea village….”

"tyrant?"

“I didn’t say anything. What did you hear?”

“Now you know how to speak properly, it’s really amazing.”

I was really convinced.

“Here, there are cherry tomatoes in there….”

“All I see is a pumpkin imitating a tomato.”

“I think your eyesight is getting worse. Don’t let your guard down just because you’re a mermaid, and get some glasses.”

“I don’t know if it’s a problem with your eyesight.”

Isser, unable to bear it any longer, asked.

“Why on earth is this a garden?”

“It’s narrow and cute, so it must be a vegetable garden.”

“The crops are so big that they look relatively narrow, and none of them are cute.”

“I would appreciate it if you would be careful what you say, as our Queen Elizabeth 32nd may be offended by what you say.”

“Who on earth is Elizabeth 32….”

Kkuddeukduk—.

At Geo's words, the tomato leaves, each as big as a pumpkin leaf, rolled back with a loud sound. Isser finally lost his smile at the sight of them clenching their fists.

“…Would you like to eat this?”

Realizing the gravity of the situation, he became almost as serious as when he was watching his sister's research process.

“This?”

“The kids are all sacrificial and kind, although they have their own unique personalities.”

“I feel like it would hold my Adam’s apple while I’m eating and prevent it from going down into my stomach.”

“You’re not that rebellious. You’re just very gentle, right?”

"that…."

Isser nodded.

“I understand.”

“Did you do it?”

"maybe…."

“Then follow me.”

“If I were to die, I would rather go to the sea.”

“Don’t say anything weird.”

Geo greeted the crops in the garden he had become familiar with through communication and approached his target. The tomatoes, which were shining a vivid red, looked ripe, but were still tightly connected to the stems.

“We will gather the bells that will board the basket~”

At Geo's words, several tomatoes hung on the stems and swayed slightly from side to side, indicating their intentions. When Geo placed a basket right underneath them, tomatoes the size of small watermelons landed with a thud.

“…….”

“Wow, that’s it. It was easy, right?”

"…yes."

In that way, Geo was able to harvest a basket of tomatoes in an instant.

“Personally, I like tomato stew the best among stews. It may be because that’s what we always ate in Edlan Village, but it’s much lighter than cream stew.”

“Ah… that’s right. I remember you liking it because you didn’t feel sick even if you ate a lot.”

Isser, who had regained his smile that resembled Giovanni's, continued speaking.

“They also said that it is the best food to boil a lot and eat for a long time.”

“You remember it all.”

“It’s hard to forget about you, teacher.”

“I never thought I’d be this easy to understand. I’ll improve even more.”

“Don’t… Don’t… How much further are you going to progress from here….”

“No one can stop me.”

“Please help me stop it.”

“You couldn’t stop me even when I was an ordinary priest.”

"teacher."

“Now I’ll add more.”

However, even though he was a teacher, he did not want to become a person who was slower than his mermaid students. Geo was a generous adult who did not set limits for himself.

“I think the reason tomato stew is easy to eat is because it’s made almost entirely of vegetables. I don’t know, Isser, who is a strong and energetic young man….”

“Oh, you still consider me a young man? A thousand years have passed?”

“Please keep quiet, because the genealogy is tangled. Anyway, as you get older, it’s really hard to feel sick. It’s especially a harsh ordeal for someone like me who loves to eat.”

“At least that would be a trial that the Sun God has never sent down before.”

Geo furrowed his brow as if he felt sorry for the mermaid's tackle.

“Where did my student Isser, who used to shyly smile when I talked nonsense, go?”

“…It’s…okay…it’s gone now….”

“Don’t worry, Isser. People can regress at any time.”

“What do you plan on making me into?”

“A pig with a sore throat?”

“…….”

Isser smiled brightly. It was a more mature and refined smile than Geo's.

“Nothing has really changed. You look different inside and outside the house.”

“…Huh….”

“When he was with people he was comfortable with, he would make a lot of funny jokes like this. It was quite different from his public image, when he was called the Saint of the Sun.”

“…….”

“When I was young, I didn’t even know that it was a sign of trust from my teacher, so I was always embarrassed. I still remember it vividly.”

Who are you? Where did my little one go? Who is this strange gentleman?

'How did you grow so much in the meantime?'

It was a legendary joke that made people expect him to laugh awkwardly or frown like Honey, but for Geo, who has no intention of becoming hazy, to suddenly become hazy like this, it was a bit awkward.

“…Well, anyway.”

“You avoid it because it is disadvantageous.”

“You don’t reminisce about the past before eating. That’s what makes the meal uncomfortable.”

Geo continued, firmly blocking out his hazy emotions.

“Even if there is no meat in it, tomato stew has a very rich flavor because the main ingredients are tomatoes and onions. It also goes well with a variety of side dishes.”

Tomato stew goes well with any kind of meat. Adding a little wine and adding sliced beef gives it a mature flavor, and adding chicken gives it a harmonious flavor that blends well with the juice of the tomatoes.

“Lamb isn’t bad either.”

“Isn’t the scent a bit strong?”

“That’s why I couldn’t eat it often when I was with you all, because you really hate strong smells….”

Not only these siblings, but the mermaid race originally avoided strong scents. It was okay to sprinkle a little pepper or add some scent, but if that scent became the main scent, they hated it so much that they had to run away.

“If you think about it, I must have smelled quite strong, even though I was rotting away. You managed to eat it. Maybe you couldn’t help it because you were under the influence of drugs?”

“…….”

“… That… Yes, I think it was my fault this time. I didn’t say it with any particular intention, so please don’t make that face….”

"…yes…."

“I’m sorry, teacher, for living without thinking.”

The ruined atmosphere was barely able to recover after a long time. Geo said with an awkward smile.

“The lamb from Earth doesn’t have that strong of a flavor, would you like to try it later?”

“…My taste buds have changed a bit since then. It’s okay even if the flavor is strong.”

“Oh, has it changed?”

“I guess a lot of time has passed…. Even humans start to eat things they couldn’t eat when they were young as they grow up, you know.”

“Even if you are a mermaid, it seems you can’t endure the passage of time.”

Giovanni babbled nonsense with the noble face of a priest.

“You’re growing old together with me.”

"ah…."

Isser, who had been pondering, answered.

“Not bad.”

“I told you not to do that, but it still feels hazy? I don’t like that kind of thing.”

“Ahaha….”

Isser asked, smiling awkwardly.

“So you were planning on putting meat in this stew? Since you’re making Edlan stew, I expected you’d put in clams or fish….”

“I’m going to try making two kinds. I have some venison and sausages sitting in the pantry, and I’m going to use them when I have the chance. Not bad, right?”

“Good, I think I might be full after a long time.”

Mermaids convert the food they eat into nutrients that they consume to sustain their strong and flexible bodies.

Even if you don't take in nutrients orally, you can maintain your health with your skin while you're at sea, but if you eat food, you'll get hungry easily.

“Tomato stew goes especially well with bacon or ham, which have a slightly fragrant flavor. It also goes well with hard dried meats that are difficult to eat raw, and since you can add various vegetables, it’s easy to adjust the seasoning in various ways…”

Geo held the tomatoes in his basket up to the sunlight.

“It’s definitely different from Earth or Edlan Village.”

“…I ask again, is that really a tomato…? It’s very different from the ones I know of on Edlan or Earth….”

“I planted and grew seeds from the Earth, so it’s bound to be a tomato.”

The cherry tomatoes that Geo raised, or rather, grew on their own, were a little different from those on Earth.

It was as big as a small watermelon and slightly elongated like a date tomato, and was strangely transparent so that light could pass through it, and its taste was somewhere between mild and sweet.

“I don’t really like sweet stews.”

“Me neither.”

“But we have to make do with the materials we have, so we’ll have to find a solution with other materials.”

“Oh, and add more salt?”

“There’s already some sausage that’s salty and flavorful. Let’s use that for now. Hmm. What else should I put in it…?”

Geo blurted out the thought that suddenly occurred to him.

“It would be fun to make bacon.”

“Your homemade bacon is amazing, sir.”

Isser nodded.

“Because the townspeople were flocking in and expecting each of them to get a piece of it.”

“That’s me. A genius priest of the sun who can do anything.”

“That wicked man who has received the grace of such a person and yet knows how to do nothing but do useless things….”

“Calm down and eat some tomatoes.”

Perhaps because he had seen the healthy self of the cherry tomato earlier, Isser hesitated for a moment, but then took a bite of the flesh.

"oh…."

“Isn’t it delicious?”

“This is the first time I’ve ever eaten such delicious tomatoes.”

“I am also good at farming.”

The tomatoes, which were very springy, had slightly jelly-like, springy parts.

Yet, the crunchy sensation unique to tomatoes with firm flesh was vivid, and there was a harmonious balance between the tangy taste of citrus fruits and the subtle sweetness that quickly enveloped it.

“I just touched it and it feels soft like slime.”

“It’s not like it’s slime…?”

“The texture is interesting.”

It was a while before Isser seemed to like tomatoes quite a bit. It was too much for Isser to truly hate moving tomatoes, since he had seen too many of them over the years.

“So what else should I harvest now? Actually, I think it’s a bit odd to use the word harvest in a place called a garden, but anyway….”

“I’m going to try putting in a few things.”

As expected, the stew was delicious when eaten as a mixed soup.

“Carrots are the safest choice. The unique sweetness and faint bitterness of carrots go really well with tomatoes.”

“How about potatoes? I loved the stew you made with potatoes, thickened slightly by the starch from the potatoes. I still remember it.”

“Then let’s add potatoes. The starch that naturally comes out of the ingredients is wonderful, not too sticky or slippery, but rather sweet like bone broth.”

“It’s cooked until it’s soft and fluffy, and when you soak it up the tomato stew broth, it’s soft and mashable. Of course, I’d recommend adding potatoes, sir.”

Isser smiled faintly, excitedly, while holding a basket of tomatoes.

“The cabbage didn’t seem so bad either. The cabbage cooked in the hot broth was crunchy and soft at the same time, which was really nice.”

“It’s really good, isn’t it, when the warm, ripe cabbage juice soaks your mouth, it’s really wonderful in the winter? When it’s fully ripened and you mash it with your tongue, it’s also fun in its own way….”

“…….”

In this everyday and ordinary conversation, Isser couldn't help but recall memories from the past.

“…I think I came to the market.”

“I think it’s similar.”

"okay…."

I wondered if I was dreaming.

It was empty and scary.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (90)

Episode 90

By the time the harvest was complete.

“…….”

“Okay, let’s go clean it now.”

“Excuse me, teacher, this is a bit….”

“I don’t have time.”

Geo and Isser headed to the stream carrying the harvested crops.

“Isn’t it convenient that there’s a stream right in front of the house?”

“Ah, freshwater… right?”

“There’s no way there’d be seawater in the middle of a forest like this.”

“That may be true, but I feel like common sense doesn’t really apply here.”

“To this extent, it’s common sense.”

They washed the crops that were covered in dirt.

A basket of tomatoes, which will be the main ingredient, as well as six firm onions, six potatoes and six sweet potatoes, a head of cabbage, ten pea pods, a small pumpkin, and three carrots.

“…….”

“…….”

Each one was a big one, so they gathered together to form a small hill.

“…Was it a bit too much?”

“I was going to tell you that I don’t think this is right.”

“I hope you enjoyed it too.”

“That… that’s true.”

Because it reminded him of the old days, it took a while for Isser to realize that something was wrong with the situation.

And when I realized it, the hill was already being completed. It was too late to regret.

Isser smiled awkwardly.

“If this continues, we’ll have three large pots.”

“No matter how many jokes there are, they’re only one pot.”

“…….”

“…It seems like it might stretch a bit as I make it….”

Since I enjoy cooking by roughly throwing in a bunch of ingredients based on feeling rather than measuring out the exact amount of ingredients and being thorough in my cooking, the amount of food I cook often increases to an absurd level.

Aria looked at it and said, 'The stew is multiplying.'

"…hmm…."

Geo was upright.

“Once you make it, you can eat it over time or share it with your neighbors.”

“I don’t know, but where is the neighboring house? Beyond this forest?”

“You could also say that Isser’s ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’ is my neighbor.”

“Your neighborhood is really wide-ranging. I am impressed by your inclusiveness.”

“You may not see it now, but if you go in front of the picture frame, you will sometimes get a neighbor.”

“Oh, like that….”

Isser, who had been nodding, froze for a moment.

“…did you share it with humans?”

“Isn’t it cute?”

“I can’t say that it’s not true, but what about those weak humans who would melt if put in seawater?”

“What could be the problem?”

"that is…."

Isser, who had been hesitating, said.

“…such a gift seems excessive to humans.”

“Don’t humans have the right to share my cooking?”

“It may sound a bit strange to say it like that, but I guess that’s true, right?”

“Didn’t you say, Teacher, that people shouldn’t discriminate against each other over what they eat, Isser?”

“…Of course that is true, but….”

Isser stopped talking and pursed his lips.

‘… There is no way that food created by God could be an ordinary gift to humans.’

Isser still doesn't know exactly what kind of being Geo is. However, he is the so-called second sun god who inherited the divinity of the sun god, and aside from that trait, he is a being of a distant class whose 'portrait' seems to be the basis.

'Can such a being cook ordinary food?'

People usually say that when they see something like that, it's a holy relic.

What if it was not an ordinary object that could only be appreciated or touched, but an edible food? Humans used to call it the selection of the gods. It was creating saints and saintesses.

“…….”

“Isser?”

“…Well, it’s in the form of tomato stew, so it’s hard to say what to say.”

“It’s stew, what else is there to say?”

“No, it is food anyway. What the teacher said is true.”

Since his days as a human, Giovanni has often done things that go beyond common sense and limitations. It wouldn't be so strange if he were to go around sprinkling tomato stew, which is almost like a sacred relic, on Earthlings.

“But I still feel jealous. It’s twisted in my mind that humans receive such kindness from the teacher.”

“Is it really that bad of a decision to share some food?”

Giovanni shrugged.

“This kind of thing happened often when I lived in Edlan Village.”

“Those wicked authors who ate that delicious food and then ended up betraying me….”

“Eat one more tomato.”

As a mermaid who is bound to be a big eater due to her physical structure, Isser did not refuse the food Geo gave her. It was a really delicious tomato.

“But I think the quantity will still increase.”

“If there is anything left after sharing, shouldn’t you take care of it?”

“Why… why don’t we solve that?”

“…….”

Geo looked at Isser carefully.

“…….”

"…excuse me…."

“As expected, you’re too skinny.”

“Teacher, most mermaids have this body type.”

“This teacher is in a bad mood because he is so skinny.”

“It didn’t get that skinny.”

Even before, Giovanni had been unable to bear to see people starving, but for some reason, his big hands seemed to have grown even bigger since he hadn't seen them before. Isser recalled Giovanni smiling faintly, saying, "I wish everyone would turn into pigs."

‘How can a person not change this much? No, it seems like it’s gotten worse… .’

Leaving Isser behind, Geo began his next task.

“It’s time to cut it now. Isser, if it’s okay with you, would you please check the condition of the club or trumpet?”

“…Oh, yes. I’ll change the water and then go to the kitchen.”

“Please come slowly.”

Geo entered the hut carrying a huge hill of vegetables.

“…….”

“Oh, Aria. Have you been resting well?”

“…What on earth are you planning to make? Are you going to donate stew to the poor?”

“No, we’re going to eat it.”

“Geo, I always say this, but we are a species that cannot become pigs. Mermaids’ bodies do not change easily. Even my research is having a hard time.”

“You shouldn’t be so confined by your own limitations.”

Geo, who had encouraged his former student who had returned to adulthood, placed all the vegetables on the kitchen table. There were so many ingredients that the sound of them churning, not thumping, echoed throughout the cabin.

Dana, who was being fondled by a teddy bear, jumped up onto the table.

“Ryujonjon?”

“Are you going to eat it now? It’s not cooked yet. Are you worried that it will cause diarrhea?”

“Ryujonjonjonjonjeom?”

“Oh, wait a minute, no.”

“Mm-m.”

Dana ran away with a sweet potato in her mouth.

“…You have a clear sense of purpose, my daughter. When you grow up, you will become a great hunter.”

Soon, Honey flew in and landed on his shoulder.

“Gulp?”

“Are you here to steal the ingredients too?”

“Kung.”

“Yeah, I like to eat cooked food.”

Geo nodded once and started preparing the ingredients.

“I think it would be better to start by frying the onions.”

The method of making stew varied from household to household.

Some households first fried the meat to be used in the stew, while others started with onions to add flavor.

Some people also stew the tomatoes first to create a rich flavor, but Geo prefers to sauté the onions in butter first.

“That way, the savory flavor of the onions will be fully enhanced.”

“Crunch?”

“Meat? If you fry the meat first, the broth will stick to the bottom of the pot and the broth will taste even better, but I thought it would be similar if you browned it in another pan anyway… I put the onions in first.”

Especially in the case of stainless steel pots, the condition was not satisfactory, and sometimes the bottom would burn first. As Geo is not a professional cook, he often made mistakes.

“The combination of onion and butter is definitely the most stable.”

The same goes for tomatoes.

“You don’t necessarily have to boil the tomatoes first, the moisture will evaporate as you boil them, and since you’ll be adding the tomatoes after the onions, I don’t think there’s much of a difference.”

“Kururuk, gurgling.”

“Oh, of course, if you want the flavor of roasted tomatoes, it would make sense to put them in first. But if you make tomato paste in advance, you can always add it later.”

“Gurr?”

“…I don’t have any paste prepared right now.”

Tomato paste, simply put, was a sauce with a very strong tomato flavor. It was like making a paste that was thick and thick to suit the taste of a typical household and then diluting it later.

“…….”

Geo nodded.

“There are more things to make.”

“Kkuk.”

“If you make something like paste, you feel like your heart’s storehouse is more spacious.”

Pickles and sauces were a godsend. If you make them well just once, you will have plenty for a year.

It's okay to chop the onions small to just add flavor, but it's also good to chop them a little bigger to help with the texture. The onions that were cooked well in the stew had a fun, soft, crumbly texture.

Geo cut the onion into bite-sized pieces and melted it in a large saucepan with butter.

“The more butter you put in, the better.”

“Huh?”

“Should I call it a pig breeding season?”

The rule of stew is that the more butter you put in, the more meat you put in, the tastier it becomes. Even people who like it because it's healthy say that it's only delicious when you put in something bad for your body.

“And then add all the onions….”

Isser, who returned after changing the sunset water, asked.

“Are you thinking of making onion soup?”

“Onion soup is good, but tomato stew is the star today.”

"aha…."

“Please give me some.”

“Yes, sir.”

Geo left the pot to Isser, telling him to stir the onions so they wouldn't burn and would turn a nice brown color, and then continued preparing the ingredients. Next, of course, were the tomatoes.

'They're definitely mushy compared to Earth's tomatoes.'

It felt like a jelly with a springy texture, or like pudding. When I pressed the blade hard, it felt like cutting a large piece of jelly, and then slowly and firmly split apart, which suggested its sticky texture.

“Chopped tomatoes go in.”

“I think the pot is already overflowing.”

“Then let’s add one more, pot.”

“Eventually, it will multiply into three….”

“Let’s finish on two lines.”

“Please.”

Isser didn't say anything further and just added another pot.

“I believe.”

“I will repay your trust.”

“I hope it doesn’t overflow.”

As Geo made a short sign of the sun and prayed, the teddy bear that Danawa was playing with in the living room flinched. Geo naturally ignored the sight and continued to groom it.

I peeled the potatoes and cut them into bite-sized pieces. I cut half of the sweet potatoes into long sticks and washed the other half thoroughly and placed them on a colander.

“These sweet potatoes are going to be roasted over a campfire later, okay?”

“Gurrrr.”

“You are such a great pig, you are worthy of being my son.”

Geo nodded with a noble smile befitting the highest priest and continued with the next touch.

Peel off the outermost leaves of the cabbage and use the core inside. Turn the cabbage over and stab the root with a knife in a circular motion from the center, and the core will come out.

“If you cut the cabbage with the core removed into roughly 4 pieces, the size will be okay.”

Next, peas.

“Sweet potatoes and peas are not commonly used on Earth, but Edlan stew is characterized by the use of various vegetables. The tomatoes used this time are particularly sweet, so it would be okay to add such soft ingredients.”

When you add beans to the stew, the taste of chewing them together with the broth is good. Above all, peas are a crop that gives off a refreshing sweetness and rich nutty flavor once they are cooked.

Sergio loved beans, especially peas.

“And pumpkin too.”

“Kuruk.”

“This one also has a different shape from the one on Earth.”

The pumpkins he harvested were the old, yellowish pumpkins commonly known on Earth, but they were as small as acorn squash. They might not be very sweet, but they would add the unique soft flavor and texture of pumpkins.

“If I wander through this forest, I might find a beehive.”

“What would you like to do, sir?”

“The pumpkin from the garden is not that sweet, but it is soft and has a wonderful rich flavor. If you steam it well and put honey and butter on top, it will be very delicious.”

“That’s good, butter and honey….”

“If you sprinkle a little salt, the flavor deepens even more.”

After answering Isser, Geo started to prepare the pumpkin.

The pumpkin, with its seeds dug out and its skin peeled off, was again cut into appropriately sized pieces. It might be an unfamiliar combination to Earthlings, but surprisingly, the pumpkin soaked in tomato-based broth tasted quite good.

“Peel and cut the carrots….”

The vegetables have been prepared.

“Next up is clams and sausages.”

“The club and trumpet were still spitting out a little mud.”

“Oh, is that so?”

“But after about 20 minutes, I felt like I could finish the sunset.”

“Then, should we start by preparing the sausages and other shellfish?”

Geo brought ham and sausages made from the previous deer meat from the warehouse.

Some of the cuts that had been salted and aged whole became excellent ham, and the sausages that were often grilled boasted the same deep flavor as before.

“First, we need to remove the hard part….”

The ham had a hard crust, so I cut off all of the outer skin and cut only the red, hardened flesh from the brine into small cubes. For the sausage, I decided to use the minced meat inside after removing the tough intestine casing.

“…But since it takes a lot of work, I feel bad about throwing away the peel.”

“Kurukgururururururu.”

“The more you chew, the more delicious the tripe becomes….”

In the end, I decided to cut the peel into a suitable size and put it in the stew. It was dried and a bit tough, but after boiling it in the hot stew, it would quickly regain its chewiness. This peel had particularly good resilience.

“How is the stew done?”

“I think it will take some time for the vegetables to cook.”

The stew, made with various vegetables and the groundwater of Edlan Village, had a well-cooked texture. Geo nodded, thinking it would take another hour.

“Then let’s put the trimmed meat in one pot.”

“I think you’ll need to keep an eye on the stew to make sure it doesn’t burn, but should I just leave the meat in?”

“Please keep an eye on the pot while I stir-fry.”

After quickly stir-frying the salted meats to bring out the right amount of flavor, Geo put them all in one pot. After simmering for over an hour, you will be able to taste the tender meat.

And the rest of the time I spent cleaning the clams.

“Sun razor clams and black razor clams are the most delicious when grilled… Just scrape out the flesh from a few and leave the rest alone….”

In particular, black clams were easily overcooked even on low heat, so care had to be taken when controlling the heat. Geo called Aria, who was standing near the kitchen watching him cook, and asked for help.

“Aria, can you help me prepare the grill?”

“…Should I prepare a bonfire like before?”

“I would appreciate it if you could also build a wall so that I can put up the chain link fence.”

“It’s not difficult.”

Aria walked out of the cabin with her teddy bear tucked under her arm.

“…? Why, father…?”

I don't know why the hell the sun god was dragged there, but I ignored it for now because I thought something funny would happen.

Geo brought in a clam or trumpet clam that had been cleaned thoroughly, then split open its shell, which was similar to a razor clam, and took out its flesh.

A long, plump, fleshy mass was revealed, like a long, flowing pipe.

“…….”

“Huh?”

"good."

This is it.

“It tastes good even when eaten raw.”

Geo used a knife to cut off the tough, chewy parts, then sliced the flesh into 1cm thick pieces. He put the light yellow flesh, which was neither too thin nor too thick, into his mouth… .

'This is romance and paradise.'

The sweet and chewy taste that melted in your mouth was no joke.

"ah…."

Can't I just eat this raw?

A plate of sweet raw fish in clean Cheongju. It was an irresistible temptation for Giovanni, a man in his 30s who was reported dead.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (91)

Episode 91

Light a bonfire.

“Is this the right thing to do…?”

Place charcoal in the middle.

“It’s not the charcoal we used when we lived in Edlan, but it smells good.”

A wall was built on the side to provide a device for grilling clams.

It was made of moderately flat stones, so it was bumpy and didn't look very stable. Aria muttered softly, lost in a strange feeling.

“It might have been better if there were bricks….”

The mermaid, recalling her childhood memories and comparing them to the current bonfire, looked down at her hands, which were covered in black charcoal.

“…….”

After a while, Aria muttered.

“…It’s different from that time.”

It must have been so hard to prepare a campfire with that small body.

“It reminds me of the old days, I’ve always done that, but it’s a very strange experience to feel this peaceful.”

Suddenly, Aria was struck with the delusion that she was dreaming.

The cold-blooded sage. The embodiment of the sea. The judge of all sea creatures. The master of the world and game board called the deep sea would never again create such a small and insignificant bonfire.

I am repeating the most peaceful actions of my life with these bloody hands… .

“It doesn’t feel real at all.”

I never imagined that this would be possible. There was no reason for it to be.

“It seems a bit strange.”

In fact, all of this might have been the result of a long sleep by a mermaid who couldn't shake off her old habits. It wasn't all that strange, since she sometimes had dreams like that.

Aria, who was looking at the flickering fire, soon muttered.

“Well, I guess it doesn’t matter….”

She did not hastily try to distinguish between what was true and what was false in the current situation. It was an uncharacteristic behavior for Arya, who had always faced reality without placing value on vanity.

But if this was a dream, then the delusion was worth enjoying as a delusion.

“Geo.”

Aria headed to the cabin's kitchen, dragging the hem of her dress, which seemed quite out of place here.

“The place to grill the clams is ready. I just need to put the wire mesh on top.”

“The trimming is all done. The stew is almost done.”

“So, are you planning to eat outside?”

“There’s a bonfire and the weather is nice. Wouldn’t that be much more fun?”

“You are right.”

There have been many instances like this.

They went to the bustling market and chose the ingredients that they liked the most that day, and Geo cooked a meal with the ingredients that the mermaids liked. He was the only adult and cook in the small house.

Aria and Isser looked up to their tall teacher and learned human wisdom or chatted about trivial things. The atmosphere was disorganized.

At such times, their teachers would ask for help.

“Would you help Aria too? I’m running out of hands, teacher….”

“Give me the clams.”

Aria continued, receiving a tray full of prepared clams from Geo.

“This is my role.”

Grilled clams were always Aria's thing.

“Don’t worry, I’ll be baking it well.”

“I feel secure with Aria.”

“…Is that so?”

“I look forward to some delicious grilled clams.”

“…….”

Aria opened her mouth slightly and then went outside again.

At that time, Aria was weak and physically weak, but she was more greedy than that. She felt that Geo's cooking was the essence of wisdom that a human could show, so she insisted on giving me the role.

'At that time, I tried very hard to get the role of lighting the campfire from the teacher. Even though I helped with cooking, he rarely gave me a job that was too dangerous… .'

I was also annoyed because I thought it was because he didn't trust my abilities. Giovanni wanted to take on all the big and small dangerous tasks himself. It seemed like a sign of distrust.

It was only after his death that I realized that the teacher had been too precious to his young mermaid disciples and did not want them to get hurt. That was a separate issue from trust.

“…….”

The little mermaid, who didn't even know that, ended up getting the job of lighting a bonfire.

“That’s funny.”

I felt like I was floating in the sky, disconnected from reality, because I still had that weird role left. It was a strange feeling.

Although I never abandoned it myself, I thought that I would never take on this role again even after I died… .

“…….”

“Huh?”

“…I told you not to act friendly, sir.”

“Kuk kuk kuk.”

“Are you okay?”

A teddy bear sitting by a campfire clapping its hands is truly insignificant.

It was a question with a neutral tone that carried no particular emotion, but Aria's feelings as she looked at the old, dull-colored doll were not like that.

“Are you really okay?”

Aria covered the sun with the sea.

“You put in a lot of effort. You hated the sun so much that you drowned all your children in the sea. You didn’t even have the courage to touch Geo, who had melted away like water….”

“…….”

“Yes, I didn’t have the courage. I was feeling anger for the first time in my life, and I was not in my right mind. I could have destroyed his remains in some way, so I was just cautious.”

“…….”

“You are the one who lost your warmth and all your children due to the struggles of a mermaid who can’t even live on land… It’s so absurd and funny to see you so peaceful now.”

That's how it was all.

“Why is it so peaceful?”

This forest, its owner Geo, and even the small creatures and giant beings he kept by his side as if he were playing with family, were helplessly peaceful.

Aria looked down at the fluffy doll that contained the huge frame securely.

“Don’t you resent me?”

“Kyuu.”

“This is why the group called gods are so disgusting.”

You shouldn't expect them to have feelings or interaction.

The priest's offering of sacrifices to the gods was almost the only way for humans to communicate with the gods. To that extent, they could not talk to the gods, could not see each other face to face, could not understand each other, and could not exchange emotions.

So, I wouldn't hold any resentment towards a mere mermaid.

“It’s emptier than a monster like me.”

To talk about mercy and love on such a topic, what an incompatible pair of authors these are.

“Teasing the sun isn’t something that just anyone can do, so why can’t we show some kind of rewarding reaction? Feeling sad, resentful, annoyed… there are so many reactions we can show.”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

“Are you laughing?”

I'm annoyed.

“…….”

It was quite different from my brother's, which even felt noble, but Aria muttered with a gentlemanly smile anyway.

“I didn’t blame you either.”

It was true.

The clever mermaid knew exactly who was at fault. It was a bunch of fools blinded by greed and fame who had caused the accident, and the siblings and Giovanni were just unlucky enough to get caught up in it.

So, if he was angry, it would only be at the easily corrupted and betraying nature of humans.

“That world was so horrible.”

No human has ever seen eternity. Even I, who was turned into a rage, loathed it.

“It would be bearable if the sky were covered by the sea to the ends….”

So that's what happened.

“…….”

“Yes, Father.”

Even as a mermaid, it was a fact I found out much later.

“The sun god and the deep sea god were one body, right? So you were my father too.”

“Kuukku.”

“No, since we are divided beings, I guess I should call you uncle. What do you want me to call you?”

“Kukuku.”

“Uncle? Oh my gosh, that’s creepy. That was just a joke.”

It was a dirty peaceful word.

“At this point, I’m starting to lose my mind.”

It was a very rare occurrence.

Although she had lived her whole life with a clear mind, there were only two times when she fell into confusion.

The first was when Geo took Aria's side rather than the human one, and the second was when Geo's body was found, unrecognizable.

And in this dreamlike situation, Aria was once again confused.

“I feel like this isn’t where I should be….”

A laugh came out naturally.

“…….”

The spring breeze was gentle.

“…ticklish.”

“Aria, are you ready?”

"okay."

This was the stomach of their detailed teacher.

That fact seemed a little far-fetched.

* * *

“How is it?”

“Is it ripe?”

Geo continued speaking after seeing the stew's liver.

“It’s a little too tangy for my taste.”

“Teacher, you liked spicy food….”

“I just eat it without any problems, but it’s too embarrassing to say that I like it.”

It had a bitter taste, perhaps because it was much sweeter than the tomatoes I usually use.

Geo took out the Milky Way Mary that had been drying in the cupboard, ground it finely, and sprinkled it over the stew.

“It’s just right.”

It was moderately spicy and stimulating. It was sweet and savory, and the saltiness from the aged ham was also felt, and the vegetable juice from various vegetables such as carrots added a luxurious bitterness.

"ah."

Rustle.

Moon, moon.

Parsley… .

“I guess you like it.”

Perhaps because the Milky Way Mary was so sparkly, or perhaps because it was also a fruit, several water birds flew out of the nest and snatched a few Milky Way Mary eggs.

Geo turned a blind eye to his friends' petty embezzlement.

'It's okay because it's cute.'

All that was needed was to not steal from other houses. Geo patted the water birds who were greeting him briskly and opened his mouth.

“I was a little nervous because it had been a while since I cooked it, but the stew turned out to be quite satisfying.”

“Have you ever cooked it separately before? You enjoy cooking, sir.”

“Since I’m dead, what’s the big deal…?”

It was only quite recently that 'Giovanni' was placed over Sergio.

“…….”

“I made a mistake, Isser. Please calm down.”

“No, it’s me….”

“Calm down.”

There was a bit of a fuss, but the stew was really satisfying.

“I like the one with clams, and I like the one with meat. I think Isser likes the one with seafood better.”

“…Now I don’t really have much of an appetite, so it’s hard to say, but yes. If I had to pick, I think I’m more used to seafood.”

“You say you have no appetite, but you eat tomatoes the size of pumpkins.”

"that…."

Isser, who had been seriously contemplating for a moment as if he had nothing to say, soon replied shamelessly.

“The tomatoes were delicious.”

“I raised it.”

“As expected, you are a teacher.”

"yes."

Whatever the general taste of mermaids, Geo liked the meat one a little better.

'It was definitely difficult to get meat when I lived in the village.'

Because it is a seaside town located on the coast, the price of meat was much more expensive than that of seafood.

Even though he was a nobleman, he was the youngest who didn't receive any support, and even though he had enough to buy medical equipment and donate everything, he couldn't live lavishly, so he was quite happy about this kind of meat.

The contents of the sausage with the casing removed were cooked thoroughly in the stew and had a soft texture, but it seemed that if it had been cooked for a longer time at a lower temperature, the meat would have been even more tender.

“Because it’s dried meat, it doesn’t become mushy easily.”

“I like this as it is, but….”

“I think we’re ready for dinner for now.”

Geo, with Isser's help, carried two large pots out into the yard. The atmosphere was lively thanks to the wooden chairs and table prepared from somewhere.

"ego."

The stew pot sat down next to the campfire.

“Let’s eat.”

“Kuruk.”

“Honey, don’t even think about getting in the pot.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“I don’t think we’ll drink water from you.”

Geo scooped up the stew with Honey in the pot, placed it in a bowl, and placed it near the campfire. Honey began to absorb the stew while still in the bowl. Because it was so thick, it was hard to tell what was the stew and what was the honey.

“Dana, let’s eat new food instead of stealing oppa’s stew.”

“Ryujon ...

“Right.”

Dana, who had been idly looking around the bowl in which honey had melted, walked briskly to Geo's call and took a seat in front of his bowl. The stew seemed to have been well-suited to the two animals' mouths, as the amount of stew was gradually decreasing.

“If you want to add more flavor, I’ll put some pepper here, so add as you wish.”

Aria's head tilted as she placed the finely chopped Milky Way Mary on the table.

"pepper?"

“Yes, it’s pepper.”

“Isn’t it completely different?”

“The taste is similar.”

“Is it edible?”

“Would you recommend something I wouldn’t eat?”

“…….”

"aria?"

After a moment of silence, Aria nodded.

“I’m not the type of person to joke around with food though….”

“Why are you saying such obvious things so seriously?”

“Sometimes, the teacher’s actions are unpredictable.”

And it wasn't because of Geo's bouncy charm that I was curious.

'It doesn't look like food.'

It's not that it looks inedible, but it gives off the vibe that it would be used as a precious medicinal ingredient rather than a food for such small uses.

In some dimensions, people call this guy an elixir.

“…You’re really good at finding things like this.”

“Because they are in full bloom in the forest.”

“Oh, a lot?”

“Is there a problem?”

“…….”

Aria looked around and shook her head.

“No, what’s the problem?”

It was a world filled with things so precious that it would make the eyes of greedy humans, who were not generous by nature, roll their eyes. If anyone were allowed to come and go here, there would definitely be problems.

However, even if humans had no limits to evolution, they would not be able to crawl into this terrifying dimension with only shallow greed.

'You wouldn't be able to approach this dimension without a greed bordering on belief. Just imagining humans coveting the teacher's treasure trove is nauseating... but it's unlikely to ever come true.'

Aria accepted the stew her mentor offered her, fearing that Giovanni might be persecuted by humans again.

The wooden bowl was really warm. The warmth spread to the fingertips that held the bowl, and a faint ticklish feeling sprouted like a bud.

“…….”

“Is seafood stew okay?”

“Yeah, I like this better than beef.”

It smelled so appetizing.

I didn't think I was that hungry, but the pungent aroma of tomato stew made me feel empty. I wanted to fill my empty stomach with the stew in front of me.

It had been a really long time since I felt like eating something. My complicated brain was slowly starting to unravel.

'... Strangely, I don't dislike Geo's cooking even though it has a strong smell. Now, even my taste has faded, but still, for some reason... .'

The sound of the dishes clanking, soaked in a soft warmth that warmed my fingertips. That peaceful and simple murmur tickled my heart in a strangely careful way.

'Is it because I came back home?'

Strictly speaking, this place, which was not a deep sea, was not my hometown, but perhaps because of Giovanni, I felt a strange sense of nostalgia and sentimentality. It was a feeling that was difficult to define.

Even though I belong there, I feel like I am one step away, and even though we are spending time together, I miss you so much that it feels empty and unattainable. Even in that deep, dark sea, I have never felt such an emotion, and it is truly unfamiliar.

'... This man would never have forgiven us. How can he be so affectionate on such a topic? It's not like Giovanni was twisted by gaining divinity... He was such a strange author to begin with.'

I felt a tingling sensation from the unfamiliar sensation, so much so that I had to clench and unclench my fist a few times.

“…….”

I don't think it should be this comfortable.

I felt so eerily lethargic that I couldn't escape this comfortable atmosphere.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (92)

Episode 92

Geo didn't have any thoughts.

"hmm…."

The warmth spreads throughout my body as I take a bite of the stew.

'This is it.'

Geo nodded.

Thinking about anything other than rice at the dinner table was an insult to rice and a declaration of war against pigs. Above all, in a situation where I was eating such a delicious meal, I couldn't even think about anything else.

'It's a really good food to eat when you're cold or feeling weak.'

Even though he was a priest of the sun who always had warmth by his side, he couldn't avoid catching a cold or getting sick. When that happened, Giovanni would cook and eat this kind of stew.

The allure of a warm meal like stew is especially appealing when you're sick.

“It’s delicious.”

“Kyuu.”

Of course, it's delicious even when you eat it when you're healthy.

'Don't eat stew with this flavor.'

The natural acidity of the tomato becomes even more profound when warmed. It has a complex aroma, like a sticky and sweet broth made by boiling chicken feet for a long time, and the flesh, which melts in your mouth, has a refined sweetness.

“It also goes well with carrots.”

“The good thing about Edlan Stew is that it goes well with anything you put in it.”

“It’s also a characteristic of tomato stew.”

The unique bitter yet tangy, stimulating flavor of carrots permeated the stew subtly.

The carrots, which were not so strong as to be rejected, but were mixed with various ingredients and soaked up the broth, had a special texture.

“And… I think it was a good idea to add potatoes too.”

When it comes to soup, you can't leave out potatoes.

“Isser recommended it to you?”

“We used to put it in our stew often.”

“That’s right, it brings back old memories.”

“It’s really well cooked.”

“Thanks to Isser stirring it well. I can see that the heat is evenly distributed.”

In addition to the red flavor of the tomatoes, the potatoes, soaked in the juices of the deeply-fermented vegetables, were soft enough to be squashed with the gums.

The potato's characteristic crumbly texture added weight to the weight of the stew, which seemed to fly away with its sour and sweet flavors.

'Is it because the other ingredients assert themselves so clearly? When you add ingredients that give a light taste like this, the taste of the stew really deepens. And there is no ingredient that goes as well with that as potatoes.'

Moreover, potatoes did not simply serve as a canvas.

“Even if you just drink the broth, you can taste the flavor of the ingredients.”

The starch from the potatoes also served as a stepping stone that bound the various vegetables together and gently sublimated their juices.

Geo looked at Isser and smiled slightly.

“Your arms must have been sore from all the ingredients you had to stir.”

“That’s… embarrassing. I’m past the age where my arms would hurt from things like this.”

“Is that so? It still looks young to me, so this is a big problem.”

The cabbage that was sneaked in was also pretty good.

“The cabbage is very well cooked.”

“Gurrrr.”

“Yeah, I like this kind of cabbage the best too.”

Cabbage soaked in a tomato-based broth.

The cabbage, blotched with the color of the broth, seemed to give off a strange elasticity when chewed, but soon crumbled and released a light juice. The warm broth that spread throughout my mouth was different from that of the stew.

“Oh, that’s right.”

Geo looked back at the campfire where the clams were cooking.

“I think it’s time to start eating clams now.”

“Ryujonjonjonjeom?”

“You have the qualities of a pig too, just wait a minute.”

When I stroked Dana's small, round head once, her characteristically cat-like triangular ears folded back and then back again. It was really cute how she laid her ears down before I could even touch her.

'I must serve and serve you for the rest of my life.'

Just the feeling of the small, precious skull that fits comfortably in my hand made me feel full without eating. My heart felt warm and solid like a bowl of ox bone soup. This is how you increase your satisfaction in life.

“Where should I look….”

Most of the clams were cooked, and Geo brought them onto the table on a platter. There was a clanking sound as the clamshells clanked together.

The unique scent of the sea from the charcoal-grilled clams combined with the gentle spring breeze of the forest to create a pleasant smoke.

“It looks like it’s fully ripe.”

“Are you going to tell me?”

“No, we’re all grown up now, so we each have to eat on our own.”

“I think the clams that the teacher opened for me personally tasted better, but that part was a little disappointing.”

“What a pity… Ah, it’s hot.”

"yes??"

Isser was embarrassed.

“Are you hot?”

“Will it be hot?”

Aria, who had been scolding her younger brother as naturally as breathing, soon looked at Geo as if she found it absurd.

“What kind of nonsense is this, sir, when you have the divinity of the sun in you?”

“It’s obvious that freshly baked clams are hot, so I just stop without realizing it.”

“How can one be deified and still not abandon human nature…?”

“It might be possible, but why is it like that for me? It would be better to let go of your prejudices.”

“Prejudice, how can this be so unfair? It’s because it doesn’t make sense that I’m doing this.”

“People should always live with an open mind.”

“Is this something that can be done with an open mind?”

“You shouldn’t have such narrow-minded thoughts.”

Geo, who had broadened my student’s world, began to open clams with his characteristically noble, and to some, shameless, smile. The moderately ripe clams each boasted white flesh and gave off the sweet and savory aroma characteristic of seafood.

“There are good things about being the second sun god.”

“…Opening clams with your bare hands?”

“I always felt it was a waste to let it cool down before eating, but this turned out really well.”

“Is it okay for the divine to be used in that way?”

“Is there anything that can’t be done?”

While the mermaids were embarrassed by the untimely sacrilege, Geo and the teddy bear were simply delighted. Their stomachs were still quite empty, and there was plenty of room for the grilled clams.

The teddy bear was waiting for the clam meat with an excited face. Geo handed the teddy bear the meat of the black clam, which was as juicy as fresh sea urchin roe and steaming hotly.

“Here you go, Father.”

“Kyuuu.”

“How does it taste?”

“Kukukukukuku….”

“I’m glad you enjoyed the taste of clams.”

The teddy bear clapped its hands on the cotton floor. Geo was delighted, and the mermaids looked dumbfounded. Honey slid back into the stew pot, and Dana ate all of her stew and then lay down on her back.

'What a peaceful mess.'

This is the epitome of true life. I felt happy and proud. As expected, there was nothing he couldn't do.

Geo lifted up a new black clam. It looked similar to an abalone, but its shell was much blacker and smoother, and its flesh, cooked over charcoal, was white and tender.

'Compared to this, abalone is closer to yellow.'

The black razor clam was a clam that boasted vivid black and white colors that would hurt your eyes if you looked at it for too long. The degree of whiteness of its flesh was different from that of abalone.

It was also different in that the edges were cleanly rounded without any burrs. However, the taste and texture were definitely reminiscent of abalone.

“…….”

Jjigit.

"oh."

A crazy tangle hit Geo's brain.

'It's nice to eat it after a long time.'

The insanely delicious taste made my salivary glands go crazy. It was truly a natural dasida without a doubt.

The flesh of the black clam, which had a strong vitality, was soft and elastic enough not to be unpleasant, and the taste, which became more savory the more I chewed it, was like roasted nuts.

‘I guess it’s because I didn’t bake it for that long, but it’s still a bit chewy… .’

Should I say that I could feel the texture? The flesh, which spreads out softly like silk, splits apart without a trace when pressed with the teeth, giving me the pleasure of chewing.

The juice of the clams flowing out so generously felt like clam soup eaten on a winter day.

“…….”

Because the clams were not small, they filled his mouth. It was a while later that Geo opened his mouth.

“It’s so delicious.”

“…It looks like that.”

“This is life.”

“You’ve become more greedy since I last saw you.”

“You are gone.”

"haha…."

Isser smiled a calm smile that resembled Giovanni's.

“I didn’t really need to eat it, so I didn’t pack it.”

Actually, that wasn't all.

It was Isser who had eaten Geo while he was still breathing. Perhaps it was because the feeling of those living, moving muscles wriggling inside his mouth still remained. Since then, Isser has not put anything in his mouth unless it is necessary.

"still…."

“Is this delicious?”

“…Yes, it’s delicious.”

It's been a long time since I really felt like eating 'food'.

“I feel good.”

It was to the point where I felt like I had become a human.

“Sunshine Sora… Are you going to use the shell, sir?”

“I plan to grind it finely and make it into paint later.”

"okay."

Giovanni used to draw pictures using these shells. He especially liked to draw the sea, and his pictures always had the scent of the sea.

“I guess I should collect them, then.”

"please."

Whether Isser was impressed or not, Geo lifted the club or trumpet clam this time.

The clam, which has a surface area as round as a scallop, has already split in half to reveal its flesh.

“…….”

well.

The tooth went in.

“…It went really smoothly….”

“Because I baked it.”

“That’s great, Aria. You really have a talent for cooking.”

It is a characteristic of clams that they become tough when cooked for a long time, but in the case of clubs and trumpets, you can feel the ultimate softness when cooked at the right temperature and time.

The delicate texture melting away was softer than the sashimi of abalone.

'I never knew I could taste this kind of texture in warm grilled clams.'

It was a texture that Giovanni could easily taste, but it was an unfamiliar and exciting sensation for Sergio, an Earthling. Come to think of it, Giovanni's favorite clam was also a club or trumpet.

“It would taste good if you grilled it with butter….”

“This is a dish I never tried when I was in Edlan Village.”

Aria smiled faintly.

“Butter wasn’t such a rare ingredient there.”

“Rather than that, I was being avoided.”

Butter was difficult to make and was widely considered to be the dregs of milk. In addition, it was difficult to raise cows in coastal villages, so there were not many dishes using dairy products.

“But it would really be delicious if you grilled it with butter.”

“…You can try it later.”

"great."

Sunshine conch was a bit difficult to eat by spreading the flesh on it. You had to spin it around with a special skewer to get the flesh to pop out, but it had a texture quite similar to conch on Earth.

But the sweetness was different.

“…….”

This sweetness that is deeply ingrained in the flesh itself and the bitter stimulation that reminds one of the scent of some herbal medicine.

There was a superstition that eating sun-dried soybeans would help you get better if you had a cold, as they had the effect of warming the body.

‘… It definitely feels like this, so I guess it’s also used as medicine… .’

I had a funny thought that maybe because it was the sunshine of a country that worshipped the sun god, even seafood received some benefits. It had a sweet and salty taste that would go well with spicy stir-fried golbaengi.

“It seems like mermaids didn’t eat spicy food well. How are they now?”

“We’ve come too far to be concerned about that now. There’s no longer any problem with eating.”

Isser, who was cutting off the flesh of the club and eating it, continued speaking.

“So, I guess I can eat anything I want. My tastes have also faded a lot, and my biological characteristics have changed, rather than being like the mermaids that used to live in the sea back then….”

“Then can I eat something a little spicy?”

“I’ve never really looked for it, but that’s true. Do you think the next dish you make will be a little spicy?”

“It won’t be that spicy….”

“I feel uneasy when I think of the teacher who loved experimental cooking.”

As he said that, Isser smiled.

“Would you like to let me taste it before eating?”

“I can show you that much mercy. If you could help me prepare the meal.”

“That sounds good.”

Isser muttered.

“…I really like it.”

He had a strange feeling that he couldn't shake off, and he ended up having similar questions to his sister.

Why is it so peaceful?

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (93)

Episode 93

How miserable it is to have to live your whole life with memories of a past life.

That was the fate of the mermaid. It was like a disease that was born. The most intense emotions engraved on the soul left a terrible mark that could not be changed no matter what happened.

To Isser, that trace was none other than the human named Giovanni.

"good night."

“…Teacher too….”

It's peaceful here.

“Good night.”

It's creepily comfortable.

It was a ridiculous feeling. It was not a feeling that the mermaid, or Isser, could tolerate.

Even the softly blowing spring breeze and the gentle murmur of the forest are so attractive that they cannot be shaken off. Isser got a bedroom in Geo's cabin.

“…….”

The floor my bare feet are walking on is made of wood.

The floors, walls, and ceilings of the shiny hut gave off a faint, intoxicating odor.

The large windows on the terrace were wide open, letting in plenty of forest air, and the bed, which was neither too big nor too small, was just the right size and gave off a soft warmth.

“…….”

When I lay on that texture.

"…this…."

Isser couldn't hold it in any longer and said:

“Does that make sense?”

In this peace, Isser felt a terrible emptiness and loss.

“Where am I now…?”

In the mermaid's memory, Giovanni died. He died horribly.

What did Isser think as he looked at the rotten skin and the withered stems flowing out between the empty eye sockets, bearing wounds that were unbelievable to be the work of the children of the warm-hearted sun?

‘… Even though I was under the influence of drugs, that doesn’t mean I don’t remember that time.’

Rather, the situation at that time was so vivid. No one would know what made him eat it.

At that time, our peace met its death. What is dead should not return, so what is this comfortable space? Where am I feeling peaceful now?

“…It’s scary….”

The once full stomach seemed to have become empty.

“…….”

Instead, it will be filled with rotten flesh.

“…It’s shaking.”

I didn't feel well.

I felt motion sickness. My brain felt like it was shaking.

The clear and quiet voices of the forest, as if the vision was blurred, became louder and louder. The mermaid's memory was fixed on Giovanni's death and the destruction of the sun, so this comfort could not help but be uncomfortable.

Isser became more accustomed to blood and screams.

"ah…."

That was Isser's fate.

“…….”

The mermaid lived in a sea of blood.

Now, I've become a loser adult who feels fear even when I give him such an absurd gift.

“…….”

Only after a long time did the mermaid speak.

“…I think I’m going to have a bad dream.”

I didn't know that the place I lived in was a nightmare.

Lying here like a corpse, I now know what hell is.

* * *

“…….”

Geo sat up in bed with a strange sensation.

"…hmm…."

The feeling of being drawn to taking a walk.

'Should I go out?'

Geo was a man who did not think deeply about the source of his desires.

He left the room, leaving Honey sleeping. He walked down the soft wooden stairs to the living room, and for some reason he could see a teddy bear lying on the living room sofa and Dana, the cat, next to it.

The two looked up at Geo, their light emitting a faint light that seemed ready to go out at any moment.

“I’m thinking of going out for a walk.”

“…….”

“Dana, shall we go together?”

Danah, who had been looking at the black-haired Geo, soon stood beside him. As if she were a ghost, her footsteps were inaudible. The teddy bear did not stop the two from leaving the cabin, but simply watched them.

Geo walked along the road without thinking much about the meaning of the words, wearing the black cloak he always wore over his head. He went out barefoot, but the soft grass that he walked on didn't hurt.

This place felt good no matter where I stepped. That's why I felt like I was walking around without my shoes on even more. The joy of walking was great.

“The forest is quiet.”

The forest at this time maintained an eerie silence, as if it were always asleep.

“Dana, do you like the forest?”

“…….”

“How about the trees? How do the flowers smell?”

“…….”

“The weather is really nice.”

Sabak, sabak… .

The sound of tender grass swaying.

“The moon is bright.”

There is a sun and a moon here.

But it was clearly different from those on Earth or other planets. They boasted a transparent jewel-like color, and did not shine so brightly that it seemed painful to the eye.

It feels like I'm just looking at a brightly drawn picture... .

"look."

Above their heads hung a jewel moon of ice-cold light.

“It looks like you.”

"meow."

“You cry differently than usual.”

It was a cry that sounded like an imitation of a cat.

“You are a cat, but….”

I was about to say something, but I didn't want to think about it any longer, so I looked away. It was like the cold moon floating in the night sky.

“It’s shining.”

"meow."

“Thanks to you, it’s not dark.”

The full moon was large, and the Milky Way stretched across the sky like a school of jellyfish seen in the deep sea. They remained still, with a dull sparkle that did not give off any sense of life.

The moon shines. The Milky Way has drawn its curtain. At the foot of the stairs stands a cold cat, and the forest that should have been dark has secretly become bright, and the only shadow here is Geo himself. The only blackness here is his.

“It smells a lot like wood….”

The footsteps soon stopped in front of a splendid spring.

“There is a scent of the sea in it.”

“…….”

"aria."

I saw my student dipping her pale, bare feet in the stagnant spring water.

“Can’t sleep?”

The mermaid smiled her usual, experienced smile as she looked at the black cloak in the shadows, whose face was completely invisible.

“How can I sleep in a place like this?”

“You didn’t like the bed?”

“I liked everything about it, it was creepy.”

“But you don’t run away.”

“I hope that someday you will accept us.”

Pearl-colored eyes framed a black cloak.

“If I take responsibility, will you forgive me? Will you love me again like you did back then?”

“You don’t need my forgiveness. It’s not my place to resent and hate you.”

“…We have a lot of time.”

Aria's voice was clear and soft as usual.

“I didn’t know it would feel so terrifying.”

She asked Geo.

“Do you know what kind of being this spring is?”

“I didn’t try to find out because I had no reason to know.”

“Do you know what this forest means to you?”

The mermaid continued to ask.

“Why did you end up in this situation, why did you come back to life in a strange form that was neither a resurrection nor anything else, for what purpose and context is the world flowing this way….”

“I’m not curious.”

“That’s a teacher-like answer.”

The mermaid's voice had a pearl-like smoothness to it.

“Compassionate and indifferent.”

That's why there were some rough parts.

“Are you aware that this is your stomach?”

“This is a picture I drew.”

“It doesn’t seem that different.”

“If you say it’s a part of me, then maybe so.”

It was Geo who created this place, and at the same time he was a portrait.

“I knew that this forest reflected my imagination.”

“Can you still call yourself a human?”

“I have never been out of humanity.”

“…….”

“I have always been human.”

It was something that happened naturally, without any need to worry about it.

“It seems like a good night for conversation. Is there anything you would like to ask the teacher?”

“…….”

Aria's eyes took in the pitch-black cloak as the voice suddenly changed its tone.

“…I can’t see your face….”

The inside of the cloak was not visible at all.

“Does it exist?”

“I never disappeared, Aria.”

“What do you look like now?”

“I don’t know because I haven’t looked in the mirror.”

“But I can’t see it either.”

then.

“How can you prove that you exist?”

How can one distinguish between life and death, whether there is a human being, a sun god, or a picture in that pitch-black shadow?

If it's a shadow whose shape we don't even know until someone defines it.

“I have a question, sir.”

“I promise to give you the best answer I can.”

“How can I be sure you won’t disappear?”

“Nothing is eternal. The living and the dead are constantly changing.”

“It’s true that I didn’t see the limits of humanity. The humans I know have constantly become stronger, evolved, and even become gods or nature.”

but.

“It’s different with them.”

A blank sheet of paper that can become anything.

“…If I were there feeling fear and loss, would you understand?”

“I think it’s natural to feel a sense of distance as I’ve changed.”

“Distance? That’s not what I meant. It’s completely different.”

As long as he was 'Giovanni', I had no intention of moving away.

“Why would I want to distance myself from you? I’ve spent so many years looking at the empty sea, not the coffin or the graveyard, and feeling the emptiness. Now that I know that this isn’t some unbelievable nightmare or miracle that came all of a sudden, I don’t feel any awkward distance.”

So what is Aria feeling right now?

"I am…."

“…….”

"…teacher."

It was close to misery or desperation.

“Why are you always at the center of destiny?”

It's terrible.

“Wouldn’t it have been better if I had just been a passerby, an insignificant person? Born into an ordinary family, living an ordinary life, and dying an ordinary death? Who else would be more suited to such a position than you, teacher? Why aren't you included among the tens of thousands of people I've seen, and even more?"

You know when you see this forest. No.

"I know just by looking at you."

If you can't see those eyes and not know, it's no different from not being able to see the world.

"I wouldn't have cared if my teacher had died. It was expected. I would have been satisfied even if it wasn't a very peaceful and peaceful death."

"……."

"If only I had been just a little bit more ordinary, if only everyone in the world had been just common enough to get by, if only I had died like that."

A voice came from deep shadows beneath the pitch-black hood, where the inside could not be seen.

"You wanted me to be happy."

It was definitely 'Giovanni's' voice.

"Is it difficult for you because you are so special that you can't handle it?"

"I'd like to think it's just excessive self-consciousness, but it certainly seems that way."

"Don't you think that's a really cute complaint?"

"……."

How many voices can come out of those shadows?

“…Unfortunately, it’s not such a cute situation….”

It would have been much better if I could have laughed it off.

“…Since when has it been a portrait?”

“I don’t know either.”

“What do you think of yourself?”

“I am Geo.”

“Your happiness is not important anymore.”

Giovanni did not meet an unfortunate death.

“I know that’s the kind of death you like.”

So what was important was the fear and loss of Aria, of the mermaids around her.

No matter what moment comes, Geo will make the choice that will make him the happiest.

“You will live the life you want. No matter what happens to your surroundings in the future, you will do the best you can at the time. Don’t you think that’s too idealistic and terrible?”

“Aria seems to think it’s terrible.”

“Yes, it’s terrible. Because I know it’s the best, and I know it’s ideal. I can’t come now and ask them to fix it after admiring that kind of thing. I’ve already lived too long in it….”

What is the essence of this portrait?

The name of this is 'Portrait of Geo'. It is a person and a painting at the same time. It is just a painting, but it is also a painter. It is like a great nature that has drawn its own destiny and will live embracing more destiny.

Was it because it was a portrait from the beginning that the name 'Geo' was repeated endlessly? Or was it because it was Geo that it became a portrait at some point and began to embrace countless 'Geos'?

"okay."

Aria, who was so anxious, finally made up her mind.

In the distant past, in the future, and even at this very moment… .

“…Teacher, you will be special for the rest of your life.”

This man could not be ordinary. Not once, never had he been.

“…….”

“…….”

What should we look at now and condemn as cruel?

“…Teacher, do you trust humans?”

“There is a happiness that can only be found through faith.”

“I have no intention of giving up.”

“Just like Aria didn’t give up her anger.”

“Okay, then….”

Aria smiled with a weak expression on her face that she had never seen before.

“I’ll take care of my own share.”

How many of the shadows beneath that pitch-black cloak can I have?

I prayed that I would never have to throw it back into the sea again.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (94)

Episode 94

It seems like we had some deep conversations last night.

“…….”

Warm.

Geo's ultimate positive mind was not bound to such a place.

'I guess Aria is going through puberty.'

It was also a time when I had all kinds of worries.

'You have to respect it.'

It was not that Aria was unaware of the fact that Geo's identity and the surrounding environment were causing her great distress.

However, it wasn't that serious of a problem for Geo, and he just hoped that Aria would get used to Geo's situation.

But even for someone like Geo, worries were bound to arise.

"…hmm…."

“Teacher, what’s the problem?”

“Because it seems like I created a dungeon.”

"oh."

Aria, who had not yet returned home even though the sun had risen, opened her mouth politely as if she were a gentleman, expressing her heartfelt admiration.

“You have a desire for revenge against the perpetrators of your suffering and death, my human teacher.”

“There’s no such thing.”

“Why were dungeons created if not to torment humans?”

“I drew it because I wanted to.”

"aha."

Aria nodded.

“If you’re a teacher, you can do that.”

“I don’t know what kind of person you think I am.”

“There is something like that.”

In many ways, Geo was an unpredictable being. Even Aria.

Then, he could have unconsciously created the dungeon with fragments of hatred and resentment toward humans, or he could have just been doing his hobby without any thoughts or worries and the dungeon would have suddenly appeared.

Aria looked at the picture frame that Geo was looking at.

“Are you talking about this picture?”

“I drew this a long time ago, but no matter how much I think about it….”

“It’s like a dungeon, right?”

Aria asked, looking at the picture of the city filled with colorless colors.

“What’s your name?”

“…….”

Geo answered.

“The City of Emptiness.”

The system clearly said so.

“It’s not a name I made up.”

“Then I guess we should consider it as the structure that was attached.”

“What is a structure?”

“Ah… On Earth, they call it the source.”

“The source.”

It was a name I had occasionally heard from Yoo Seong-un.

Contrary to his self-proclaimed gardener status, Yoo Seong-un doesn't reveal much about his knowledge of the subject, but he does know a little about its origins.

‘The bread of systems… .’

I understood her to be the mother of all systems and the manager of all destinies.

“I see.”

“What do you want to do with this, teacher?”

“I didn’t want to do anything.”

Geo felt a little wronged.

“I just drew it because I wanted to.”

What artist would paint with the hope of practicality in mind?

“All paintings on canvas are for admiration, not to be chewed, picked, tasted, or enjoyed.”

For example, I don't draw pictures to beat up people. Although they can be traded here and there because they have monetary value or additional elements, pictures basically exist to be appreciated.

Aria, who had been silent for a moment at Geo's words, asked.

“Are you trying to say that I created the dungeon without any intention?”

“What is the problem?”

“It’s a bit much, but….”

Dungeons couldn't be created without intention.

It is about creating a world and laws that are nothing else. No matter how diverse the ways in which dungeons are formed are, it must be assumed that they cannot be created without the will of the dungeon owner.

'But I created this just because I wanted to draw.'

A swaying gray city comes into view.

“…….”

Soon Aria smiled her characteristically languid smile. A perfect and beautiful smile that would capture the hearts of many women if she were to appear in society right away.

“Well, that could be the case.”

“Right?”

“Then, then.”

Isn't it Aria who has already given up on fully understanding Geo?

'I thought he was unusual even when he was human, but I didn't know his true nature was like this.'

If it were a geomancer of such a high and indecipherable rank, he could have created the world with just one stroke of the brush. It is only natural for a painter to create a world called a painting.

“So what exactly is your concern?”

“I wondered if I could just leave it like this.”

"hmm…."

“I don’t want to throw away the painting.”

“Why are you throwing this away? It’s a shame.”

A dungeon is a dungeon after all, and it is a world that cannot help but draw something in.

'If we leave it like this, Earthlings will be eaten.'

Even if Geo didn't intend to do that, what could he do? When a human walks down the street and steps on a bug, do they really mean to do it? Even if Geo had created a world for fun without meaning, someone was bound to end up being dragged into the dungeon.

‘But I don’t think it’s necessary to tell you this now… .’

This picture is also ultimately a world drawn by Geo.

'It means that in such a world, there is no way that a teacher, who can be called the master and parent, would do something that is not to his liking.'

Time would naturally reveal what laws and tastes this had.

“…I think I might be able to figure out something if I just leave it alone.”

“Is that so?”

“It’s also a dungeon that was created not long ago.”

Aria scanned the gray painting up and down.

“There aren’t any children that the teacher created separately, right?”

It was referring to the monsters in the dungeon.

“A dungeon that has just been born doesn’t work very actively. It might be fine if the teacher directly encourages it, but if you leave it alone, its growth will be slow, so there’s no need to worry too much.”

“…….”

"teacher?"

“…Am I a parent?”

Geo's heart sank.

“Is this painting alive?”

“…Is it okay to look at it that way?”

Aria explained lightly.

“Not all dungeons are like this, but the closer the dungeon is to its owner, the stronger the tendencies of the creatures become as living creatures. They have their own sense of self and can grow….”

“Is the ‘Empty City’ that closely connected to me?”

“Depending on the master’s abilities, the creature’s appearance becomes clear, but from what I’ve seen, this is enough for that situation.”

“This can’t be happening.”

They became shameless parents who gave birth to a child without thinking and then didn't even know they had a child.

“I am trash.”

“I understand what you’re thinking, but calm down, it’s not like that.”

If you look at it roughly, it's a living thing, but strictly speaking, isn't it a stretch to say that a dungeon is a real living thing?

“If we compare it to Earth, it’s like artificial intelligence. If you look closely at the vast nature, you can see its detailed flow and structure, and when you look at that emotionless system from a distance, it just looks like a single living organism.”

It wasn't actually alive.

“I’m saying you don’t have to be so shocked.”

“I understand, but I still feel a little sad.”

“It’s amazing that even at that point, a corner of your heart can still ache.”

Geo was now at a level where it was ambiguous to call him a complete human. The fact that he was able to maintain this unique sensitivity was a miracle that even Aria had difficulty explaining.

"hmm…."

Aria continued speaking after examining the painting a little more.

“…It’s definitely a dungeon that was created not too long ago, so there are many immature aspects to it.”

“How did you grow Aria’s dungeon?”

“So, he’s not my child… Well, I guess I should say I raised him, but it’s more like I just created devices here and there.”

“Are you making a device?”

“I’m making a game board.”

Since Aria has observed many dungeons so far, she can explain a little bit.

“In the case of my dungeon, it just grew naturally as I stayed there. The environment was created according to my imagination, and as I studied within it, monsters appeared, and at some point, foreign substances came in, and as I looked for ways to deal with them, various traps were set up….”

They grew up together over a long period of time. To Aria, her dungeon is closer to a close friend than a child.

“I’ve even seen dungeon owners who set up their dungeons with a plan in mind.”

“If you decide to do it, what is it for?”

“He was a guy who put a lot of emphasis on how to express his hatred towards humanity in the most systematic way possible.”

Aria nodded.

“The most important thing in managing a dungeon is the owner’s sense of purpose and his vision. When the owner is clear about what he wants from the dungeon, these things will grow more naturally.”

Of course, this dungeon had many exceptions.

“I’m not sure if the teacher’s dungeon is the same as other people’s dungeons. This kind of world is basically filled with strong emotions toward something, and the dungeon’s owner naturally has a certain purpose….”

“I have no thoughts.”

“If that’s the problem, then it should be called a problem.”

In many ways, it was different from the situations in other dungeons.

“Probably, if it wasn’t for the teacher’s intention, this dungeon would be different from other dungeons. There might be no rules, there might be no monsters, and the circumstances would be different.”

“Is that a problem?”

“I don’t know if it will be a problem or not, but it is clear that it is entirely up to the teacher how he uses it. If he created the world, it had to be that way.”

There is no structure that seeks to go against the will of the Creator.

“The honey that the teacher made is like that too.”

“Oh, is this the same case?”

“Come to think of it, on Earth, when people see things like this, they call them children of the origin….”

“Honey is Geo’s child.”

“…….”

Suddenly Aria realized.

“…Then I guess the teacher is the source.”

This guy might be the source.

“Isn’t that so?”

A blank sheet of paper that can become anything.

“…….”

“If that’s the case, then I really don’t have to worry about food expenses anymore.”

“…I’m saying there’s really no tension….”

“Above all, it is a great fortune to be able to escape the shackles of taxes.”

“Is that really all you have to say?”

So I felt a little relieved.

“It really doesn’t change.”

It may be that it seems like it will stay the same forever, because it has already changed and can change so much.

Aria slowly tilted her head, feeling an ominous, rippling sense of comfort.

“So how do you plan to use this?”

“A resort?”

“Are you serious?”

“Isn’t that okay?”

“…Well, that’s what the teacher wants.”

I thought that the most intense and vivid emotions were anger and hatred.

That is why so many monsters with deep hatred towards humans were able to create this world, and because they were its masters, they created a world that suited their tastes.

'So, what if the world wasn't created from those kinds of emotions?'

However he used it, it was Geo's will.

"……."

But I just had this thought.

"If you created a world that wasn't even a game board, could you call that a human being?"

Geo answered with his characteristically blunt face.

"It can happen as you live, but Aria has such a narrow-minded way of thinking…."

"Yeah, I knew you'd say that. I'm an idiot for asking even though I knew it."

It was so consistent that it gave me goosebumps.

* * *

Geo visited the 'Empty City' for the first time.

"……."

"Indeed, this is the world you created, teacher."

"…Isn't Isser busy?"

Together with his disciple Isser, who had grown up so much in the blink of an eye.

“Is it okay for the dungeon master to leave his seat like this?”

“In fact, I am the second owner, so it doesn’t really matter whether I have it or not.”

“I see.”

Well, the landlord might not be home, of course.

Geo, the owner of the 'City of Emptiness', was visiting for the first time, and it may have been Geo's narrow-minded idea that he had to be busy just because he was the owner of the dungeon.

“…….”

But I felt a little strange.

“…This is exactly how parents feel when their children, who are of marriageable age, stay at their parents’ house…?”

“Where does a mermaid have the spirit of marriage?”

“I feel restless. I definitely want to come home more often, but I feel like I’m settling in too much, so I feel complicated.”

“When did you come to catch me because my neighbor never came to play…?”

“That is true, but.”

Still, I was a little worried.

“The dungeon is probably your home as well as your workplace, so you wouldn’t leave it empty forever, would you?”

“We also thought that it would be a bit problematic for both of us to be absent….”

Isser nodded.

“We decided to take turns coming to the house.”

“I hope you don’t feel pressured to visit your parents’ house.”

“I came because I liked it, so you don’t have to worry about that.”

Isser smiled bitterly as he said that.

“I’m a little scared that the place where my teacher is might suddenly disappear.”

“Even though the door is wide open.”

But Geo didn't talk any longer. Aren't they still students that he had raised with much affection, regardless of the annoying things?

'More than anything, the longer you stay in my house, the more peaceful Isser's heart will be and the peace of humanity will be preserved.'

In many ways, there was no reason to dislike him visiting my house so often.

“As long as it doesn’t interfere with your daily life, I don’t mind either.”

“Oh, then I’ll see you often.”

“It would be better if you brought some clams when you came.”

“Clams… How about fish?”

“That’s good too. Since I live in the forest, I’m drawn to seafood.”

Geo nodded and turned his head to look at the gray world.

"so."

“…….”

“How do you feel about it?”

Isser, who had his eyes on the empty city, slowly opened his mouth.

“…There’s nothing.”

It was an empty city, truly living up to its name.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (95)

Episode 95

There were three paintings that Geo had drawn before.

“One was ‘The Breathing Sea.’”

Isser nodded as if he understood.

“That’s the space connected to the ‘Deep Sea Country’.”

“It’s also a framed door.”

“I think it moves too actively to be called a door….”

Currently, in the 'Temple of the Deep Sea', you can find a landscape painting called 'The Breathing Sea'.

A visitor might not be able to spot the floating landscape right away, but even though it was his second time, Isser, the dungeon's master, could definitely feel its presence.

“Anyway, that was also one of the dungeons you drew, teacher.”

“Yes, isn’t it uncomfortable? The part where it’s connected is something I didn’t think about either.”

“It didn’t seem like much of a problem.”

Although moth-like visitors continued to challenge the 'Deep Sea Kingdom', they were so insignificant that they did not pose a major threat.

As outsiders, they would be too absent-minded to notice the existence of the door, so there really wasn't any problem.

“More than anything, I don’t feel any discomfort.”

“Maybe it’s because I unconsciously drew it while thinking of the neighborhood we used to live in together.”

“Are you talking about the town of Edlan? It certainly has a similar vibe.”

Even though it was 'Sergio' who painted the picture at that time, even considering that, 'The Breathing Sea' was very similar to the atmosphere of the village where 'Giovanni' lived.

It is possible that the spirit of 'Giovanni' actually resided in the body of Geo, who was painting landscapes as if possessed. Of course, it was not certain.

Since becoming a portrait, Geo's life has completely deviated from common sense, and Geo was not a person who was sincere enough to interpret it one by one.

Again, Geo had no idea.

“I wouldn’t say it’s exactly the same. I just wanted to draw, and it just so happened that there was a dimension that fit that.”

The world Giovanni lived in was destroyed, and under Aria's leadership, it became a dungeon called the 'Deep Sea Country'.

Geo just happened to draw a place that coincidentally matched the scenery of the 'Breathing Sea' among the huge dungeons that were named 'Nara'.

“Anyway, the ‘Deep Sea Country’ and the ‘Breathing Sea’ are not actually completely different spaces.”

“Thanks to that, even if it was newly created, it was not heterogeneous.”

Isser continued muttering.

“It was reassuring to have a place where I could go to the teacher at any time.”

“I’m sorry I accidentally touched the interior, but I’m glad you don’t mind it that much.”

“Interior.”

“I don’t know because it’s an English word.”

“I understood that the words on Earth are basically interpreted.”

I just thought it was a pretty humble word to use given the scale of the crime.

“Anyway, ‘The Breathing Sea’ is currently being used in that way.”

The 'Breathing Sea' where the sun god was imprisoned had its own significance simply because it allowed new families to be welcomed and seafood to be brought in. The oily fish there tasted amazing no matter how it was cooked.

“The two remaining paintings were ‘Animal Kingdom’ and ‘The Hollow City.’”

These guys were drawn quite a while ago.

“Among them, ‘Animal Kingdom’ is sometimes connected to the forest where I live, and creatures from there often come over.”

“It’s a living creature, not a monster? There are also monsters that look like completely normal beasts….”

“It wasn’t a monster, for sure. It was like the clams you find in the ‘Deep Sea Kingdom.’”

“Then it is highly likely that the dungeon was added on top of the existing world.”

“I expect that to be the case.”

And to visit such a place, I need the help of another 'Geo'. In that case, the synchronization will proceed again, and I am afraid that I will lose my mind again, so I am still refraining from visiting.

“In contrast to those two dungeons, I couldn’t help but feel concerned about this ‘City of the Void’ because it felt like a world I had created from scratch. I was troubled by the thought that it would be unworthy of a parent to leave it as is after creating it like this.”

It was completely different from the 'Breathing Sea' where I had already played and the 'Animal Kingdom' where I had not yet been. It was such a new type of child that I had no idea how to treat it.

“As you can see, it’s empty….”

“…That is true.”

Isser couldn't help but agree.

“It’s very empty.”

The dense urban forest was so stark and empty that it was mind-boggling.

'Is it a characteristic of the dungeon?'

If it were a strong being like him or his sister, it would be a little heartbreaking, but if a human were to enter, it would be something that would be difficult to endure unless one was quite strong.

‘… The dungeon greatly reflects the owner’s imagination.’

Here, Isser is forced to deal with a misunderstanding.

'I guess this also means that the teacher's state of mind is like this.'

It wasn't exactly like that.

It is true that a dungeon basically follows the owner's imagination, but the dungeon that Geo drew was closer to a 'picture' than a community of destiny. It may have been drawn while immersed in the emotions and delusions of the moment, but the imagination itself was not reflected.

But I had never heard of such a case except for Geo. The fact that I had experienced so much following my sister had actually become poisonous, so Isser had no choice but to pay close attention to Geo's condition.

“Are there no monsters here?”

“I don’t think there is any.”

“I can’t even feel the smallest creature….”

“Because this painting depicts a city, not a living thing.”

"okay."

Since the dungeon's owner is also something with an ego, it is actually difficult for a dungeon to be created without any living creatures inside. Even dungeons owned by undead are filled with monsters related to them.

‘… but it’s so empty.’

Isser looked at a world filled only with colorless colors.

The tall buildings are a straight and clear gray. Even though the entire body is made of transparent glass, the glass is also colorless because the whole world is colorless, and the sky is covered with thick fog, and only faint light barely falls.

There were buildings with boring rectangular shapes, and there were also buildings with curves typical of a busy city… but even though it was filled with such colorful shapes, I didn't feel anything.

"……."

I don't care that it's a vulnerable space for humans.

However, I couldn't help but worry about Giovanni, the master of this world.

"…Do you like this space, sir?"

"I can't help but like it, it's like my own child."

"I see. I understand."

It was something to be aware of that Geo had this mentality.

'It's a natural situation, considering that he still considers himself human and yet has that much dignity.'

Even if the gods themselves made a dungeon, it would feel more crowded than this, but Geo is not even in a state where he can be called a god. There had to be an exception.

'I don't know if it was created consciously or unconsciously, but according to what my older sister said, it's a portrait that can become anything... so even this absurd void could be created.'

I was worried.

“…….”

“Isser?”

“…It might sound a little strange if I suddenly say this, but….”

Isser hesitated for a moment and then asked.

“Are you happy now?”

Perhaps unsurprisingly, the answer came immediately.

“Of course.”

“Really?”

“Because you don’t make choices that won’t make you happy in the first place.”

"…okay."

Then, even on the day you died, that choice must have been for your own happiness.

'I already guessed it, but it's a big blow.'

Isser, who had been speechless, opened his mouth with difficulty.

“…So why did you visit this dungeon?”

“I don’t want to be a terrible parent who makes a child but then doesn’t pay attention to him or her.”

“You’re probably the only one who treats dungeons that way, sir.”

“Aria said that the dungeon is a community of owners and destiny. Then isn’t it a family?”

“So that’s what family means to you, teacher… a community of shared destiny.”

Isser asked, his lips pursed.

“Then how about creating a monster?”

“Oh, start by increasing your family size?”

“…It may have a similar meaning.”

Dungeons were originally created to kill humans.

Because it was fueled by an intense emotion of great hatred towards a single race, Geo was not ordinary, so there was no sense of hostility or murderous intent that should be present in this dungeon.

“It’s up to you how you want to maintain this dungeon, but if you really want to pay attention to something, it would be to increase the number of residents. After all, the thing that God pays the most attention to after creating a world is the residents….”

Geo tilted his head at Isser's words.

“Isn’t it a bit problematic to call myself a god?”

“Well… not a traditional god, but, um, if we use an analogy.”

It seemed like Geo was underestimating himself.

'It's really no different than before.'

But I had no intention of correcting Geo's misunderstanding.

The more he became oblivious to his own unusual aspects, the more Geo's limits would be pushed back, and ultimately, he would be able to spend more time with our mermaids.

‘The period of time in which you think of yourself as a human being will become longer…’

That didn't really matter either.

'That's not wrong.'

According to his sister, his teacher was a black sheet of paper. No one knew what it could become.

“Have you thought about how you might use this place?”

“I still need to think about it a little more….”

"yes."

“It would be nice to have more family members, for sure.”

* * *

Drawing family members was nothing special to Geo.

“But this time, the family we’re going to grill is planning to live separately from us.”

“Gulp?”

“I wish I had a child who didn’t feel lonely even when he was alone.”

The water birds that Geo had drawn before were creatures that lived in groups.

When I saw the lake full of water birds, which seemed to be breeding among themselves, I could tell that this was what group living was like, and Honey also hated being separated from her family.

“So this time, I want a friend who is very independent.”

But that doesn't mean I wanted to just draw anything.

“I also have pride as an artist….”

“Kung?”

“It may be grandiose to call myself a painter, but anyway, ‘Empty City’ is one of the works I painted.”

“Gurr.”

“I hope there will be residents who fit in there.”

But he is a resident fit for the 'Empty City'.

“…….”

Geo, who had been sitting quietly in his study chair, soon opened his mouth.

“…Invisible Man?”

Invisible company employee.

“It suits you.”

“Crunch?”

“Isn’t that right?”

To Geo, a country person, the city was that kind of thing.

The air is thick and people are swarming. They all look similar, and they swarm the subway and the streets. Their inorganic faces show no emotion.

“When I first came to Seoul, it was a little creepy.”

There was no living, breathing horror movie. It was too bleak for Geo, who had a cute sensibility despite his appearance.

Now, he could think of it as, 'Today, the cogs of society are coming home from work, exhausted,' but when he was a child, he couldn't. He even felt fear.

“But that doesn’t mean I can draw people….”

“Kung-kung?”

“What do you think of your father, son? Your father can’t create people.”

No matter what, I never wanted to be that special. Even if I could, I would never have done it, and since I couldn't do it anyway, there was no need to worry about it.

“In that sense, a transparent man.”

To be exact, a human in a suit.

“If it’s just clothes floating around….”

“Cur.”

“Yeah, that certainly can’t be called human.”

It was more like a doll.

“…….”

It was as if the people of the city I first saw looked just like that.

“…Let’s see….”

Geo placed his brush on the 'Empty City' in front of him.

“But I think it would be too lonely if there was only one person.”

“Gurrrr.”

“I wish there were a little more, but it would be too hard for me to draw alone, right?”

“Huh?”

“It would be fun if they just came up with something on their own.”

It would have been so much fun.

The scale of the project was too large to be considered a simple pleasure, but the scale of the project was not a very important issue for Geo, who was faced with new content.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (96)

Episode 96

At some point, the 'black cloak' disappeared.

“Hey, you said there was that here…! You said there was a black cloak!”

“Fuck, find the picture frame! Where is the picture frame?!”

“It’s not that visible originally…! Well, if you look for it, it’s definitely…!”

“Ewwhhhh!!!”

Hunters who visited the 'Deep Sea Country' believing only in the 'Black Cloak' who was said to help humans were killed without warning.

As the outcry over the sudden disappearance of the Black Cloak and the association that revealed his information poured in, an official statement was released.

“Nowhere in the public information did the Association mention relying on ‘Black Cloak’.”

Rather, they emphasized.

“Even if it shows an unexpected appearance, it is ultimately a monster. The association has clearly maintained its stance of caution, and has never once said that the ‘Black Cloak’ is a safe and helpful monster.”

To begin with, it was largely due to the rumors being distorted in a strange way.

“What monster in the world would help humans?”

“However, the ‘Black Cloak’ has helped humans escape dungeons on several occasions.”

“However, the ‘Black Cloak’ has classified and limited the humans he will help. This means that only monsters that are helpful to humans cannot be there.”

The association staff member spoke with a straight face, without any emotion, as if he found it completely absurd.

“It seems that many hunters have forgotten that the ‘Black Cloak’ is a monster.”

It was a sarcastic remark mocking the absurd judgment of hunters.

When the Association responded in this way, the Hunters could no longer protest. The Association had considerable authority, and their words were not wrong.

“No, but still….”

“The black cloak helps humans?”

However, there were still many people who were dissatisfied.

“Haven’t you seen the official document? There’s nothing wrong with what the association said.”

“The Association kept telling us to keep an eye on Black Cloak.”

“Aren’t those people stupid who went to an S-class dungeon because of groundless rumors?”

Soon the situation calmed down.

“If only it weren’t for that rumor….”

“What are you talking about? It’s the fault of those idiots who tried to attack without even looking at the official document.”

“Ugh….”

This was because the conclusion was that 'the hunters who tried to use the monsters as they pleased from the beginning were stupid.'

“When you get your hunter’s license, don’t you learn to be wary of monsters?”

“The monster isn’t a vending machine drink…. What on earth were you thinking when you went into a dungeon trusting a monster?”

“The hunters of the past weren’t like this, but I can definitely feel that the standards of the current generation have dropped significantly.”

“How can a hunter who doesn’t even know how scary monsters are be called a hunter?”

“These idiots are running wild, calling themselves hunters. This is the end of the world.”

If it had been based on the monster's characteristics and had been mindful of the chance help, the criticism wouldn't have been this harsh.

But didn't problems arise because the dungeon, which was rated as S-class, was mainly filled with hunters who jumped in only believing in the mercy of the 'Black Cloak'?

Even hunters who had been seriously considering the 'Deep Sea Country' since long ago showed a negative attitude.

“It doesn’t make sense to only rely on monsters when clearing a dungeon.”

“Aren’t you taking the strategy too lightly? Even though the exploration season is long.”

“They say the collector bought the ticket so there’s a lot of attention, but I guess this is a bit….”

It felt like the story was coming to an end like that.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was watching.

‘… It’s starting to get sorted out.’

It wasn't a bad flow.

'Things were going a little strangely. I guess it's fortunate that it ended here.'

Yoo Seong-un, who was watching the hunters and the ordinary citizens talking about this situation, took out a piece of candy from his chest. He was running around here and there to see how the aftermath of the 'Black Cloak' was ending, and he was running out of sugar.

"ha…."

“…….”

“So what?”

Yoo Seong-un asked as he felt a presence on the bench behind him.

“I think I have some business to attend to.”

“You look tired.”

“If you work overtime for over a week and don’t feel tired, you’re not human.”

“I agree.”

The association's staff, nodding, were dressed in black padding and pretending to be ordinary citizens.

He sat behind the bench where Yoo Seong-un was sitting and looked out at the park that was giving off the appearance of spring even in winter thanks to government measures.

“I don’t intend to take up too much of your time, Mr. Yoo Seong-un, who is busy with construction. I would like to ask you a few questions. Would you be able to answer them?”

“Um… I would appreciate it if you could finish within 15 minutes. I need to catch the train later to check the sea conditions.”

“Thank you for your cooperation.”

The questions from the association staff followed naturally.

“It seems like the collector knows about the recent ‘Black Cloak’ incident.”

“There are many things that come up here and there, but what is the basis for your statement?”

“It seems that the interesting ghost story that ‘the black cloak gives gifts to good people’ came from a collector.”

“That is true.”

Yoo Seong-un answered calmly.

“Quite a few of our employees have encountered the black cloak.”

“Then I guess we need to correct the information on the website. Can you please provide the testimony of the first witness?”

“I’ll ask you when I have time. Surely you won’t force me to take you?”

“No way. I just felt that the information about the Black Cloak needed to be corrected.”

“Anyway, our staff and Black Cloak have encountered each other a few times, so I know his rules. He really hates rude and bad people.”

Although he said this, Yoo Seong-un had no intention of revealing the exact circumstances regarding the 'Black Cloak'.

If it was revealed openly that the guy was the 'Portrait of Geo' that even the association president coveted, there was a high possibility that he would be publicly annoyed by the association that approached him for research purposes.

'I don't think Geo would want that either.'

He's not the type of guy who likes a lot of hustle and bustle, as he lives in a peaceful cabin.

“And maybe we should call it a ‘gift’. It’s said that Black Cloak gives gifts to good people, but it’s not something material, it’s more like a favor….”

“Can we say that we have a rule for showing favor to polite and kind people?”

“Yes, well. I’m sorry I didn’t report it in advance. But I don’t have the right to order my employees to report any monsters they happen to encounter.”

The staff asked him.

“Is it a monster?”

“…….”

“I have a question for gardener Yoo Seong-un.”

“…Then, I guess I have to say no.”

“I see. Do you have any plans to return to the Association Research Institute?”

“It seems like it was the president’s order, but please tell him that I have no intention of doing so.”

"All right."

The staff brought the subject back to its original state.

“Can I understand that you did not intentionally spread the rumor about the Black Cloak?”

“It was half intentional, but….”

Yoo Seong-un mixed in some facts.

“Apart from that, I had no intention of causing chaos like this.”

“Then for what purpose did you start this rumor?”

“Black Cloak hates rude and bad people, so he wanted to avoid making a fuss by doing something stupid in front of him.”

“The collector wanted to emphasize the ‘good person’ part, but the hunters were obsessed with the ‘gift’ part.”

“Even the collector didn’t know that hunters could be so stupid.”

“I understand.”

“…….”

Even so, I didn't expect that the 'Portrait of Geo' would be completely hidden from the collector.

‘… The fact that they only confirmed it like this without calling the association directly means that they already have some idea about it, but they have no intention of digging deeper.’

The president of the association was a renowned hunter who was believed to be hiding a rank higher than S-class. Since such a person saw the 'Portrait of Geo' and coveted it himself, he might have guessed in advance that this 'Black Cloak' would have a big connection to it.

'There was also a big commonality in that they were portraits from the beginning.'

It was already a known fact that the Black Cloak was seen in the form of a portrait. At this point, I knew it all, but I couldn't help but think that he was asking for the sake of formality.

So the purpose of this blind conversation was only two things.

'With this rumor and the chaos, I wonder if the collector intends to exploit the Black Cloak. If not, if he intends to hand over Geo's portrait to the Association for study… .'

Well, they both denied it.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth.

“Do you have any more questions?”

“Have you figured out the identity of the black cloak, Gardener Yoo Seong-un?”

"…no."

It would have been nice if that had been the case.

“I don’t know.”

"…okay."

“So, I ask that the association also pay special attention.”

“Are you saying that there is a need to raise the response level?”

“That might be better.”

It is an existence whose origins even the meteor cloud cannot grasp. Even if the black cloak has no ill intentions, there is a high probability that it will cause disaster to humans in some way, so from the perspective of weak humans, it would be advantageous for their survival to be on high alert.

“If we find out anything from this side, we will pass on the report.”

“…Please take good care of me.”

The employee moved away naturally as if he had never spoken to him before.

“…….”

Feeling the distant presence, Yoo Seong-un closed his eyes.

'It's been a while since I've received attention from the association like this.'

Still, the response wasn't awkward, as the park didn't look much different than before. There was no one who pretended not to notice and focused on this side.

'I guess I didn't act awkwardly.'

As I quietly closed my eyes, I heard the people gathered in the park chatting in the mild air.

“So what was the black cloak after all…?”

They too were confused.

“From the beginning, it was a monster that didn’t fit in with the ‘Deep Sea Country’.”

“I heard that sometimes monsters from other dungeons come over. Was that one of those cases?”

“There might be a separate dungeon for the Black Cloak.”

“But they’re humanoid monsters. Are there cases where boss monsters can cross over to the dungeon?”

“I heard that you can sometimes see them outside the dungeon….”

“That’s ridiculous. Then it’s a monster that roams around freely without any designated area.”

“That was bad. It definitely sounds like a rumor.”

Yoo Seong-un soon opened his eyes to the voices that sounded like the flapping of a tiny bird's wings.

It's all about the story of the black cloak.

“…I guess it turns out like this.”

It was a planned chaos.

'Still, to this extent, it's a good prevention.'

Geo was a being who could go anywhere. He could be anything because he was a painting, and he could create anything because he was a painter.

There was no way to stop such 'portraits of Geo', so what the collector ultimately chose to do for the sake of national stability was to control information.

'If this is how people can slowly get used to the existence of the Black Cloak…'

It would certainly be less confusing than having a 'portrait of Geo' on the front.

The ghost stories that the collector spread, and the fact that Geo was given a hunter's ID as a human, were all in that context. It was an attempt to classify and control the 'story' of the origin.

"……."

Despite this, Geo's identity was still a mystery.

'What kind of being is it that is capable of such things?'

Even God could not continue to commit such bold acts.

"Not a god, not a human, and most certainly not a monster…."

And yet, a being that can be all of those things.

"How should I define this?"

It's so contradictory.

Even Yoo Seong-un, who had set foot in the garden since he was very young, could not properly explain its existence. It was because its specifications were completely different from the original existences he had seen and studied until now.

"……."

Yoo Seong-un sighed and got up from his seat.

"I have to work."

It feels like losing your sight and feeling your way with your hands.

Despite having seen and heard so much, a strange creepiness quietly crept up the back of my neck toward an existence that still remained unknown.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (97)

Episode 97

It was late in the morning.

“…….”

I tried on all the clothes I could find, but there was no way a poor fourth-class citizen could afford to wear even one decent set of clothes.

The eighteen-year-old woman, who had just become an adult, stroked a scarf that seemed to be made of animal fur.

"ha…."

Pure white breath spread out.

“…But it’s not too cold.”

Christmas is coming soon. There hasn't been much snow lately.

Is it because spring is gradually approaching? Thanks to the temperature rising day by day, the number of poor people dying from the cold has also decreased.

The woman also almost died like that, but was able to survive the winter thanks to a scarf given to her by someone.

'Spring will come soon.'

It's still very cold though.

‘Still, if you wait just a little longer…’

From the perspective of a 4th class citizen, the situation where the woman was staying was not too bad. After all, it was a city, so it was safe from the threat of monsters, and especially, the people in this neighborhood were kind, so she could sometimes receive help.

'Now that spring has come, we won't have to worry about freezing to death, and we'll be able to survive somehow because food, whether it's weeds or something else, will grow. If we're lucky, we might even get a meal subsidized by the city... .'

Gulp.

I was hungry.

“…….”

Should I eat snow?

Winter was really harsh for the poor. Unlike other seasons when they could even find roots, there was nothing to eat, and it was even cold.

The only consolation was that since it was snowing, we could at least get some drinking water.

‘It would be difficult to eat if your body was very cold…’

This winter, I was lucky enough to be able to keep warm in one way or another.

“Is it because of the scarf?”

Since receiving a scarf from a stranger, I've had some minor luck.

The woman raked up clean snow that no one had stepped on and put it in her mouth. It was snow on the ground, so she occasionally chewed on dirt, but it was still good. Fortunately, the woman was quite resistant to the cold.

“…….”

As we walked further into the alley to find a place where the wind was not blowing, we saw other poor people.

“Did you hear that?”

“What are you listening to? I’m freezing to death….”

“No, I mean the black cloak.”

Black cloak?

‘… Now that I think about it, even the city people are talking about that.’

It was common for the poor to hide in alleys to avoid the contemptuous gaze of city dwellers, but women often hid outside the alleys because they liked the clean and tidy atmosphere.

The story of the poor I just heard was a name that people who were walking in the park also brought up.

'I think you said that the black cloak was also a monster.'

It was an unfamiliar name to the poor, who were bound to lack information, but it was also interesting because they had heard it once or twice. The woman carefully sat down in the alley and eavesdropped on the poor people’s conversation.

“Why the black cloak all of a sudden? You said it was a monster.”

“But from what I’ve heard… it kind of grants wishes and stuff.”

“That’s nonsense. Where are the monsters that are beneficial to humans?”

“But there are also harmless monsters that live in places like parks… and there could be beneficial monsters too, right?”

“So why did you bring that up?”

“I thought I’d look for a black cloak.”

The other poor people laughed.

“Arthur, you’re going to get eaten in one bite by a monster.”

“They said it was a type of monster that didn’t eat people….”

“Then I’ll just tear you to pieces. How can a monster leave a person alone?”

“Is that so…?”

“There’s already been a lot of noise about that these days.”

The poor man continued speaking, not even noticing that the woman was listening.

“You’re saying that many hunters died because they believed that it was the black cloak or the red cloak?”

“Huh? Something like that happened?”

“I heard that’s right. There was an S-class dungeon that opened, and I heard that a guy called Black Cloak often appeared there. He would even save people in danger….”

“Then wouldn’t it be a monster that is beneficial to humans?”

“It suddenly disappeared. And then, somewhere, a guy who said he saw the black cloak in another alley showed up.”

“A monster that was in a dungeon suddenly appeared in an alley…? Does that make sense?”

“That’s ridiculous.”

The poor man clicked his tongue.

“It’s probably just a rumor made up by a city slicker or a fourth-class maggot like us. If not, it’s a dangerous monster that can pop up anywhere.”

Monsters basically had a set range of actions. The poor people didn't know much because they didn't receive any special education, but they at least knew that monsters had set rules.

But Black Cloak is a monster that doesn't even follow those rules.

“It’s possible that he saved the hunters a few times. But when he suddenly disappeared, doesn’t that make you think? After all, he’s just an evil monster who doesn’t care about human life. Or was it a scheme to trap the hunters?”

“But you said you would grant my wish….”

“Don’t be ridiculous. Even God only chooses those who are helpful to Him and shows mercy. A traditional God might be able to show favor without any price… but this is a monster.”

The poor shrank down, telling themselves not to have hopes that were impossible. The cold wind whipped through the alley, causing the poor to shiver and huddle together with people they knew.

“Ugh, it’s cold. Stop making weird noises and just come closer.”

“Ah… I was going to ask Black Cloak for a set of clothes when I met him.”

“You keep talking nonsense until the end.”

In this kind of winter, it was a common sight to see poor people huddled together like penguins. The larger the group, the more powerful the group was considered to be, but women didn't even have friends like that left.

It was because my only poor friend died while I was spending the winter.

“…….”

If that guy were alive, it would be warmer than it is now.

"eww…."

The woman curled up into a ball, holding her scarf a little tighter against the chilly winter wind.

When spring came, it seemed like it would be nice to make new friends. It was hard to be active in the winter, but as time went by, I would make new friends.

‘… Black cloak.’

That's what kind of guy he was.

'I was wondering what people were gossiping about these days.'

I heard a story about a humanoid monster that appeared after almost a few years. I also vaguely thought I heard a ridiculous story about a black cloak giving gifts to those who did good deeds.

'I don't believe it, though.'

The poor man's words were right. There are no monsters that are beneficial to humans. The woman who ran away to Seoul after losing her village, family, and friends to monsters knew this very well.

Monsters were an object of fear for many.

“…….”

The skinny woman quietly slipped out of the alley and walked into another alley closer to the brightly lit city.

There was no other reason. If I was lucky, I might find some leftover food from the city people.

Just sitting still wouldn't solve this terrible hunger. Even though my body would become more tired the more I moved, if I didn't do anything, I would most likely starve to death.

The woman who was wandering around like that came across a poor man.

“…….”

"…uh…."

He was much smaller than her, so he looked at least 18 years younger.

'Are you a child born here?'

If she was this young, she would have been born to a common slum family, but there was no sign of a guardian. No matter how unkind the slums were, it was rare for a young slum dweller to be left alone.

‘But it’s a bit much to pretend to know… .’

After being demoted to a fourth-class citizen, the woman who had been living an individualistic life had no desire to pretend to know the child.

The woman knew that pretending to know her child during such a difficult time would only result in more mouths to feed.

The people of the city may be dirty and mean, but what makes up the woman now is what she scraped together to survive. If she gave it away so easily, she wouldn't be able to last even a single season.

“…….”

but.

"…hmm…."

At least this scarf wasn't something a woman had cobbled together.

“Hey, do you want to use this?”

“……?”

“Use this. This….”

It was a stroke of luck.

“You write.”

It had been a long time since I had spoken to anyone, so I couldn't speak properly, but the meaning itself was clearly conveyed. The young poor man glared at me warily, but he must have been cold, so he took his scarf away.

Her neck was a little sore, but it was okay. She was quite good at enduring the cold, and she wouldn't have died without a scarf. She didn't regret it, since it was a fleeting stroke of luck that wasn't part of her original makeup.

"huh."

“…….”

Not understanding the situation, the young poor man held his scarf tightly without answering, and the woman who saw this blushed with inexplicable embarrassment and hurriedly left the place.

When I tried to talk to someone for the first time in a long time, I couldn't get the words out. After a long time, the woman who had been far away thought with a proud heart.

'Well done, anyway.'

Her parents taught her to share when she had extra money. Now, they are gone, but she felt pretty good about doing a good deed after a long time, following her parents' advice.

‘When I meet Mom and Dad later…’

Can I be praised?

It was when I raised the corners of my lips with that thought.

“…….”

“…….”

A black frame came into the woman's eyes.

The frame, which looked as if it were carved from a tree made of gold, was neatly and luxuriously carved.

Inside, the recording was drawn in calm colors, but when I thought about where on earth I felt it was 'black', I saw its true nature.

“…….”

A portrait of a man in a pitch-black suit, his face invisible, painted in soft, dark ink like ink.

Black portrait.

"…uh?"

I instinctively knew it was a 'black cloak'.

“Uh, uh uh… uh….”

“…….”

“Mom, monster….”

I was out of breath.

'It's a monster.'

The monster that had taken everything from her was right in front of her.

My breathing was suffocating as if I had been hit in the head. My heart was pounding loudly as if it was struggling right before it died, and the blood flowing along with it made my whole body tremble.

There are so many moving organs, so why doesn't the brain work? As I hesitated involuntarily in front of the gloomy and heavy disaster, the bright red lips in the frame opened.

“…….”

“I'm sorry for surprising you.”

What should I call this?

It was an extremely polite voice, something I, a poor and coward, had never heard before.

“I apologize.”

“…….”

I got goosebumps from that kind voice.

There was no emotion in the voice of the black cloak.

It was as quiet as a funeral, so quiet that it couldn't even be called a 'voice', but it was as clear and crisp as a machine's voice.

On the subject of making such a sound, on the subject of speaking without any emotion, this bizarrely beautiful cloak was mimicking charity in the shadow of the hood.

‘… Uh, what should I do?’

My feet were frozen and I couldn't move them.

'scared….'

The woman was a natural coward, and had been afraid of monsters since the village was destroyed, and even more so after that. It was natural for her to tremble all over when she encountered a humanoid monster she had only heard of.

I didn't want to die, so I hid alone in the chaos. That's how I came to the city alive. I lived like a beggar in this big city, struggling to survive.

“Ah, ahh….”

“…….”

“…Oh, don’t come, don’t come… don’t come….”

“…….”

“Ugh, turn it off….”

It was so sad.

“I, I did something good today….”

Even if you have bad luck, it's not that bad.

I had a fleeting thought about the various good things people had said about the black cloak, but it was really just a fleeting moment. Still, for a woman who knew what kind of monsters were, the situation of encountering the black cloak was truly terrifying.

'How am I going to die?'

Would I be swallowed up in a huge maw like my parents were that day? Or would I be impaled on countless teeth and killed? Or would I be trampled to death, or, or, or… .

As I continued to cry sadly, the black cloak asked.

“Did you do something good?”

“Ugh, huuuu….”

“I think you must have been very surprised by the scary situation.”

“…Cool….”

“I promise I won’t hurt you.”

It was a voice with a strange resonance, yet full of mercy, she thought as she cried.

No, actually, at some point the crying had stopped. The woman herself didn't realize it.

“…….”

"ruler."

The black cloak reached out and handed something.

If she were a normal woman, she would never have accepted something given to her by a monster.

I would have been too shocked to say a word or would have been too busy crying, but as if possessed by something, my heartbeat slowed down and I began to listen to a steady voice.

Without realizing it, she reached out and received something.

“…….”

“It’s a cookie.”

Rustle.

A delicious smell emanated from inside the thin envelope made of Korean paper.

“I apologize again for surprising you.”

“…….”

“I affirm you for your good deeds.”

The man in black cloak bowed with his hands on his chest and his hands behind his back, like a gentleman from a fairy tale or a nobleman from a faded movie.

A short, slow greeting was followed by the soft voice of the man in the black cloak.

"thank you."

What?

“…….”

When I looked up, the picture frame was nowhere to be seen.

Only freshly baked cookies remained.

"…uh…?"

It was the day when the name 'Black Cloak' spread among the poor.

* * *

The portrait, which had not yet made a new friend, cried bitterly.

“I still couldn’t find anyone to be my pen pal….”

“Oh, then, can I catch one for you?”

“How dare you try to take away this teacher’s joy?”

“…….”

… If that’s what the teacher says, then it must be like that.

Isser nodded seriously with a benevolent smile on his face.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (98)

Episode 98

Geo continues to check the situation on Earth through the picture frame and looks for a human who will become his 'new friend'.

Finally, Isser asked.

“Why do you often talk to people you meet and give them gifts instead of just passing them by?”

Geo answered in a gentle yet confident voice.

“If they hadn’t seen me, they might not have known, but they saw me too. If you make eye contact, it’s a battle. You can’t defeat someone without talking to them.”

“If we make eye contact, we have to fight. Earthlings are more aggressive than I thought. Are there any specific rules?”

“The longer we spend facing each other, the more it is perceived as a flirtation or a duel.”

“It’s truly amazing. When I was disguised as a child of Earth before, I was in such a hurry that I couldn’t study properly. But I didn’t know there was such a culture.”

“That’s probably why this teacher can’t just let go of someone he meets eyes with.”

It's not that I didn't think that people who met like that would be surprised, but wouldn't there be a fantasy partner for someone like Geo? And that's something you wouldn't know unless you talked to him.

When on earth would you find someone who wouldn't be afraid of the name 'Black Cloak' and would greet you with a lively greeting? But the young man from the mountains of Gangwon-do, who had never been in a relationship because he had been pursuing his own interests until that age, had a strange romanticism.

“If you waste time like this, you will eventually find a new relationship.”

“Oh, yes.”

“And if you talk to her like that, won’t she want to give you a gift?”

"aha…."

“It’s not like I don’t have anything, it’s not like I don’t have time, and it’s not like my parents complain if I give them some gifts.”

Since the three beats were exactly right, there was really no reason not to give it to him. No one could stop Geo from going crazy and wanting to share joy, love, peace, affection, and happiness.

“Isn’t that the most wonderful thing?”

“Do you give gifts to everyone who is kind?”

“This is the teacher’s heart.”

“The child just now wasn’t your disciple… I see. I understand.”

“Don’t suddenly jump to conclusions like you’re going to kill someone. It’s disgusting to be hasty at that age.”

“Yes, sir.”

“Do I have to give a gift to someone who is my disciple?”

Those who did cute things always needed a sweet reward. It was a typical Sergio idea, who, even as a high school teacher, always carried snacks in his pocket to give to his students.

“Besides, what I have in abundance right now is time.”

Geo wasn't impatient.

“There’s Honey, there’s Dana, there’s Father, and there’s Isser and Aria too.”

“…….”

“I have a suspicious look on my face pretending to be very satisfied, but do you really not like the idea of me looking for a human to be my friend?”

“Yes, I don’t.”

“I see. But even if you are a wonderful disciple, Isser, you can’t stop me from making a pen pal.”

He was too busy exchanging letters with Yoo Seong-un, who was suffocating from the overwork of modern people. Geo needed a new friend.

“No matter how much I live inside a frame, I feel like I have no communication with the world.”

In Geo's opinion, his current position was that of a grandfather living alone in a remote rural area.

In just 31 years, they have come to be treated as ancestors, but they are in a corner of the house where they cannot communicate with young people even if they try to learn about the world these days.

“So I have no choice but to take the initiative and make friends myself.”

“Can’t we just tell these shallow people who don’t even know the subject to come crawling?”

“Stop trying to keep the teacher locked in this small hut, Isser.”

“It’s not particularly narrow.”

“The country is infinitely small to contain existence.”

“…….”

Isser nodded, still smiling affectionately.

“So how long do you plan on enjoying this kind of friend-finding adventure?”

“I think I’ll do it whenever I’m bored.”

“…After you got that ‘friend’…?”

“We’ll keep going. Who would put a friend on their nose?”

“Oh, are you planning on putting it on your nose?”

“It meant that that alone was woefully inadequate.”

The more friends you have, the better.

“How boring would it be if I didn’t spend all this time with my friends?”

“We, your faithful disciples, will be with you.”

“Isser needs to learn to be independent. How long are you going to protect this incompetent teacher?”

After being cooped up at home for thousands of years, the kid has become so strange. I thought that if only I could make some friends and go to a karaoke bar, I could ask for nothing more.

'Isser is a timid child, so I don't think he would enjoy such an active hobby.'

Geo nodded.

“Still, I will continue to look for my friend.”

“If I may speak from an objective point of view, not my own, if you continue to show up like this, the recognition of the ‘Black Cloak’ on Earth will increase considerably.”

“Iser is right. The world knows that the ‘Black Cloak’ is a monster, so there may be some confusion. I am aware that I am doing something regrettable.”

“…I don’t care if humans are confused, but I’m afraid that you will receive negative attention. They are selfish and capricious by nature. You can’t trust them.”

“There may be such a person. There are only so many humans on Earth. Of course, such a person could exist. But I already have so many good friends that I can’t imagine such an unfortunate future. I believe you will protect me.”

Above all, Geo wanted to create an image that would make 'Black Cloak' not something to be taken lightly.

'That's why I keep wandering around and showing myself openly, and why I don't bother explaining myself even when people misunderstand me as a scary person.'

Although minor incidents related to Geo may occur occasionally… .

“I am not a deep thinker.”

Anyway, as long as it's fun, that's fine.

* * *

Hunter Association conference room.

“I will conclude this discussion here.”

“Yes, Mr. Chairman.”

“And next is….”

The association president continued speaking with a neat smile.

“This is a matter regarding the ‘Black Cloak’.”

The president's lips opened gently.

“This is the first time it has been brought up as an official agenda item, so I’m looking forward to what kind of stories will come out of it.”

“…….”

“The reason this agenda item was brought up is to ensure the stability of the city, so I think we need to hear the overall atmosphere of the city related to the topic. Team Leader Seo.”

“Yes, Mr. Chairman.”

The head of the information processing team, who collects and organizes information about the city, opened his mouth.

“According to what we have currently identified, multiple citizens have witnessed the Black Cloak. Up until now, we have secured eyewitness accounts from 26 people, including 9 first-class citizens, 11 second-class citizens, 2 third-class citizens, and 4 fourth-class citizens.”

The fifth-class citizens who were not considered human were excluded. Even if they had come into contact with the Black Cloak, the Association had no means of confirming it. They were all criminals living in hiding somewhere.

“The common testimony is that they show favor when treated with courtesy by the Black Cloak, or when doing good deeds even if they are not related to him.”

“When you say favor, are these the snacks that were reported before?”

“What has been confirmed so far are baked goods such as cookies, candy, and snacks such as chocolate. Although they appear to be homemade, the ingredients themselves are almost identical to Earth food….”

“They said that although they taste the same as regular snacks, their effects are different.”

“Yes, that’s right. Depending on the recipient, it had a medicinal effect, such as a nutritional supplement, anemia treatment, or pain reliever.”

“What are the side effects?”

“We confirmed that the effect was reduced by half or less when consumed by someone other than the recipient. No other side effects were detected.”

In response to the information processing team leader's remarks, another employee was asked to speak and ask questions.

“Where have you mostly seen it?”

“The only place where they have been seen is in a slum in the border area, and even then, they have never been found in the exact same place.”

“It sounds like there are no restrictions on space travel. The standards themselves seem to be different from the existence of a normal source. So, has it ever been discovered overseas?”

“Since the opening of the ‘Deep Sea Country’, the first sighting site of the ‘Black Cloak’, we have been requesting cooperation from associations of each country and receiving information about it, but there have been no reports as of yet.”

“Is it possible that the overseas association did not share the information?”

“According to what the Korean branch of the association has reported, the Black Cloak has not been seen overseas. However, considering the characteristics of the ‘Black Cloak,’ it is possible that it has been seen overseas but simply has not been seen.”

Another employee asked him.

“The most important thing is whether it poses a threat to the safety of the citizens. You said you obtained testimony from 26 witnesses. Was there a case where one of them was attacked by the ‘Black Cloak’?”

“I was among the witnesses testifying, not the witness himself.”

The information processing team leader displayed the information he had organized in front of each team leader's monitor.

“All 25 citizens ended their contact with ‘Black Cloak’ by receiving gifts from him and parting ways, but as you can see, the situation was significantly different for the third-class citizen who encountered ‘Black Cloak’ in the ‘Jewel Vein’.”

Although the dungeon called 'Jewel Vein' was not very famous in the world, it was popular among black hunters who wanted to sell monsters through illegal routes.

This was because it was the habitat of the 'Anticat', which was popular for its beautiful and cute appearance, and 'Black Cloak' was spotted in that 'Jewel Vein'.

“The witness who cooperated with the association’s Q&A was identified as Hunter Lee Seon-hu, his rank was F-rank, and his team position was porter. He was not the person who was attacked by the ‘Black Cloak’.”

“Then what happens to the personal information of the person attacked by the ‘Black Cloak’?”

“The victim who was attacked by the ‘Black Cloak’ was Hunter Park Eun-gyeom, his rank was B, and his team position was Leader. The witness said that the victim, Hunter Park Eun-gyeom, tried to leave him in the dungeon.”

“These kinds of incidents keep coming up and I can’t stop thinking about them….”

Clearing a dungeon consumes a considerable amount of resources in itself. Porters, in particular, are not helpful in battle, and are easily abandoned when they are unable to even carry a load.

It doesn't help, but there are more mouths to feed.

“This kind of thing rarely happened in the past.”

“I guess a lot of things are different now than when we were there.”

“Because you don’t see your colleagues as colleagues….”

The information processing team leader continued speaking as he looked at the elders who looked a little tired.

“…The ‘Jewel Vein’ is a dungeon that other hunters don’t visit often, so the witness, who judged that he would starve to death if left alone, clung to Hunter Park. In the process of getting the witness away, Hunter Park Eun-gyeom used violence.”

and.

“It is believed that the scene was witnessed by ‘Black Cloak’.”

The witness was almost worshipping the black cloak.

“The ‘black cloak’ in the testimony is said to have existed in the form of a picture frame. Due to the nature of the dungeon ‘Jewel Vein’, the field of vision is not very good, so neither of them noticed the picture frame at first, but when the missing hunter Park Eun-gyeom committed violence, they intervened and exerted their influence.”

"wait for a sec."

The elder, who was almost old, asked.

“Missing person? You’re saying that he wasn’t injured or found dead, or that he just wasn’t found at all?”

“Yes, the witness testified that Hunter Park Eun-gyeom was dragged into the frame.”

“I’ve never heard of someone being able to enter a frame… How were they dragged in? Did ‘Black Cloak’ grab them by the collar and drag them in?”

“It is said that the appearance of the ‘Black Cloak’ was never directly observed. It was only in a frame….”

The information processing team leader unconsciously frowned faintly. It was because he had to report vague information that did not fit his position.

“There is testimony that several transparent hands crawled out and kidnapped the missing person.”

“…many transparent hands?”

It was a voice filled with doubt.

“How did you know that there were multiple people if they were transparent, and how did you know that they were hands? If they were in the F-class porter position, it would have been difficult to identify such a figure.”

“The witness only explained what he felt, and it seemed that he himself had difficulty expressing it logically. However, he said that he definitely saw that the person was wearing a suit.”

“A suit… He’s wearing clothes, but his hands are transparent. Are you trying to say that you’ve seen a transparent person?”

The president of the association then opened his mouth.

“It’s not impossible. It’s only been 32 years since the Hunter era began, so we shouldn’t be proud that we know everything. We recognize the possibility and define it as a monster.”

“Yes, Mr. Chairman.”

“Yes, Mr. Chairman.”

As the words of immediate acceptance came out, the association president looked at the information processing team leader again.

“During that process, wasn’t the ‘Black Cloak’ witnessed?”

“Yes, but based on the characteristics of the frame and the strong testimony of the witness, I concluded that this incident was related to the ‘Black Cloak’.”

“Is there anything else you would like to report?”

“All reports on the phenomenon of the ‘Black Cloak’ have been completed. No exceptional circumstances other than the Park Eun-gyeom Hunter incident have been identified. Please check the report for more details.”

“I see, thank you for your hard work.”

The association president nodded.

“You can freely express your opinions without any restrictions.”

One of the staff members gathered in the conference room was given the floor to speak.

“So I think it would be good to talk about what we define as a ‘black cloak.’”

“It does show non-standard behavior in many areas.”

The elder accepted the opinion and continued speaking.

“I would like to hear the thoughts of Kang Woo-ri, a gardener and research team leader at the Seoul Branch 1, on this matter.”

“…Before attending this meeting, I had done a lot of research and study to come to a conclusion, but unfortunately, I have not yet come to a definition.”

“…I guess that means he’s not an easy being….”

“Yes, it is a contradictory being that cannot make judgments.”

The research team leader displayed information on a monitor in front of each attendee.

“Here is a table of common gods, monsters, and children of the Origin. As you can see, ‘Black Cloak’ can belong to any of these areas, or conversely, it may not belong to any of them.”

There are too many impurities other than divinity to be called a god. There is no hatred towards humans to be called a monster, and there is too much interest in humans to be called a child of the origin.

And yet, it had all those characteristics in one body.

“If there’s one thing we can be sure of, it’s that the ‘Black Cloak’ is a being that belongs to the source. It also has its own rules.”

“If it’s your own rule… is that it?”

“Yes, it means affirming what is good and denying what is evil.”

“I guess you decide the standard of good and evil yourself.”

“It certainly seems that way, but nothing is certain yet. However, based on the circumstances so far, it seems that the standard is not that different from that of us humans.”

However, that brutality could be evaluated as being befitting of the original being. After witnessing the scene of violence, the perpetrator was kidnapped somewhere.

This proves that even if the 'Black Cloak' is friendly to humans, he is ultimately not interested in the rules created by humans. It was a high-risk course of action as the current status of the missing person is unknown.

“What is noteworthy here is that the actions of these ‘black cloaks’ do not seem to symbolize punishment.”

“If rewarding the good and denying the wicked is not punishment, what is it?”

“It seemed more like a matter of personal taste. It’s not like other humanoid monsters are authoritarian or have a sense of superiority, but rather a guy who was just born that way.”

The president of the association added his remarks.

“It is definitely a trait close to that of a child of the origin.”

“Yes, that’s right.”

If the 'Black Cloak' had the meaning of 'punishment' and dealt with the villain, it would have shown that appearance. However, in the Park Eun-gyeom Hunter case, the 'Black Cloak' was in a framed state and did not reveal its appearance until the end.

It's as if you've just removed something you don't like looking at from your sight.

“There has been no clear intention revealed in the actions of the ‘Black Cloak’ so far. However, judging from the direction of the actions, it can be assumed that there is a rule that affirms good and denies evil.”

Actually, it was a little different from the real situation.

Geo didn't even know that a frame like 'Empty City' was running wild, or that someone was being dragged into his frame.

However, it was closer to the 'Empty City', which had its own self-consciousness, getting rid of 'something' that my parents would hate.

It was the same reason that Honey, who had first appeared in modern society a while ago, swallowed up the evil man she had seen at Gyeongbokgung Palace. Geo's children only wanted to see good things about their parents and always wanted them to be happy.

“…….”

“…….”

Of course, for those who didn't know about the situation, everything felt like it was 'Black Cloak's' intention.

Some of the association's staff felt a sense of chill and wariness at the fact that 'Black Cloak' had no ill intentions despite causing a person to disappear.

“…there are no restrictions on movement.”

Judging from the fact that it was even seen in the dungeon, the 'Black Cloak' could literally go anywhere.

“I am very interested in human life.”

“…….”

“Blessings to the good, despair to the wicked.”

The smiling employee continued speaking in a light tone.

“It’s just like an Easter egg in a game.”

If we compare life, dungeon raiding, and things like that to games.

An Easter egg is a piece of content hidden in various media as a joke by the creators.

Since the 'creator' 'hides' it as a 'joke', it may or may not be related to the content of the game. If you find it, you're lucky, and if you don't, it doesn't affect the game's progress.

“Isn’t this a rare and fun event that only happens once in a while?”

“It would be difficult to call this a ‘fun event’ given the obvious missing person.”

“It looks like he’s some kind of trash… If everyone just lived well, there wouldn’t be a problem.”

“It is the job of the Association and the government to create good people and punish evil people, so we should not rely on an unidentified source.”

“Yes, I will refrain from doing so. I admit that my remarks were reckless.”

“And at this point, the question that arises again is….”

One of the elders continued speaking.

“What happened to the hunter who was dragged into the frame?”

Accordingly, it would be possible to understand the dangers of the 'Black Cloak'.

The painter who draws dungeons

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (99)

Episode 99

It was a world where even human life was treated as a resource. Even if the evil seed that was muddying the waters of society was taken away by something that was neither a monster nor anything else, no one was truly concerned about the missing person.

I'm just curious.

“Could he be dead by now?”

“What time did the information processing team confirm the disappearance?”

“It was around 4pm on the 22nd.”

“Today is the 24th. About two days have passed… I think it could be considered death.”

“Then how they killed him would also be a topic of interest.”

“They might not have killed it, but just used it as a toy.”

“It’s considered to have considerable intelligence, so it could be possible.”

Because the exact identity of the 'Black Cloak' was unknown, the association's staff had no choice but to compare him to a humanoid monster and make assumptions about him.

And when you think about how humanoid monsters treat humans who break their rules, it's natural to make wild guesses.

“If they had just killed him cleanly, I think we could reconsider the meaning of ‘punishment.’ Doesn’t that mean there’s no supervisor?”

“It may have been intended as ‘organization’ rather than ‘punishment.’ It’s only natural to want to get rid of people who break my rules, so I can’t say there’s no supervision.”

“We need to know the results for sure so we can adjust the response level of ‘Black Cloak’… There was also advice from the former research team leader, Hunter Yoo Seong-un.”

The black cloak wasn't that important when you met a polite and kind person and did them a favor. For an association that had to consider all sorts of dangerous variables, what mattered was how this monster or whatever could harm humans.

“Is there any way to locate the missing person?”

“According to eyewitness testimony, he did not possess a separate location tracking device.”

“Even if such an item existed, I don’t know if it would have worked.”

“However, simply processing the missing person and closing the case is not enough.”

“Is there no way to summon the ‘Black Cloak’ separately?”

“I haven’t been able to find any information on that part yet.”

Amid the organized commotion, the association president opened his mouth.

“Let’s try asking for cooperation from the three major guilds.”

“…Are you talking about all three major guilds?”

“Yes, please contact the leader of each guild.”

"All right."

Only the executives gathered here knew that the other name for the 'Black Cloak' was 'Geo's Portrait'. The person who bought it at the auction was none other than the collector Bisabal. He was the head of the collectors' guild.

So, asking for cooperation from the three major guilds here was no different from asking Black Cloak directly about the results of the disappearance of Hunter Park Eun-gyeom.

A direct and explicit request might make the Bisabal or ‘Portrait of Geo’ uncomfortable… .

“As long as the collector shows no intention of touching the artwork, they will be more than happy to help. I don’t know how the ‘Black Cloak’ will react, but the curators of the collection will directly manage and monitor the situation, so if things get really dangerous, they will voluntarily restrain themselves.”

Above all, judging from the direction in which the collection was moving, the curator currently in charge of 'Portrait of Geo' was most likely gardener Yoo Seong-un.

Since he was a very serious person when it came to dealing with the existence of the source, there was no harm in trying either way.

“We will conclude this agenda here.”

“Yes, Mr. Chairman.”

“Then the next agenda is….”

The association was always busy.

So, getting help from friends was often necessary.

* * *

Meanwhile, the peaceful cabin in the portrait.

“Today’s content is.”

Geo declared.

“It was decided to be Gambas.”

“Gurrrr.”

Honey howled with joy.

“Gulp, gurgling, gurgling.”

“Calm down, son, Gambas don’t fly like you when you rush them.”

Although the name of 'Black Cloak' was widely known in the world, especially in Korea, the details were not known to Geo.

The owner of the ultimate positive mindset, who accepted the life of a portrait artist because he didn't want to pay rent, was just thinking about eating peacefully today.

“I did say gambas, but… hmm.”

For Sergio, a great gourmet and big eater, the biggest content in his life was deciding what to eat.

Living in a dream cabin with ample time, energy, and capital, Geo devoted himself to preparing meals.

“Gambas al Ajillo is actually the official name.”

“Kur?”

“Gambas is shrimp, ajillo is garlic.”

“Gurr…?”

“Yes, the direct translation is stir-fried shrimp and garlic.”

In fact, he said, 'I'm going to make gambas,' but what Geo made today was completely different from the original.

“In the first place, I wasn’t planning on adding shrimp.”

The only thing they had in common was that they would use olive oil with a sour aroma and garlic. But since the method of making them would be quite similar, Geo decided not to change his words.

“Honey, you know that club or trumpet I saw last time? If you go to the warehouse, there’s a club or trumpet that Daddy has been taking care of.”

“Crunch.”

“Come down with Dana and take as much as you want to eat, including what Dad and Grandpa have. If there’s anything you want in the pantry, take it out together.”

“Gurrrr.”

Honey nodded vigorously and flew down to land on Dana's head.

A spring breeze blew gently, and Dana, who was lying on the slightly warm floor like a cat that had spilled, started waving her two front paws.

“Cur.”

“…Mwaaaang….”

Zuuuuk—.

Dana got up from her seat, stretched her legs in an arched posture, and walked briskly.

Geo nodded as the two children disappeared, carrying in their mouths a small basket that had been made to fit Dana's body.

“You two are on good terms.”

“Huh?”

The Sun God asked if he could go into the freezing ice warehouse, but Geo shook his head.

“Dana is not the family I drew, so she might be affected by this forest, but she is so cold and strictly speaking not a normal creature, so she had no problem going to the icehouse. I don’t think she’ll get sick from the cold, unlike other dangerous places.”

Geo, who had calmed the anxiety of the elders in the house, thought to himself.

'You seem to be particularly concerned about Dana.'

Geo also understood that feeling. Honey would come to receive attention and affection on her own, but there were many times when Dana would not know where the child was if she was left alone.

‘I don’t even cry unless it’s time to eat…’

It seemed that he was causing the sun god a lot of worry as he would disappear completely whenever he didn't feel like eating.

I didn't think anything bad would happen to him since he was a child who survived well even in that barren 'vein of jewels', but anyway, I could respect him enough since that's what his grandfather said.

“Then for now I….”

Seafood becomes tough if heated for too long. The clubs and trumpets that Honey and Dana will bring will be added at the very end, so Geo can just do the rest.

“Honey and Dad don’t like spicy food that much, so I’ll put in some spices.”

“Kkuu, kku.”

“Yes, I’ll try to adjust it so that you can enjoy the scent, so don’t worry too much.”

"dream…."

“Spicy food certainly wasn’t that common in Giovanni’s world. It’s understandable that it would feel unfamiliar.”

Geo poured olive oil generously into a shallow, wide square pen.

“But the town of Edlan had a very developed spicy food scene.”

“Huh?”

“I also thought it was unusual. Usually, coastal towns with access to fresh seafood don’t use spicy spices….”

Basically, spices were used to enhance the flavor, but they were also used to cover up unpleasant odors in food.

It was also common on Earth to use strong, pungent-smelling chili powder to mask the gamey smell of meat or seafood.

“It was indeed a hot and humid climate. The annual temperature difference was also large. It was the perfect environment for food ingredients to spoil, so they tried to extend the preservation period by making it spicy… or maybe they aimed for a sterilizing effect.”

Above all, the specialty of the village of Edelland was seafood such as clubs and trumpets, but among the neighboring villages, there was an area where spices were a specialty.

Since it was easy to obtain that type of spice, it may have been a good environment for the development of various spicy foods.

“Among the representative dishes of the town of Edlan, there was spicy fried fish. It was a menu often sold in taverns, and if you asked, you could add dry bread and dip it in red oil.”

“Kuuu…?”

“It was spicy, but the tomato flavor and the rich oiliness of the fish made it a great match for bread. The fish used was particularly fatty and plump, and the oil that flowed out of it was truly divine.”

"dream…."

“Now that I think about it, it would have been nice if we could have added pasta noodles.”

To recall a little from that time, the gambas I was making this time was also going to be served with bread and noodles.

“I have ciabatta and baguette bread that I made last time. I think it would be good to lightly toast them both in the oven. Which would you like better, olive ciabatta or cheese ciabatta? I also have a baguette baked with sun-dried tomatoes.”

“Kukukukuku….”

“Yes, that’s wise. I’ll follow my father’s advice and let everyone have a little bit. Dana may not know, but Honey is a big eater like me, so she’ll enjoy all the food without leaving any behind. It’s a good thing I baked the bread in advance.”

Knowing that Geo was very interested in cooking, Yoo Seong-un often gave him ingredients as gifts.

Geo was happily indebted to Yoo Seong-un, as it included unique items like flour and vegetables that could only be purchased in the current world.

'You should treat him like an older brother.'

He was full of the composure and competence of an adult, and his personality was also gentle, making him very sociable. In order to survive in this hellish Republic of Korea, Geo decided to faithfully cling to Yoo Seong-woon again today.

“Ah, it would be delicious to eat cream cheese and smoked salmon on a baguette….”

Even if it wasn't salmon, it was also a great combination to top it with thinly sliced sausage or ham. Geo brought the dried fish from the 'breathing sea' that was drying in the yard and sliced it thinly and widely.

“Good, it’s dried well.”

“Kukuku.”

“Then I will leave the preparation of the bread to my father.”

I sliced the garlic that I had previously prepared into not too thin slices and poured it onto the pan that was not yet hot.

The teddy bear, who was slicing a baguette covered with sun-dried tomatoes, turned to look at Geo at the sound of something pouring out.

"dream?"

“Yes? No problem.”

"…dream?"

“It is normal for garlic to be this much.”

“…….”

The teddy bear soon gave up and started slicing the baguette. Thanks to the doll having fingers, it seemed that he was able to cut the baguette with some difficulty. Geo felt relieved and continued cooking the gambas.

'You have to put the garlic in at a low temperature so that the oil can infuse its flavor.'

One thing to be careful of is that if you leave the garlic in olive oil for too long, it will burn.

However, the garlic grown in this forest cabin was particularly hard and had large grains, so even if it was left in for a long time to draw out the fragrance, it did not seem like it would suddenly burn out.

"and…."

Geo took out the dried Milky Way Mary.

“Where is the stopper?”

“Kyuuu.”

“Oh, I see. Thanks for letting me know.”

Thanks to the Sun God’s instructions, I was able to take out the pestle that had been shoved in the cupboard. The Milky Way Mary, which had been dried in the sun, was black and transparent and shiny, but its grains were too hard to break with my hands.

Knock knock, knock knock.

“…….”

A spicy and tangy scent rose.

'It's similar to pepper.'

Should I say that it is a pepper with a slight chili flavor?

'It won't be spicy even if you put in a lot, so let's put in a little more.'

The flavor of pepper is very volatile, so if you leave it for too long, the flavor doesn't come out well. However, Milky Way Mary doesn't have that problem, and its strong flavor lasts a long time, so there would be no problem adding it to olive oil by now.

“I also added pepper….”

Next was the crying part.

“I’ll just put a little bit of this in.”

“…….”

“If the spiciness is too weak, it will be oily and you won’t be able to eat much.”

“…Kkuu….”

“Trust this son.”

When cooking with a lot of oil, it's best to use dried spices, because when moisture gets into the hot oil, it creates an environmentally friendly and high-performance bomb.

'And I dried the hems of my tears in advance for this day that will come someday.'

If the weeping willow is dried in the sun for more than a month, it turns pink and has a very sweet taste. However, if it is dried gently like roasting a rat poison on a slightly heated pen in a house, not in the sun, its spicy scent becomes stronger.

'It feels noticeably different from the red pepper powder, though the color is still blue-green…'

Still, the scent was somewhat similar.

'The sweet smell that made the scent overly complex has also largely disappeared.'

The dried-out hem of the fire was as fluffy as a thin blue-green piece of Korean paper, and the ends were crinkled like lace. As the hem of the fire cut into appropriate sizes was put in, the spicy scent that had been quiet even when the Milky Way Mary was in began to spread out.

“This is it.”

"dream."

“…….”

Geo, who had clenched his fist without realizing it, lowered his arm.

“…It won’t be very spicy.”

Oh really.

I tried to act as a court lady just in case the suspicious gaze wouldn't go away, but it wasn't that spicy.

Even Sergio, who doesn't have a high tolerance for spicy food, thought that even a mild-tasting teddy bear wouldn't have a problem tasting it.

“It’s true.”

“…….”

“If the father does not believe in the son, who will believe in me?”

"dream."

“Abuse of trust? This is the kind of trust that is meant to be used in times like these.”

Unfortunately, Mapjil's suspicions were not easily dispelled.

The adults, who had grown old without any reason, continued their strange standoff until Honey and Dana arrived.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (100)

Episode 100

Koreans say garlic is not a spice.

“I said it’s a vegetable?”

“Kung kung kung….”

“Honey, is that something you hate so much?”

Honey always makes a 'kung' sound when expressing her disapproval, and when she kung-kung like that, her already round body would become even rounder and would bob up and down. She looked like a soft, rolling bouncy ball.

But Geo felt wronged.

“Garlic isn’t spicy when cooked.”

“Kung.”

“Once you taste it, you’ll know it’s just a potato. It’s just a well-mashed, moist potato.”

“Kungkung….”

“The fragrance has all gone into the oil. Dad is really upset.”

I had finally cooked a meal, but two of my family members were distrustful of Geo.

“Dad said he tried it.”

It wasn't Honey but the teddy bear that reacted.

“Kyuu….”

“…Of course, it is true that Koreans are good at spicy food, but, father, that is a prejudice. Not all Koreans are good at spicy food. I was average.”

Although he never said anything, the sun god knew that there was a Korean among the 'Geo' because he was a god. And this confrontation occurred because of the popular belief that Koreans are particularly good at spicy food.

“Why do we have to face such a harsh ordeal in front of this warm and delicious meal…?”

As always, Geo's cooking was amazing.

The soft and ripe clubs and trumpets thrown at the right time boasted a milky white color, and the olive oil infused with the soul of garlic harmonized with the Milky Way Mary and the weeping hem.

Also, the sun god bestowed his protection of warmth, and the bread that Geo had baked in the oven was giving off a rich aroma.

“What a simple and perfect table setting, with the addition of smoked fish fillets gently dried in the gentle spring breeze. Especially, how delicious would it be to put the soft and chewy fish fillets on a crispy baguette, drizzle a drop or two of gambas oil, and top with well-fermented capers?”

Honey and the Bear seemed to hesitate, perhaps because the pig's sincerity in appealing to his appetite had gotten through. Geo didn't miss the opportunity and had Honey and the Bear sit down at their respective tables.

“Let’s eat first. No matter how much I hate spicy food, I shouldn’t be doing this in front of a hot table. That’s an insult to the ingredients and an insult to me as a chef.”

“Crunch….”

“Kyuu….”

“Danado has already gone and taken her seat, so why are you all hesitating like this? Honey, I didn’t raise you to be so weak. Didn’t you say, Father, that you wanted to experience human culture?”

In that way, Geo was barely able to convince the two.

“You’ve thought about it well. Yes, you may feel aversion to spicy food, but if you avoid it without even trying it in the first place, your range of experiences will inevitably be limited.”

“Kyuuu.”

“Of course, it is said that spiciness is closer to pain than taste, but I do not deny that, but I hope you understand that even that is a part of the gastronomic experience. Oral sensation is also a part of eating.”

Soggy dumplings or hard pudding were like things he didn't want to eat. Food had a texture that best suited it, and a taste and aroma that matched its form. Geo couldn't leave these spicy lovers alone.

“No, more than that.”

Geo once again complained of injustice.

“I told you it’s not spicy?”

“…….”

“Dana, you don’t trust this father either?”

Anyway, the meal went on. Although both Honey and the Sun God secretly showed their dislike, they had no intention of not eating at all from the beginning. How could they avoid it when the delicious smell was wafting in the air?

Geo made a salmon baguette for his fearful, picky son.

“Place ripe broccoli and garlic on a baguette… Crush the tomatoes so that they release their juices… Place smoked fish on top… Top with cheese flowers, and voila.”

The GeoPyo salmon baguette is complete.

“It was a good thing I grew the cheese flower.”

This cheese flower was first encountered at a restaurant I visited with Yoo Seong-un. I was able to obtain the seeds thanks to the fact that it was a plant that grew naturally in a dungeon somewhere.

As expected, it evolved from azalea to morning glory, perhaps influenced by the forest, but its deep flavor and aroma remained the same.

“If you eat it like this with cheese, it will be much less spicy.”

“Kung….”

Hot.

The baguette melted away from Honey's body.

“…Kur.”

“It’s delicious.”

“Gurrrr.”

“That’s fortunate.”

The first impression of the food you eat determines your subsequent culinary journey. I didn't want to give my child a bad memory of the 'spicy' food he or she tried for the first time after being born.

“It’s moderately spicy, so is it okay?”

“Gulp, gurgle.”

“Yeah, you have to try anything to find out.”

Geo also made and ate a baguette in the same way as before.

"hmm."

I admit it as the name of a self-proclaimed wild gourmet.

“Good.”

“Kurung.”

It was delicious.

'I think I could have it a little spicier than this.'

Geo knew that although he avoided the spiciness that caused a traffic accident, a spiciness that was just enough to lightly tap his shoulder could be a moderate stimulus.

Smoked fish, cheese flowers, broccoli, they were all mild in taste, so I felt a little bored.

'But this is pretty good.'

The unique spicy and savory flavor of Milky Way Mary passed by the roof of my mouth, but it was not so much that my tongue was tingling, and I was able to pass it by with a pleasant flavor. Honey seemed to have given it a passing grade in this regard.

'The broccoli was cooked just right. If I had cooked it for too long, it would have been soggy and had a weird texture… Even the tomatoes, which were particularly plump, were mashed up softly thanks to the heating.'

I thought it was a little spicy because the broccoli, garlic, and tomatoes were all soaked in spicy oil.

But at that time, the cheese flower that entered my mouth was much softer than the vegetables and spread like silk, soothing the tingling sensation.

In particular, the smoked fish had a more harmonious taste with the unique, luxurious aroma of the wood it was burned in.

“…even if you put a coffin here….”

“Huh?”

“Oh, yes, the soup won’t be particularly spicy either.”

Even the sun god must have found this level of spiciness delicious, as he slyly handed Geo a baguette with sun-dried tomatoes inside. It was a request to him to make a baguette with scallops.

'You're a great pig, trying to experiment with new ideas as soon as you get them.'

Baguette with sun-dried tomatoes. The sweet and sour taste of sun-dried tomatoes is already there. Instead of adding tomatoes soaked in oil, I made the baguette with only broccoli, garlic, and scallops.

“Try it once, and if you think it’s a little spicy, you can eat it with some cheese.”

"dream…."

Wow.

Half of the baguette disappeared into the teddy bear's large mouth.

“…….”

“…….”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

Judging by the pleasant smile, it seemed that Geo was satisfied with his choice.

“…….”

“Muang.”

“…You’re talented.”

Danana Honey was a little worried because she didn't have hands, but she managed to assemble the food well using her mouth and feet. Geo nodded in satisfaction and looked at his family who were now starting to assemble the food on their own.

"hmm…."

I'm thinking of making some bread with dried figs later.

“It’s really good to make bread in advance.”

“Kyuuu.”

“That’s right, this was a daily occurrence in the village of Edlan.”

Because it was a region where bread was the staple food, there were many bakeries here and there even in coastal towns.

“Huh?”

“Yes, there were many households without stoves.”

"dream?"

“At such times, they would use the village’s communal oven, or families with a little more money would frequent a bakery. In any case, bread was always included in every meal.”

“Kuk kuk kuk.”

“As you might expect, I prefer to bake my own bread at home.”

In the village of Edlan, bread was similar to rice in Korea, so bakeries only sold the most basic bread. Since dipping it in stew was the norm, there were few places that sold it with dried fruit or nuts.

“Because I could try out different things when I baked my own bread. Sometimes I even baked it with minced sausage or fish. The seafood in Edelland Village is of a high standard, so no matter how I used it, it wasn’t too burdensome to eat.”

When I think back to that time, I feel a surge of motivation.

“It would be better to bake the bread in advance.”

“Gurrrr.”

“Okay, then I can take it out and eat it whenever I think of it.”

Since bread takes a lot of time to knead and bake, the people of Edelland Village would prepare bread in large quantities at once on a certain day and last for nearly a month.

'Of course the bread became hard and dry, but being able to eat warm, moist bread every day was a privilege of the nobility… and hard, dry bread was delicious when dipped in stew anyway.'

Rather, the combination of hard, crusty bread and soupy stew was a good match. Since everyone ate like that, the stew we ordered at restaurants came out a little salty for the soup alone, and instead, they gave us bread to go with it.

But the advantage of this forest was that fully grown vegetables and cooked food did not spoil.

Even if you bake a lot of bread, it will always stay as if it was freshly baked, so if you bake bread diligently and stockpile it, you will be able to eat it whenever you have time.

“If you bake other types of bread besides meal bread, they’re also pretty good….”

“Wow.”

“Small, round bread? Munchkin donuts would be nice too.”

Add a little milk to the sugar powder and cover the bread with it to make a wonderful glazed donut. Geo thought he should make some sweet breads too.

“Okay, here we use pasta noodles.”

When he felt that he had consumed a moderate amount of bread, Geo took out the pasta noodles he had prepared in advance.

I placed the chewy, cooked pasta noodles on my plate, then added various vegetables, a few spoons of oil, and the sausages that Dana had brought.

“If you add cheese, this will taste good on its own.”

“Crunch.”

“I’ll give you some too, so wait a moment. This one has a lot of oil in it, so it might be a little spicy.”

“Kkuk.”

“You’ve become brave. As expected, children grow up at some point….”

I tasted the geoga, which was made by rubbing the noodles in hot oil to bring them to the right temperature.

“Good.”

I really liked it.

“This might be a little spicier, since the bread doesn’t cut the spiciness of the oil as well. Just in case, put some cheese flowers on it and eat it.”

“Gurrrr.”

“Do you need your father too?”

The teddy bear shook its head at Geo's question. It seemed that although it had never eaten noodles, it still liked bread and had no intention of changing to another type. Geo confirmed his belief.

Geo, who had served some pasta to Dana, who was curious about what Honey was eating, ate some of his own again.

“…….”

well.

It was good as expected.

‘The oil scent is stronger and it feels cold…’

Geo sprinkled a little more of the ground Milky Way Mary on top of his portion of pasta. The strong, distinctive aroma spread, and when he ate it with the spicy sausage, the taste, including the meat juice, was excellent.

'The sausage was well cooked once.'

The moist flesh inside the crispy shell was chewable, and the smooth noodles soaked in oil added flavor and texture, piquing my appetite.

I never got tired of it because it tasted so different even when eaten with clubs or trumpets that were treated like meat rather than sausages.

Geo opened his mouth after drinking the sweet goji berry tea he had prepared in advance.

"…ha…."

A sigh of satisfaction escaped me.

This is happiness.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (101)

Episode 101

B-class hunter.

“…….”

It is said that in a world where anyone can become a hunter by simply awakening, even a dog or a cow, that does not mean that a B rank is low.

Above all, he was a first-class citizen from birth.

“…….”

Not only do they live in the city, they are also rated as top-notch in protecting the city.

So basically, wherever I went, I was treated with favor and respect. That was what it meant to be a first-class citizen in this world.

“…….”

That was something to be very confident about.

"…uh…."

To the extent that I would try to deal with a third-class citizen as I pleased.

“…What, what is this… Where am I?”

Beatle… .

I barely managed to get up with my body feeling weak.

“What the…?”

Park Eun-gyeom, a first-class citizen and B-class hunter, looked around.

“…Is it a dungeon?”

There was a reason why he, who could not say that he had little experience as a hunter, had such an obvious and stupid question.

“There’s a dungeon like this?”

It was completely colorless.

Bright white. Black as a charcoal black. Light gray. Slightly dark gray. Gray close to black.

A gray that's almost white. A gray that shimmers like glass. A gray that ripples as if it were alive and breathing. Gray. Gray.

The man was left stranded in the middle of a gray city.

“…….”

The man unconsciously felt his chest, feeling out of breath as if his lungs were filled with cotton.

I knew rationally that there was nothing wrong with my body, but no, it wasn't a cold feeling. This was… .

“…What, what is this….”

A creepy feeling of weakness. I couldn't exert any strength anywhere. It felt like every muscle in my body had disappeared.

“Where is this place?”

It was as if the lungs themselves had disappeared. Even though I was speaking, it was as if my tongue had disappeared, I couldn't tell if my vocal cords were vibrating, and I couldn't even hear my own voice.

“…What the heck….”

This emptiness gradually consumed my whole body to the point where I felt a sense of discomfort. It was a natural change, as if someone was whispering next to my ear, “It should be that way.”

It started with a sudden gasp of breath as if I was about to die, then it felt like my breathing holes had disappeared, and my heart that had been pounding became incomprehensibly quiet even in this strange fear.

Even the warmth of my fingertips is disappearing.

“Nonsense, nonsense, nonsense….”

The man hesitated and quickly looked around.

Gray here. Gray there. Gray here. Gray there.

The buildings are plain and simple rectangular shapes, made to reflect Seoul's unique curves, and are also made to be very long or very short.

'Make it?'

Who made this?

'This is… this is a dungeon. Yes, it's a dungeon.'

But something was strange. So much was empty.

This damned grey city looked so vast and dirty, with so many buildings, yet no sign of anything. Which dungeon in the world could be this quiet?

'I don't even feel any hostility.'

I thought the fear was that monsters would rush at me to kill me, but no. The fear was that this vast dungeon, with no end in sight, was just staring at me without doing anything.

It was just staring at the man.

“…….”

scared.

scared?

Are you scared?

‘… I can’t even tell the difference between one emotion and another… .’

At first it was just an exhalation.

Next came the organs extending from the lungs and the warmth that came from them. Next came emotions.

“Ugh, ugh….”

Where to next?

The existence of 'Park Eun-gyeom' was gradually disappearing.

“…Ugh!”

The man who quickly shook his head grabbed my hand.

'Don't think strangely, what disappears? It's obvious that there's a hand and it's not cold.'

All of this was just an illusion. This dungeon was also a brainwashing device designed to kill the man.

Since this was my first time in a quiet dungeon of this type, I panicked for a moment, but he wasn't someone who would be taken advantage of so easily.

“If this is a dungeon, what kind of dungeon is it?”

Is it mobile or fixed? Is it virtual, is it a cottage, is it an entry?

The man rolled his eyes around, consciously taking deep, calm breaths.

“I was definitely led by that… that hand…”

He didn't remember the exact details, but he did remember that he came across a picture frame in the 'Jewel Vein' and was forcibly dragged in by transparent hands crawling out from within it.

The expression on the man's face, who had been trying to survive while keeping his composure, quickly turned pitiful.

It wasn't anger, it was despair and fear.

“…….”

It reminded me of the moment I was dragged into the frame.

“…Sigh….”

The feeling was vivid, as if my body was becoming paint and flowing down.

'... T, you shouldn't think like this. If you panic even more in a situation like this, your survival rate will only decrease... Yes, you have to come to your senses. Come to your senses... .'

I tried to pull myself together, even if it was by force, but it wasn't easy.

It was a really strange feeling. Was it painful? I guess it was. Was it peaceful? No, it wasn't.

The feeling of being caught by transparent hands and being eaten by the frame first, starting with my feet, slowly melting away like wax. That pain.

How could I ever forget the feeling of becoming a living, thinking liquid?

“…….”

I lost my mind from the pain and came all the way here without being able to resist… .

“…….”

so.

“…….”

What were you trying to do?

“…Ah, ah, ah.”

dump-!!

The staggering man fell backwards.

“Ugh….”

Now even my thoughts were disappearing into this emptiness.

'This can't go on.'

I don't know exactly what kind of dungeon this is.

Although the structure may have been similar to the dungeons he knew, it was completely different. Still, as a B-class hunter, the man instinctively realized that this dungeon was like a mutation.

So, the chances of surviving were even lower, but it didn't matter. To be exact, it was closer to not thinking about it.

The man, who realized that he was becoming so incapable of even thinking due to the pain and fear, tried to struggle somehow.

“Get up, get up. Get up….”

For some reason, I had no strength in my body since a while ago. It was a similar feeling to when I had not yet awakened, had just woken up from sleep, or had collapsed under the weight of too strong an emotion.

But even that was creepy.

'Isn't this dungeon sucking away the strength I should be able to muster?'

That's why I had such doubts.

A man who had been flailing around on the floor like an insect for several times barely managed to get up from his seat.

I couldn't understand it, but my whole body was covered in soot, perhaps because I had rubbed my body against the dark gray asphalt floor so many times.

No, it was more like the paint was seeping out.

'dyestuffs?'

Only then, and very late, did the man realize whose dungeon he was in.

“…Black Cloak….”

Wasn't that a very famous topic of conversation recently?

“…Black, black cloak…!! Yes, that bastard…!! That monster bastard!!”

Even in this dungeon, the deep arrogance and overflowing anger that had become ingrained in him could not be hidden.

It was that dog-like monster bastard who had created the image of himself being dragged around like a stray dog and struggling miserably like this.

A monster as lowly as a beast can do this to a human!

“Fuck, fuck, fuck!! You’re a lowly monster who just keeps throwing out worthless gifts…!!!”

He didn't even know what I was yelling at.

Perhaps, if he had been a hunter with a little more knowledge and ability, he would have realized that this was the stomach of the 'Black Cloak' and would have shown the utmost humility and reflection.

But if he was that kind of person, why did the 'City of Emptiness' bring in a person named Park Eun-gyeom in the first place?

Geo's children knew exactly what their father hated: beings who didn't even know the subject.

“Ugh, gasp… huh….”

The man who had been struggling for a long time slowly moved away from the place with trembling feet.

Even though they all looked the same, there was always an entrance to every dungeon. There was no dungeon that had no way out.

That couldn't be called a dungeon. So it must exist, of course it must exist. But the question still remained.

'Why the black cloak?'

Although the response level of the Korean Constitutional Court website has been adjusted quite high, the people who manage that information are all human, so they may have been a bit overly cautious.

The explanation was to be careful and such, but in reality, the black cloak has never harmed humans.

'There are a few idiots who died because they left their seats right away…'

The man, who had been thinking of the 'Deep Sea Country' for a moment, shook his head.

'I've never heard of an attack like this.'

The 'Black Cloak' he knew was a crippled monster that would suddenly pop out, greet you gloomily, give you a gift, and then disappear.

I even heard some nonsense that some people would gather together and spend time talking about the 'Black Cloak' because it was so trivial...

'Why on earth would a monster like that come at me?'

It was when I was moving my feet one by one with difficulty.

“…….”

Stop—.

The man's body froze.

“…….”

I ignored the creaking jaw, like an unoiled hinge, and turned my head to look behind me.

“…….”

“…….”

The suit was standing.

"…what…."

“…….”

“What is it?”

It was a very black suit.

The colors were like the shadows of a dark basement where not a single ray of light enters. Even the shirt was black, and each and every button was buttoned up so carefully that it looked stuffy. The black shoes that didn't shine somehow looked sturdy.

It just stared at the man, still with its back to the ground.

'…stare?'

What on earth are you talking about when you're looking at that thing that doesn't even have a face?

‘No, in the first place… why me… .’

Did you know that was behind you?

“…….”

Even though he didn't feel any movement, the man knew that there was a 'suit' behind him.

"…ah…."

I couldn't figure out what kind of ink was flowing into my empty brain. I couldn't figure out what I was becoming.

“…Hey, go over there.”

“…….”

“Get out of here, you little monster. This, this is just… I….”

“…….”

“I just….”

With the suit in his sight, the man hesitated and stepped back. He checked his rear frequently, fearing that he might bump into another suit behind him without even noticing, but there was no such thing.

As I stepped back, the suit I had seen for the first time did not even come close.

“…….”

“…….”

Even after moving for a while, the suit still remained still.

The man who had made up his mind quickly ran away from that place.

“Ugh…!!”

I fell down on the rough asphalt several times because my legs were weak, but it was not the time to worry about that.

“Ugh, gasp, huff…!!”

Let's keep running like that.

"evil…!!!"

“…….”

“Ah, ahh. ugh…!!”

Once again, a pitch-black suit caught my eye.

It was walking slowly along the road with its back to the ground, but it was clear that it was staring at the man from the direction of its twisted body. The man tried to suppress a scream as the moderate pace of walking, like someone going to work, gave him an unbearable sense of discomfort.

Still, he ran. He fell, his skin was torn, and he ran again. He didn’t even have time to analyze why he, a B-class hunter, felt pain on such asphalt.

'crazy…!!'

The man continued to encounter suits after that.

Looking to the left, there was a man in a black suit. He was sitting on a bench, staring at the man running.

Looking to the right, there was a suit running a little slower. It turned its body towards the man and stared at him.

Looking ahead, there were two suits. They stopped and stared at the man as he moved.

Then look back.

“…….”

Right behind me, behind them, a little further away, and in alleys, inside buildings, beyond windows, on rooftops, under streetlights, next to benches, at bus stops, inside convenience stores, in cars, on buses, there were black suits walking, running, stopping and staring at me.

"……."

And then.

If you look ahead…?

"……."

Looking ahead.

What happens?

"……."

The man felt the black suit breathing on his body.

"Ugh…."

I couldn't turn my head forward again.

It was silent, but it had a presence. It was just clothes moving, but it felt like a living person was inside.

No, of course, it can never be called a person and should not be called that… but still.

"…Sigh…."

The man slowly turned his body and sat down lazily.

"Ugh, ugh…."

I squatted down in an unsightly manner and saw my own appearance.

"Ugh… Aaaah… Ugh…."

On the skin that had been rubbed and torn, black paint instead of blood came out.

“Ahh….”

The man caressed my face roughly with his trembling, pitch-black hands. It was damp.

“…….”

I turned my head and looked at the glass of the building, and saw my own appearance, stained black and dirty, as if I had rotted away, like holes in my flesh.

“…….”

I groped around hastily, but there was no hole. But this was a shadow.

The man lowered his head and kept feeling my body, then looked at my pants, which were pitch black as if they were covered in wet tar, then looked at my legs inside them, and then… .

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

Raise your head.

“Wow, look at this guy.”

Creepy.

A familiar voice was heard.

“Why is it so spotty?”

“It’s not perfect.”

“So you could say it’s an unfinished work.”

That was Park Eun-gyeom's own voice.

He suddenly saw a group of people in black suits surrounding him and looking down at him.

“…….”

They weren't so tightly packed that there was no gap to be seen, but they weren't small in number either. They looked like citizens watching someone having a heart attack.

My teeth chattered with a terrible sense of discomfort.

“Wow, look at this guy.”

Exactly the same voice.

“Why is it so spotty?”

“It’s not perfect.”

“So you could say it’s an unfinished work.”

Exactly the same line.

“…….”

and.

Park Eun-gyeom touched my neck.

"and."

“…—”

“Look at this guy.”

… couldn't say.

“Why is it so spotty?”

“…….”

“It’s not perfect.”

“…….”

“So you could say it’s an unfinished work.”

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (102)

Episode 102

“Meteor Cloud Curator.”

It's just a meteor cloud.

“I am very sorry to say this, but….”

“Are you working overtime?”

“…….”

“You’re working overtime.”

I thought it was coming.

Bisabal, who had been quietly looking at the face of Yoo Seong-un, who had escaped resignation and reached a state of liberation, immediately raised his thumb. He gave a refreshing wink that made it hard to believe he was an old gentleman of that age.

“How much will it cost?”

“It’s like a dirty capitalist society.”

In this day and age, things like legally mandated working hours are of no use.

Even those laws were all based on civilian standards, so it wouldn't have been strange for an openly public hunter, not even a regular awakened person, to die from overwork.

“Phew….”

And Yoo Seong-un was a member of society who knew very well that he was a cog in the wheel of this society.

“Yes, that’s fine.”

He nodded.

“I’m looking forward to receiving my paycheck this month.”

“Oh my goodness, that meteor hunter is so cool! He’s so trustworthy!”

“Please don’t bother me any longer and get to the point.”

“Is that so?”

Bisabal, with his characteristically sagging smile, continued speaking.

“Geo had an accident.”

“…….”

Horok… .

Yoo Seong-un asked while drinking sweet fruit tea.

“Is it cute or is it horrible?”

“It was so cute.”

“If it’s terrible by the guild leader’s standards, then there’s no way I wouldn’t know.”

“Then before you even wonder why I’m asking, Mr. Yoo Seong-un? What on earth do you think I am? A forerunner who foresees the end of the world?”

“It’s amazing how you can enjoy life so much.”

“What remains is what you enjoy. You can respect it.”

“Oh, yes….”

Yoo Seong-un rubbed his sore neck and asked again.

“What exactly happened?”

“They say that a first-class citizen was dragged away by Geo’s frame.”

“If they were first-class citizens, there would be a few classists who would rise up….”

“What can I do? Since it wasn’t done by a human but by a monster, I guess I should be a little more careful.”

“That's true.”

It is true that in the human world, first-class citizens receive considerable preferential treatment.

But on the contrary, there were few people who felt sympathy for a first-class citizen when he was attacked by a monster. Most first-class citizens gained power and honor in return for fighting monsters and protecting other citizens.

“Well, Geo isn’t a monster.”

“Wouldn’t it be better for it to be known that way anyway?”

“The guild leader is right.”

There was no need to inform those who could not even see of the existence of the source.

'It'll just add to the unnecessary confusion.'

If the source was to be officially known, it would have been at least 100 years later. With only 31 years having passed since the catastrophe, there were many things that were particularly lacking in the public's awareness.

Anyway, this isn't what's important.

“Who is the person that Geo took away?”

In response to Yoo Seong-un's question, Bisabal answered by rubbing his chin.

“My name is Hunter Park Eun-gyeom, a B-class.”

“…I’ve never heard of it….”

“Please memorize the names of the hunters. They are among the top hunters.”

“Overall ranking?”

“Domestic.”

“How would I know that?”

Although he was an A-class hunter, Yoo Seong-un's occupation was as a curator of a collection store and the manager of a secret garden.

Unless it was a widely known subject or something that required special attention, all of his attention was directed to the source.

“Where can I find out the domestic hunter rankings and use them?”

In short, if it is not the source or the basic qualification of an A-class hunter, there is no need to know it.

“Could it be used to pretend to know?”

“I roughly remember the important Class A.”

“Please pay attention to even the lowest ranks. Even if you are an unofficial hunter, you will get cursed at if you do that.”

“I’m doing well in social life too. I don’t show off my ignorance in front of people, right?”

“I guess I should say that it’s fortunate….”

Is it because the world treats hunters like some kind of celebrity? Unless they have some sort of character, people always want hunters in the media to look humble and perfect.

The image of knowing and respecting the names of all the hunters was one of that kind of 'perfection'.

Of course, since Yoo Seong-un is a collection of Bisabyeol and a gardener who has a lot of time to work privately, he doesn't appear in the media often of his own volition. If he was doing well on his own, Bisabyeol wouldn't have to worry about it.

“Actually, he wasn’t a hunter with that much recognition.”

“Are you talking about that hunter named Park Eun-gyeom?”

“I guess I had a strong desire to rise up, but I don’t know. People these days don’t like arrogant and self-righteous hunters that much.”

For hunters these days, image management is essential. In order to not need such an image, you need to be S-class, but even in the current generation where hunters are produced without difficulty, it is hard to find a hunter of that level.

And of course, the hunter who was kidnapped by Geo this time wasn't that good of an ability.

“A typical B-class. He was born with pretty decent aptitude skills and achieved a decent grade, but he didn’t have any particular external charm or sociability.”

“…You memorized it all. You weren’t a hunter who paid special attention.”

“If you’re a hunter in South Korea, you all remember this. Even though I look like a punk, I’m still the leader of the third-largest guild in the country. If you want to win with your head instead of your body, this is the basics.”

“Hmm.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“What exactly happened?”

“I just received an official document from the Hunter Association today….”

Visabal explained what had happened. How the Hunter Association had reacted to Geo's accident and how passively they had asked for help. And what exactly was the accident Geo had caused.

“…So, it is said that the hunter named Park Eun-gyeom has not been found until now.”

“If I was dragged into Geo’s frame, that would be understandable. I don’t even know what the situation is like inside.”

Yoo Seong-un groaned, holding his chin.

“If anything, it’s fortunate that it wasn’t something that would make such a big fuss.”

First of all, it's also big because Geo caused the accident without making a sound.

“More than anything, the Hunter Association’s attitude is impressive.”

“I thought so too.”

Visaval also agreed.

“I have no intention of causing a fuss or offending the spirit of our portrait, but I still want to show how seriously I am taking the recent incident involving the ‘Black Cloak’.”

He vaguely 'requested' an 'investigation' without directly mentioning anyone. If the president of the association knew that Geo was a collection of Bisabul, he could have been more forceful, but he didn't.

So is it just passive? No, it wasn't.

“Why are you asking for help from all three major guilds, not just any other place?”

There were three guilds representing South Korea, and Bisabal's 'Collection' ranked third among them.

"then…."

“Including the president of the association, all the ‘symbols of eternity’ are gathered together.”

“That's it.”

A symbol of eternity.

This is a term that refers to the number 1 and 2 guild leaders in South Korea, centered around Dan Hae-ra, the president of the Korean Hunter Association. It is a word that literally describes three great people who symbolize eternity.

If the Visabal is responsible for Korea's capital, the second-ranking guild leader is responsible for public sentiment, the first-ranking guild leader is responsible for safety, and the Hunter Association leader is responsible for overall administration and management. With these as the mainstays, the Republic of Korea has shown a high level of stability on a global scale.

“Well, of course I’m not the ‘Symbol of Eternity’?”

Although some people sometimes make the mistake, Bisabal's aging is slowed down because of his high level of skill, and he did not make an eternal promise like them. Even if he had been given one, he would not have done so.

“But it does play a big role in this capitalist society. It seems that he contacted all three major guild leaders in South Korea, including me. This alone shows how important the association president thinks ‘Portrait of Geo’ is.”

At those words from the bachelor, Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth with a slightly trembling expression.

“…I’ve been curious about this for a long time.”

“Why are you asking now?”

“I didn’t want to get involved, but I feel like I’ve already gotten involved, so I’m asking now.”

“You’re smart, you’re the meteor curator I personally brought in.”

“You brought everything yourself, so what… Anyway, what is this?”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking.

“Why did the president want ‘Geo’s Portrait’ in the first place?”

As far as he knew, the main skill of the president of the Danhae Association, one of the few S-class people in the country, was not something like 'emotion'.

Why did you put in so much effort to compete with Bisabal, which is in charge of Korean capital, when you couldn't even feel the essence of that unfamiliar portrait as much as Bisabal?

“I know that the chairman of the association visits the auction house often. He buys a lot of things. But he has rarely shown as much passion and sincerity as he did for this portrait, right?”

“There wasn’t any at all.”

“That’s what I mean.”

“But I don’t know much about that part either.”

But the only thing that Visabal could know was.

“…….”

In those eyes, there was a rare hint of emotion.

‘… I’m not sure, though.’

The current head of the Danhae Association, who can be said to be the center of Korea, was a person who gave up a lot to maintain that balance.

'That kind of person showed even a faint emotion towards one of the auction items.'

To be honest, even Bisabal himself doubted his own judgment.

“Well, I’m not sure.”

“Don't you know?”

“I can’t know everything.”

“You live as if it’s not true.”

“It also helps me sell my image.”

“Oh, my head hurts.”

“That may happen as you live.”

Anyway, it wasn't that important why the association president was after 'Geo's Portrait'. At least to Bisabal, it was.

“I don’t know for sure, but there might have been something that only the president of the association could see.”

“…….”

“The story has gone off on a tangent.”

Isn't the most important thing now 'Geo's Portrait'?

“As you might expect, the Hunter Association has recognized the importance of the ‘Black Cloak’ and is approaching it cautiously. They will likely maintain a coexistence-friendly attitude as much as possible until they are certain that they are enemies.”

“…First of all, Geo will be less likely to get angry if you take an aggressive approach. I was worried that the image of the ‘Black Cloak’ has become too familiar lately, so I was worried that there would be more nonsense in the future, but I’m glad that the Association has taken notice.”

“Even the three major guild leaders in South Korea all received the official document. Since it was the request of the association president, of all people, the other two symbols will also make their stance on the ‘Black Cloak’ clear and make efforts to inform others about it.”

“There are also symbols that are specialized in that area, so I won’t worry about that anymore. Now, the only thing that remains is how cooperative our collection will be.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was once the research team leader of the association, was not so indifferent to the affairs of the country.

Even if you twist it 30 times, he has the talent to understand, but if you give him hints like this, Yoo Seong-un can't help but do something.

"……."

And anyway.

"…Geo is my responsibility."

If it weren't for Yoo Seong-un, there was no one else who could take on this task.

"Let's take a look around for now."

"Why don't you ask Geo right away?"

"…It is true that Geo is a being of origin and is friendly to humans, but this time the situation is a bit different."

"This is the first time that he has shown hostility rather than goodwill. He said in the official document that he did not show up, so he may be feeling uncomfortable."

"If we try to save a human that Geo has judged to be a 'villain,' he may reveal even greater hostility. So rather than asking him directly, I'm going to first look for a frame that says the victim was taken away."

Yoo Seong-un asked, rubbing his sore neck once more.

"Do you have any clues about that frame? A photograph, a painting, or something… I'd like to know its features."

"It was first discovered in a dungeon called 'Jewel Vein', and…."

The visa officer showed the association's official document.

“It is said to be a work depicting a gray city.”

“…….”

The official document stated that the witness testified that the picture frame was so empty that it made one feel empty just by looking at it.

Yoo Seong-un, who was staring at it intently, pursed his lips.

“…Even now, in the ‘Deep Sea Country’, the frame called the ‘Breathing Sea’ is often seen. It must be true, as it has been confirmed by a Hunter with the Appraisal skill.”

“That must have been created by Geo, too?”

“Yes, that’s right. By the way, I’m a painter who draws dungeons as I please….”

I was feeling a little bored.

“It’s scary.”

And then I wondered.

It was a meteor-like thought.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (103)

Episode 103

I wonder if it really matters, but the 'Jewel Vein' was one of the dungeons that Yoo Seong-un told Geo about.

“Was it considered as if I passed on the information for nothing?”

It was a 'Portrait of Geo' that could move freely anywhere.

Giving him information about several interesting and uninhabited dungeons connected to Earth might have been similar to telling a hungry tiger the location of a village.

“…It was only a matter of time, I guess.”

Yoo Seong-un did not regret his actions.

'This is something that even the Visa Authority agreed to.'

Above all, he was human, but he was not on the side of complete humanity.

It has been said that the best gardeners are bystanders. It is true that they should not just be bystanders, but their mission is to bring balance to the Source and their world.

Chosen as a gardener from a very young age, Yoo Seong-un knew how to be indifferent to the events of life and death.

'Besides, Geo knows Earth well.'

The meteor cloud only brought forward the period of Geo's activities, but the portrait's movements to appear all over the Earth and surprise people were planned.

“The investigation into Gyeongbokgung Palace hasn’t even been completed yet, and before we can finish anything, another incident has occurred. This is….”

Yoo Seong-un sat on a bench covered in snow and scratched his chin.

“…Is today Christmas?”

Originally, I was going to go to Geo and ask him if he wanted to enjoy the end of the year.

“It must be hard right now.”

It was a sad sight for modern people to have to work overtime on a holiday like this. Yoo Seong-un slowly sighed as he rubbed his sore neck.

According to the will of the garden he was serving, no breath came out.

"good."

The first thing to check was the interview with the witness.

* * *

F-class hunter.

A level of awakening slightly stronger than that of a healthy adult male civilian.

Those who received a hunter's license, even though they knew there was a high chance of death when entering a dungeon, often took on the position of 'porter'.

“Oh, hello.”

“Nice to meet you, Hunter Lee Seon-hoo.”

“I received a call saying you would come today.”

The 'witness' that Yoo Seong-un found was a porter with a good impression.

“I think you said you wanted to hear about the black cloak.”

“Yes, to be exact, I came here to hear more about the situation you witnessed that day.”

“I told you over the phone, but I also relayed the situation that day to the association staff.”

“Strictly speaking, what I’m curious about is the information about the frame that Hunter Lee Seon-hoo saw.”

“…Okay, I understand.”

He brought Yoo Seong-un into the house, although he was embarrassed.

“It’s a little shabby, isn’t it? Sorry.”

“No, what are you talking about? I’m the one who came looking for you.”

Yoo Seong-un understood the shallow aversion shown by the witness. In general, third-class citizens tended to feel awkward or burdened when seeing citizens of a higher class than themselves.

'It's also an era of great class conflict.'

Nevertheless, the witness treated Yoo Seong-un to warm green tea.

'That's an impression Geo would like.'

A portrait of a polite and kind person came to mind. The reason he committed this incident must have been because he liked the character of Lee Seon-hu.

“It’s warm, thank you.”

“I’m sorry, I have nothing else to offer you.”

“I am so grateful that you even agreed to talk to me.”

Yoo Seong-un continued the light conversation and helped ease the tension of the witnesses.

Fortunately, the witness didn't seem to be the type to harbor ill feelings toward a first-class citizen, so he quickly let his guard down toward Yoo Seong-un and continued the conversation.

It wasn't until the green tea had almost cooled that we got to the main topic.

“You were curious about the picture frame I saw then?”

“Because it’s a new work by Black Cloak following ‘The Breathing Sea’.”

“Oh, I was surprised by that part too. I didn’t know you could draw a new work like that….”

“While working as a curator and researching various things, I became interested in it.”

Yoo Seong-un didn't necessarily say that he was looking for the missing Park Eun-gyeom.

'My goal is to confirm how the Black Cloak showed its hostility rather than to save the human named Park Eun-gyeom… but either way, it won't sound very good to the person involved.'

If Park Hunter was alive, it was one of Yoo Seong-un's duties to rescue him.

It would be no good to hear about Yoo Seong-un's duty to rescue the person who was abandoned and even abused by the missing person this time or to recover the body.

‘… But what’s interesting is that he seems to have a rather friendly attitude towards Black Cloak.’

The witness smiled and said, "I didn't know you would create a new work." It was like the expression of someone who heard that their favorite artist had opened a gallery.

“…….”

I never thought I would realize that 'Portrait of Geo' was painted by a painter.

'Geo, you have a fan.'

I knew that there was a group of people who strangely idolized the Black Cloak. I had no intention of meeting them or talking to them, but it felt strange to see it for myself.

A witness who did not know Yoo Seong-un's thoughts asked.

“Will Black Cloak continue to draw like that?”

“…As of now, I think that is highly likely.”

“That’s amazing.”

The witness nodded and continued speaking.

“The work I saw that day was a painting of a gray city. Judging from the fact that the colors were very transparent, I thought it was probably a watercolor painting.”

He really seemed to be talking about some author's work.

“Actually, when I first saw it, I judged it to be gray, but it wasn’t completely gray.”

“Well then?”

“Rather, I think it was a completely colorless work. It was amazing, the shapes of the buildings in the drawn city were colorful, and the glass windows and such… It was a very vivid description.”

“It’s amazing how vivid the depiction can be with watercolors, which are easily blurred and have dull colors.”

“There were some that were completely black, and some that were completely white. There were no strong colors like red or yellow, so I don’t know how they caught my eye.”

The witness seemed to be someone with some knowledge of art. I would say he was definitely not an expert, but he was at least able to look at the work and enjoy it in his own way.

'So maybe I'm more sympathetic to Black Cloak.'

Yoo Seong-un asked, gathering his thoughts.

“I envy you for seeing such a work. Have you ever seen it anywhere other than ‘The Vein of Jewels’?”

“Ah… That, unfortunately, is not there. I only encountered it once in the dungeon that day. And even that disappeared quickly.”

"okay."

I didn't feel any lies.

“I wanted to see it with my own eyes, but it’s too bad.”

Yoo Seong-un had to find the frame and see what Hunter Park Eun-gyeom had become.

“I guess I have no choice but to go around the dungeon myself….”

“That, that place.”

The witness hesitated for a moment and then continued speaking.

“Among my friends… there’s one who is an Awakened, but he’s an F-class like me and hasn’t received a Hunter’s ID.”

“Oh, yes.”

“I heard that he also saw a picture frame just like mine.”

“…the same frame?”

“Actually, he was the one who saw the picture frame before I did. At first, I was so out of it that I didn’t notice it, but when I was left alone in front of the picture frame… I realized that it was the picture frame he had been talking about.”

“…….”

Even if you are an Awakened Person, if you do not receive a Hunter's ID, you are just a civilian.

'Especially if it's an F-class.'

Unlike Hunters who were required to write reports and thus had easy access to information, this also explained why the Association did not know about this fact if they were civilians.

But there was something curious. I wondered why this fact was not reported to the association, but more than anything… .

“Civilians won’t be able to enter the dungeon?”

“Yes, that’s right. He said he saw it near Gyeongbokgung Palace, not in the dungeon….”

“Gyeongbokgung Palace?”

“So I guess it doesn’t only appear in dungeons.”

"oh…."

If what I say is true, then there is no pattern to the appearance of the 'empty city'.

'I'm screwed.'

Now it seemed like I really had no choice but to run.

* * *

"yes?"

Geo was startled, a look that didn't match his gloomy and calm face at all.

“Are you saying that my child has been running away from home without me knowing?”

“I think it’s a bit much to call it running away, mainly because of the word choice.”

Aria continued speaking, wearing a large doctor's gown and waving the flowing sleeves.

“Since the teacher has so much love for the Earth, what can we do? We studied in various ways. Last time, we just thought about making the Earth chaotic and leaving, so we didn’t really know anything.”

“Considering that, you’ve done a pretty good job of cleaning it up, Aria. I’ve heard that the Seoul branch of the Temple of the Sun is still in the process of being cleaned up. I think that means that our mermaid students have caused quite a bit of chaos."

"That is a very honorable testimony, gentleman. As a child of the deep who hates the sun and its children, I could not be happier. Anyway, that is what I found out while studying the situation on Earth…."

Aria shrugged.

"It seems that the 'Empty City' has been sighted very rarely in an area called Seoul recently."

"This father has never heard such words from the void…."

"Void? Is that the nickname for your dungeon? You have very unique tastes, sir."

"I don't know what's so special about calling my child by his/her name."

"It's okay if you don't know. After all, what I wanted to tell you was that without you knowing, your dungeon was roaming the planet called Earth."

"It's still such embarrassing news to hear again."

I felt guilty, as if I had lost my sense of responsibility as a parent.

"This is probably because I haven't paid enough attention to him for so long, and he's become twisted. Parents don't even realize that their child is born, and they're busy enjoying their own lives. So even if they've only recently started paying a little attention to him, his lonely heart won't go away."

"……."

"That's why I should have treated him well since he was little…. Since home is not a stable and peaceful place for a emptiness, isn't that why he goes outside? But even so, I never imagined that a picture frame that was so well kept in the warehouse would go out on its own.”

Why couldn't he have imagined that even the dungeon would be like a child and escape the frame on its own?

'I think it's possible with that level of creativity and inclusiveness.'

Aria was momentarily skeptical, but soon answered Geo's words.

“…It’s definitely not the appearance of a normal dungeon. It’s not like a normal item or artifact. It’s like the dungeon’s owner is no longer inside, so it feels like they’re just wandering around feeling light.”

Geo lamented.

“It’s because Dad isn’t home.”

“When did you say this was home?”

“But I confirmed that there was a lot of emptiness in my warehouse….”

“Then it would be a clone or another entrance.”

Since the dungeon is a single world, it does not have only one entrance.

“There’s more than just one way to invade Earth. If the dungeon owner wants to, they can create as many entrances as they want.”

“I never intended to.”

“That’s why I came to ask you this. Are you finally planning to destroy the humans and have the entrance open?”

“I’ve never had such a horrible thought. After all, who will talk to me when humans are destroyed? Who will roast sweet potatoes for me?”

“We can do it.”

“I refuse. As I told Isser, you need to develop your independence. Anything more than this much attention and affection will make things difficult for you, Master.”

“I try to control myself.”

Aria nodded.

“Even if the teacher didn’t intend to do that, it’s still not hard to understand why the ‘Empty City’ is like this.”

“Is it because I’m going through puberty…? Because I have a bad father…? Because I had a miserable childhood…?”

“You keep saying that the dungeon is a world. Anywhere can be the entrance and exit, and even you, the owner, are always in this portrait and at the same time, you are very interested in Earth.”

Moreover, the place he frequently appears is Seoul.

“If you say Seoul, isn’t it an area you visit often these days?”

“I’m trying to find a pen pal.”

“Since dungeons and their owners have the nature of becoming one, it wouldn’t be strange for them to visit the dimension with the most traces of their owner.”

“You’re wandering around this vast and harsh Seoul alone, looking for this worthless father…?”

“…Yeah, if you understand it that way, the context is roughly correct.”

Of course, it was a lighter situation than that. If you really assume that the dungeon has self-awareness, it is closer to the appearance of 'a mischievous child who goes to his father's workplace without any reason and begs him to play' rather than 'a boy who leaves to find his father who rarely comes home'.

'But if the teacher puts effort into the dungeon like this, it's better for us.'

After all, a dungeon is a dungeon. It was a game board for catching and eating something.

As long as Geo was interested in Earth, humans would continue to be eaten, so the more the dungeon was managed, the more reassured the mermaids would be.

'Because the teacher's work and this cabin are connected.'

However, there was one thing that was questionable.

“That ‘empty city’.”

"yes."

“Have you ever been connected to Earth separately?”

"…yes?"

“There isn’t any.”

Aria felt that the 'Deep Sea Country' and the 'Breathing Sea' had somehow become connected on the day Geo risked his life to talk to the mermaids. Since then, picture frames connected to the 'Breathing Sea' have started to float in the 'Deep Sea Country'.

Well, it's not that strange since the 'Breathing Sea' was originally a part of the 'Deep Sea Country'. At least that day, it was certain that the mermaid temple and Geo's 'picture frame' were connected.

'But even without such measures, the teacher's picture frame is floating around in Seoul, an area on Earth.'

What is the reason?

“…I guess the teacher really likes the Earth?”

“There was no need to hate my hometown without any particular reason.”

“Aha, this is my hometown.”

Then I understand.

“It was connected from the beginning.”

Since the roots of the soul are on that planet, it was natural that there was no need for a separate connection like the 'Deep Sea Country' and the 'Breathing Sea'. To that 'Empty City', Earth is like the hometown where my father was born.

“But then I feel a little jealous….”

“Oh, Sun, the mermaid’s jealousy. Can I refuse?”

“What can I do if you reject me? It’s just my one-sided feelings.”

Somehow, Geo's roots are in the same dimension where those humans are running around.

'Strictly speaking, the deep sea country is also our hometown.'

What on earth had happened in the meantime that Geo's roots had migrated to that narrow and barren dimension? Aria clicked her tongue and pondered, holding her chin.

“…Can’t the roots be moved?”

“You’re moving the roots? Are you thinking of making a bonsai tree?”

“Well, maybe.”

“I’m good at that. Do you need help?”

“I’ll take care of it for now.”

“That kind of independence is really admirable.”

“It is an honor, Master.”

I felt I had to think about how I could move the roots of my soul to my sea. Giovanni was the most beautiful human being when he was at sea.

'Of course, before that, I have to think about how I can take responsibility for that and be fully accepted by the teacher…'

Aria continued speaking calmly, as if she hadn't thought about anything.

“Anyway, pay some attention to the ‘Empty City’.”

“It seems that simply creating residents wasn’t enough.”

“That’s not bad, but whatever.”

Aria knew instinctively.

'The world that the teacher drew with the Earth as the subject has a door that opens there.'

So, the more Geo's drawings are of Earth, or the more his works are complete and do not belong to another dimension, the more their roots are embedded in Earth and end up tormenting humans.

‘I don’t have any hostility towards the dungeon’s owner, so I’m not sure if the speed will be that leisurely…’

When have natural disasters been hostile and afflicted humans?

“When are you going to draw the next picture?”

“…And on the day you want to?”

“I see.”

Aria smiled with satisfaction.

'I guess it's just a matter of time.'

I hoped that the dimension where humans teemed would one day enter Geo's stomach.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (104)

Episode 104

It's late to say this, but.

Strictly speaking, 'The City of Emptiness' could be seen as closer to an entry dungeon.

“In that there is a clear entrance and exit.”

It is different from a virtual dungeon where you don't even know where the entrance or exit is, and a villa dungeon where the physical reality is completely exposed without being obscured.

Geo's frame, which only had a passageway, could also be considered an entry dungeon.

“There are also mobile ones in the dungeons you enter, so the frame itself is similar.”

Apart from the three types above, dungeons can also be divided into mobile and fixed types. If we summarize them by saying that they do not stay in one place but continue to move, they can be roughly defined as 'mobile entry dungeons'.

“It’s the first time I’ve seen that form as a frame….”

Originally, the entrance to the dungeon did not have a fixed shape.

'It could be a book, a pit, or a curtain.'

However, most entrances to dungeons are shaped like doors. It's to the point where anyone can tell, "Oh, that's the entrance over there."

If it looked like it would be easy to get into, it was definitely an entry dungeon.

"……."

Even so, we don't usually think of a picture frame as an entrance.

"…If no one had been dragged there in the first place, I wouldn't have even thought of it as a dungeon."

I knew that Geo could enter and leave through the portrait in the gallery. However, the portrait gave off a strong impression of Geo's 'house', so I thought of it as a building that I couldn't enter without his permission.

'It was the same when Hunter Chaara was invited to Geo's cabin.'

Compared to the dungeon that shows the cruel and harsh capital of modern society, 'Portrait of Geo', which has a calm and heavy atmosphere, was different in many ways.

That may be why I didn't realize that the two were similar concepts. It's all just an excuse, though.

'I thought Geo was more like an object all this time.'

Although it was said that there was a possibility of it being a monster, it did not take into account the 'dungeon' that naturally follows such a monster. Even according to the source, Geo is clearly a 'portrait'.

"Then should we treat that portrait as a dungeon…?"

Geo had already created a dungeon by drawing pictures. It is not known whether he drew 'Portrait of Geo' himself, but after 'Breathing Sea', wasn't 'Empty City' also witnessed by people?

“…Well, now it’s harder to say that it’s not a dungeon.”

Yoo Seong-un thought of the black portrait sleeping in the gallery of Bisabal.

It was my will to pour black ink over my face, and with it I was erased from the minds of the world. Only a very few people who had seen the face before knew what the 'Portrait of Geo' looked like.

'I even forget that often.'

It's like erasing history without any sense of discomfort.

“…….”

Isn't that an incredible influence?

“I hope you don’t turn against us.”

It was the 'Portrait of Geo' that posed a threat to humanity by its very existence. If he had the will to turn against humanity, it would be difficult to find a greater disaster.

Why is Yoo Seong-un suddenly talking about this?

“…Phew….”

This was because there was an 'empty city' in front of it.

“You really appeared out of nowhere.”

The place where Yoo Seong-un found this gray picture frame was none other than the subway station.

It was a place that Geo had been to before while exploring Seoul, and thanks to that, Yoo Seong-un was able to come up with a hypothesis.

“This frame appears mainly in the places that Geo, the dungeon master, visited.”

Or somewhere that guy might be interested in.

If you listen to people's accounts, it doesn't only appear in places Geo knows. Sometimes it appears in slums, sometimes it appears on the road, and sometimes it pops out of abandoned buildings.

'People who aren't hunters probably didn't know that this was Geo's painting, so no rumors spread.'

Surprisingly, these frames appeared more frequently in everyday spaces frequented by civilians than in dungeons. Of these, the ones with the highest frequency were spaces that Geo had personally visited.

Yoo Seong-un, who suddenly became very tired, sat down at the subway station.

“Oh my….”

My whole body ached.

“Fortunately, there are no people.”

The current time is 4:16 AM.

It was natural that there would be no people at the subway station, where one had to pay an expensive ticket, as it was a time when modern people, exhausted from fatigue, were all asleep.

'But it's only the 26th, so there might still be some aftereffects of Christmas. And since the subway runs 24 hours a day, I thought there might be at least one drunk person who returns home late after playing for a while... .'

Yoo Seong-un, who was thinking like that, soon nodded.

“…It wasn’t long ago that people gathered like that and started dying at the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’.”

It was an event that took place at the Temple of the Sun, of all places. Even in that place, a virtual dungeon appeared and swallowed up all the people watching the initiation ceremony.

Thinking back then, I can understand why many people are still anxious about gathering together.

“Thanks to that, there were fewer people gathered this Christmas.”

When the number of people increased, everyone moved to a different seat, perhaps recalling the tragedy of the initiation ceremony.

“Anyway….”

It was a good thing for Yoo Seong-un, who didn't want to make a big deal out of it.

'... I'm really touched by this, seeing the citizens living in fear. I hope I don't become so narrow-minded that I can't take care of the garden...'

In his vision, the 'city of emptiness' was captured.

“…….”

It's a little creepy.

‘… I feel like I’m starting to feel disillusioned with the city.’

Having lived for several years as a curator, I could feel the imagery contained in the work.

The city, with its gray buildings that were so dreary they seemed to portray a noisy and chaotic atmosphere, yet also a silence among the crowd where no one seemed to open their mouths.

'But the crowd isn't even visible.'

Yoo Seong-un muttered quietly while looking at the gray frame that made people feel dazed somewhere.

“…They definitely don’t arrest people just because they see the picture frame.”

As I went around selling things myself, I found a total of 4 witnesses. They were all ordinary citizens, not even the Awakened in Seoul, and none of them suffered any damage due to the 'Empty City'.

'Everyone just thought it was a painting hanging in an odd place.'

Among the four witnesses, there was an alcoholic who was hardly a good person. I heard from the neighbors that he lived alone and occasionally did some silly things in front of a convenience store.

'Is that not enough to be considered a villain?'

Or do you have to commit an evil deed directly in front of the frame for it to attack you?

“…I can’t be sure because there aren’t many comparison groups.”

Yoo Seong-un had a history of murder.

'It's not that uncommon a career these days.'

Of course, he didn't just catch and kill anyone, but it happened when he stopped a 5th class citizen or a criminal of a similar level who was clearly causing harm to society.

It is more advantageous to fight with the intention of killing rather than simply subduing.

'But that doesn't mean it was a good thing.'

In such a fierce and harsh era, where would a hunter be who has never killed a single person? But in the end, a mistake was a mistake.

Morally speaking, Yoo Seong-un committed a crime.

Still, the 'Empty City' was quiet.

“…….”

There were many cases.

“…This frame doesn’t feel like it has Geo, the dungeon’s master.”

In that case, this frame could simply be moving according to Geo's commands.

'So, he doesn't have as many emotional abilities as Geo.'

Geo could tell good or evil from someone just by looking at them for a moment.

However, this frame, which simply receives and executes orders, does not have the ability to do so, and may only be able to distinguish between good and evil based on the situation unfolding in front of it. It is a deteriorated version of ‘Portrait of Geo’.

“…If not that….”

He might have judged that Yoo Seong-un or the alcoholics he saw were 'not bad people'.

Strictly speaking, Yoo Seong-un did what he had to do, and the alcoholic was just a nuisance that was annoying enough. Considering that, he may not be a villain worthy of attack by Geo's standards.

'It would be much easier to judge if the drunk had committed a crime beyond that level.'

If he had done anything more than a simple nuisance, then the 'Empty City' was likely only collecting villains who had been confirmed to have committed direct evil deeds.

“…….”

But one thing was certain.

“…Geo’s good and evil are concluded based on his taste.”

If Geo had decided that 'murder' itself was an evil act, Yoo Seong-un should have already been kidnapped by Geo and disappeared.

But the fact that he hadn't done so until now meant that Geo was distinguishing between good and evil depending on the situation.

“I don’t know if this will be a good thing or a bad thing for humans….”

Anyway, it was clear what Yoo Seong-un had to do now.

“…I’m so tired I could die.”

I need to go into that 'Empty City' and check on the condition of the hunter named Park Eun-gyeom.

Yoo Seong-un approached the artwork hanging on the transparent wall.

“How can I get in here?”

A typical entry dungeon didn't require any special conditions to enter. From the dungeon's perspective, the prey would just roll in, so there was no reason to block it in the first place.

'But if Geo is still friendly to humans, then there's definitely a reason to block that part.'

At least I don't want people to just randomly fall into my dungeon and die.

Yoo Seong-un looked at the painting that seemed to make him feel more and more depressed the more he looked at it, and confirmed something in that empty city.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un, who noticed the abnormality, looked at the painting more closely.

“…That’s….”

The long street, the buildings lined up on both sides of it, and the alleys they create.

Something black and whitish caught Yoo Seong-un's eye.

"…person?"

It also looked like a person crouching.

'It's so small that it's hard to see.'

But the black dot sticking out in the clean city that seemed to have no dust was definitely strange.

It was natural enough that it didn't feel particularly out of place, but after looking at it for a long time, I realized that it wasn't a picture that fit the 'Empty City'.

The black dot seemed to be faintly fluttering.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un felt goosebumps for a moment.

“…Is this Hunter Park Eun-gyeom?”

If you don't look for it, you won't even notice it.

Because anyone who saw it could tell it was a ‘painting.’

* * *

“Crunch?”

“Dad, I’m busy.”

“Gurr?”

“I’m looking after your little brother.”

“Kung?”

Honey kept tilting her head, but Geo remained steadfast.

“We must comfort our emptiness even now.”

He was now wrapping the 'Empty City' in a blanket and shaking it affectionately.

Isser, who had visited briefly, nodded with his characteristically affectionate smile and left, but Geo instinctively felt that the 'Empty City' was quite pleased with his care.

“If we had a mouth for our empty stomach, we could have given it food. What on earth do we eat to live?”

“Curr….”

“People? People? Unfortunately, that’s not something you can eat.”

“Khuuuung?”

“I don’t know why my kids always tell scary stories.”

While talking to his eldest son, Geo suddenly noticed that the picture of the 'Empty City' had changed.

"what."

It was in the shape of none other than a meteor cloud.

“…….”

“Gurrrr….”

“I don’t know why you’re getting a bad taste in your mouth, but anyway, it’s not what you think, so calm down, and what on earth is going on? If you’re watching Father Day, tell me the answer….”

The sun god gave the answer.

“Kkuu, kkuu.”

“Are you saying that Mr. Yoo Seong-un is actually in front of our void right now?”

Is this the new generation intercom?

'Has the trend become so popular that it's now back to portraits?'

Of course that couldn't be the case.

Anyway, since the 'Empty City' could be considered one of Geo's home bases, he was grateful that it had an intercom function that he had never put in a frame.

“I almost couldn’t even greet my guests.”

I don't know why that guest was in front of the 'Empty City', but it didn't matter. On the birthday of the sacred Jesus, Geo, who had maintained his purity today, was just happy to see this happy face.

It's been a while, Seongwoon hyung, right?

“Emptiness, open the door. This is Daddy’s friend.”

“ ”

“I think my child just answered. Am I hallucinating?”

“ ”

“My precious baby even babbles well.”

Is there any need to think deeply about life? To Geo, the variables in life were nothing more than the emergence of new content.

He was ready to become an extrovert, despite this sudden situation.

“It’s been a while since I’ve seen your face, hyung.”

Anyway, as long as it's fun, that's fine.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (105)

Episode 105

The moment I came to my senses.

“…….”

The meteor cloud was inside the 'City of Emptiness'.

“…I don’t remember the moment I entered the painting very well.”

At one point, Geo had a record of turning people he encountered in the 'Deep Sea Country' into paint and helping them escape.

I think I went through a similar process this time, but I don't remember much about the time when the meteor cloud turned into paint, just like those people testified.

'I guess it felt like I was a living, inanimate object.'

It was not a very clear impression as it was a very contradictory expression.

“By the way, did Geo check on me?”

Yoo Seong-un remembered the situation just before entering the 'Empty City'.

'A transparent hand reached out to me.'

Something that could be recognized as a 'transparent hand', not particularly visible but with a prominent black suit sleeve, greeted Yoo Seong-un. Unlike the Park Eun-gyeom Hunter incident that was mentioned in the official document, it was a very polite gesture.

‘It was a gesture that somehow resembled Geo’s actions… .’

Geo's demeanor was that of someone who had received strong education or training. His movements were similar to those of a nobleman or a soldier, and the gesture made by the 'Empty City' was exactly like that.

“…It won’t be Geo himself.”

It didn't feel familiar.

“Did the ‘Empty City’ reach out directly?”

I thought about that for a moment, but it seemed more reasonable to think that it was the hand of a monster belonging to the 'City of Emptiness'. In the official document, many of the hands that had kidnapped Park Eun-gyeom looked like that.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un exhaled once.

“…It’s more bearable than I thought.”

The pressure from the 'Empty City' wasn't as great as I had imagined.

“Considering that I’m a Class A Hunter, it’s a pretty comfortable level.”

There was a bit of a stuffy feeling. It felt like someone was pressing down on my forehead, and there was definitely a creepy part, like someone was tracing my spine with a finger.

'But that's about it.'

The kidnapped hunter was a B-class. I don't know exactly what level of B-class he was, but he was quite strong. Considering that such a hunter was taken to a dungeon without warning and that all contact was lost, the burden felt by Yoo Seong-un, who was an A-class, was less than expected.

“Are you being taken care of?”

The route taken to enter the 'Empty City' was different from the beginning.

'That guy was dragged in, and I was escorted here.'

Since the treatment itself is like heaven and earth, there may be a difference in the burden felt.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un muttered without realizing it.

“How is that possible…?”

People often say that they are the 'lords of the dungeon', but in reality, there are few lords who can control the dungeon as they wish. In Yoo Seong-un's view, even the mermaid siblings, who are humanoid monsters, cannot completely control the 'Deep Sea Country'.

In particular, the dungeon owner, the monsters in the dungeon, and the environment were completely separate entities.

The greater the master's ability, the greater the authority, but I have never heard of a master who can control a monster's actions and even regulate its pressure to this extent.

'I guess it's hard to call it a monster.'

Then I wondered how I should explain this dungeon.

'Unless they are evil gods who are treated as monsters, no matter how powerful they are, they cannot create dungeons. They are beings that do not have emotions great enough to create dungeons.'

It was the same for the children of the origin who could not create dungeons.

'They are just children who can exist anywhere, but they don't have the ability to create a dungeon. Those who are almost incapable of physical events and can't even think properly would be able to create such a huge game board.'

As expected, Geo was an out-of-the-ordinary being.

"……."

A meteor cloud with a scratchy neck looked around.

"…It's just like the picture."

A wide open street and buildings of various shapes lined up on both sides. Although it didn't seem like they were limited to a single color, the colorless objects gathered together to create a gray world.

"The fog was so thick that I didn't notice it when I looked through the frame."

It wasn't bad enough to block my vision, but if it got any worse, I could have major issues with my vision. I sniffed around, but there wasn't any smoke that you usually get in the city.

"Just steam…?"

Maybe it was because of my mood, but it felt like I could feel the phytoncide unique to the forest.

'Is it because Geo lives in the forest?'

I wasn't sure.

'It's ironic anyway.'

It looks like a definite city, but the scent coming from the fog reminds me of a forest. It was a harmony that didn't feel out of place at all, and instead, it felt uncomfortable.

“…Are there any monsters?”

Thump… .

Yoo Seong-un moved his feet slowly.

“I thought there would at least be a monster to escort me in here.”

Besides, basically, there are monsters in a dungeon.

Even though there may not be any traps or additional elements, monsters that rush to kill intruding humans are an essential part of the dungeon.

'Well, it would be difficult to compare the dungeons Geo drew with normal dungeons.'

The fact that the monster invited Yoo Seong-un himself in the first place was far from ‘normal.’

“Aren’t there any other rules…?”

Some scholars have defined dungeons as monsters, and gardener Yoo Seong-un agrees with this to some extent. Just as there are no monsters without rules, the same should be said of dungeons.

“I’m sure you all have different tastes.”

Virtual dungeons. Entry dungeons. Villa dungeons. All of these guys swallowed humans under certain conditions.

In addition to virtual dungeons that mainly have specific conditions, there were also examples of entry dungeons that had the condition that 'you must find the entrance' and villa dungeons that had the condition that 'you must be in the location where the villa is located'.

'Other detailed conditions vary from dungeon to dungeon.'

So, if this had the form of a dungeon, there would definitely be such conditions and preferences.

"……."

Well, the dungeon owner did have his own tastes.

'Affirm good and deny evil.'

If that's a rule, then you could call it a rule.

"…Then what happens when a villain comes in?"

For a moment, I thought of the black dot that seemed to have become completely one with the picture, presumably Hunter Park Eun-gyeom.

Yoo Seong-un seemed to have a rough idea of how this 'city of emptiness' would deny the wicked.

'… Are you denying that I am a living human being?'

By making humans into pictures.

"It's creepy."

I found myself whistling without realizing it. It was an attempt to relieve the chills by doing something light.

'It is certain that those who belong to the source will form and break ties.'

Humanoid monsters with advanced thinking abilities and the ability to feel intense emotions might be a little different, but for most beings without such abilities, the rules were simple and clear.

As a gardener, Yoo Seong-un was able to appreciate the appearance of such a source with satisfaction.

'If I hadn't met Geo, when would I have encountered a dungeon like this again?'

If you didn't enjoy the thrill, you weren't worthy of gardening.

"……."

However, even such a gardener felt his life was in danger.

"…Oh, this is it."

Yoo Seong-un turned around.

"I guess I'm not the only one."

"……."

"Should we call this an invisible man…?"

What caught his eye was a black suit standing in the form of an adult male.

Long limbs that matched his body type, which was neither too thick nor too thin. The detailed shape of the suit was a little different from what Geo was wearing, and the shoes he was wearing were the same.

However, Yoo Seong-woon felt a sense of awkwardness at the sight of the man carrying a backpack in his suit.

"…He really does look a bit like Geo."

"……."

The empty suit bowed with a noble gesture. Yoo Seong-woon could sense the gratitude in the gesture, and for a moment he pondered over what part he was grateful for.

'Is it because he looks like Geo?'

They were guys who were full of true love and respect for their master.

“Is… communication possible? I’ve never met a monster with which I could communicate peacefully, other than Geo, so I’m not sure, but is it possible to have a conversation?”

“…….”

The man in the black suit took a pose as if he was resting his chin on his hand, and then formed a triangle with his arms.

“…So it could be and it might not be. Is that correct?”

“…….”

“Yeah, that’s right. I feel like I’m going through twenty questions.”

If it was a monster in a normal dungeon, I wouldn’t have even thought about trying to communicate with it, but this was a very abnormal dungeon. Yoo Seong-un tried to communicate with the black suit with as open an mind as possible.

“Why not? Are you suddenly going to rush at me?”

“…….”

“That’s not it. If not… Are you saying that another entity other than you could attack?”

“…….”

“Oh, that’s good to hear. So are there a lot of those aggressive entities?”

This time, the suit drew a circle with its arms and answered 'yes'.

Perhaps because his fingers were not visible, he bent his arms high above his head as if he were making a crude heart sign. Seeing this, Yoo Seong-un silently handed over the gloves he had in his hands to him.

“Could you please put this on and mark it with your finger?”

“…….”

The black suit made an X with his arms, meaning 'no.'

"…ah."

In his eyes, Yoo Seong-un could tell that this wasn't something transparent inside, but rather just a living, moving black suit itself.

As if to show the evidence, the man in the black suit tapped the glove on Yoo Seong-un's hand with the sleeve of his clothes. If he had a real hand, it would not be visible.

'Then how do I explain the transparent hand I felt?'

It was a bit rude to say that to someone in such a nice suit, but honestly, it gave me goosebumps.

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking, trying hard not to reveal his true feelings.

“I see, excuse me.”

“…….”

“I’m glad you don’t mind.”

“…….”

“Then, are there any other non-aggressive entities besides you? Suits that can communicate peacefully with me like this?”

“…….”

“I see… That’s fortunate.”

Some individuals seemed aggressive, while others seemed peaceful.

'... Let's think about how that's possible later.'

It was obvious that the conclusion would be, ‘It’ll work out because it’s Geo.’ Through repeated learning up until now, Yoo Seong-un had already anticipated the end of his agony.

He put his gloves back on and looked around.

“…….”

Before I knew it, the number of black suits had increased to three.

“…Are those two suits non-aggressive entities to me?”

“…….”

“Oh, no. But they’re not attacking right now. Are they the type that aim for a time-lag attack?”

“…….”

“Triangle… Yes, thank you for your kind reply.”

It seemed like they were going to attack in some way.

'It's dangerous.'

Perhaps the suit that kindly reached out from the 'Empty City' frame was this guy in front of me, or a similar peaceful entity.

But, it seemed that the number of black suits was gradually increasing, making it difficult to rely on them.

'The longer you stay in the dungeon, the more black suits you wear.'

Although the speed was quite slow, Yoo Seong-un gradually felt a strange restlessness.

“…….”

“…….”

Everyone in black suits was staring at the meteor cloud.

‘… It’s not just those two suits that are out in India.’

A gaze that had not been felt before was felt even inside the building.

I felt it in the alleys, and I felt gazes from cars rolling down roads where there had been nothing just a moment ago.

Yoo Seong-un instinctively felt it.

'These are not guys I can deal with by fighting with my skills.'

It felt like a child of the root, a situation that could not be resolved through simple killing, and that reconciliation had to be achieved only in accordance with the opponent's rules and habits.

But he had no idea how much these would grow, or what effect they would have on Yoo Seong-un at that time. And that 'not knowing' aroused fear in Yoo Seong-un, who had a calm personality.

‘… the fear of the unknown is quite dangerous when dealing with the source… .’

As a gardener, I could tell.

'This is a dungeon, but it's also not.'

I wonder if the ability of a hunter that the source kindly gives to anyone can actually have any effect. Even such a basic thing felt like a kind of 'garden' where I couldn't guarantee my life or death.

And you shouldn't enter someone else's garden unless you are the owner.

"…this…."

I was thinking that I should run away before it got any worse.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“…….”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“…Uh, Geo.”

Yoo Seong-un really almost ran away.

'He looks scarier from here.'

My heart, which had almost fallen, began to pound strongly at the appearance of the black cloak.

Since he was doing something against Geo's will, he wanted to resolve it without seeing him if possible. Unfortunately, the situation had come to this because he had failed to rob an empty house, so Yoo Seong-woon quickly gave up.

“Please save me.”

He tried a custom deal.

“I’ll bring you some seedlings next time.”

“Nobody kills Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“That’s really solid.”

What could be safer in a dungeon than the protection of the dungeon master?

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (106)

Episode 106

“I like the honey pot I saw last time.”

“Honey pot? You mean that one with the honey-filled, ball-shaped flowers?”

“Yes, that’s right. I heard that they only sell seedlings because it’s difficult to sprout.”

“Is there anything else you want?”

“I use salt a lot, so if possible I would like limestone.”

“It’s a sagebrush plant, it was in the catalog last time. What else do you need?”

“That’s enough, thank you for your help.”

“Rather, I should be thankful.”

This is a deal that guarantees your life in this abnormal dungeon.

'It's a business with too much left over.'

Yoo Seong-un was a typical hunter of this era who valued his health and life. It was a truly difficult ending to accept that he was swayed by capitalist society and ended up dying during a mission.

‘I wonder if it’s okay to conclude the deal like this…’

He examined the details of the portrait.

“…….”

“Is there a problem?”

“…No, there isn’t any.”

It's something that gardeners always have to think about, but human standards are meaningless to the being of the origin.

If you borrow 3 and pay back 4, but end up paying back 5, then the being of the origin will get angry. Even if it is incomprehensible to humans, Yoo Seong-un knew well that catering to their tastes was the shortcut to longevity.

“Then let’s end the deal here.”

The transaction with the source of existence had to have a clear beginning and end. Yoo Seong-un asked after clearly concluding.

“I don’t know if it’s rude to ask this, but how did you know I was here?”

“The City of Emptiness” informed us that Mr. Yoo Seong-un had visited this place.

“I thought so.”

It would have been even stranger if Geo, the owner of this dungeon, didn't know the state of the dungeon's interior.

'But the more that happens, the more disadvantageous it becomes for me to take out Hunter Park Eun-gyeom.'

It became increasingly clear that Geo had intentionally brought humans here. It was a difficult situation for Yoo Seong-un, who had to do all his assigned work.

'Get angry.'

This portrait has come to take out the human who has shown direct hostility. It will be quite unpleasant for the being of origin who cannot change the choice he has made.

"……."

"Mr. Yoo Seong-un, why did you come here?"

"…I came to work."

Rather, it was better to tell it now.

'Because deceiving Geo may also fall into the category of evil acts.'

Besides, didn't Geo 'promise' that he would save Yoo Seong-un?

"As far as I know, today is Christmas."

"Huh? No, in Korea it's the 26th, so it's not Christmas. Most companies guarantee a holiday, so many people have the day off until today."

"Then everyone is resting, but Mr. Yoo Seong-woon is working."

"When have hunters ever had a holiday? It's a common occurrence."

"Can't people with the job of hunters take a break even on public holidays?"

"Not really, but… well… I guess I guess so."

No matter how angry he was, the source of existence never went back on his words. The atmosphere was not bad at the time, so Yoo Seong-un cautiously opened his mouth, believing that.

"…The reason I came here was to take one person out of here."

"Is it your job to get people out of here?"

“Yes, Hunter Park Eun-gyeom… I’m not sure if you even know his name.”

“Park Eun-gyeom.”

The portrait retrace the three characters of the name.

“…….”

“…….”

And then silence flowed.

It was an eerie silence for a meteor cloud that had been stabbed.

‘… Are you still in a bad mood?’

The original child, who simply imitated stories without the ability to think, and the 'Portrait of Geo' were completely different beings. Geo had clear emotions, and because of that, he sometimes appeared as a monster or even a human.

'That means I've declared that I'm going to do something against that guy's will.'

Besides, since he said, 'I will save Yoo Seong-un,' I couldn't kill him.

'Of course, there are many ways to punish him without killing him, but that's something I have to handle. Anyway, Geo can't be in a good mood all the time.'

Yoo Seong-un had mentally prepared himself to withstand Geo's attack. That was something he had already prepared himself for when he had unintentionally encountered the master of this gray city.

“…….”

The portrait, which had been silent, gestured to the man in black suit.

“……?”

Although it was a difficult action to understand, Yoo Seong-un watched the situation silently.

The black suits, which had been increasing one by one at the master's beckoning, approached him. Then, like servants serving their masters, they bowed slightly respectfully and showed an attitude of listening.

'what?'

Ignoring him, Geo asked the man in black suit.

“Do you know the position of the person named Park Eun-gyeom?”

“Yes, I know.”

Yoo Seong-un was a little surprised. It wasn't simply because something transparent without hands or mouth was imitating human speech. It wasn't because the guy who had only been using awkward sign language until just now was suddenly speaking.

What Yoo Seong-un focused on was the voice of the man in the black suit.

‘… that voice… .’

It was a voice that reminded me of a man in his 30s.

'But that's not a voice that suits that monster.'

The voice of a human being who has been with one self for a long time usually takes on a tone that represents that self.

The voice that the man in the black suit spoke in contrast to his polite and noble gestures, and there was something frivolous and nervous about it.

There was no way that Geo, who had the identity of a painter, would have chosen the voice of his work, Black Suit, carelessly. Even so, if the voice was so incongruous, then this was… .

'…no way?'

Is that Hunter Park Eun-gyeom's voice?

Despite Yoo Seong-un's suspicions, their conversation continued.

“Why did he come here?”

“Yes, I have bullied and neglected weak humans.”

“Then you are an evil person.”

“Yes, he is an evil person.”

It was a strange conversation.

“Is there a problem with getting that human out?”

“No, there is no problem.”

“Then I will do as you wish.”

“Yes, that is also our wish.”

“I understand.”

After finishing the conversation, the portrait looked at Yoo Seong-un.

“I will take it out for you if you want, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

"…okay?"

Although he tried not to show it, he was extremely surprised.

'You're reacting so nonchalantly?'

That was actually creepy.

'We've definitely confirmed that Geo is a being that can feel emotions…?'

If I had emotions, I couldn't help but get angry at someone who broke my rules. If that's the case even among humans, then how much more so with the being of the origin?

'And yet you respond so coolly?'

The gardener's bad habit arose from the indelible doubt.

"……."

It was interesting.

"…Isn't it unpleasant?"

In the end, Yoo Seong-un couldn't hold back his questions.

"I don't know exactly what the situation is, but your subordinates brought him here. And on top of that, Park Eun-gyeom is already a human who belongs here."

"That could be the case."

"But I wonder if it's right for me to just take it like this. If you don't want it, I won't take it. I don't want to treat a guy who doesn't know how precious his comrades are and throws them away as a fellow hunter."

This was the truth. Park Eun-gyeom was not a person worth risking his life to save or recover his body.

'Besides, the request from the association wasn't to save Park Hunter.'

What they wanted was information about the process, cause, and result of the 'Black Cloak' attacking humans. In other words, there was no reason for Yoo Seong-un to save Hunter Park Eun-gyeom.

Geo asked him.

“But didn’t Mr. Yoo Seong-un say that was something he had to do?”

“I did say that, but….”

“Then I can do whatever you want, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“Are you sure there’s no problem…? Are you not offended?”

“It doesn’t matter since it’s something I haven’t paid much attention to from the beginning.”

Geo really didn't know anything. The void had never told him about such a person.

I almost felt sorry for a moment that someone was wandering around in the house I built, but then I was like, 'What if I do this?' when I heard that he was a human abuser and neglecter.

'Even Mr. Yoo Seong-un is said to be a human not worth saving.'

Then it wasn't Geo's part-time job anymore.

But just like I've given gifts to many passersby over the years, if the person wanted it and I had the means, there was no reason not to grant it.

'Above all, this is Yoo Seong-woon's work, so even if the situation is difficult, I have to help him.'

If an office worker goes on a business trip and fails to achieve his goal, how much more will he be criticized at work? As a former upstanding member of society, Geo really wanted to give Yoo Seong-woon what he wanted.

“So, Mr. Yoo Seong-un, you don’t have to worry at all.”

“These are truly kind words.”

And those were eerie words.

‘…I didn’t know that this kind of indifferent attitude would be scarier than being angry.’

He was a being who knew how to show affection to the young and weak, and admire things that were splendid and wonderful.

The fact that such a 'portrait of Geo' responded to this situation with indifference rather than anger was a bit creepy for Yoo Seong-un, who was a human.

'If you were going to tolerate it so easily, why did you take Hunter Park with you in the first place?'

From the conversation between the black cloak and the black suit just now, you might have thought, 'Geo didn't even know that Park Eun-gyeom was here!'

But because the atmosphere of the conversation was so strange, Yoo Seong-un thought it was some kind of show-off theater. Like many children of the origin.

“…….”

That's why Yoo Seong-un had no choice but to come to a strange conclusion.

‘… It was a kind of isolation… .’

Geo is friendly towards humans. In other words, 'Portrait of Geo' could be interpreted as liking the human race, but this portrait also dislikes rude and evil humans.

So Yoo Seong-un thought.

'I don't know if this is consideration for humans from Geo's perspective, or simple self-satisfaction... but this behavior of attacking evil humans could be a way to weed out impure seeds like Park Eun-gyeom so that the average human race value can be polite and good.'

Just as humans slaughter livestock that attack their own kind.

'When I think about it that way, I can see Geo's point of view.'

It was a little creepy, but I felt relieved once I found out.

"…hmm…."

If you feel fear about each of these things, you can't do gardening work.

“Then when can we take Hunter Park Eun-gyeom with us?”

“There is a price to pay to get him out of the Void City.”

"cost?"

The meteor cloud stopped.

“I don’t mind, but do I need to pay that kind of price when I leave…?”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, you can leave as is.”

“Then what about Hunter Park Eun-gyeom?”

“There is a price to pay to get him out.”

“…….”

“That’s what they say.”

Geo was speaking with absolute purity and honesty.

'I don't know either, but that's what the system said.'

And it was Yoo Seong-un's job to interpret it.

"…aha…."

I remembered when Hunter Chaara visited 'Geo's Portrait' before.

'The tea hunter at that time said he didn't offer any price.'

And this time Geo said that the meteor shower didn't require a price.

'Perhaps those who entered the frame upon Geo's invitation do not need to pay a price. Assuming that it is certain that they will eventually leave the frame, the 1:1 rule of once in this world and once in the other world is also maintained.'

However, if you are forcibly dragged into the frame.

'It looks like it's being treated as one picture.'

The only time Geo received payment from Yoo Seong-un was when he drew something for him. In order to bring that into reality and give it to Yoo Seong-un, Geo had to receive something in return as well.

It didn't seem that different from the current situation.

“Then what price should I give you this time?”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, you don’t have to pay me anything.”

“Oh, are you okay?”

“Yes, this time I will receive the payment from a human named Park Eun-gyeom.”

"oh…."

Curiosity arose.

'What on earth do you want in return?'

Geo asked him in a still soft voice, not knowing whether he knew Yoo Seong-un's feelings or not.

“Is it time to leave work?”

“Huh? No, hunters like me don’t really have set quitting times….”

“Do you want to leave work?”

“Of course I want to do that. I just can’t go home because I haven’t finished my work.”

“Then I will send you out.”

Before he knew it, Geo was holding a picture frame in his hands.

"…uh?"

It was the living room of Yoo Seong-un's house.

“Wait a minute, over here….”

“Good night.”

And when I came to my senses.

“…….”

I felt relieved.

The heating is good, so you can feel the warm air on your skin, and the furniture is covered in dust because it hasn't been touched for a while.

A dark house with no lights on, showing that no one was home.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was standing in the living room of my house.

"…oh my…."

Thanks, but it was really creepy.

'What beat should I match this to?'

Is there such a creepy consideration in the world?

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly for a while.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (107)

Episode 107

“One thing is certain.”

Yoo Seong-un made a decision.

“There was no ill will towards Geo.”

“Is that the narrow-minded remark of a guardian who protects my young child, Curator Yoo Seong-un?”

“Please don’t say that, it’s creepy.”

Yoo Seong-un's teeth chattered at Bisabal's insensitive nonsense.

“If you had Geo in front of you, you wouldn’t be saying such nonsense.”

It wasn't easy to act friendly in front of that vast and vast landscape.

Since Yoo Seong-un was a gardener who was familiar with the source, he could treat him so calmly, but there were still many employees who couldn't even say a word to Geo when they ran into him.

At the sight of Yoo Seong-un, Bisabal asked in a secretive tone.

“Would I really not do this in front of him?”

“…Fuck, just don’t even think about Geo for the rest of your life. Do you understand?”

“Oh, that’s too bad. I bought ‘Portrait of Geo.’ I emptied my own wallet and bought it.”

“Then I think you should fix that personality.”

That was the best way for peace for mankind.

“Geo hates the guild leader.”

“What did I do…?”

“You have so much energy, really.”

“Is that a sin?”

“It doesn’t seem like a crime since you haven’t been taken away yet.”

I wish I could drag that snout out a little, but it would be a shame to pass such terrible responsibility on to Geo. Yu Seong-un, who had gathered his wits, returned to the main topic.

“I really didn’t have any ill intentions toward Geo. If that guy really had any hostility or ill will when he dragged Park Eun-gyeom Hunter away, he would have felt a little uncomfortable when I tried to take him away. It would have been like ignoring his feelings.”

But 'Portrait of Geo' showed no regrets.

“Rather, he showed an inclusive attitude, as if he was telling me to do whatever I wanted.”

“Isn’t it possible that he made up his appearance like that?”

“Why would I go to such lengths to make something happen? Of all places, of all places, inside Geo’s stomach….”

I don't know what the limits of Geo's abilities are, but at least I know that the dungeon master can display miraculous powers in his dungeon.

“But the fact that he treated me so kindly shows that he really had no ill feelings.”

“Our Sergio Hunter has a kind heart.”

“It’s a warm smile, as if you’re talking to your grandson… but I hope you don’t do that in front of Geo.”

Even as he said that, Yoo Seong-un half gave up.

“I can’t say for sure since I’m the only one who checked it, but when I looked at it, the reason why ‘Portrait of Geo’ attacked humans was because he was evil and rude.”

and.

“Its ultimate goal was to maintain the quality of the human race.”

“In order to maintain the quality of the human race, ramen….”

“I don’t know if this is a clear metaphor, but there is a way to do it. Sick chickens are culled before they can spread germs… Overly violent animals are kept in quarantine in zoos…”

“Oh, that sounds like a very accurate metaphor to me. It’s a perfect metaphor for me to understand. Does it mean that we look like cattle or beasts to Geo?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“…I don’t know.”

When we were touring Seoul together, Geo was extremely humane, kind, and respectful of others. However, I was confused because I couldn't tell if that appearance was completely different from his appearance when he was in 'Black Cloak'.

“It would be much easier for us to understand if the way we treat people changes according to the change in personality… but I didn’t see a clear distinction.”

Yoo Seong-un showed an embarrassed expression.

“If there is one thing that is certain, it is that it is friendly to the human race.”

“That’s something I knew all along, but it’s become a little clearer now.”

“Yes, it is clear.”

Through this incident, Yoo Seong-un was able to learn one of Geo's habits.

“Geo treats evil and rude humans as if they were a different species from other humans.”

It is not known whether 'Portrait of Geo' regards all humans as livestock, but at least it can be seen that it regards the wicked and rude as livestock. It was such an indifferent and merciless attitude.

“He talked to the invisible man in the black suit in front of me and showed me that he didn’t care about this person named Park Eun-gyeom. I don’t know if he really didn’t know or if he knew and just acted like that….”

Yoo Seong-un recalled the black cloak he had seen in the 'City of Emptiness'.

“It really seemed like he didn’t value anything.”

“So you’re saying there’s no malice? Literally, there’s no murderous intent or hostility.”

“It didn’t seem to matter to Geo whether the human he brought in would be trapped and die, or run away, or go crazy.”

“It’s literally isolation or disposal. And it’s an attitude close to indifference. Geo’s interest is only focused on good or ordinary people.”

“That doesn’t mean that he puts in all his effort to eliminate all the evildoers. It just seems like he deals with those who he sees as they don’t meet the standards of ‘humanity’.”

“That’s really scary.”

The visa holder smiled faintly.

“And that’s it.”

“…What the guild leader said is correct.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“It is not an action that is greatly harmful to humanity.”

If he had been trying to eliminate all the evil on Earth, or if he had been openly influential and showed unconditional favoritism towards the good, it would have been a different story.

However, the actions of these 'Portraits of Geo' do not cause much confusion to humanity.

“I think they just perceived it as a pastime to kill time, like playing with peanuts.”

“It doesn’t seem like they get much enjoyment out of playing, but it doesn’t seem like they have any sense of responsibility or duty either.”

“To begin with, I don’t feel any enthusiasm to the extent that it could be called play or punishment.”

“There is no disaster that threatens humanity as much as the enthusiasm shown by the source.”

“In that sense, Geo’s habits cannot be said to be a great disaster to Earth.”

This was more of an event that just popped up every once in a while.

“At least if you’re careful about how you behave in front of the picture frame, no one will get dragged away. So, this is enough….”

“They can coexist quite well.”

Visabal continued speaking in a definitive tone.

“This is truly fortunate news at a time when humanity has no other choice but to coexist. It will not be a problem for Geo, but for humans as well, so the Association will be able to reduce its burden.”

Even though he did not deny the words of such a traitor, Yoo Seong-un did not let his guard down at all.

“It’s too early to say anything definitively. It hasn’t been that long since we started analyzing ‘Portrait of Geo’.”

“Curator Yoo Seong-un is right. There is nothing more foolish than thinking you have ‘all figured out’ the existence of the source. Especially when it comes to someone like Geo whose identity you don’t even know yet.”

“…That’s the part that bothers me the most. If I could just find out the exact information, I would feel a little better, but it’s because things I don’t know keep popping up like this….”

It was possible to believe that Geo's current behavior would not cause much harm to humanity, but beyond that, it was unknown. It was possible that 'Portrait of Geo' would show another aggressive behavior at some point.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“…It’s been dragging on for too long.”

“Wouldn’t it be better to approach it cautiously and cautiously?”

“That’s if you know the identity.”

He is a curator in name, and he is also a gardener in name.

“I still don’t know what Geo is.”

Even at this point when the year is changing.

“The newly introduced frame, that gray city, was an abnormal dungeon. It felt even more out of place because the basic foundation was similar to that of a normal dungeon. It felt like it was imitating a dungeon.”

and.

“It’s closer to the garden.”

“I think you know what that means.”

“Yes, I know. The garden is also the pulse of the source.”

The 'garden' that gardeners literally put their life into and cultivated to be beautiful and healthy was, in a word, the 'organ of the root'. It was the gardener's duty to take care of the blood vessels, heart, lungs, muscles, bones, and such of the root.

“I’ve never heard of a non-human being tending a garden….”

“We don’t know enough about the source to be that picky.”

“That’s the problem. Every gardener I know is human, but it’s only been 31 years since I learned that.”

“It is only natural that there are things we do not know about the source, where we cannot know the limits.”

“But it is also unreasonable for us to judge Geo as a gardener rather than a human.”

Even if there were monsters that managed the garden, even if there were such a sincere god, it would be impossible for them to create a garden themselves. It was an impossible task that could not be expected of anyone.

“…a gardener can’t do that.”

Yeah, the 'gardener' couldn't do that.

then….

“…….”

“I've thought about this.”

Instead of Yoo Seong-un, who kept his mouth shut, Bisabal continued speaking.

“What if the source is a person?”

Yoo Seong-un did not reprimand him, saying that it was nonsense.

* * *

“My babies.”

After Yoo Seong-un left, Geo was left alone, enjoying the life of a portrait while holding the black suits in his arms.

“I can’t tell you how happy I am that you’ve grown up so well even though your father didn’t take care of you.”

“Yes, thank you for liking it, Father.”

“How could he have grown up to be such a wonderful gentleman? I’m blessed with children, of course.”

The combination of the black cloaks and the faceless black suits was creepy to anyone who saw it, but there was no one here to point that out.

Geo kept mumbling, "My wonderful baby," as he held his new offspring in his arms.

“How can you be this cute?”

My father, or to be exact, he was a monster inside the 'City of Void', so he was more like a grandfather, but anyway, I loved the children who recognized their family and came to me obediently. There was no other sweet and sour vitamin in this harsh world.

“I didn’t really mean to, but you look a lot like me.”

“Yes, we wanted to be like our father.”

“Is this what it means to say, ‘When I grow up, I’ll be an adult like my dad?’ It resonates well.”

“Yes, thank you for creating me in the image that pleases my father.”

“I don’t know how these kids can be so honest and smart.”

Even Geo, who said that, knew that these 'black-suited' people had an objectively quite scary appearance.

Perhaps because they were clumsily imitating Geo, who was originally blunt, their actions were natural like humans, but they also gave off a sense of awkwardness.

Park Eun-gyeom felt a suffocating fear just by looking at them, and even Yoo Seong-un, an experienced gardener, felt an unbearable creepiness. Geo was not completely unaware that others would feel the same way.

'But that's none of my business.'

I can't help but feel personal, but my kids tried their best to look like their dad, so there shouldn't be anyone who says anything about that.

“This sensitive father is moved to tears by the wonders of his children.”

“Please pat me, Father.”

“Father, I love you.”

"father."

“My precious babies.”

Geo's eyes were already covered with thick, sturdy bean pods.

“I hope you don’t mind what people say about you being scared.”

“Yes, if our Father loves us, nothing will be a problem.”

“Even though it doesn’t look very human-friendly, it’s cute to my eyes.”

“Thank you, Father. Hug me.”

“I’m lucky to have children at this age….”

Like these darlings.

It was a truly warm family where everyone cared for each other.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (108)

Episode 108

A few days later.

“Geo, are you awake?”

Yoo Seong-un found 'Geo's Portrait'.

“I brought the seedlings I told you about last time.”

“I am awake.”

“Okay, check to see if it’s the kind you want.”

In the frame, what Geo asked for in exchange for guaranteeing Yoo Seong-un's life was one flower and one tree.

They were the 'honey pot' and the 'salt tree', and as the names suggest, one could obtain honey and salt, respectively.

'Geo prefers such pastoral things, huh?'

Actually, he said that his house was a cabin in the forest. He even asked for various seeds for farming.

'You have a definite taste.'

Yoo Seong-un entered the frame and saw a picture of a honey pot and a seedling of a zelkova tree.

“…….”

“…….”

Geo was petting it as if it were a newborn animal.

‘… or having the skill to communicate with plants… .’

I thought so, since it's not a skill that humans don't have at all.

I don't know exactly what it was, but Geo definitely liked things that were rewarding to take care of, like plants and animals or children.

Soon the portrait gave the answer.

“This is exactly what I wanted. Thank you for accepting my request, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“I’m glad you’re satisfied with that. I’ll organize the edible plants on Earth and in the dungeon later and hand them over to you, so if there’s anything you want, just tell me.”

“I will also prepare a gift that will be helpful to Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

Geo asked, holding the still fragile seedling in his arms.

“Is that all for today?”

“Well, I just wanted to chat about this and that.”

“Okay. I wonder how student Chaisol is doing.”

“Mr. Chaisol? You have now entered the temple.”

Yoo Seong-un brought a nearby folding chair and sat down in front of the portrait as he continued speaking.

“It’s quite late. Originally, I was supposed to go in and prepare to become a priest right after the initiation ceremony, but Father Kang Seo-dam said he was tired because of the ‘Deep Sea Country’ incident and time was very limited.”

“I apologize for causing trouble to our disciples. I tried to persuade them several times, but they still hate humans. I will let you know if there are any results soon.”

“It doesn’t matter because there is no monster that doesn’t hate humans. There is no way to deny that the emotions that form the basis of their power and reason are being used. Still, I feel reassured that Geo-ni is by the side of those mermaids.”

As he said that, Yoo Seong-un thought of the story of the mermaids that were being seen in the 'Deep Sea Country'.

'They say it's incredibly brutal.'

The exact cause is unknown, but it has been reported that the recent sightings of mermaids are more dangerous than the earlier sightings. They say that they are in a state of uncontrolled anger and hatred.

'Is it because Geo told him not to hate humans that his ill feelings grew? But even though I haven't seen it myself, I've heard that his expression of despair and sadness is even greater.'

Judging from Geo's reaction, he seems to be normal when meeting him.

‘I don’t know what the hell is going on… .’

However, it was not uncommon for monsters to display a creepy duality. There was no need for Yoo Seong-un to be concerned about the affairs of monsters that were not even children of the Origin.

“…and Mr. Chaisol….”

Yoo Seong-un soon recalled the cheerful child's recent situation.

“The partner you decided on at the temple was the Galaxy Army, right? I mean, Isser in his younger form.”

“Yes, I remember. Now that Isser is gone, Chaisol will be without a partner.”

“So there was a bit of confusion, but it looks like we’ve finally found a partner.”

This 'Deep Sea Temple' incident had a huge impact.

“I guess there were a few kids who left the temple because they thought they couldn’t do something so dangerous after going through such a terrible experience as a novice priest. Since there happened to be an even number of novice priests left, they had to re-assign their partners from the beginning.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“I guess it can’t be helped since priests are basically two people per group.”

“I heard that a priest’s partner lasts a lifetime. Does that mean he never changes?”

“When you are a trainee priest, you can change partners several times, but when you become a full-fledged priest registered in the temple, your partner is yours for life.”

“I wonder what happens if the other party is no longer able to perform the duties of a priest due to unavoidable circumstances.”

“I wonder if priests who lost their partners can form a new team by mutual agreement, but I know that they usually work alone.”

A representative example was Father Kang Seo-dam, who even appeared alone at the initiation ceremony.

'It's not a common thing.'

Priests in their 40s usually did not seek out new partners. It would be quite tiring to collaborate with someone other than the one they had worked with all their lives.

“From the perspective of an ordinary office worker, one wonders why such a tiring structure was created….”

“I wonder why it is standard for priests to be in pairs. Is there a reason other than tradition?”

“First of all, the traditional part is big. What is it? In the first place, the religious world doesn’t change easily.”

But that wasn't the only reason.

“It is said that the power that a priest can use is most effective when he cooperates with others.”

“Are all priests’ powers like that?”

“At least as far as I know. There are exceptions, but priests who serve evil spirits are strongest when they are alone.”

No priest knew the exact reason.

“But if I were to guess, it would probably be because each god they worship pursues different virtues. Most gods value friendship and peace, while evil gods require destruction and suffering.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“In particular, the Solar Church refers to each priest as a ‘small light.’ Even if it is a faint light, if they all gather together, it becomes a large light, and if they gather together like that, it will become hot, so they especially value cooperation.”

“I guess that’s why the power increases when we cooperate. The more we gather together, the hotter we become. The Sun Church’s temple was warm and pleasant, and now I understand why.”

Although it was a 'Portrait of Geo' painted in black paint and the eyes were invisible, Yoo Seong-un could tell that it was staring at him. Soon, the portrait continued to speak.

“What kind of child is Chaisol’s partner?”

“I don’t know the details, but I do know that he’s a first-class citizen.”

“You are a first-class citizen.”

“Considering that he is a young child, he must be quite wealthy.”

The biggest difference between 1st and 2nd class citizens, even when living together in the city, was economic power. If I was a young child who had just joined the army, I was a 1st class citizen, so my parents were likely to have been 1st class citizens for generations.

“That’s not how they are paired up originally. In order for priests to become partners, they have to share a dormitory room, so they have to be of the same sex. Also, to make it easier for them to understand and rely on each other, they are grouped into similar ranks… This is rare.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“Chaisol’s partner is of a different gender and rank. Well, if he becomes a full-fledged priest, Chaisol will also become a second-class citizen….”

“Is that okay?”

“Why wouldn’t there be any? But I think the number has decreased significantly due to the escape of many prospective priests in this incident.”

“It must have been difficult for the priests to find partners for the children.”

“So this time, they took a lot of consideration into the opinions of prospective priests.”

This was the result.

“I heard that kid was causing a fuss by saying he wanted to be partners with Chaisol.”

“I see, you are a very courageous student. I think it will be fun to meet you and Chaisol later.”

“I haven’t even seen your face, but you’ve already given me such a good evaluation. You’re going to be a great kid.”

It was not that there were no boys among the remaining novice priests, nor were there no third-class citizens. Nevertheless, it would have been difficult to force children of different genders and classes to stick together without their strong expression of their will.

“Eunhyuk Cha, whom I met to buy bungeoppang, said this with a very tired face.”

“That’s really unusual. So, are the two students satisfied with being partners?”

“Chae Sol-kun says he doesn’t have any particular thoughts, but… wouldn’t the other side like it anyway?”

That's because what I claimed came true.

“Of course, we each have separate rooms, but it seems like the Taeyanggyo decided to combine the dorm rooms after this incident. They’ll be divided into separate rooms for men and women. Chaisol won’t be lonely.”

Yoo Seong-un rubbed his tired eyes as he said that there was no need to worry.

“…Oh my, I’m sleepy….”

“You couldn’t get off work?”

“I couldn’t sleep because I was looking into this and that.”

I mainly went around looking into things related to the 'Empty City'.

“…….”

The atmosphere was considerably lightened thanks to the story about Chae Sol, whom Geo particularly cherished.

Yoo Seong-un, who had been observing the situation, then carefully opened his mouth.

“…Thank you for releasing Hunter Park Eun-gyeom.”

Among those he found out was Park Eun-gyeom, who was at the center of this disappearance case.

“I heard that he returned home safely.”

“That’s fortunate.”

“I knew it, but you still act so indifferent.”

Geo really didn't care what happened to the sinner who entered his stomach.

'It might just have been an isolation to make the average human being good.'

Yoo Seong-un understood Geo's indifference.

But no matter how much I thought about it, I couldn't understand how he viewed humans or how he viewed himself.

It was difficult to get to the main point, so he brought up Park Eun-gyeom's story for no reason and continued talking.

“Of course, he was arrested by the Association as soon as he returned home. There is solid evidence that he abused and abandoned his comrades, and what happened in the ‘Empty City’ is also important data to the Association.”

Yoo Seong-un also played a big part in that 'important data'.

“Eun-gyeom Park, that guy, seems to be careful these days because he found out why he was taken away.”

“That’s great, but I don’t have high hopes.”

“Well, humans don’t change that easily. But since the people from the Association are watching, I don’t think there will be any problems.”

“If they do something bad again while the association is watching, that in itself is truly amazing.”

“I think so too.”

Yoo Seong-un chose his words again.

“…You know what? Your name has become really famous these days.”

“How did you become famous?”

“First of all, congratulations, you’ve got a fan. I guess he likes your drawings.”

“I am grateful that you love my imperfect work.”

“Is that too humble of a response?”

Geo's 'work' had great artistic value.

There are two works by 'Black Cloak' known so far: 'The Breathing Sea' and 'The City of Emptiness'.

The former had many stories about how they felt the gaze and breath of people even though they only drew the sea, while the latter said that just looking at it made them feel lonely and sad and made them want to go back to their family and friends.

“Did you make the paint yourself?”

“That’s right. There are many materials in this forest that help me with my work. I get help from them.”

“He said he liked that color because it was so unique. It’s your own color that’s hard to imitate. I heard some people even try to imitate it….”

“I think it would be difficult if there were no materials where I am.”

“Anyway, I was just saying that your work is popular.”

Some people were so fascinated by Geo's work that they felt as if a real artist had appeared. They spent a whole day just appreciating it, and they even said they were ecstatic that there was a world inside it.

It's not just Bisabal who is blinded by his work.

'I hope this doesn't turn into a dangerous atmosphere.'

Geo had an extraordinary ability to charm and sway people.

'There was a time when I thought it was just Giovanni's ability, but even when it was just a portrait, it had a tremendous ripple effect… .'

I thought about this when I was first taken to the 'Temple of the Deep Sea', but if a cult were to form targeting this guy, it would be a real headache.

“Anyway, it seems like everyone is just enjoying the city’s new event.”

“Is that so….”

“Oh, you didn’t like it? Well, I did tell you that it was a story that was actually happening.”

“I don’t like crowds.”

“That’s… yeah, if you cover your face while walking around, it’ll be covered to some extent.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been smiling slightly as if it was okay, soon couldn't hold back the question that came to his mind and asked.

“That’s why I became curious.”

“…….”

“Who are you?”

I should have known that.

“…What should we do?”

Only then was coexistence possible.

I was able to survive.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (109)

Episode 109

“Who are you?”

yes?

“…What should we do?”

“…….”

What?

Geo thought.

'What did I do wrong?'

I couldn't understand what the heck was going on.

'Weren't we just talking about how the world is going?'

I was feeling burdened by myself for becoming famous without my permission, and then this suddenly happened.

Geo, who was suddenly asked the philosophical question of 'Who am I?', fell into an unexpected self-reflection. Even though he was the most thoughtless person in the world, Geo knew that the question just now was quite serious.

'But that makes me even more incomprehensible.'

It was as if parents were sitting across from their children, lamenting, "Son, how should we treat you?" And Yoo Seong-woon was not Geo's parent. Geo was a grown man who had a job and then lost it.

'Why? Why me? Suddenly needing career counseling?'

I couldn't figure out at what point Yu Seong-un became serious.

“…….”

“…….”

As the silence grew longer, Geo's confusion and anxiety grew.

'... Since you asked me seriously and with all your might, I should answer with all your might and with all your seriousness. That's the right thing to do as a human being, but since I don't know anything, I have nothing to say. To think that I, Sergio, who is synonymous with the evils of spoon-fed education during my school days, have come to know that my crisis management skills are lacking.'

Wouldn't it be possible to give an answer only if you understand the situation?

‘Who am I…?’

Is that so?

'If we really have to be specific, is it a portrait possessed by a ghost…?'

It would be the word that could most clearly express Geo's identity at the moment.

Geo, who felt hesitant to call himself a 'ghost' even though he wasn't even dead, answered after a moment of thought.

“I am a portrait.”

“…It’s a portrait.”

“I know what you are worried about, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“…….”

“But I can’t understand.”

I was sincere.

'Where can you find a haunted portrait as harmless as mine?'

Recently, Geo has been doing some image management because of a sense of crisis that 'if he looks easy, he'll be taken to the lab.'

Geo didn't think that he had ever achieved anything great enough to pose a threat to Yoo Seong-un.

'But looking at Yoo Seong-un's reaction now, he is clearly afraid of me.'

To be exact, it seemed that he was not afraid of Geo himself, but rather worried about the accident he might cause someday.

It was embarrassing for Geo, who only knew how to stay home, draw, and eat. He revealed his own idle nature.

“I am just an ordinary person who likes to draw, cook for myself and enjoy meals with my family, and sleep in a bed filled with the spring breeze.”

Do you know Pokemon?

'I'm going to sleep. Just sleep.'

It is a lazy, healthy, and harmless beast that repeats the cycle of eating, sleeping, and pooping.

“That is a fact that does not change even if I am a portrait.”

"…okay?"

“I think Mr. Yoo Seong-un knows that well.”

How could my brother, of all people, have such a misunderstanding?

'You know that no matter how the world knows me, I'm just a talking portrait, bro. Trust me in my insignificance.'

It was Yoo Seong-un who had been with him since the beginning, but it seemed that he had momentarily confused Geo's level of danger due to the noise of the world. It meant that his image management had been successful, but he was not happy about this situation.

By the way, his risk level converged to 0. It was a figure that was even worse than that of fire ants. If you compare fire ants that can cause blindness with Geo who can't even bite for fear of his teeth, let alone the acid, he was clearly defeated.

“I understand why you might be concerned.”

Geo thought that this problem was caused by a lack of communication.

“We didn’t have enough time to understand each other.”

If Yoo Seong-un had known how much of a loafer he was at home, exchanging fake messages with Geo himself, he would not have had such ridiculous worries, like a tiger worrying about a rabbit's violence.

“Like many people who struggle and explore their own identity, I am one of them. I also do not know exactly what I am.”

“…….”

“So why don’t you check it out for yourself?”

Geo said it with pure intentions, really wanting to clear up the misunderstanding.

'Mr. Yoo Seong-woon ran barefoot and found an emptiness that was somewhere in Seoul. He even worked on Christmas to save a person named Park Eun-gyeom, who I didn't even know existed. This means that he is a truly pitiful and capable office worker.'

And such people had to be fed to their fullest until they were fat. Originally, a well-fed person did not think nonsense or talk nonsense. These were all the evils brought about by a society that was exhausted.

so.

“I would like to invite Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

There was no reason for Geo not to feed Yoo Seong-un his fill.

* * *

A meteor cloud was drawn in 'Portrait of Geo'.

* * *

“…….”

The first thing I felt was.

'ah.'

It's warm.

It was a gentle spring breeze.

“…….”

A meteor raised its head and looked at the sky.

“…It’s blue.”

It was a clear sky, a rare sight these days.

Above that sky, large, hanging clouds floated as if they were sleeping, and above them was a transparent atmosphere that looked as if dew might fall at any moment.

Here was a sky that was both calm and peaceful.

“It’s a sight you don’t see on Earth.”

“The air in Seoul was definitely pungent.”

“…Even if it’s not Seoul, well….”

Yoo Seong-un found himself staring blankly at the sky.

“Where can you see a sky this blue?”

It is said that a long, long time ago, the Earth had such a transparent sky. This was quite unfamiliar information to Yoo Seong-un, who was born just before the great disaster. It was strange that the Earth had ever been like that, even if it was a dungeon.

'If you look closely, this place is also a dungeon.'

Yoo Seong-un tilted his head.

‘…Why doesn’t it feel familiar?’

It was not normal to yearn for a sky I had never seen before.

“…What a beautiful sky….”

“Do you like it?”

“Do the stars appear in the evening?”

“It’s high enough to see the Milky Way.”

“The Milky Way, it’s amazing.”

Now, you can enjoy the Milky Way, which you cannot see on Earth even if you go to the desert, to your heart's content from this cabin.

The head of the meteor that had been looking up at the sky as if possessed slowly lowered.

“…….”

His eyes contained a forest of soft colors.

“This is the forest you were talking about.”

“If you go a little deeper, you can meet my friends.”

“You mean forest beasts?”

Just then, a deer with a long neck revealed its face between the bushes.

"oh."

It was a fairytale-like, beautiful deer with eyes that sparkled like jewels.

When I listened closely, I heard birds chirping. When I turned my gaze, I saw several birds sitting on tree branches, looking down at me.

As we followed the fluttering feathers of the swans, we saw a narrow, shallow waterway flowing gently along the bottom.

When I took a deep breath, it smelled sweet and fragrant, like flowers or nuts.

“…….”

The stream, bathed in sunlight, rippled like a jewel, and the fish swimming through it occasionally swished their tails, adding to the sound.

The pebbles lying beneath the glass-clear water sparkled like shiny marble.

“…This is really….”

It's peaceful.

“I guess I don’t want to come out.”

It was a peace like the tomb of a wise old man.

“I’ve always seen you in portraits, but I never knew you were this great.”

“Are you enjoying the view?”

“It’s really fun. I wonder what’s inside the forest, and what it would be like to take a nap.”

There was a tranquility here that made people lazy.

“It might be dangerous.”

There wasn't much of a sense of oppression, but the sense of comfort was so strong that the feeling was like a swamp.

If a spineless person were to be brought in, he would forget his own self and wish to become a sculpture in this forest.

'That doesn't mean I have any ill will toward Geo.'

This forest, too, had no malice, not even kindness.

'It just exists like this.'

That was nature.

This was nature, which held a longing that humans could not handle. It was like a banquet of the gods that humans could not handle.

If I enjoyed this peace without being prepared, I would lose everything.

“…….”

… Cha Ara, a F-class hunter, has managed to endure this place.

'I guess his love for his family on Earth was so great that he didn't turn a blind eye.'

With each exhalation, my eyes would tingle with longing and my fingertips would tingle with happiness.

It was a peace that was difficult to endure for those who were foolish, lacked courage, and had a weak ego.

“…What should I find out here?”

“I didn’t invite you here because I wanted you to find out something about this place.”

“Then why did you invite me?”

“I just wanted to have fun together, without any major meaning. As we get to know each other, we won’t be scared.”

As he spoke, Geo had already taken off his cloak. The young man with a strangely expressionless face continued speaking.

“There was no reason not to share what I had with my friends.”

“…Because we’re friends….”

The portrait called Meteor Cloud his friend.

“…Do I look like a friend to you?”

“…Was it my mistake?”

“No, if it’s okay with you, I wish I had a friend like you.”

I wanted to communicate with the source.

“Because I’m a gardener.”

Here was a source of conversation.

“I am entranced when I see such a beautiful garden.”

“…If you like it that much, it’s difficult.”

“I just meant that I really like places like this.”

“If that’s the case, then that’s good.”

“You live here, right?”

Yoo Seong-un looked at the portrait.

“Did you make this place?”

“I drew it.”

“What happened?”

“What happened?”

“That’s unusual.”

“I think so too.”

“…….”

Soon, Yoo Seong-un asked.

“You know what? Here, it’s connected to you.”

“Because I am the owner of this place.”

“I know you are the owner of this place.”

But that's not what Yoo Seong-un was saying.

'This garden is soon to be Geo's portrait.'

This frighteningly peaceful world and ‘Portrait of Geo’ are not separate entities.

But that was natural. Geo is a portrait, and this world exists within that portrait. Everything in the portrait centered around Geo's ego cannot help but be him.

“Can only the things you draw exist here?”

“No, even things that aren’t like that happen spontaneously without me knowing.”

“I see. I knew it. Can you take it out of the frame?”

“Yes, I can take it out of the frame. Do you need anything?”

“No, I’m just… looking into this and that.”

Dalgrak.

“…….”

Transparent water birds sat on the branches. Among them was Honey, whom Geo called his son.

“…Because there are a lot of interesting things here.”

Yoo Seong-un couldn't read their gaze.

It seemed like a warning not to disturb this peace, or a welcoming of the meteor cloud invited by their parents, Geo, or just a camera watching without any emotion.

They had neither ill will nor good will, or perhaps both.

“…….”

Where does this shameful, crying longing come from?

“…That must be your cabin.”

“That’s right. Student Cha Ara came straight inside, so I couldn’t show her the forest.”

“Can I take a look?”

“Excuse me, I forgot to tell you that you could enjoy it as much as you wanted.”

“Okay, thanks.”

With Geo's kind permission, Yoo Seong-un swept the cabin's walls with his hands.

‘… It’s warm.’

And I felt a faint vibration.

It was the sound of a dead tree's heart beating.

“…Here I am.”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“You are breathing.”

This was a living thing.

“I don’t think so.”

It was also inanimate.

“Am I saying something weird?”

“That’s what I heard.”

“Thank you for inviting me though, I really like it.”

“I think you’re saying this because you’ve been very tired lately.”

“If I were to die, I would want to die in a place like this.”

A gardener is buried in his garden.

“What a wonderful garden this is.”

This is the source.

That was a definitive answer to my question.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (110)

Episode 110: Geo's cabin was designed to be a comfortable environment for anyone. "The air is very mild." "I think it's because it's always spring weather." "That could be true, but…" There was a sense of stability, as if he were in his parents' arms. "…I think I'll sleep well if I sleep here." "That's true, too." Geo nodded and soon asked. "Is there a meal you'd like?" "…Oh, to treat you to a meal?" "That's why I invited Yoo Seong-woon." "That was the purpose." For Yoo Seong-woon, who had accepted the invitation in order to analyze Geo's identity, it was a bit embarrassing. 'Well, there's no way a guy like this old lady would treat guests carelessly.' Regardless of the purpose, Geo had accepted Yoo Seong-woon here as a guest. Since Geo already gave gifts to everyone he met, there was no way he wouldn't treat Yoo Seong-woon. "Anything would be fine, but if I said that, you'd hate it." "There's no such thing as 'anything' in the world." "But I really don't have any preferences. I don't have any preferences." "Then I'll prepare whatever I want. Is there anything you can't eat?" "No, I don't have any allergies, so it's fine." "Understood." As Geo nodded, something approached the kitchen, making a plop-plop-plop sound. What could it be? Yoo Seong-un's eyes were drawn to the white cotton ball. "Thank you for helping me greet our guests, Father." "Kku." A teddy bear holding a teacup… ? "……." No, a teddy bear? '… The teddy bear brought a welcome drink?' Yoo Seong-un was confused. Yoo Seong-un, who often encountered the existence of the source, was particularly sensitive to the energy of non-humans. To that extent, he could easily figure out what kind of being they were, and in his opinion, the teddy bear in front of him held an energy close to divinity. '… Wait a minute, if it's a divine power that resembles this sun… .' After making his judgment, Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo. "… Your father?" "Yes, that's right." "Then you are the previous sun god?" "Yes." "Thanks to you, I understood." Although he did not have divinity itself, he had an energy similar to it, and the unique tingling warmth of the sun that he had felt from Geo many times. Perhaps this teddy bear was the sun god who had inherited his divinity and had the remaining power. "No matter what, he usually enters a teddy bear…?" "You said you were used to this body, so I couldn't change it." "I don't understand that either. How could a god be used to a doll's body?" "I got used to eating in this body…." "You are the cause in the end." "Yes." "……." Yoo Seong-un awkwardly accepted the teacup that the sun god had handed him. "… Thank you." "Kuk-kuk." Did he just laugh? 'I guess I get to see gods laugh as I live.' Of course, the fact that the sun god was inside an old teddy bear was surprising in itself. "How strange. Usually, previous and later gods don't get along." "Is there a reason you don't get along with your father? We're family." "Hmm…." There are many reasons. "…I'm guessing that it's because their way of thinking is so different. Gods who have to govern the life, death, and dimensions of living things have different scopes of thought even if they inherited the same divinity." It takes a very long time for one era of gods to end, so it was similar to how primitive people and modern people have difficulty getting along. "It's especially so when a person becomes a god after being human." "……." Geo asked. "Then am I a god?" "…Oh… That… Hmm…" "There are gods who don't do things like that. There's not much to gods." "…I think you can think whatever you want." "I guess I'm a human after all. There's not much that's different." "Then that must be it." Geo seemed to think of himself as a 'human who inherited the qualification of divinity.' If that's not a god, then what is? But since he himself is, Yoo Seong-un kept his mouth shut. 'It's true that Geo's ego wasn't consumed by divinity.' Becoming a god meant taking on the qualifications of nature and destiny, and giving up the thought of being a living being. Nevertheless, Geo still enjoyed eating, was good at cooking, and found satisfaction in sharing with others, so it was definitely problematic to call him a god. No matter what happened, that 'Geo' would not change. "……." Because he was the source? '… How could such a being exist?' Yoo Seong-woon watched Geo enter the kitchen, saying he was going to prepare a meal. 'I don't think he's not the source. There's no way I, a gardener, would be confused about that. This portrait is the source in a form that humans can recognize, and a form close to a person.' However, he couldn't understand the process. 'It's not simply living on the source. If that were the case, this space and Geo should have been separate entities. However, if they're not, and they're attached like bones and flesh…' As Yoo Seong-woon was pondering, a teddy bear approached him with soft steps. "Huh?" "Kkuu?" "… I'm sorry, but I don't know what you're talking about." "Kuu, kukuku. Kku," "……." Yoo Seong-woon felt embarrassed at the sight of the teddy bear swinging its cotton ball in front of him. 'Is it blasphemy to find God cute? Religion isn't my specialty.' Even though he didn't have the divinity that could be called the heart of God, it was true that he was still a being close to God. Yoo Seong-woon watched him closely, worried that he might make a mistake with the teddy bear filled with cotton. "…Ah." Soon, Yoo Seong-woon picked up the teacup. "Drink?" "Ku." "Thank you." Yoo Seong-woon was momentarily surprised by the teacup that fit comfortably in his hand. "…Oh…." This feels good. 'It's smooth, but soft.' Should I say it feels like touching silky fur? It was definitely a solid teacup, but it was soft enough that it felt like it would soak into my hand, and it was considerably light compared to its stable thickness, making it comfortable to hold. 'The grip is also good.' It was shaped to be easy to hold, even though it wasn't made for Yoo Seong-un's hand. "It feels soft somehow…" It was like a teacup made of clouds or whipped cream. "As expected, Geo doesn't waste even one teacup." "Kuuuku." "I'm sorry, but I really don't know. What did you say?" The white teddy bear with a golden color like lightly toasted rice immediately pointed at something. "…Ah." It was Honey. "Kurur?" "…Didn't we see that before? I was invited? A guest?” “Kunguk.” “It feels like they’re looking out for me.” He wondered why the teddy bear was pointing at Honey, but it seemed to be trying to tell him that Geo had also drawn and made this teacup. Yoo Seong-un understood without realizing it. “Somehow, it felt different.” The light pink tea inside also smelled good. “…This is…” A refreshing sweetness that was similar to vanilla bean, yet completely different. There is a sharp part somewhere, and a rich side like honeyed milk, but the lightness unique to plants adds to the flavor, making it not burdensome. Yoo Seong-un narrowed his eyes. 'Is this really a tea that people can drink?' He used his emotion skill without realizing it. [Tearful Silk] [Rank: -] Flower tea made by maturing the weeping buds that grow in the veins of destiny. The unique sharp flavor of unripe weeping buds lingers faintly, adding variation to the sweetness. It is processed directly by Geo, the master of the forest, so even the human body can accept it. The moment you drink it, heat gathers in your eyes and your optic nerves recover. It is effective in nullifying mental skills. "....." I don't know. 'It's edible, you know.' Yoo Seong-un poured the small amount of tea into his mouth. "...It's sweet." Usually, tea is just about sweet, but this tea, which didn't even seem to have sugar in it, was sweet enough to make you dizzy for a moment. It seemed to have filled the sweetness limit just right. 'It also has a pungent scent like pepper.' Sweetness and pepper, it's a bit strange, but when I drank it myself, I could feel that the two scents were well-blended without being separate. My head felt full of the clear sweetness and the tingling scent that stabbed my brain. It was a pleasure that was hard to take my time with, like a course meal that was served nonstop. 'This will be hard to enjoy leisurely...' At that moment, Yoo Seong-un frowned. "Ugh." I felt my eyes burning like my tongue had eaten something spicy. It was a strange sensation that was hard to call painful, but it felt like putting in a mint-scented eye cleanser. After waiting for about three seconds, the sensation that had been burning my eyes disappeared in an instant. "...I guess that's why it's called 'Silk That Makes You Blossom Tears.'" My sensitive organs were getting hot, so I shed a few tears. 'I definitely feel like my vision has become clearer.' Yoo Seong-woon thought again that it would be difficult to enjoy it comfortably. How could he comfortably drink tea that had a rich flavor and aroma that would make his mouth swollen, that would make his eyes water after drinking, and that even had the effect of improving his eyesight? "……." He was getting free eyesight with just one cup of tea. "I feel so refreshed..." "Gurur?" "…Have you tried this too?" "Kung." "It was delicious." Yoo Seong-woon licked his lips. 'It feels like I've come to a place where I shouldn't be.' The favor of the source was too much. There were many stories on Earth of 'people who set foot in the world of gods and had their human identity threatened.' 'For example, in the East, there's the story of Dowonhyang.' It would be difficult to say that it was exactly the same situation, but he couldn't help feeling that sense of crisis. 'It's burdensome..' He felt like he would become immortal if he stayed here for three days. * * * Meanwhile, the landlord was completely unaware of Yoo Seong-woon's feelings. "Hmm." Geo was thinking about what to serve to Yoo Seong-un. "Koreans are all about rice." He said. "All we need is rice, side dishes, and soup." There was rice freshly cooked at dawn, and the rice had a very good flavor because it was made with various vegetables and herbs boiled in water. The faintly greenish grains of rice were especially sweet and savory. "Next, side dishes…." There was a salmon caught from the "breathing sea," and there were hams and sausages stored in the basement storage, and various vegetables were growing well in the garden behind the cabin. "I'll grill the fish, steam the meat, and stir-fry the vegetables." Yoo Seong-un spoke to him from the living room, perhaps hearing his strangely determined muttering. "Geo, can I walk out as a human?" "You'll walk out healthy on two feet." He had to be prepared to become a pig, though. "I'll send that skinny office worker home full." Geo decided to stake his honor on his grandmother, who was the village's big boss. He prepared a bone soup that he had made a while ago. The soup made by boiling the bones of a deer was incredibly savory, and adding some chopped green onions would be enough to make a soup. 'It doesn't take that long to cook, though...' Geo called Dana, who was lying in the kitchen. "Daughter." "Meow." "Are you just crying because it's annoying?" "Mwah." "You're back to normal." Geo handed Dana a basket. "Could you go to the garden and pick some eggplants and green onions?" "Mwahhhh..." Fortunately, Dana didn't refuse the errand. "What a wonderful thing." Dana, who had grown to the size of a regular cat, stretched her legs like an arch and went out the back door with the basket in her mouth. Honey, who confirmed her appearance, followed her younger brother's errand. 'I'm sure you'll do well since you've come all the way to Honey.' Geo ate rice with relief. It was a rice ball generously filled with the kindness of country grandmas. The light and deep scent unique to Chaesu stimulated the taste buds from a thousand miles away. And it would stimulate Yoo Seong-un's taste buds too. 'Become a pig, yuck...' Geo, who spent his childhood in the arms of his grandmothers, was taught to share a lot when he had something to eat. Oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (111)

Episode 111

Yoo Seong-un was terrified that the feast of the gods would be served, with the legs of the Kraken fried in the blood of the Phoenix and decorated with the heads of hatchets, but contrary to his worries, the meal Geo prepared was simple.

‘… No, it’s ordinary.’

And it was abundant.

A large grilled fish in the middle of the table, steaming meat in brown sauce. Stir-fried vegetables that seem to include tomatoes, onions, and bok choy. Rice balls rising up to the top of the bowl, and bone soup with green onions and seafood.

‘It looks like a table made up of whatever is available, but the combinations are subtle… .’

For some reason, the table was made up of creatures that had never been found on Earth before.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un didn't use his emotional skills. It wasn't a wise decision, but after reading the exact contents and effects, he didn't think he'd be able to eat in his right mind.

“…It looks delicious.”

“It will be delicious.”

“Yeah, I guess so.”

He gave up.

'Surely Geo wouldn't lock me in this cabin.'

It wasn't that he didn't worry. Didn't the hunter Park Eun-gyeom pay the price for staying in the 'City of Void' for a few days and becoming a complete painting? Strictly speaking, this place was also a painting.

In Greek mythology, Persephone was linked to the underworld with Hades for nothing more than a few pomegranate seeds. In a world where gods exist, Meteor Cloud couldn't help but feel even more uneasy.

'But even if Hunter Cha-ara ate here, it's not like she couldn't go home.'

I had already heard that Geo had personally invited him and even fed him. It didn’t look like a very different meal than it is now, so I didn’t think there would be a big problem if Yoo Seong-un ate it.

“…You’re really good at cooking.”

However, what Yoo Seong-un was worried about was whether he could leave the painting in the same condition he entered it in.

Seeing that my already good eyesight had become clearer, I thought I was wrong. Soon, I would be able to observe the cells of living things with my naked eyes.

“And the hands are big.”

“Is the fish a bit big?”

“Does the fish look big?”

Of course, he was surprised by the fish that was placed in the middle of the table. First of all, it was not an aquatic creature that Yoo Seong-un knew, and its size was almost the size of a plump winter seasonal mackerel.

“Of course the fish is a bit big.”

Yoo Seong-un saw the stewed meat.

“That guy is no pushover either.”

“It’s Dongpa Pork.”

“Are the Dongpa Pork we are thinking of now different?”

“I made it with the thought of Dongpa pork, which is often found in Korea.”

“What kind of Korea have you been to?”

Even Chinese restaurants don't serve it like that.

“I’m not lying, I just make wedding cakes.”

“3-stage frozen pork….”

“It’s a word I’ve never encountered before in my life.”

I also wondered how they managed to make Dongpa Pork in such a short period of time.

“Honestly, I don’t know much about cooking, but doesn’t Dongpa Pork take a long time to make?”

Simply put, Dongpo Pork is a Chinese dish made by stewing pork for a long time. It is usually cut into cubes and stewed in a soy sauce-based sauce, and is characterized by a soft texture that can be chewed with the gums.

“I asked a Chinese restaurant before and they said I would have to wait a day.”

“Since it wasn’t prepared in advance, it must have been fresh and warm Dongpa pork.”

“If you want, let’s go together next time. No, so what the heck is this….”

“Thanks to Honey and Dad’s help, the time was shortened.”

“Ah, I see. I understand. So, can I eat this?”

I guess it's not something humans can eat?

'A three-stage Dongpa meat created by the combined power of the children of the origin and the sun god?'

I don't know what it is, but I felt like if I ate it I would have to stop being human.

“…Just in case Hunter Chaara stops by.”

“Yes, there was a time like that.”

“Did that friend of yours also… help you prepare the meal?”

“I was in charge back then.”

“Why me?”

"yes?"

“No, that came out wrong.”

Why on earth are you doing this to me?

'If this continues, I won't be able to feel at ease.'

Until just a moment ago, I had been patting myself on the back, thinking, "Hey, Hunter Cha-ara was fine, so I should be fine too." But when I heard that the meal preparation process was different back then, I couldn't help but worry.

'This is why the authors who call themselves gods have no consideration for humans.'

Yoo Seong-un swallowed his sigh with difficulty.

“…I’ll eat well.”

“I hope you enjoyed it.”

“I don’t know why I see greed in your eyes.”

You're a guy who can show greed too.

“I learned a lot today.”

If you think about Geo's habits, it's probably close to him imitating human emotions to communicate according to the situation, but anyway.

“What kind of greed are you?”

“I know this may sound rude, but I wish you would gain some weight….”

“I don’t know if it’s rude, but am I really going to walk out like a pig?”

“…….”

“Geoya?”

Anyway, around the time the meal started.

“Haaa ...

“Oh my.”

There was an incident where Anticat Dana was jaw-dropping when she saw a human, Yoo Seong-un.

“I’m sorry, Mr. Yoo Seong-un. My child is very shy, so I caused him trouble. I will make him reflect on his actions.”

“No, it’s natural for monsters to hate humans. It’s also a rare experience to see the jaws of an anti-cat that would run away at the sight of a human….”

Yoo Seong-un rather liked it. Through the mandibles of that jewel cat, Yoo Seong-un was able to prove that he was still human.

Anyway, now the meal really began.

"…oh."

It was delicious.

“This is the heavenly table.”

“You are too kind.”

“It was a rather objective statement.”

Although I was a little worried about the aftereffects after eating, the food Geo prepared was really delicious. I could feel my tongue being happy even if I just ate the food without adding a single lie.

“The color of the rice is unusual.”

“I added vegetables and made it.”

“Oh, you can cook rice like that too?”

“It’s also delicious when made with bone broth or seafood broth.”

“It’s strange.”

I thought rice was made with just water. It might be a strange thing to say to someone who is the source, but Geo was indeed multi-talented.

“…….”

Even this strangely friendly appearance was probably close to a camouflage to get along with humans.

'... There is no other way to ease a living creature's guard as easily as eating. It is especially intimate because you cook for them yourself.'

I thought there must be a reason why Geo enjoys cooking and giving gifts. He is the only one who looks scary and loud.

'It certainly worked. Quite a few of the citizens who are out looking for Black Cloak these days are out to get a taste of the snacks he's handing out.'

In that sense, this kind of cooking skill could be said to be bait to lure humans. Yoo Seong-un nodded inwardly.

“It’s really grainy, not a single grain is crushed.”

“This is a meal I prepared with care. I’m glad you complimented me.”

“I don’t know how they make this kind of food.”

The texture was chewy enough to be similar to the chewy rice made by a famous sushi artisan, but not so chewy that it was unpleasant. Honestly, it was enjoyable on its own.

“It tastes good too.”

It didn't seem to be seasoned in any way, but the strange bitterness unique to vegetables, the savory flavor that seemed to flow from them, and the deep aroma that came out of it, like drinking hot fish cake soup on a winter day, were fantastic.

“What are we going to do?”

“I went into this and that.”

“…….”

It had been a while since he had enjoyed the taste of food, but soon, Yoo Seong-un became ominous. He realized once again that it was impossible to enjoy a comfortable meal in the stomach of the origin.

“…Is it just my mood? Why do I feel healthier now?”

“It was worth adding herbs.”

“Herbs? What herbs?”

No, wait a minute.

Herbs from the source?

“You used that to cook rice?”

“Isn’t it delicious?”

“Do you usually use herbs to make food taste better?”

“There is no reason not to use it.”

“That’s… true.”

Yoo Seong-un was convinced.

“There is no reason….”

To Geo, the source.

'It feels like eating bread baked with 500-year-old elixir.'

It is certainly true that there is no reason why it should not be done, but the thought of it being extravagant did not disappear. If the pharmacists of Earth found out about this, they would shed tears of blood.

“…I guess it would be okay to think of the medicine as something that tastes good.”

“It seems like you don’t necessarily need to take medicine that is good for your body.”

“Yeah, I think that’s a good idea.”

If you think about it, it's not that you make delicious rice with medicine, but that you make delicious medicine with rice.

‘… No matter what, I still feel like something is stuck inside. I just learned that even eating can go beyond the realm of humans… .’

Perhaps he considers himself an ordinary person, but for Yoo Seong-un, who personally experienced this meal, it was burdensome. However, it was so damn delicious that he didn't want to put down his spoon.

"under…."

I know this is just bait to lure humans and various creatures, but I still think Geo could have been a little less good at cooking. Humanity was in danger.

“If I make rice balls with this, it will be delicious.”

“It’s really delicious. If you ever go on a business trip, I’ll pack it for you.”

“No, that… okay. Thank you.”

It's delicious, so I won't turn it down.

'I don't feel like my body has changed dramatically just because I ate it.'

Compared to the tea that improved my eyesight that I had at first, this meal that made my body feel a little more refreshed was ordinary. This was enough to blow away the fatigue that had built up from working overtime for several days.

'Actually, that's a great thing, but I've been through so much that I'm able to keep my composure.'

To be honest, I was quite scared of just the rice, but I couldn't just sit there because the person who had prepared the meal was watching me closely. Yoo Seong-un slowly turned his eyes to the fish.

"……."

"Shall I put it on?"

"No, it's okay."

Even when I look at it again, I am still amazed by its sturdy appearance.

"What kind of fish is this…?"

"It is a fish that lives in the 'deep sea country.'"

"I see, that could be possible."

There were quite a few guilds that used a dungeon as a farm or a breeding ground. Thinking about that, it was understandable why Geo would go to the 'Deep Sea Country' to get food ingredients.

"It's the first time I've seen this species…."

"In Earth terms, it's a fish that's a mix of salmon and halibut."

“What kind of fish is that?”

“It’s a fish with a strong salmon flavor and a halibut texture.”

“The universe is truly vast.”

Yoo Seong-un took a piece of flesh from a crispy fried fish.

“…It’s definitely an oily orange color.”

But it didn't look as oily as salmon.

“Oh, it’s moist.”

“I tried changing the firewood in the stove. How does it smell?”

“This was baked in an oven. It’s really good.”

I wondered how they cooked this large fish, but it seemed they used a stove. Just as Geo said, a sour smoky scent rose up, covering up the fishy smell of seafood.

The texture was also very soft, as if they had done something to the fish. The skin, which clearly showed that it had been baked in an oven, was crispy like a thin cookie, but the meat inside was soft and crumbled, as if you were eating a thick piece of well-cooked saury.

“It’s a little sour? It even has a spicy flavor. It’s not just roasted, is it?”

“Grilled fish marinated in tangerine, lemongrass, and chili juice.”

“Are you a chef?”

I don't know how many people he plans to seduce with this cooking skill. No, it looks easy because the subject is a dinner table, but it's not a joke, it's really dangerous.

'Humans who don't even know the existence of the source should not feel friendly towards this guy.'

Geo continued explaining the dish, seemingly not caring what Yoo Seong-un was thinking.

“Lemon is good, but I think this kind of oily fish needs something bitter….”

“…….”

The calm face of the young man who spoke like that showed excitement. He looked quite happy.

I understand that Geo himself has a passion for cooking. I also understand that it is purely out of kindness, but kindness from such a great source can be poisonous to humans.

‘This is a favor that I can’t handle right now… .’

What on earth should I do with this?

“…I have a lot to say about your expertise, but what is that bowl of sauce next to the fish?”

“A fish-specific sauce made with lemon, soy sauce, and chili pepper.”

“It can be this serious.”

Even now, when I'm wondering how to prepare for Geo's kindness, it just fits so well that I can't help but chuckle.

The disguise of the origin would not be intended to harm humans. At the same time, it would be contradictory to call it a ‘disguise’, so it seemed impossible to criticize Geo, who enjoys cooking and sharing gifts, as a lie.

“I really….”

Yoo Seong-un tried hard to hold back his sigh and said with his characteristically indifferent smile.

“I thought I could just eat it like that because it was so delicious.”

“Is there a problem?”

“It feels like a waste that I ate it without dipping it in sauce.”

“Thank you for your passionate compliments.”

“Why don’t you open a restaurant on Earth? I think it’ll be popular.”

“I don’t think I’m suited for sales due to my physical constitution.”

“That’s true too.”

Geo's egos that have been revealed so far have mostly been painters, priests, doctors, and teachers. He seems to be either a very free spirit or prefers to be under some kind of organized system, making it difficult to force sales.

'It would be quite magical if the restaurant where the source is operating is open. All the gardeners on Earth would gather there. The disaster that breaks out like that would be interesting… .'

Yoo Seong-un was slowly losing his senses.

‘…Yeah, whoever made the food, as long as it tastes good, that’s fine.’

It was really delicious.

“This stir-fried vegetable….”

“It’s a stir-fry made with tomatoes, green onions, garlic, etc.”

“What I’ve been eating until now wasn’t real vegetables.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded after tasting the crunchy onions.

“Yes.”

“It’s sweet.”

“A little spicy.”

“Is it appropriate?”

“Yeah, that’s about right.”

Onions that retain the characteristic spicy flavor of onions, but are fried over a hot fire and are full of sweet juice. These guys are so juicy and crunchy that they almost feel like fruits rather than vegetables.

“At this point, it would be delicious even if I just fried the onions.”

“How about tomatoes?”

“…Why is it so sweet?”

If these tomatoes were exported, the tomato vegetable and fruit markets could be unified. These tomatoes that Geo had stir-fried were definitely fruits. At this point, it felt like eating a warm fruit salad.

“This is the first time that stir-fried vegetables don’t taste greasy.”

“Is there anything about stir-fried vegetables that makes you feel rich?”

“Because you put in too much oil.”

“Then you feel it.”

“I definitely think this feels good.”

This vegetable stir-fry, which used minimal oil, was crunchy rather than mushy, and had a stronger fire flavor than oily flavor. The spicy vegetable stir-fry, which had a sour, fiery aroma as if it had been burned with a torch, boasted a refreshing flavor that was completely different from other vegetable stir-fries that became mushy from the heat.

It wasn't even seasoned. It was a stir-fried side dish with the original flavor of the ingredients, with a hint of salt and pepper, and a hint of the luxurious soy sauce that seemed to have been lightly burnt.

“It’s almost like a salad.”

Yoo Seong-un picked up the long-awaited Dongpa Yuk.

“…….”

“Kyuu.”

The teddy bear was looking at the meteor cloud with anticipation.

'... What exactly are you expecting? How should I react, and how can I live like an average human being?'

For some reason, it seemed like the old man who had finally discovered his talent for cooking was waiting for the reaction of the first meal he was served.

While deluding himself with his own metaphor, Yoo Seong-un dutifully took the frozen pork and placed it on his rice bowl. It was so soft that he had to use a spoon instead of chopsticks.

'This is really close to pudding.'

Let's have a meal together like that.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un hesitated for a moment whether he should spit this out.

‘… I don’t think this is the kind of food I can handle. What should I do?’

If you hear it wrong, it might sound like a trivial remark, but it wasn't. He was feeling a real sense of crisis. For the first time, Yoo Seong-woon realized that something too delicious could be a problem.

Fortunately, there was no disaster where Yoo Seong-un spit out the food. Not only would that be rude to those who prepared the food, but it was too delicious for that to happen.

“…They say that humans are animals that cannot help but be swayed by their instincts….”

“Why on earth would you say something like that while you were eating?”

“I don’t think there’s much of a difference either.”

So that's why so many people in legends and myths have made such foolish choices.

'Because I can't let go of human greed.'

Even the gardener, who knew the dangers of mysterious stories, nodded his head in agreement.

"hmm…."

Anyway, even after finishing the meal, Yoo Seong-un did not become immortal.

“You’re really good at cooking.”

“You’ve been saying the same thing all along.”

“You’re so good.”

"thank you?"

“It’s okay to do moderately well.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, you are good at giving compliments.”

“…….”

No, I just meant to do less well.

'I don't know if you're doing this knowingly or not, but your cooking threatens human identity.'

Yoo Seong-un, who had enjoyed a delicious meal, couldn't bring himself to say that.

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (112)

Episode 112 Hmm, well. 'I was being playful like this.' In any case, Yoo Seong-woon's words, 'I felt a threat to my identity as a human,' were sincere. 'I thought this is what it means to be in a realm that humans cannot handle.' Yoo Seong-woon had repeatedly gotten a feel for the 'realm beyond the limit' while managing the garden. However, even for him, this meal was a little creepy. 'Just one meal... .' It would be hard to think, 'I'm going to get eaten.' '... This situation is absurd, where I can't call this a joke.' Geo treated Yoo Seong-woon to a meal with truly pure intentions. It didn't seem to mean much to him. He was originally a guy who enjoyed giving gifts, so treating him to a meal wasn't a big deal. However, when peace is too much, it's close to death, and when pleasure is too much, it turns into pain. From Geo's perspective, it was probably just a way to treat a guest, but from a human's perspective, it was a favor that was hard to handle. "...." There was at least one silver lining. “Haaa ... “Mr. Yoo Seong-woon, you’ve given me so much praise.” “That…” Yeah, if that’s what you think, then that’s fine. Yoo Seong-woon decided to just give up. “…It was really delicious, huh.” “Thank goodness.” Geo said as he sat down across from Yoo Seong-woon. “We couldn’t prepare the dessert in advance, so we’re having it solidified in the ice storage.” “Ice storage?” “Yes, it’ll act as a refrigerator. Instead, should I serve you some tea first?” “Ahhh… No, just give me a glass of water.” He asked for the most ordinary thing, not knowing what kind of evil blessing would come down. “Here it is.” [Source of the Spring] Water drawn from the Source of the Spring. “…….” The most unusual thing appeared. “……?” The emotional status window suddenly popped up without him even using a skill.

Before suspecting, ‘Is my skill broken?’, Yoo Seong-woon felt gratitude for the formless thing that had shown him this explanation window. ‘It’s as if someone had quietly helped me to live as a human.’ Yoo Seong-woon asked cautiously. “…Is this water?” “…Isn’t it?” “It is water.” Damn, no matter what I ate, it made me shiver. ‘All the water used in the food I ate came from the source.’ Indeed, it was natural to feel a sense of crisis. Yoo Seong-un quietly tightened his tightly shut lips. ‘How dare you still be human. Is there such a miracle?’ One of the basic requirements for gardeners was ‘not to consume anything from the garden.’ They were merely labor and managers who managed the garden, not owners. The moment such a gardener consumed anything from the garden, they could never leave the garden again. This was because they were also treated as part of the garden. “I… I can go home, right? Am I okay?” “I don’t know why you’re doing this, but I’m not a thug who detains guests…” “Are you flustered? I guess so. I guess so. I’m sorry for making you flustered, but I’m really scared.” “What did I do wrong? I’m sorry for making you scared.” “You did nothing wrong… but…” “Mr. Yoo Seong-woon?” “…….” What on earth was I thinking coming here? ‘… Well, I didn’t know this was the source until I came in, so I had no choice but to figure out the identity… .’ Even considering that, it was an overly bold choice. You could say that it was the words of someone who approached ‘Geo’s Portrait’ as if it were another gardener’s garden. Yoo Seong-woon admitted that it was an overly hasty approach. ‘I needed to prepare as much as I would when entering an immeasurable dungeon.’ Yoo Seong-woon was terrified and anxious, but anyway, it didn’t matter as long as he could return to Earth as a human. He decided to believe Geo’s words that he could return home at any time. “…….” He desperately needed the cigarettes he had quit, but he decided to hold back for now because Geo seemed to be giving him ‘something’ in the form of a cigarette. Yoo Seong-woon managed to regain his senses. “… Sorry, I think I panicked a lot because this is my first time experiencing something like this.” “If you have trouble adapting to unfamiliar environments, that could be quite possible.” “Thank you for saying that...” Yoo Seong-woon looked at the water in the glass with a strange look. [Spring of the Origin] Water from the spring of the origin. “…….” It was something in the form of water. The description was strangely short, so I don’t know the details, but at least I know that it’s not water for humans to drink. Yoo Seong-woon was lost in thought. ‘… Come to think of it, all the gifts Geo had given me so far had the same sentence in them.’ It was the phrase, ‘Geo, the master of the forest, is fair and can accept human bodies.’ All the gifts Geo had given me so far, that is, food, had the same explanation. ‘But there’s no such explanation here.’ Yoo Seong-woon quietly put down his glass. “… I’m sorry for changing my mind, but...” After a while, Yoo Seong-woon asked. “Can I have some tea?” “I don’t have much tea left, but is the flower tea I gave you before okay?” “It’s the light blue tea, right? That’s good.” Yoo Seong-woon realized. 'You must not eat anything unless Geo himself makes it fair.' His spine tingled. 'It's only natural when you think about the garden we manage as part of the source. I don't know exactly what process it goes through to become safe, but you must not indiscriminately consume the raw food from this garden.' Yoo Seong-un calmed his mind as he thought about the previous gardeners who had become part of the garden and lived on without being able to die. Even this place was the source itself. It might not end with just losing his human identity. Yoo Seong-un, who had collected his thoughts, emphasized again. "Anything you make yourself is fine." He was sincere. "I'm sorry to just receive and eat it, but can you help me?" "It's my pleasure to serve guests. Please sit down." "T-that's right..." Geo soon brought out the 'Forest Butterfly Flower Tea.' "It's Baibamnil tea." "... Baibamnil? Is that the name of this flower?" "Yes, it's delicious if you boil it in water and eat it." "What an amazing way to take it." "It's a snack with a nice texture like a vegetable." "Is it a vegetable?" After drinking the tea, Yoo Seong-un’s already healthy blood vessels were regenerated, his cells were reconstructed, and he was in a situation where his immunity to minor diseases had to last for 6 months. “…….” This is right, if you stay and eat for 3 days, you will become immortal. ‘I feel like my lifespan has been extended.’ About 50 years. ‘The Forest Butterfly Flower Tea doesn’t have that much effect, so of course it’s just my feeling, but I still feel uneasy. Is it because Geo made it himself? The effect shouldn’t vary depending on the person drinking it… That shouldn’t be the case.’ Yoo Seong-un wanted to live as a human and die as a human. That was the biggest desire any gardener could dream of. “… Who else has received such hospitality besides me? Cha Ara Hunter?” “Except for you two, I’ve never received guests from Earth.” “Oh, then maybe it was the mermaid siblings? I heard they come to the house often.” “They stop by for a meal once every two or three days.” “That happened.” Indeed, it meant that those monsters were of a certain level. 'How can they accept such a meal so easily?' It meant that they were at least of the level of evil gods. "....." "....." "...Uh, wait a minute." Yoo Seong-un stopped Geo from pouring more tea. "I think you drank too much." "I think the glass was small, did you feel that way?" "I wanted to digest it. How about we take a break?" "Weren't you resting?" "Yeah, how about we take a walk to digest it." It seemed that eating something meant the same thing as taking a break to Geo. Yoo Seong-un, who had been anxious that eating this would make him leave the human realm, couldn't do that at all. "Can you at least show me around the house?" "A house tour." "Oh, I'm sorry if I was rude. I just..." "No, that's not true." Geo nodded. "After we're done looking around this house, let's go out into the forest and spend some time." “…Can I enter that forest?” “I have no intention of treating this vast forest as my private property.” “…….” I didn’t ask for permission. ‘I meant, ‘Wouldn’t I die if I entered that forest?’ Anyway, Geo had already gotten up. “It’ll take a little more time for the dessert to harden. Can I introduce this house to you?” “…I would be honored if you were to show me around.” As expected, Yoo Seong-un got up and asked. “But can I leave my cat friend like this?” A translucent cat monster with a lot of jewel fur. It had stopped yawning, but Dana was still wary of Yoo Seong-un. “When our eyes met, it would open its mouth wide without making a sound.” “It won’t get eaten.” “I don’t know about that, Geo. Monsters are really scary these days.” “Dana is a hermit, so you don’t have to worry.” “You didn’t say you wouldn’t eat it, did you?” “Because it’s a monster.” Geo continued with his signature calm expression. “But he’s a good kid, and I’m with him, so he won’t do that.” “I’ll really trust you.” Honey, who Geo drew himself, looked at Yoo Seong-un with neither hostility nor favor, resembling her parents, but the monster was different. Since Anti-Cats are also monsters, it wasn’t strange for Yoo Seong-un to be anxious. After all. “Anti-Cats aren’t that big to begin with.” “They gained some weight after being fed this and that.” “I wonder if they really gained weight?” Just imagining how the monster that received so much love from the source would evolve gave me goosebumps. Seeing Yoo Seong-un still anxious, a teddy bear with the sun god stepped forward. For some reason, Dana, who had been irritated by Yoo Seong-un, was soon held in the teddy bear’s arms and petted. “Oh...” Dana put down her noticeable irritation and calmed down. “You two get along well.” “That’s how it is.” Then, Yoo Seong-un was guided to the cabin. The first was the ice storage. Yoo Seong-un, who had not known that the refrigerator-like warehouse that Geo had mentioned would be located so deep, was taken aback, but soon he expressed interest at the sight of the ice warehouse, which was not strange even if it was a growing cave. “So this was the ice pearl I gave you last time.” “That’s right. It’s not something that happens often in this ice warehouse.” “It’s unusual that water is pooled in this cold.” Next was the studio. For some reason, he was taken aback by the sight of blank canvases scattered around, but soon regained his composure when he remembered Geo’s characteristics. Since the paintings he painted became real, there was no reason for the canvases to be full. “Oh, is there a storage connected to the studio?” “Yes, it’s where I mainly store my completed landscape paintings.” “What’s that black cloth covering the canvas?” “If I don’t cover it, the entrance opens without me knowing, so I’m careful.” “Um… um, yes? Oh, right. That’s right.” Next was the vegetable garden behind the cabin. “Garden?” “I would appreciate it if you could tell me so.” “…This is the result of planting the seeds I gave you?” “Yes.” “…….” Yoo Seong-un swallowed his breath as he looked at the crops that had grown to be so strong that they had egos. The shock and fear he was feeling right now was because he was faced with such a vast nature. ‘These guys must have grown up drinking the spring water of the source.’ Even humans with egos can become part of the garden when they consume things from the garden, and these seeds were even growing from the source. Something from the Earth would not have been able to resist this overwhelming evolution. What should I call this? Yoo Seong-un muttered, feeling a strange sense of regret stemming from fear. “I think it’s already been digested.” “Then would you like to explore the forest after you eat dessert?” “Oh, right… the forest. Yes, I guess so.” Right after returning to the cabin. “…….” “Wow, this is amazing.” Yoo Seong-un encountered a mermaid wearing a dress. “Why is there a human here?” Murderous intent dripped from her. “…….” “…….” Yoo Seong-un nodded. “I’ll go home.” Save me. Oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (113)

Episode 113

The meteor came out of the frame.

“I came back to this land alive.”

“Did you enjoy it?”

“Wow, this was so much fun I couldn’t even describe it.”

When I first encountered the Little Mermaid, I couldn't even open my mouth.

“Please tell the princess that I’m sorry for making her uncomfortable….”

“It’s not Yoo Seong-un’s fault. That’s just Aria’s usual tantrum. You don’t have to worry about it.”

“I don’t think I did anything wrong, but I don’t want to build up ill feelings with the mermaids. There’s no need to incur the resentment of humanoid monsters, right?”

“Thank you for understanding my foolish behavior. You are an adult. I hope your students will learn from that aspect of you, Mr. Yoo Seong-woon.”

“A monster that resembles a human would be scary in its own way, wouldn’t it?”

Yoo Seong-un, who smiled slightly, checked the clock in the gallery.

“It’s… 4:41 AM now.”

Then I checked my cell phone.

“…….”

“Did I take up a lot of your time?”

“No, not really.”

Only about 20 minutes had passed.

“It’s true that time inside the frame and time on Earth flow differently.”

“Time inside the painting passes quickly or slowly depending on my mood.”

“Oh… sometimes it’s fast and sometimes it’s slow?”

“When you’re having fun, go fast. When you’re relaxing, go slow.”

“Hmm.”

Then, this time, it could be interpreted as feeling good. It was an honorable story both as a gardener and as a curator.

“When you feel bad?”

“I don’t know because I’ve never tried it.”

“It’s nice to see such a positive attitude, please continue to live like that.”

I don't even know if he can feel offended since he is the source.

'... Geo certainly has a self that is close to a person, so even if he is the source, there may come a day when he gets angry. It is better not to let your guard down when dealing with the source.'

Yoo Seong-un lifted a small white box containing dessert.

“Can I just take this as is?”

“If you had eaten it and left, it wouldn’t have been a problem….”

“Bungeoppang tomorrow?”

"great."

“It’s a shame I couldn’t go back to the forest.”

I was out of my mind inside, but when I actually went outside, I was left with a deep regret. It was my greed as a gardener.

“I also wanted to go to the spring you told me about.”

Yoo Seong-un recalled that the water that Geo had given him was defined as [the source of the spring].

“I hear it seems like a pretty cool place.”

“We welcome you to visit us next time.”

“Then I’ll stop by when I have time.”

That would be after more preparations had been made.

'I went in without any preparation.'

The source, of all places.

'To be exact, it felt more like a form that was easier for humans to perceive than the source itself… like a part of the source or a dish that was easily prepared to be eaten… .'

In the first place, humans do not recognize the existence of the source.

Its size, which is too great to even be described as huge, is something that humans simply cannot contain or analyze. In that sense, Geo felt like a part of the source.

'So that's why you thought it was similar to a garden?'

If so.

“…….”

“Is there a problem?”

“…That’s not it.”

Isn't Geo in charge of 'eyes'?

“I thought it was a bit of a shame that my eyes were covered with paint.”

Although Geo has a lot to talk about, if I had to pick his most distinctive feature, it would be his 'eyes'.

Those eyes that seem to contain everything that exists and does not exist in the world.

“I asked you to do that, right?”

“Do you want to go back to the original state?”

“No, but from a convenience standpoint, it’s better to have it covered.”

"okay."

“It was just a curator’s complaint.”

It was also a complaint as a gardener.

'If Geo is truly the Eye of Origin, then the reason he takes on a human form is….'

For a moment, my emotions became so complicated that I couldn't breathe.

“…….”

He hadn't originally intended to do so, but now Yoo Seong-un couldn't avoid or detest Geo.

All that remained for the man named Yoo Seong-un was an unfathomable awe and sense of distance, and the relief that came from it.

"okay…."

As a gardener, he knew how close the source was to nature and how fair it was.

“Thank you for your kind treatment.”

“It is my pleasure.”

“Well, you’ve always been a gentleman.”

This may have been a disaster, but it wasn't a disaster.

“Do we have to be more careful?”

“Who are you talking about?”

“No, I was just… thinking about what I need to do next.”

“As expected, people who work are busy.”

“If you don’t work, you don’t eat.”

After letting out a sigh-like laugh, Yoo Seong-woon asked.

“Can I ask you one thing?”

“Do as you wish.”

"that…."

There were many questions he wanted to ask, but Yoo Seong-un held back.

'It's too early to ask about the source.'

Since Geo knows himself as an ordinary human being, or knows himself but is disguising himself to make it seem closer to the truth, the day to question this part is far away.

Instead, he brought up the most effective topic he could at the time.

“I’m talking about Hunter Park Eun-gyeom.”

I've been wondering since I heard he came out.

“What price did you pay?”

“What is the price?”

“We don’t know what has changed.”

It was Yoo Seong-un who received the request from the association to investigate the attack method and results of the 'Black Cloak'. He reported everything that happened in the 'City of Void', and based on that report, the association analyzed Hunter Park Eun-gyeom who escaped from the frame.

But other than being a bit scared, it was no different than before.

“Is that fear a price to pay? Like it took away your peace?”

“I left the disposal of Park Eun-gyeom up to my children.”

“To your children… I see.”

Now even the word 'children' sounded meaningful.

'The children of the origin come to mind.'

No, actually that's not wrong.

'… A living story that resembles a monster but is not a monster… that cannot be completely dealt with by the Hunter's skills and appears anywhere regardless of the dimension… .'

All of them were the same descriptions of the children that Geo had drawn with watercolors.

Of course, there were some differences. Like Honey, the jeweled water bird that Geo kept by his side and called his son, and the 'black suits' that grew in the 'empty city'. They had the ability to think.

“…What….”

Since I have a lot to think about here and there, the topic keeps straying to other topics.

“Sorry, I was just thinking about something else.”

“You seem very tired. Are you okay?”

“I’m always okay.”

The meteor cloud returned to its original topic.

“Then you can ask your children what kind of price they paid?”

“If you wish, please do so.”

“…Do you already know the price?”

“Of course.”

“Can I ask you something?”

“There is no problem.”

Geo answered from beyond the black paint.

“Park Eun-gyeom was taken away in exchange for ‘evilness’.”

“…….”

“My children wanted it.”

“…That’s amazing.”

How on earth did they take away 'evil' from humans?

“Humans are creatures that can be evil at any time.”

“Since it is Park Eun-gyeom who has to pay the price, I cannot know the outcome.”

“I understand for now.”

It may sound like a strangely abstract price, but how many sources of existence have taken away such abstract things? Memories, love, happiness, friendship, sadness, recollection…

'This isn't much different either.'

The exact answer wasn't something you could get by digging into Geo.

'That won't work either.'

Don't expect anything from God.

Although Geo cannot be said to be a complete god, the word 'god' also refers to beings of a higher level that are difficult for humans to perceive.

Humans are beings who analyze nature and destiny, not beings who can demand something from them.

'It's not polite to treat them like that.'

If they had heard this much of a hint, it was up to Yoo Seong-un and other humans to find further answers. That was the manners for everyone in this era where humans, gods, and nature coexisted.

“Then I’ll buy you some bungeoppang tomorrow in return for this dessert.”

“Please say hello to Eunhyuk Cha.”

“Don’t worry, we talk often.”

Before leaving the gallery, Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo again.

“…You’re not fighting the Mermaid Princess because of me, are you?”

“As I said before, it was just a tantrum.”

The black portrait was resolute.

“She can’t be angry with me.”

It was an answer like a prophet speaking of fate.

* * *

"teacher."

Let's go back to the cabin, Aria called Geo.

“Did I see you off well?”

“I confirmed that he left safely.”

“How sweet of you.”

“You’re angry.”

But Geo knew.

“That person is not me.”

Aria couldn't be angry at Giovanni.

“We’ve been apart for too long for that.”

“…If that weren’t the case, I wouldn’t have been angry at you.”

“If you have a lot of anger, your life won’t be enjoyable.”

“Is there any reason why my life should be enjoyable?”

The mermaid smiled softly. It was a smile that was clearly different from her younger days when she could not hide her sensitive and keen nature.

“I hate humans.”

“I understand.”

“I know how much you embrace humans.”

“It’s not about protecting them, it’s about treating them the way they deserve.”

“It’s an excessive treatment, for those living such short lives….”

Geo sat down next to Aria, who was leaning on the sofa as if lying down.

"aria."

“Yes, teacher.”

“Were you scared?”

“…….”

“So you’re angry?”

“…Teacher….”

Aria muttered as a hand caressed her cheek.

“…Sometimes it’s a bit excessive.”

Yeah, I couldn't deny it.

“You’re right, I was really scared.”

“Why did you do that?”

“I don’t think that human could harm us.”

The entity called Yoo Seong-un was not a creature capable of such a thing.

“Perhaps because I am deeply connected to the source, I am thoughtful and cautious. Sometimes I take risks, but most of the time I find a way for everyone to coexist. Although I am strong for a human, I will win if we fight.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un doesn’t look that weak.”

“That’s why I said he’s strong for a human. If we fight, I’ll win, but I’ll probably take a big hit. Since he’ll have the power of a gardener… it’ll be hard to interfere.”

But I wasn't afraid of meteors.

“I am, teacher.”

Aria rested her head on Geo's hand.

“I was terrified that there were humans here.”

“…….”

“…because I don’t know when that wicked tribe will set fire to this place.”

Humans were fickle.

“I’m scared that day will repeat itself.”

There was a lightness to them that was difficult to understand for a mermaid whose ego hardly ever changes, living her entire life with one memory and emotion.

Humans have been as benevolent as the traditional gods who value peace, and as miserable rascals who wish for the destruction of the world.

So, right now, one person's beliefs and personality were not important.

“…….”

“Humans are untrustworthy.”

Regardless of the hatred the mermaid harbored, that was an unchanging fact for the mermaid.

“We can’t help it because we live so long. Compared to us, who are inherently unchanging, humans live short lives and change dozens or hundreds of times during that time….”

“That’s called growth.”

“Yes, growth. It is as innate to human nature to grow as it is to not change. I know that. I know that. So I curse it.”

Mermaids and humans had such difficulty understanding and reconciling with each other.

“How did you know that a human named Yoo Seong-un would ‘grow’ and bring him here?”

Humans are easily corrupted.

“The standards for good and evil are different in each dimension. Even in this narrow dimension, with just one invisible national border, it can vary depending on the environment in which humans live. So, sir, our peace could be a disaster for them.”

When faced with disaster, humans will resist.

“…Mermaids too.”

Who among us has never rebelled against fate?

“If the breath you breathe becomes a disaster for them, then the human named Yoo Seong-un will side with his own species. He is human, and he is not evil, and he has his own beliefs.”

“…….”

“They keep changing.”

Humans do not make promises.

“…….”

“…….”

Aria hugged her teacher.

“…I know you haven’t forgiven us. So I know you’ll never accept us. You, the merciful One, won’t be my god.”

"okay."

“I also know that you are ready to accept your fate at any time. I also know that you will not listen to us if we try to stop you, since we have not received your forgiveness.”

You know what? Geo didn't rebel against fate.

He was a person who could enjoy everything and affirm everything. It was because he had such a large vessel that Aria was able to embrace him like this now.

“Thanks to that great tolerance, the teacher accepted us as his disciples, but on the other hand, there are times when I feel uneasy. It’s the anxiety that this peaceful and comfortable cabin might disappear at any moment.”

The mermaid felt fear for the first time in thousands of years.

“If I’m too scared, I get angry.”

“That’s the proof that we are all the same human beings.”

“What is the teacher always trying to teach us?”

“You guys really worry a lot.”

“That’s right.”

I used to think that there was nothing more foolish than fearing a future that had not yet arrived.

“We have so many worries….”

People say that it is fate because it cannot be avoided. In the end, the fact that I am no different made Aria miserable.

Because I guess I'm human too.

“…….”

“…….”

So I did that because I was afraid of repeating the same thing and causing the same tragedy.

Regardless of my protests, once again… .

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (114)

Episode 114

What would happen if a person who had a habit of doing evil were to be fried in the fires of hell and come out alive?

“…Fuck….”

The answer was that it didn't change much.

“What the fuck… Seriously, why on earth would I….”

Park Eun-gyeom's daily life changed overnight.

A first-class citizen and a B-class hunter. His appearance is also okay, and since his job is based on his body, his physique is also good. It seems like only yesterday that I was feeling sorry for the idiots who would stick to me without me knowing, but I was also enjoying the sweetness of it.

'But after falling into that dungeon…'

The atmosphere has changed.

“That person….”

“They say it’s very habitual.”

“It’s the end of the world, it’s the end of the world.”

People were looking at him and gossiping.

“Park Hunter, you said you were dragged into the Black Cloak’s dungeon.”

“…Yes, well, that’s true.”

“The aftereffects will be severe, so why didn’t you just get some rest? Why did you come out?”

It was the same with the hunters I knew.

“I heard there are rumors going around that you might be tired these days because of the association’s requests for cooperation.”

The B-class hunter who said that glanced around with a strange sense of anxiety and irritation. Although he didn’t know the exact reason, his expression seemed to indicate that he knew that he had been taken to the association and interrogated several times.

'I guess you're still wondering if you're under surveillance.'

But it wasn't a completely wrong suspicion.

‘Damn, why am I being treated like this…!’

In reality, he was under surveillance by the association.

I couldn't understand it at all. If a precious first-class citizen, a capable B-class hunter, had survived an unknown dungeon, shouldn't he have been praised and encouraged, and then given compensation for the damages? I don't understand why the people around him are so critical.

“That, the Hunter… has to do his job. If I don’t do my job, who will protect the citizens?”

“… Really? Then just figure it out and do your best.”

The other person clicked his tongue and walked away.

“…….”

It was a reaction of clear contempt and disappointment.

'... What kind of reaction is that just now? Even if he's a B-class hunter, isn't this too much? I knew that guy was a bit territorial, but to think he'd act this blatantly... .'

Suddenly, I ground my teeth.

'He was a third-class person until recently. He's so shallow that I can't get along with him.'

It was truly horrible to see a country bumpkin who lived off of monster meat bragging about how well he had awakened.

He tried to ignore the mutterings and went out to find work. There were many people looking for B-class hunters. He wasn't the type of person to collapse like this.

but.

"sorry."

“…Look, I don’t know what kind of rumors are going around these days….”

“I’m sorry, Hunter Park Eun-gyeom. Our agency cannot help you with any arrangements.”

“You believe that fucking rumor and you’re lying around like this? Hey! How much money did I make here?!”

“Sorry, please visit another agency.”

I was ignored by ordinary employees who weren't even hunters.

“Ha, you’re so ridiculous. Seeing all the hunters working hard in this dirty little agency makes you think you're some kind of person…? You'd kill me if I hit you, so how can you think of hunters as food, damn it!!"

"…Calm down…."

"Do you think I'll just leave you alone? Do you think I'll leave you alone? Don't be a jerk, you little shit… I said I'd come and do the work myself. Huh? What rank are you? What rank are you that you have to act like this!!"

For a moment, I felt satisfaction and joy at the look on the frightened employee's face.

"Hunter Park Eun-gyeom, please get out."

"Huh? No, you're telling me to leave? Are you crazy?"

"Get out, now."

The brokerage guards came out and threw him out of the building.

Since it was a brokerage where even hunters who were first-class citizens frequented, most of the guards were C-class hunters. Even if I was of a higher rank, it was natural that I would have to back down if I was persecuted by the majority.

"No, you, you, you crazy kids…!! Are you crazy?! Don't you know me?! Don't you know me!!"

"Oh, I know. You said earlier that I'm Hunter Park Eun-gyeom."

One of the guards clicked his tongue and said,

"Aren't you the kind of hunter who doesn't know how to be stingy with his porters and just throws them at monsters to be eaten? Huh?"

“That, that’s…!!”

What the hell is wrong with that?

“…I, I’m not the only one who does this. Huh? Am I the only one? No. Not just me, no. No? Hey, come on. Do you think that F-class thing, that porter thing, looks human? Do you fucking think that thing looks human!!”

Yeah, that was the fucking rumor.

When things were not going well, it was common for everyone to abandon their porters in the dungeon. It was annoying enough that all they did was carry the load, and now they had to feed them too. It was only natural to want to abandon such a carnivorous creature.

Of course, I was in a difficult situation. In an already dangerous situation, it can't be helped that you don't have the luxury of taking care of porters.

“Of course I know that’s bad. But, huh? Think about it, do people cross the street while obeying the traffic lights? No. No, I know that’s bad, too, so I… I know…!”

“In my own way? Well, I guess I hid it pretty well?”

“…….”

“Man, this guy is seriously crazy.”

The guard chuckled at his fellow comrades.

“He’s not a murderer who doesn’t know he’s a murderer.”

“That’s true. These guys are the real deal. Man, I’m sick of them.”

“Even a 5th-grade citizen would be better at objectifying himself than this.”

I was moved.

“Who are you comparing to a 5th class citizen now…!!”

But no one listened.

“Since it’s to this extent, wouldn’t the association be monitoring it?”

“There are no habitual criminals like this one. It’s funny how they come out looking for work when the rumor has spread.”

“This is a real joke. Even first-class citizens are struggling financially, and stuff like that?”

“Hey, you, our first-class citizen, are really pissed. Let’s go back too.”

“Oh my, that’s scary. If you get angry, you’ll kick us too, right? Like this, slap!!”

“Oh, you crazy kid. Don’t make me laugh so hard. It’s work time, so stop.”

I was speechless at the way he treated me like a peanut to relieve boredom.

“…What, what….”

I really wanted to cry.

Eventually he was left alone before the murmuring crowd.

“…….”

I don't know how many times this has happened.

When a hunter says he wants to do some hunter work, the brokerage staff only say that he ate something wrong and that it won't work. It was all because the association blatantly called me in.

“…I, I… I’m not being watched, I’m being protected….”

The association staff clearly said that it was a protective measure, not surveillance. They just had to wait and see how things went, because they didn't know when the black cloak would show up again and try to harm them. How many times did they beg that they not take offense?

Even though he was uncomfortable with being played by a monster cub, he thought the association staff were brave and accepted their protection. It was ridiculous that a civil servant would dare to protect a B-class hunter, but he tolerated it all.

“…What a dangerous monster that Black Cloak is, that, that….”

To personally inform the world of the dangers of the Black Cloak, which is known to be a somewhat unusual event.

“I suffered so much to get out of here….”

That's what happened.

“…….”

“…….”

“…Is that person that person?”

The rookie hunters who were going from brokerage to brokerage were making a fuss.

“Why, the porter was dragged away by the black cloak….”

“He didn’t just give up, he was going to leave it in the dungeon.”

“He’s really crazy.”

Someone muttered.

“It looks like I might get dragged away by the black cloak.”

He cried out again, crying.

“What are you going to be dragged?

“Oh, no, we just….”

“Do you know how dangerous a monster that Black Cloak is? Huh? You don’t know!”

"that…."

“They take a normal person and turn him into a crippled person…!!”

The hunter, who looked like a young child, crumpled his face.

“What, you sound like a normal person… Hey, isn’t the rumor already spreading?”

He made the subject laugh out loud at the sight of someone so scared.

“The black cloak only catches bad people.”

“That’s right, they said they wouldn’t arrest you unless it was something as bad as murder or abuse.”

“It’s not like there’s a monster that’s going to catch you for jaywalking. What are you talking about?”

When a bunch of idiots get together, they can't communicate.

“Well, he’s a scary monster because he’s a bad guy. How could he be scared of people like us?”

“Well… They’re monsters, so they might be dangerous, but I heard they don’t cause much harm….”

“Did you hear that you get a gift if you meet? Wow, hearing that makes me want to meet you too.”

“Arthur, even so, it’s not a dangerous monster recognized by the association. Anyway, we just have to be careful.”

“Hey, you’re being too careful. The gifts that monster gives you are so delicious.”

“That’s right, they say it’s effective. It’s almost like a medicine.”

They confirmed this strange ghost story that was currently spreading through the city, not the rumored bastard.

“They say that if you’re unlucky, you won’t receive the Black Cloak’s gift.”

“But I’m still a little scared. What if I get arrested for a crime I don’t even know about…?”

“It’s a monster, so you have to be careful, but don’t worry.”

“Yeah, if you weren’t that ruined in character, I don’t think you’d be dragged in.”

“I heard that Black Cloak’s work is so amazing. I want to go see it.”

The Black Cloak, which gave gifts to good people and punishment to bad people, was popular among the citizens. The polite humanoid monster, which rarely harmed people, filled the romanticism of the city dwellers to the max.

There were people who feared him, but no one who hated him.

“But why is that kid giving us shit?”

“I don’t know, I guess it’s easy… That’s why people who are rank-oriented….”

“You’re the only one who’s insulting all the first-class citizens, tsk tsk.”

In contrast, there were many people who hated criminals recognized by the association for no reason.

“I heard that hunter’s ID wasn’t canceled?”

“What confidence do you have when you made the Hunter do all the work…?”

So in the end.

“…….”

A person named Park Eun-gyeom was isolated.

“…this, this, this….”

The injustice of no one knowing their pain. The anger at being treated for the first time in their life and the fear hidden behind it. The bewilderment of being embarrassed in front of so many people.

He had held back, not wanting to be dragged back to the 'Empty City' again, but now he had picked up the hammer.

“You little piece of trash!!!”

“Whoa!!”

“Stop that guy!”

“Stop talking nonsense, you little shits, you, you dog…!!”

And that appearance.

“…….”

The gray city was watching.

* * *

Identification Number

0S-328-D-01

Response level

B(avoidance)

Object Type

Humanoid(-)

Object name

Black suit(-)

warrant

seizure(-)

A humanoid entity first discovered by Park Eun-gyeom, a B-class hunter affiliated with the Korean Hunter Association. Created by the identification number 『0S-328-D (Black Cloak)』, it resides in the 'Empty City', which is identified as the entity's main dungeon.

It is a black suit with a shape that feels like a person is wearing it. The shape of the suit varies slightly from individual to individual. There was some noise in the process of naming the individual. There was a proposal to name the individual 'Invisible Man', but it was found that the body is not transparent, but does not exist, so it was discarded.

For convenience, it was named a humanoid entity, but this may be revised in the future. It seems necessary to adjust the entity name after obtaining additional information.

According to the testimony of a Class A Hunter (Yoo Seong-un) belonging to the collection agency, it is said to have intelligence that allows communication, but it is also possible that this is a characteristic unique to certain individuals. Its height is estimated to be around 185~189cm.

As can be seen from the identification number, it has similar characteristics to 『0S-328-D (Black Cloak)』. Its height and behavior are similar to Black Cloak.

It recognizes evil humans as harmful entities that have a negative impact on the race. The moment it encounters them, it forcibly transfers them to the dungeon 'City of Void' to isolate and dispose of them. It is possible to escape if it receives permission from the dungeon's owner, 『0S-328-D (Black Cloak)』, but if it stays for a long time, it seems that it will become part of the 'work'.

If it becomes a work of 『0S-328-D (Black Cloak)』, a 'price' is required when escaping.

In the case of the first witness, B-class hunter Park Eun-gyeom, he paid in 'evilness'. However, immediately after showing the 'evilness' that was taken in return, he was judged to have violated the deal, and his body's external characteristics were stolen by 『0S-328-D-01 (Black Suit)』, and his body was turned into paint.

『0S-328-D-01 (Black Suit)』's method is careful and clever. If the target violates the deal, he will rob them in the following order: voice, eyes, muscles, and skin. After completing the deal, 『0S-328-D-01 (Black Suit)』 committed suicide in the form of Park Eun-gyeom.

The people around him testified that they did not notice any discomfort. Judging from the fact that Park Eun-gyeom complained of hysterical pain and fear during the 7-day robbery period, it seems that the transaction target was able to confirm the robbery process.

『0S-328-D-01 (Black Suit)』 disappeared after it was proven that it was not Park Eun-gyeom. Park Eun-gyeom's body was turned into black paint and is stored in the association's research facility. Some researchers analyzed that it was a living paint with vital activities.

Thoughts on how to cope

Evil deeds are prohibited within the visible range of the dungeon 'City of Void' of 『0S-328-D (Black Cloak)』. After talking directly with 『0S-328-D (Black Cloak)』, you can escape with or without paying the price.

Regardless of the type of attack, 『0S-328-D (Black Cloak)』 and 『0S-328-D-01 (Black Suit)』 cannot be hit. The two entities above and the dungeon 'City of Void' set evasion as the default response method.

We welcome your requests and additional information.

* * *

Today's status_'Empty City'

“Is the void working hard for dad(?˙∀˙)?”

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (115)

Episode 115

Park Eun-gyeom wasn't the only one who was dragged into the 'Empty City'.

“Huh…? Uh, uh, where am I….”

A C-class hunter who tried to kill teammates and take their items.

“Huh? Huh? What is it? Some kid… Huh?”

A civilian who committed violence against a drunk passerby without asking questions.

“…Is this the ‘City of Emptiness’?”

A B-class hunter who was moving forward while throwing out his companions as bait.

It didn't matter whether they were hunters or civilians. They all went through the same process as Park Eun-gyeom and floundered around in the 'City of Void', and since they never met the master of this dungeon, Black Cloak, they just became a picture.

“I, I was invited and went to the ‘Empty City’!!”

And some people came back alive, having been gifted with a thrilling experience.

“I was walking down the street at dawn when I met a black cloak. I was throwing trash into a trash can….”

“You did such a small and nice thing? You’re someone who doesn’t usually do that?”

“Fuck, yeah, honestly, I’ve been doing that a lot lately because I wanted the snacks Black Cloak gave me.”

“You crazy bastard, you made it back alive. Should I report this to the association or not…. So?”

“I went there because they asked if I could get an invitation to the ‘Empty City’ instead of a snack.”

With the help of the black cloak, the pedestrian was able to safely enjoy the 'City of Void' and escape. It was an extremely brave challenge for a pedestrian who was not a hunter, but thanks to it, he gained something to brag about for the rest of his life.

“It was really cool. Sometimes a guy in a black suit would pop out and stare at me… Do you know Hunter Lee Sung-jin?”

“You know, you’re the B-class hunter who was supposedly taken to the ‘City of Emptiness’ this time. You wouldn’t….”

“I saw that hunter there? No, he was covered in black spots… I couldn’t even tell if he was human.”

At that time, the man in the black suit with the voice of Lee Seong-jin Hunter spoke.

“He said that was him.”

Unless it was necessary, the black suit did not imitate the human he had robbed. He simply requested communication in the form of a stylish black suit, with a gentlemanly, heavy and respectful gesture, and with a human voice and face.

“I was seriously freaking out. This was crazy, this is awesome…!”

“You, you… You did something completely crazy. Who would crawl into a dungeon on their own two feet, you brat?”

“But you said it was worth risking your life for? It’s almost a work of art!”

Cases like this pop up every now and then, causing people to murmur.

Some were taken away by force. Some escaped from the painting at the behest of their families. Some returned to committing evil deeds and became paint. Others reflected on their actions and lived honest lives.

“I also want to go to the ‘Empty City’ sometime.”

“I told you not to do anything that would hurt you. Are you innocent?”

“No, I’m just average, average.”

The safest way to get an invitation was to ask the Black Cloak for an invitation instead of a gift. If you asked for an invitation in front of the 'City of the Void', you could enter, but if you were judged to be a villain, you would be forcibly dragged out of the place.

This wasn't something that just happened among those who enjoyed taking risks.

“It’s amazing that it’s a work of art that you can not only look at but also enter.”

“They say that there is so much to feel just by appreciating Black Cloak’s work. They say that it is small but enormous.”

“Have you heard of the safest way to get invited to the 'Empty City'?”

“If you meet Black Cloak after doing good deeds, you can exchange the gift for an invitation….”

Even decent people who enjoy art talk about it.

“Who can enter the interior of the work and appreciate it?”

If you could enter Vincent van Gogh's masterpiece, 'Starry Night', and see the world of the work, who would refuse it? Those who pride themselves on enjoying art were excited by the work of the black cloak.

“I heard that the painting style changes depending on the subject matter of the work.”

“Isn’t that just plain stupid? Every writer should have his or her own style.”

“No, if there is a lot to appreciate when looking at a work of art, can we say that the person who drew it is not an artist?”

“Black Cloak is a good artist. The moment you see his work, you can tell what Black Cloak is trying to say.”

“It could simply be because he’s a monster.”

“In an age where countless gallery painters use their skills to create works of art, who cares?”

“That’s right, that could actually be an advantage.”

“If Black Cloak has a style, it would be that his paintings are worlds that exist in reality.”

“If you think about it that way, it is definitely a work that has a clear message.”

As the 'Empty City' was fully revealed to the world, a few changes occurred in that world as well.

“Uh… What are you doing now?”

“I’m looking for trash.”

“Why are you looking for trash with such bloodshot eyes?”

“This is the place where the ‘Black Cloak’ appears frequently.”

“Ah, Black Cloak.”

In places where the black cloak was frequently seen, it was difficult to find trash. This was because street cleaning was the easiest and most frequent good deed that could be done without much effort.

“I came out today because I didn’t know when the black cloak would come out….”

“Well, what, do your best.”

“Yes, thank you. It’s cold outside, so be careful on your way home.”

Some people did small acts of kindness to get a taste of the snacks offered by the Black Cloak. Some people did small acts of kindness to be invited to the work called 'The City of the Void'. And some people did small acts of kindness to interact with the famous monsters of the time.

Just as it was getting tiresome, someone was bragging and cheering.

“Hey, look at this! It’s a gift from Black Cloak?”

“Black Cloak? Are you crazy? This isn’t a snack? What is it? It smells really good.”

“Flower car, flower car. Am I the first person to receive something like this?”

A woman who secretly bought a bungeoppang for a carnation child out of pity ended up receiving a 'flower car' as a gift.

“What, it wasn’t just snacks?”

“So even the Black Cloak’s gift had tiers….”

“They said it was almost like a potion.”

“It’s too good a gift for a civilian to receive.”

“Fuck, I’m so jealous.”

Even some who heard the news that the flower tea was so good that it made their eyes dizzy approached women with bad intentions, but they soon stopped after being watched by the 'Empty City' for a month. In particular, those who almost harmed women were dragged into a frame.

“The post-processing is also neat.”

Whether you are a civilian or an awakened person, the situation has been created where there is no reason not to take on the challenge.

Of course, on the other hand, some people who habitually do evil things are discouraged. They are constantly checking their own actions as they worry about the 'empty city' that can appear anywhere.

“…Fuck, what the hell is a monster….”

“I can’t eat it because my pride is hurt. It’s like a dog.”

However, I couldn't act as I pleased. It was because of the habit engraved in my bones of being strong with the weak and weak with the strong.

They knew how dire the situation was for several people, starting with Park Eun-gyeom.

The association, sensing this trend, exhibited something.

“Huh? Hey, that’s in front of the association….”

“What is it? Is it paint? Is it food?”

“No, the color is a bit strange.”

The first villain to become the 'Empty City' was Park Eun-gyeom.

“…Why does it look alive?”

“Dog, don’t be a dog. Are you saying that thing is alive?”

“Is the association really crazy? Isn’t this a violation of human rights?”

“If you want to end up like that, just keep being a jerk.”

“…Wow… Creepy….”

Those who hadn't read the association's post wouldn't know the exact circumstances, but it was clear that it was living paint. For some reason, you could tell that just by looking at it.

This was a blatant demonstration of how horrible a life one would have to lead if one were to be branded a villain in the 'City of Hollows'.

“Can the Association use the power of monsters to do this?”

“I don’t know what you’re talking about. We just wanted to warn you about the dangers of the ‘Empty City’.”

Anyone who looked at it could clearly see that the intention was to "keep the current trend created by Black Cloak as it is, as it is not bad." However, the association evaded the claim, saying, "We just wanted to be on the lookout for the increasing number of people who are rashly approaching Black Cloak these days."

The few who knew of the existence of the Source and the Gardeners realized that this was the Society's intention to limit the 'story' of the Black Cloak to something beneficial to human conscience and rules.

“I wonder what they’re going to do if the story of the Black Cloak becomes too big because the Association has approved it.”

“It’s not a monster that’s stuck in a corner, but rather, it’s a being that’s quite close to the source for a simple monster. This is better.”

“Yeah, if it’s a being that keeps appearing in the gaps between people, the story will become bigger anyway.”

“So, should we try to create an image so that the black cloak can move in a direction that is beneficial to humans?”

“If we can use this gap to restrict the direction of the active Black Cloak, it would be beneficial. I understand.”

“Even for something like that, it’s a bold move. I guess he was anxious because he’s a rare being that has a direct influence on humans.”

“It’s better to prepare before something happens than to try to deal with it after it happens. Especially when it comes to storytelling.”

“This might be a strong stimulant for monster haters. It might cause some strong backlash.”

“Well, wouldn’t the association handle that well? There are a lot of capable people there.”

Even if that weren't the case, there was no one who could strongly oppose the association.

“If you have any complaints about the operation of the association, please contact me.”

This was because the president of the association, Dan Hae-ra, personally stepped forward.

In a world where human rights were treated as empty words, citizens who were living a safe life in the city with the help of the association could not think of rebelling against them.

Only a few people who had been secretly doing things that could be called criminals were making a fuss.

“…….”

There were others who benefited from that flow.

“What the hell.”

It was F-class hunter Cha Ara.

“Brother, I just earned money.”

“What the hell are you talking about.”

“The people who abandoned me in the dungeon last time gave me compensation.”

"how much?"

“Uh… First of all, can you change the electric blanket?”

“It’s almost spring, so it sounds like an electric blanket.”

Although it wasn't very common, there were times when Black Cloak would judge the good and evil of a human based on the victim's plea. As a result, there were a couple of instances where bad things would happen if Black Cloak judged the perpetrator to be evil.

This was the reason why Cha Ara was only now receiving compensation for something that happened a long time ago.

“Then should I fix the ceiling? It’s leaking.”

“Save some. I won’t be selling bungeoppang anymore, so I need to save some money for the time being.”

“That would be better. Oppa, you’ll stay home for a while? What are you going to do?”

“I should start taking care of the garden soon. The weather is getting warmer….”

“If my brother says he wants to make money through farming, I’ll help him with the farm work for a while.”

“Okay, a hunter should do his job as a hunter. Why are you touching dirt?”

“What are you going to plant?”

“Um… I’m thinking about potatoes and lettuce.”

While we were chatting away, the topic changed to the youngest.

“What is Chaisol doing?”

“I hope you’re eating well.”

“Does he have a girlfriend these days?”

“No… we were really close friends.”

“Kkabi, I think even the youngest one learned love.”

“How can something the size of a palm learn love?”

Cha Eun-hyuk clicked his tongue.

“I heard that you’re going on an internship soon.”

“Huh? Why can’t I hear it?”

“I got a call the day before yesterday, but you weren’t home.”

“Ah, I also have the youngest’s voice… I also have the youngest on the phone….”

“You have to stay home whether you talk or not.”

“Our youngest, Cotton Candy, is already going to do an internship.”

“That’s just a bean pod, not cotton candy.”

“It dissolves in water.”

“That’s true for us too.”

The Cha family has been known to melt when they enter stagnant water for generations. They are a family that has difficulty staying immersed for long periods of time.

“Anyway, I told you to summon Black Cloak if you feel like you’re going to fail.”

“Is this guy crazy, ruining a child’s life? Is this like summoning the devil?”

“It’s better to be moderate than evil… Hey. But it’s better to have a messed up life than to die.”

“Honestly, it’s hard to tell the difference between a clean death and a really messed up life.”

“No, last time I saw it, Black Cloak was taking care of our youngest.”

“That… that’s true, but….”

“I know you might be annoyed that I called you for personal reasons, but it’s better than actually losing, right?”

“…….”

Cha Ara, who had been keeping her mouth shut, asked.

“…So what does that gentleman do?”

“From what I see on the news, it seems like you’re having a fun time.”

“Haven’t you been appearing less frequently lately?”

“I’ve heard that there are definitely fewer sightings than in the winter.”

“It feels like everyone is slowly calming down.”

“Rather than that, it was creepy because it felt like I was settling in.”

“What is that, like mandatory national vaccinations….”

“That’s right, that’s it. That’s exactly the feeling.”

The city, which had been noisy all along because of the story of the black cloak, was gradually returning to its usual appearance.

There were still people running around trying to meet the black cloak, and there were those who held back so as not to be labeled as villains by him, but it felt like things had calmed down and returned to normal life.

“This planet will be with Black Cloak until it dies….”

“Fuck, when you say it like that, it makes me twice as scared.”

“It just feels like everyone has adapted, and even the Black Cloaks are becoming less active.”

Eunhyuk Cha, who had even had a meal with him, asked.

“But I heard that ‘Mr. Sergio’ isn’t active?”

“I don’t know why you’re asking me that, Sergio?”

“Black… That… That person’s… identity. He came from the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’…”

“Ah, ahh….”

Cha Ara nodded.

"…I know?"

Did Black Cloak ever intend to use his human identity?

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (116)

Episode 116

There are usually two routes for new recruits to enter the collection business.

“I saw a new face today.”

“Really? Who else did the guild leader seduce?”

First, the guild leader, Bisabal, picks up someone on the street.

“No, there were several people.”

“Then I guess you’ve been robbing somewhere again.”

“You look so happy….”

“It’s the guild leader’s long-standing hobby.”

Second, raid illegal guilds and recruit talented people.

“I didn’t see it on the news.”

“I guess it wasn’t that big of a guild.”

The collection shop was usually filled with new members through the collector's talent for collecting people. It was a natural story, considering that the guild itself was like a display case for the collection of the Bisabal.

When there was only one new face, there was a high probability that the Victim had tricked someone on the street, but if there were multiple faces at the same time, it was more likely the latter. In this case, it was as if they had blatantly raided a guild.

“You’re still an intern, right? I’d love for you to join our team.”

“I thought it would go towards the gallery since it looks sturdy.”

“No, is that something that can be done just by being strong?”

“I think I’ll try curator work as a taster.”

“These days, the company has grown so much that it’s a bit tough….”

“What can I do, the gallery is like the body of our company?”

The first thing a collector does is manage the gallery, the second is manage funds, and the third is explore dungeons. The collector's biggest business, which has a strong image of being a company that handles numbers and moves money, is undoubtedly the gallery.

A world full of beautiful and bizarre works. Those who know its essence are captivated by its rare power, and those intoxicated by romance praise the gallery's splendor. The gallery of Bisabal is the face of the collector.

“It seems like there’s a good chance that I’ll become a full-time employee.”

“But if that happens….”

The appearance of new faces caused the existing employees to murmur.

“Do new recruits also receive that document?”

The 'official document' mentioned here refers to the 'Black Cloak

Safety Rules'.

“…….”

“…….”

“…No, no matter what, this is a bit….”

“…If the new recruits don’t become regular employees, they might spread outside.”

“Honestly, this is a story about a black cloak, but are you telling me this?”

“But if it’s placed in the gallery, I think we should at least inform them of it humanely.”

“I still don’t think this is right. If we’re not careful, it won’t end with just one or two people dying.”

“It’s cheaper to let a few new recruits die than to have South Korea shaken up by monsters.”

“No, the new recruits might be provoked by ‘Mr. Sergio’ and it could even harm us.”

People who don't know the style or feel friendly towards 'Black Cloak', but those who think a little, have a wary feeling that 'they are ultimately monsters'. In this day and age, humanoid monsters are an undeniable object of fear.

This was especially true for the staff of the collection, who knew a little more about the Black Cloak than the average citizen. Only the curators would suck and suck on those crazy works, calling them 'their babies', while the ordinary staff were still wary and fearful of the Black Cloak.

“I heard the level is quite high.”

“I heard that evil spirits are also considered monsters. Is that possible…?”

“He seems pretty docile, but I can’t be sure.”

“Anyway, it’s hard to know the insides of monsters.”

“What’s the big deal? It’s probably just that you hate humans.”

“There hasn’t been much damage yet, but it can’t hurt to be cautious.”

The more this happens, the more important it becomes to recruit curators.

“I think the reason I brought in new recruits this time is because of the black cloak.”

“It would be difficult for one person to handle such a huge being. Mr. Yoo Seong-un is trying to die.”

“Our curators don’t risk their lives to make money.”

The gallery of the collectors has accidents and incidents that occur several times a month, with some people dying, others getting injured, and others becoming permanently disabled. Since the job involves managing beings that are difficult for ordinary people to handle, it is said that the mental power is greatly drained.

“They say the association’s research institute is a bit more controlled, so shouldn’t we go in that direction too?”

“There’s a gallery image of the collectors. The guild leader himself has set up a household with the works, so are you going to just sit by and watch that go by?”

“I can clearly see a future where people will make a fuss about how they can be so cruel. Actually, I don’t think this kind of atmosphere is bad.”

“Well, our gallery’s colors are very stimulating. We benefit a lot from that… We’re well-known.”

“There will be a parade in the spring, but that’s definitely not something you can do in a boring place like a research institute. It’s something that only our curators can do.”

“I think it has pros and cons. It is unstable because it relies on social interaction and trust rather than control, but it increases usability.”

The employees' awareness of the significance of the existence of the Bisabal Gallery was once again passed on to the new, fresh staff who joined the company.

“Looking at the state of curators these days, it’s about time for a change.”

“When new people come in, the original people also have to take a vacation.”

“I’m telling you, you can’t do something like that unless you’re crazy about money or art. Poor people, they work overtime all the time. They can’t even get off work.”

“It’s probably more work than having a newborn baby, so where would you have time to rest?”

“Newborns don’t kill people just because they’re a little less hands-on. Every time a new person comes in, someone gets hurt in the gallery. It’s going to happen again.”

“For the time being, it would be best to keep a close eye on the gallery. It’s inevitable that people will die or get hurt, but we can’t let any damage be done to the entire company.”

“You’re new, why are you sending me to the 5th floor? It won’t be a problem. Hey, I thought someone from our team was coming in….”

“Let’s give it a try. The curators need a break too. Anyway, new recruits who don’t fit in with the gallery will be coming to the office.”

As the staff had guessed, these new recruits were indeed chosen to manage the gallery.

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

They were looking very awkward.

“Oh, there are new faces. Are you curators?”

“…Ah, yes, I’m in charge of the gallery side of things….”

“Since you’re new, I’ll just focus on the first floor, but take care.”

"thank you."

The new employees were hesitant as the existing employees greeted them casually as they came and went.

‘This is the collection… the building is really nice.’

'Can I stay here?'

'Curator? I've never done anything like that.'

'I have to seize this opportunity somehow.'

‘I don’t want to go back to that guild… .’

This was the kind of behavior that was often seen in new recruits brought in by the illegal guilds. They had the conscience and will to advance enough to work in a proper guild, but they were bewildered by the opportunity that had suddenly fallen upon them.

One person approached those new recruits.

“Hello, interns.”

It was Yoo Seong-un who gave the first curator training at the request of Bisabal.

“My name is Yoo Seong-un and I’d like to give you some brief information about the Collector’s Gallery.”

“Oh, hello.”

"hello…."

“You must have received basic training, so let’s move right away.”

The new curators, led by Yoo Seong-un, took the elevator down. The elevator for curators was only big enough to fit six people, but since there were exactly six people, including Yoo Seong-un, it felt very crowded.

Despite the cramped space, Yoo Seong-un explained.

“Today is the first day, so we’ll all be moving together, so it’ll be a bit cramped, but starting tomorrow, each person will have a curator in charge. They’ll be assigned different times, so it won’t be as cramped as it is today, so don’t worry.”

A newcomer asked him.

“Excuse me, is there a reason why it’s narrower than the regular employee elevator? Shouldn’t it be a little bigger to move things in the gallery?”

“Good question. If there are disadvantages, such as being in the company of a dangerous work or being cursed by the work, the maximum number of people is kept low, keeping in mind that everyone inside the elevator will die.”

Yoo Seong-un answered coolly.

“For the same reason, the curator-only elevator usually only holds two to four people. For works that are too large to be transported by elevator, freight elevators or moving skills are used, but this part is handled by more experienced curators, so you don’t have to worry about it yet.”

“…Considering that everyone will die, this small…?”

“It’s not common, but it does happen. Most of the time, accidents happen because people don’t follow the gallery’s instructions and act rashly. If you just follow the curator’s instructions, the chances of that happening are low. Above all, artworks that you have built a good rapport with tend to be safe.”

“Oh, yes, I will be careful. Thank you.”

“Because it is a gallery located deep underground, it takes a long time to go down. We are headed to the first basement floor, which is the safest place among the collection’s galleries. There are also works that play tricks on the elevator, so it is better to get a sense of the time it takes to go down each floor.”

The elevator arrived, and Yoo Seong-un, who had come down to the basement level, looked around at the new recruits.

“Welcome to the Collector's Gallery.”

The voice was still indifferent, but none of the new recruits opened their mouths.

“…….”

“…….”

I was out of breath.

They were brought in because they were thought to have the qualities of a curator, and they had a high fear of danger and tolerance for pain, but they still felt intimidated.

A sense of chaos, heaviness and enormity that made it difficult to breathe enveloped the gallery.

Yoo Seong-un spoke to the new recruits who were looking around the completely white space with pale faces.

“I think everyone is at least C-class or higher.”

The new recruits who had come to their senses answered one by one.

“I am a C-class.”

"me too…."

“I’m a B-class.”

“It’s a B-class.”

“…A-class.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“There are exceptions, but generally, the higher the rank, the deeper underground the gallery you’ll be placed in. I don’t know about B-rank hunters, but I think it’s good to keep in mind the hunter who said A-rank.”

“…Yes, thank you for the advice. I will work hard.”

“The lower you go underground, the more benefits you receive. If you don’t want to, you can adjust your placement after consulting with the HR team, so you don’t have to worry about being forced to take risks.”

Yoo Seong-un led the newcomers forward slowly and explained the gallery.

“You don’t need to remember all the works in every gallery, but it’s a good idea to at least memorize the basic locations and characteristics of the works on the first floor and the floor you’re on. You should be able to deal with basic issues if they arise.”

“Yes, I understand.”

“In the case of works that are actively being worked on, they are often stored separately, and although they are usually not managed by new employees, they may be in the future. Please remember that there are sections that require identification… You should also become familiar with the rescue request devices installed in the gallery.”

In addition, Yoo Seong-un continued his most basic education.

The gallery's structure, where the dangerous works are displayed, the tasks that new curators must do, etc... Because the gallery is so large, it took quite a while to tour just one floor.

Yoo Seong-un, who had returned to the elevator again, opened his mouth.

“You don’t need to remember the works I’ve explained in detail. Of course, remembering them will help ensure your survival and safety, but the most important thing is how to deal with the works that show activity.”

“Yes, Curator Yoo Seong-un.”

“Your curator will let you know about works that you have a deep understanding of or need to build rapport with. If your abilities are recognized, you may be assigned to one or more works, but keep in mind that you may have difficulty exercising your veto power in this regard.”

A newbie asked.

“Why is it difficult to make suggestions for the artwork when the floor layout is acceptable?”

“Because the gallery is short on management staff.”

“Ah… Are they all dying by any chance…?”

“That too.”

It couldn't be said that it wasn't. This gallery, which, while not as controlled as the association's research institute, pushed the usability and intimacy of the works to the limit, usually paid for its glamor by sacrificing the life and health of the curators.

It was a gallery that literally forced people into working, but it was a system that could be maintained because the value of the artwork was much higher than the amount of manpower. It was also a structure that was commonly seen in the world these days.

“Because the work of a curator requires considerable mental and physical fatigue, even if you are in charge of one work, you need to take regular breaks. You need to rotate frequently, but if you don’t, as I just mentioned, the number of works you are in charge of increases.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed innocently.

“But we don’t assign curators tasks that they can’t handle at all, or tasks that are so blatantly life-threatening, like human sacrifice.”

It's a world where you can never say that their lives are more valuable than the artwork here, but that doesn't mean that Bisabal neglects the safety of its curators.

There were only the numbers of injuries and deaths, but Bisabal cherished what was his. He wanted the end to be noble and artistic if his employees had to die.

“You must remember that this is a collector’s country.”

“…….”

“You have come here because you have shown the potential to become a part of the guild master’s collection. The guild master cherishes his collection quite a bit, so if you are promoted to a full-time employee, you will have no problems.”

"ah…."

“As long as you don’t slacken off or do stupid things. Our guild leader likes honest and capable people. You can use it as a reference for your personal development.”

As he said that, Yoo Seong-un narrowed his eyes.

“Always remember that what you are about to face is the most dangerous and sensitive being on Earth. This gallery requires the attitude of thinking about it dozens or hundreds of times and making careful choices, but also making bold choices based on your intuition at some point.”

It was contradictory advice, but that was the reality. Curators, who had to care for their own work with love and devotion, could not survive by simply following the manual.

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“If both the curator and the company decide that the curator’s job is not suitable for him or her, he or she will be assigned to another job. Since the gallery is short on manpower, everyone is receiving this training as a priority, but it is not mandatory.”

“Oh, then, what other jobs do you have?”

“It would be something like processing company documents or going on expeditions to find artwork to display at auction houses or galleries. If you want a stable life, an office job would be good, and if you want to work to the best of your ability and get paid accordingly, a field job would be good.”

Curators are also paid according to their abilities and results, but this is out of the question because it is much more dangerous than general field work. If I were worried about my life, I would rather take on general company work.

“This concludes the essential training I will give you today. If you have a strong desire to work as a curator or if you have any questions left, you can look around a little more.”

“…….”

“Well, there isn’t. In that case, I’ll make sure to record everyone leaving the gallery with me on the list. The curator in charge will let you know, but let’s make it a habit to fill out the gallery entry list every time we get on the elevator.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded and asked.

“I will now take your questions.”

“…Is there anything different if you become a full-time employee?”

“Whether you’re a curator or do something else, the benefits will increase.”

“I wonder if he classified the information that he could tell the intern. He thought about something for a moment and then continued speaking.

“In addition, you will have your own identity on a portal that only regular employees can access.”

The 'own identity' mentioned here meant that their citizenship level would rise. If they were officially employed, they would be issued a second-class citizenship card instead of the current fourth or fifth class.

If you're lucky, and if you work hard enough, a first-class citizen's license is not a dream but a reality. The new recruits' eyes were filled with impatience and desperation.

“What is this portal that only regular employees can check?”

“You can think of it as similar to a general company portal. There is information and a community that only the company’s employees can see.”

“Is there a possibility that the intern will be disadvantaged due to such information gaps…?”

“To be honest, I can’t say that there are no disadvantages. However, I can say that it’s not as big of a disadvantage as you think, and there is definitely a difference in treatment.”

Yoo Seong-un paused for a moment after saying that.

“…….”

“…Curator?”

“And let me give you one piece of advice.”

He continued speaking with the same innocent smile as before.

“Our company has a person who works the early morning shift named Sergio.”

“…Dawn shift? What is that? Is it like part-time?”

“A similar concept, a sort of special force. An unofficial hunter who has not even debuted in the media. He often shows up at the company, so you might run into him.”

“Who is this Sergio? Since he speaks so clearly like this, is there anything we should be careful about?”

“He is a kind and polite person. He won’t be angry if you don’t do anything rude first, so I hope you won’t be too surprised when you meet him.”

“…Do you look a little scary…?”

“Well, kind of.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“He’s wearing a black cloak.”

“…Black cloak?”

“I’m having trouble because my image overlaps with the famous black cloak these days. I’m someone who usually enjoys wearing black cloaks, but I’ve heard that I resemble a dangerous monster….”

“Oh, I see. Similar images….”

“…….”

After a moment of silence, Yoo Seong-un soon opened his mouth.

“…This is an unofficial special force of the collectors. I’m checking the overall atmosphere of this company and going around, so you might run into me in the hallways or galleries. I'm telling you this in advance so that you don't mistake me for an intruder."

The expressions of the two new recruits hardened at Yoo Seong-un's words. It seemed like he had guessed something, but Yoo Seong-un did not say anything more and ended his explanation here.

"It was nice meeting you."

"Yes, Curator Yoo Seong-un."

"I hope we can meet again as a family without any problems."

He smiled faintly.

The purpose of the collector's gallery was management, sales, and exhibition. It was created solely to cherish the collection of the Bisabul, and in this place, social interaction, not control of the works, was necessary.

Will these new recruits be able to develop an irrational affection for these crazy works?

"I hope you adapt well."

The first training session for new recruits has been completed.

* * *

"……."

"hello."

And so the day ended.

"Are you okay?"

"…ah…?"

“I’m glad you don’t seem to be hurt.”

A new recruit encountered a blond man.

He said.

“My name is Sergio.”

“…….”

“What is your name?”

“…….”

“I wonder what your name is.”

The eyes that contained the sea smiled.

“Would you like to talk to me?”

It happened at 5:13 in the morning.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (117)

Episode 117

The woman had trouble sleeping at night.

Even when all the new recruits who had just received their first day of training at the collection center were asleep, the woman couldn't fall asleep.

In recent years, she has had many sleepless nights due to the anxiety that she might fall behind. The resulting insomnia has been tormenting her terribly. She couldn't help it.

“…I have time like this. I need to study more….”

She didn't have any ambitions, but she had a sense of desperation that stemmed from a not-so-good situation. She didn't want to be a great person or be noticed, but she was one of those people who longed for 'ordinary happiness.'

“I have read all the leaflets the collector gave me.”

The girl was from Carnation Eye, and grew up working under a hunter from an illegal guild. For her, who had always been looking for a moment to step out into the light, the hand extended by the collector, Bisabal, was a golden opportunity.

“I’m not the only newbie, and more than anything, I’m the lowest C-rank among my peers… I don’t know if I’ll get hired or not. I can’t just let this opportunity to receive protection from one of the top three guilds in South Korea go to waste.”

The place where the girl is currently is the collector's dormitory.

“…The company itself was clearly open 24 hours a day….”

The woman gathered her clothes one by one and headed to the collection center.

It was a little past 4 in the morning. The security guard guarding the entrance opened his eyes wide at the sight of a woman visiting during a rare hour when there were no employees.

He was in charge of the entrance and knew the faces of all the employees. That was no different when dealing with new employees.

“Are you new here?”

“Oh, yes, yes. That’s right.”

“I heard you were assigned to the gallery. Do you already have work to do?”

“Well… I don’t know if this is okay, but I want to try to adapt…”

“So you’re saying there’s no separate work?”

“…Wouldn’t that be okay?”

“Everything that happens from now on is your responsibility, so there’s nothing you can’t do.”

As the guard pointed to the entrance gate, the woman hurriedly scanned her employee ID. After safely entering, she bowed to the guard.

“Thank you.”

“My employees are coming to work, so what do I have to thank them for?”

The friendly-looking security guard, who seemed to be quite witty, spoke to me naturally.

“If you’re going to the gallery, it would be best not to go below the basement level. There are still two people working in the gallery on the first floor, so if you have any questions, ask them.”

“Is that okay? I’m worried I’m bothering you….”

“They are people who come to guard the place even at a time when you are already sleepy. They would rather have someone to talk to. They are kind of on night watch.”

“…Thank you for letting me know.”

“I hope you’ll be hired as a full-time employee soon after working so hard. I know you’re busy, but please take the elevator with some time to spare.”

“…….”

The woman nodded and went deep into the building.

'It's dawn, but the lights are still on so brightly.'

There was no place with the lights off, perhaps for the employees working the night shift.

Even so, the silence of not seeing a single person suddenly gave her chills, but the woman headed straight for the gallery elevator. The sound of her shoes walking down the hallway was particularly loud.

The elevator that the meteor curator had told me about during the day was quite a complicated way to get there.

“…….”

The woman, who had already verified her identity with her employee ID card, pressed the gold button. The elevator door opened a long time later, as if no one had left work.

“…Ah, the attendance list.”

My eyes fell on the paper list hanging on the elevator wall.

“I think I told you to make it a part of your daily life.”

Does that apply to you as a non-regular employee?

"hmm…."

The woman thought for a moment and then wrote her name on the list.

The woman, a non-combat hunter, had no ability to retrieve special items from dungeons, and was born poor and grew up in an illegal guild without any education, so her clerical skills were poor.

'But the most important thing in a collector's gallery is the love for the artwork. They said they wouldn't assign artwork beyond my ability, so if I just put my heart and soul into it, I think I can do well in this gallery.'

The woman wrote down her words one by one, expressing her desire to remain in her current position if possible.

“Destination… Basement, 1st floor….”

The woman, who had simply stated her purpose, put the gold fountain pen back in its original place.

“…If you don’t tie this up, won’t someone steal it?”

Well, it's one of the top three guilds in South Korea, so it seems difficult for them to do something so bold.

An elevator with a harmonious blend of ivory and gold. The woman unconsciously took in its elegance before pressing the button.

The elevator, which was bright and clean and kept spotless, had an old-fashioned feel to it.

'... If you think about it, it's strange that these elevators in a large company have metal buttons. And the list is made of paper. Is this a design to preserve the classic image of the gallery?'

Then, suddenly, the woman felt a chill.

“…….”

The atmosphere was much more eerie than when I saw it during the day.

“…Is it because I’m riding alone? It’s definitely scary….”

When there were a lot of people, it was a bit cramped, but it wasn't scary.

It is a gallery of collectors that exhibits the most bizarre and dangerous works in the world. If I finish the training period and become a regular employee, I will have to ride alone from then on, so I had to get used to this kind of creepiness in advance.

'Yeah, if I get assigned my work, I have to build a proper rapport with them. If I get scared from the elevator like this, what am I going to do later?'

It was when I was about to press the elevator button with that determination in mind.

“…….”

The woman tilted her head.

“…the button…?”

It had four floors in total.

“…Why is this happening? Isn’t this not how it should be?”

Then the woman thought back to the collector's leaflet that she had memorized in her dorm room. To be exact, it contained instructions for using the gallery.

"ah."

At 4:44 a.m., we asked people to refrain from using the elevator to the gallery if possible.

He said that there is a work of art on the 4th floor of the gallery that plays with numbers that are considered particularly unlucky in the East. He said that he likes the number 4 so much that even if he moves to a different floor, he continues to appear on the 4th floor.

“Exactly what kind of work was it….”

I remembered what the security guard had said earlier, "Take your time in the elevator." I thought it was just a saying to calm my mind, but I felt ashamed of myself for not having thought of this reason earlier.

‘Then please stop me…!’

I felt resentful for a moment, but she was none other than a 5th class citizen. In a world where even 1st class citizens die for no reason, no one would feel sorry for her death.

'But if I have an accident and something goes wrong with the works, isn't that a bigger problem? No, I need to think about how to deal with it instead of thinking about that.'

But I couldn't remember it well because I was so anxious.

“What, it was a work that symbolized an elevator button… I thought….”

Blink… .

The lights flashed.

“…….”

Blink, blink.

The blinking speed gradually increased.

"…uh…."

what?

'What should I do?'

The woman was so panicked that she couldn't even lean against the wall.

It's true that I memorized all the leaflets the company gave me, but when I was in an urgent situation, it was difficult to get the right information out.

The description of this work is like the story of that work, this is like that, that is like this….

“Ugh….”

Why do I always do stupid things when it matters?

“Father, there must be a device here… that can call for help from the elevator…”

Ki-ki-ki-ki.

The elevator rattles with an ominous sound. It lurches downwards and the elevator doors close and close repeatedly.

It was so noisy inside and outside my body at the same time, thumping loudly. It was a noisy situation that made me feel like crying and I couldn't do anything about it.

“Please….”

I was suffocating from the feeling of being suffocated.

This elevator had an emergency call button in case of an emergency.

If you just press the button, a rescue team waiting will come and help you, said Curator Yoo Seong-un, who was in charge of the training during the day.

“…….”

A creaking sound.

I was about to press the button to request rescue as the elevator started to vibrate strangely, as if it was going to crash at any moment.

But it stopped just before reaching it.

“…….”

It wasn't the monster's work.

“…Me, me….”

It was because of the woman's own selfishness.

“Is it getting cut?”

It was quite possible.

He crawled into a dangerous place even though it wasn't the designated time, bothered the morning guards, and caused an accident that didn't have to happen by doing something that was clearly written not to do.

What could have gone wrong with this expensive looking elevator?

'Besides, I'm a C-class hunter.'

C-rank hunters are common in today's world. Most of my peers are higher rank than me, and those of the same rank have sturdy bodies that clearly show that they are combat-type.

'I have the worst conditions.'

But if you cause an accident like this and bother people again… .

“…….”

It couldn't have caused a bigger accident.

It was at that moment that the woman reached for the button.

"…uh?"

Blink… .

The lights that had been flickering eerily came back on.

“Uh, uh…?”

I haven't pressed the button yet.

For some reason, the air felt light as if she had returned from a ghost story to reality, and the woman unconsciously checked the buttons on the elevator. The five buttons, which were supposed to be for only four floors, were also in order from the first to the fifth floor.

And let's check the floor the elevator stopped on.

“…5th floor?”

Ding-.

The elevator door opened.

“…Ah? 5th floor? No, wait, wait…!!”

The woman fell backwards with a thud, startled by the thought that she had crawled into the worst den without even coming to her senses.

Before I could even groan in excruciating pain, the elevator doors opened completely, revealing a long figure.

“…….”

“…….”

A blond man wearing a black cloak.

"hello."

It was 'Sergio', taking the form of Giovanni.

* * *

“…It was something like a reporting ceremony.”

“It would have the feel of an annual event, to be exact.”

The blond man nodded at the woman's empty question.

“It’s a work that only scares without actually causing any harm, but I heard that new curators who don’t properly understand the rules tend to get hurt when they forget.”

"ah…."

“I think it’s a pretty safe way to tell people that it can be really dangerous if you don’t get the manual down, so I guess not everyone is very proactive about giving advice.”

At those words, the woman remembered the guard at the entrance.

“Well, he just told me to ‘take your time and ride the elevator.’ I thought he was telling me to take my time, but oh… that’s what it was.”

Anyway, fortunately it wasn't really dangerous.

“I thought it was an unmanageable accident because it was a four-story work.”

“It wasn’t a very dangerous piece, so we tried to move it to the first floor several times, but because it liked the number 4 so much, it kept going back to that spot, so it ended up on the fourth floor.”

“…I was so out of it that I didn’t even think about it….”

There was an explanation that the work was intended to be moved to a different location, not the 4th floor, in a gallery with only 5 underground floors. It is more likely that the work was intended to be moved to a floor above the 5th floor.

“I still can’t remember, what was your coping mechanism?”

“If someone outside the elevator calls the elevator from outside, the abnormal phenomenon will stop.”

“…All I had to do was press the rescue request button or hold out until morning? It really wasn’t dangerous at all.”

“You don’t have to blame yourself. Even though it was just a joke, it was clearly a mentally draining phenomenon, so if it had stayed that way until the morning, it could have caused trauma.”

“Thank you for your comfort….”

The woman let out a small breath.

“Actually, I… I thought Sergio was one of the strange phenomena at first.”

The first thing he said was a sudden greeting. He said that calm 'hello' to a person who was rolling around in a cold sweat.

I can't tell you how strange it felt, even in the most panicked state, to see such thoughtless consideration, as if exchanging morning greetings with a neighbor.

It was similar to monsters that didn't care what happened to humans.

‘… I can’t say such rude things to you in front of you… .’

The woman wiped away the cold sweat.

“So right after that, you asked for my name… I thought I had really fallen for the right piece of work. I thought you were forcing me into a terrible and evil contract.”

“This is embarrassing. I thought you were very surprised, so I tried to ease your tension by greeting you and exchanging your name, but I think it ended up scaring you more. I apologize, even though it’s a little late.”

Sergio, who had said so, bowed his head very politely. Although his words and actions were humble, he looked so old-fashioned as if he were from a high place, and the woman blushed. It was too much of a compliment.

“T-Tha… you don’t have to say that. In fact, I was the one who received help.”

I was just a little surprised. The atmosphere was so heavy and the speech was so strangely stiff that I think the woman who had just come out of the play was dizzy.

“Mr. Sergio, you are very polite.”

“I always wanted to be a polite person.”

The man wearing the black cloak laughed.

“That makes me happy.”

“…….”

“You are a polite and kind person.”

“…Ah, that….”

“Thank you for affirming me.”

There was no lie in those words.

“…….”

He is a good person.

Her blond hair, warm as if soaked in sunlight, flows down softly. Her smooth, porcelain-like face carries a gentle smile.

Those mysterious eyes, as if they contained the sea of spring, are beautiful. Everything about him is made of kindness.

‘… He’s such a sweet and kind person, but why… .’

…Why is it so creepy?

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (118)

Episode 118

The next day, the woman's senior in charge asked.

“Did you enjoy your time at the gallery yesterday?”

"yes…?"

“Because my name is on the list.”

“Oh, yes.”

The woman nodded.

“I think I got beat up a lot during the ceremony, but I had a good time.”

“Huh? An initiation ceremony?”

The curator in charge tilted his head.

“What, you got on the elevator at 4:44?”

“…Yes, I’m sorry. I should have studied it properly….”

“Ah, don’t worry, I’m not saying anything.”

The curator in charge who said that smiled slightly and continued speaking.

“I’m a curator on the first floor. I asked the people who were working overtime yesterday, and they said they never took it out. They also said they didn’t press the rescue request button.”

"ah…."

“I didn’t hear that he was found breathing in the elevator this morning, so someone on another floor must have taken him out. Which floor was the curator? I should be grateful.”

“Hey, you were on the 5th floor. Thanks to that, I was able to see the gallery, which is said to be the most dangerous.”

“…5th floor?”

"…yes yes."

“…….”

The curator in charge had the same expression as before, a faint smile like a smiling merchant, but something about his reaction was strange.

The curator in charge said as he watched the woman waiting for an answer.

“But you know what?”

“What, what is it?”

“There were no curators working overtime on the 5th floor yesterday.”

“…….”

I got goosebumps.

"…yes?"

“Hey, kidding kidding!”

A refreshing laugh. The curator in charge laughed with a face full of laughter.

“If you want to survive in this gallery, you have to be able to take a joke like this.”

“…No, just kidding…right?”

“No, to be honest, my name wasn’t on the attendance list?”

“Then it’s not a joke…!”

“But there’s someone in our guild who walks around without his name on the roster.”

"…ah…."

“Didn’t you hear what Mr. Yoo Seong-un said yesterday? He said he told you something.”

The woman nodded to him.

“I, I heard. It’s Sergio.”

“Yes, Sergio.”

The curator in charge smiled brightly.

“Hey, you’re lucky. I haven’t seen Sergio much lately.”

“Ah… You don’t come here often? Isn’t that person a curator?”

“You can think of me as a special force of our guild, not a curator.”

“I heard it from Mr. Yoo Seong-un too… So, you don’t have any set work to do?”

“The most important job for the guild members is collecting the guild master’s items.”

“…Why all of a sudden?”

“I meant that it is fulfilling its role as a collectible, Sergio.”

“…That, is that okay? Shouldn’t it be eaten raw…?”

“That's true.”

The curator whispered, his voice deliberately lowered.

“There’s a story that that person is a hidden S-class hunter.”

“…S, S-class? There aren’t many of them in the country…?”

“He’s lying and saying he’s an A-class because he hates being noisy.”

“Isn’t that illegal??”

“Hey, why are you worrying about that? This is a collection store.”

“Uh… uh, no… that…”

“Our guild leader can do this much for the guild members. Doesn’t that make you feel proud?”

The curator shrugged. She pointed to the stuffed rabbit she was in charge of.

“Come on, pat our caregiver’s head. He’s so fluffy and cute.”

“…Is it okay if I stroke it like this?”

“Yes, very well done. This will give you a piece with a very low probability.”

“You said that it was like a gift that the works gave you?”

“It can be a curse sometimes… but the caregiver is a gentle piece of work, so that’s not the case, and yes, it’s a gift.”

“What gift does this doll give?”

“Oh my, a doll for a caregiver. Please be careful what you say.”

“Oh, yes. What kind of gifts does the caregiver give?”

“Give me some nice-smelling flowers, or a sewing kit that can fix any piece of clothing.”

"oh…."

“Isn’t it cute?”

“It’s cute.”

After a brief briefing, the curator returned to the previous topic.

“I see, Sergio opened the door for our junior. That’s amazing.”

“But still, they’re the same employees, so is there anything to be surprised about…?”

“Employees are like employees. Sergio doesn’t like crowds, so he usually wanders around in the early morning when there are no people around.”

“You’re really kind for something like that.”

“…….”

The curator asked back.

“Was it kind?”

“Huh? Oh, yes, yes. You were very kind.”

“Um… Mr. Geo, aren’t you such a handsome guy?”

"ah…."

The woman nodded.

“Now that I think about it, that’s true. He was quite a handsome man.”

I felt a little strange.

“I guess I was so surprised and scared at dawn that I didn’t even think he was handsome.”

“Everyone who meets Mr. Sergio says the same thing. They think he’s handsome even though it’s late.”

The curator's eyes sparkled.

“But how handsome is he? I haven’t even seen his face, but you say he’s a statuesque handsome man with blond hair and blue eyes. He looks like he smells like sunshine.”

“You’ve never even seen the face, but you describe it in such detail… I think that’s right. You must have some Western blood, because your nose is really high. Your eyes are also big.”

“Oh….”

The curator, who had been expressing admiration, soon muttered quietly.

“Is that how it is these days?”

“……?”

“Hmm, not bad.”

“…No matter how handsome you are, it’s rude to judge someone like that….”

“Oh my, am I really that rude?”

The curator burst into laughter.

“I heard that sometimes Mr. Geo gets depressed.”

“…I can’t even imagine it?”

“Because he has such a heavy aura, many people say he’s scary.”

“Ah… definitely….”

He was a person who fit in well with the all-white gallery, but there was something strange about him.

“…Is it because he’s so handsome? He doesn’t seem like he’s from this world. I feel distant from him.”

“Mr. Geo is very friendly, but the reactions are like this?”

“I know you treated me kindly. You even gave me chocolate so I wouldn’t have to take a different route when I was tired.”

“Yeah, yeah. That’s Geo. He carries snacks in his pocket like a squirrel.”

"squirrel…."

“I guess you think it doesn’t suit you.”

The curator then asked, placing a pink bag in the hands of a fluffy stuffed animal.

“How did it feel?”

“…….”

“I’m talking about a guy named Sergio.”

A calm voice, a little lower in tone than before. The woman thought of the man she had seen at dawn.

“…It may sound strange, but my first thought was that it was perfect.”

The moment he came into view, the world felt full.

Just as it is difficult to disparage the sunshine of a spring day, or to find fault with the cool waves of summer, it would be the same feeling as when one simply listens absentmindedly to a lullaby sung by a mother of a child or to a superstition passed down from generation to generation in a village.

A being that you can find fault with if you want to, and criticize if you want to, but you don't necessarily feel like doing so. A being that you can call complete even if you tear its skin, bleed, or have any kind of flaw. A being that makes you think you're just observing the flow of history.

It was a presence that made me feel rich and tight just by itself.

“It would be a bit strange to think that way the moment we met, right?”

“…I think it might be possible if it was the first time you saw someone of S-class rank.”

“I'm glad I'm not weird.”

He smiled awkwardly and continued speaking.

“His speech was also a bit peculiar. Should I say it was old-fashioned? Or should I say it had a certain elegance to it? To be honest, I found it a bit difficult because he spoke so politely that it was hard to handle.”

There was something halting about Sergio's speech.

“Should I say it was like someone who had a translation machine mess up? It’s not that I find it strange, but it was a little scary because I was really scared at the time.”

“Well… he could really be a Western hunter. He definitely looks like he has a lot of that blood in him. We don’t know exactly where the guild leader recruited him either.”

“Then maybe I’m just not used to Korean yet. But it’s not that it’s really strange, it’s just that it suits me well… That’s a little bit…”

I was scared.

“Is it because he’s handsome like no human being?”

I felt something was off.

“Yeah, well, that’s what happened.”

“Aren’t there any other stories?”

“Just… you’re saying that you’re being incredibly friendly?”

But even in that part, I felt distant. Something was strange.

“A favor is a favor, but rather than doing it out of personal feelings….”

“What, what, you wanted to develop a personal relationship?”

“No, that’s not what I meant. You know that.”

“If favor is not a personal feeling, then what is it?”

“…Is that so?”

I realized it was strange even after I said it.

“Oh, I mean, of course I didn’t mean to imply that he was being hypocritical or that his kindness was fake. Really.”

“I didn’t understand it like that.”

“So what I was trying to say is… the kindness Sergio shows is a bit off-putting, um… not like a normal give and take… this is…”

It sounds really weird though.

“I just felt like it was a favor I received because I was human.”

A favor given without any conditions, simply because you were born human.

So, rather, it felt like indifference… .

“…No, it’s not that I felt bad. Rather, I think it felt good. I think it was the first time in my life that I met someone who showed me kindness without any consideration, so I was a bit taken aback….”

I should say that I was embarrassed because it felt like I had received something so huge without doing anything.

“Mr. Sergio, you’re a first-class citizen, right? Oh, did I ask something so obvious?”

“I don’t know for sure, but I think so.”

“Somehow, I felt a sense of nobility in his actions. It didn’t feel Korean, though….”

There was an atmosphere that naturally made me yearn for it.

“He was very easygoing, but his words and actions had a sense of weight. He was definitely sociable, even though he didn’t have a friendly vibe. He also had a mysterious vibe, like a prince from a fairy tale.”

The curator in charge smiled sinisterly at the woman's words.

“Hey, honey. Are you going to confess to me like this?”

“…Senior, you asked for a review….”

“Hey, I didn’t expect it to go that far.”

The curator smiled cheerfully.

“Anyway, I’m glad that my junior is doing well.”

“Can I consider this as a possibility of being converted to a full-time employee…?”

“The gallery is so short on manpower that if you don’t cause any major accidents, you’ll be considered a full-time employee.”

“That would be really great, but I’m worried because I have many shortcomings.”

“What are you worried about? You were the one who spoke well in front of Mr. Sergio.”

“Ah… Is that how the standard is measured?”

“People must be so creepy.”

The curator smiled with wide eyes.

“Take care of yourself, and your staff too….”

“…….”

“And with the works.”

It was a tone that had a strange resonance.

'…ah.'

The woman suddenly remembered that the curator of meteor showers she had seen yesterday had the same smile.

Those eyes that curve strangely, containing emotions that may or may not be goodwill or malice.

“…….”

Then I realized that the curators here had a gallery-like atmosphere.

“…I will work hard.”

Should I say it is mysterious or bizarre?

I wasn't sure.

* * *

"honey."

“Cur.”

“Dad gained confidence.”

If there was a problem with the haunted portrait, it was the resolution. When the portrait went beyond the frame, there was a resolution problem, and people complained about the burden in recognizing it.

And now that I have completely become one with 'Giovanni', who has been solving my problems up until now, I went out to walk around wondering, 'Will I still be able to walk around without any resolution problems?'

“I had a conversation with the staff without any friction.”

I was so touched that I even gave her the chocolate I had been saving up like pocket money.

After giving it to him, I thought, 'Huh? If I do this, won't they find out that Black Cloak and I are the same person?' but I brushed it off. Geo, who grew up in the mountains of Gangwon-do, was not good at thinking deeply.

“I hope I can make new friends like this.”

“Gurr.”

“My own pen pal….”

“…Kkuk.”

Honey didn't tackle him because he seemed quite happy.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (119)

Episode 119

After some time, the initial training of new curators was over.

“You worked with the curator in charge, encountered various works, and learned the attitude that a curator of a collection should have toward works and customers. Thank you for your hard work for three weeks.”

However, that doesn't mean I was hired as a full-time employee right away.

“From now on, each of you will be in charge of a piece of work. Based on what you have shown us over the past three weeks, we have selected the piece that we believe is the most suitable. If we determine that the piece is difficult to manage, you will be removed.”

“…….”

“Even if you are being kicked out, it is just being kicked out of the gallery. You will be assigned to an office or field position at the collection store unless you cause any serious trouble. We are literally just selecting people who can show a stable presence at the gallery, so you don’t have to worry too much.”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking in front of five new curators.

“I gave you a three-week period, but since you have not raised any objections or expressed any intention to change, I think you will agree to become a curator of the collection. If you wish to continue working at the gallery, please fill out the consent form in front of you.”

All five new recruits signed a consent form, which stated that they would do their best on the work assigned to them at the gallery and take some responsibility for any problems that might arise as a result.

It was similar to a body waiver, but the new recruits weren't afraid of such things anymore. It was enough to know that they weren't responsible for all the problems that occurred.

Having seen the bottom of the illegal guilds, they wanted to work in one of the three major guilds in South Korea with minimal safety measures, and among them, the position of curator of the collection was highly prestigious.

“Everyone agrees.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“As some of you may have already checked, on the back of the consent form there is information about the work you will be working on.”

"…ah…."

“The Collector’s Office is a warehouse and laboratory where the most dangerous and sensitive items on Earth come in. Naturally, there are many unidentified items whose identities and methods of dealing with them are unknown….”

“…….”

“The newbies have been assigned works that have almost all the information about them. If you do them as you have learned and according to the manual, there will be no problems.”

As curators work longer at a gallery and are given more and more work to work with, they are given more risky pieces to work with. But this is not something that newcomers who are just starting to adapt to the gallery need to worry about.

“One year from now.”

Yoo Seong-un said.

“We will give you a period of one year. During that time, there will be people who can’t stand it and want to leave, and there will also be people who find a piece that suits them. I hope you will work as a curator of the collection for a long but short period of time.”

“… In that case… is it possible for the work I’m assigned to change in the middle of the project?”

“Because there are many works with strong intentions, even if we arrange them with the utmost care, there will be parts that don’t fit. If it is judged to be detrimental to both the work and the curator, the work in charge can change even during the year.”

It may not be just the curator's problem. No matter how much the curator cares, the state of the work sometimes changes.

“Then I will ask for your help.”

With Yoo Seong-un's words, the basic training of curators was concluded.

“I’d like to say hello when I see you, but I’m usually in charge of the 5th floor works and I travel a lot for business, so it wouldn’t be easy to meet you.”

“Thank you for everything.”

“I am the one who is grateful for following the training well. Please, everyone, don’t cause accidents. As you probably heard throughout the training, if you cause an accident, not only you but many other people will die.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had said those creepy words, smiled his characteristically innocent smile.

“Once again, welcome to the Collector’s Gallery.”

So the new curators were thrown into the wild.

“…….”

“…….”

In a somewhat creepy wilderness.

* * *

The work the man was assigned to do was a set of porcelain dolls.

“…….”

The official name was "Sweet Tea Party," and it consisted of three porcelain dolls smaller than an adult male's hand.

'The risk level is 6.'

The works in the collection gallery were classified into risk levels from 1 to 10, with higher numbers indicating greater safety. Among them, the work that the man who had just completed basic training was assigned to was a level 6 work on the third floor.

'Higher risk compared to other new recruits who were assigned works rated 8 out of 10.'

I couldn't tell whether I should be happy that this was acknowledged, or scared that it had become dangerous.

Curator Yoo Seong-yoon also passed by and said, "If it doesn't work out, ask them to assign a different piece."

but.

“…There’s no need to do that from now on.”

The porcelain doll set, “Sweet Tea Party,” depicts three girls in elaborate dresses.

All you had to do was give them the snacks they requested at the exact time, and then prepare the snacks they asked for after they finished eating them.

'There is no difficult way to deal with it, other than having to be careful with time.'

The margin of error is within 5 seconds. If you give them a snack too quickly or too slowly, they will turn into porcelain humans.

It was a terrible penalty that could result in death with one mistake, but it was the same when I was active in the field as a combat-type A-class hunter.

“In the first place, 5 seconds is a lot of time for a hunter….”

In particular, as a Class A Hunter, he was able to make decisions and take action within 0.01 seconds. Rather, it was a much safer situation than a dungeon where you had to exert a lot of strength and be prepared to get injured.

“…….”

"Sweet Tea Party" was displayed in the 28th hallway on the 3rd floor. The man's face relaxed a little when he saw it displayed in plain sight in a public place.

The safety of the artifacts could be confirmed simply by the fact that they were not stored separately and were in a hallway that any curator could walk through.

'It's quite dangerous to call it safe, considering it's a three-story work, but still... .'

I feel reassured.

“…So cute and adorable.”

A porcelain doll wearing a dress with many rich frills, so white that it looked like it would ooze out if touched. Her cheeks were painted the color of a ripe peach, her eyes were yellowish-brown, and her eyelashes were long and finely grown.

Their eyes were each sparkling purple, yellow, and green, as if they were made of jewels.

'Since the entire eyeball is made of a jewel, the sclera and cornea are not separated. If this were the case, it would be difficult to tell even if someone were looking at me.'

If it weren't for the strange atmosphere that came with the sense of discomfort of not being able to confirm the gaze, it would have been well-received by collectors who have a hobby of collecting such dolls.

“Today’s snack was star candy.”

Each of them asked for a purple, yellow, and green star candy.

“…….”

After waiting for 4:00 AM, the appointed tea party time, I placed the star candies that the porcelain dolls wanted on a small bowl. The star candies on the small bowl, which were small enough to fit the dolls' bodies, looked huge.

Then the dolls moved.

"…oh…."

Square, square, round.

The dolls ate the star candies by cutting them into pieces, as if they were dividing them into pieces of cake, using knives that were not sharp at all.

The sight of the star candies being cut so smoothly like a mousse cake felt quite novel.

“It’s a nice sweetness.”

“It’s a nice tea party.”

“It was a good time.”

The dolls that finished the tea party each gave their own evaluations, and the number of bad evaluations they received would determine their fortune for the day. The man sighed in relief as he recalled that.

'Today's fortune will not be bad.'

At that moment, an abnormality was detected.

“It has a nice crunch.”

“It’s a good firmness.”

“It smells good.”

“Good morning.”

“It was a good snack.”

“Good choice.”

“It’s a good gift.”

A total of 7 additional remarks.

“…….”

It was an obvious anomaly.

“…In the manual, there is an explanation like this….”

The dolls opened their mouths again, seemingly out of sight of the man who was hastily rereading the manual.

“Godfather.”

“The godfather is coming.”

“Let’s dress up sweetly.”

The porcelain girls added remarks that were completely different from the manual.

“…There was no such information?”

The porcelain doll set 『Sweet Tea Party』 opens its mouth a total of three times during one tea party. All sentences begin with 'good-' or 'bad-', and there was no one who could be called 'godfather' like now.

“What on earth….”

It was when I picked up the radio to call for help.

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

The dolls were looking at the same place.

“…….”

Let the man look back.

The sea.

The sun.

Deer.

The bird.

Clouds.

Flowers.

Fog.

Spring water.

Sigh.

The touch.

Teeth.

The eyeball.

Eyes.

eye.

“…….”

Human?

"…ah…."

It was seen.

A blond man with a kind smile came into view.

“Who, who are you…?”

The man stood there, looking a little embarrassed, trying to keep the porcelain dolls out of sight, to avoid any possible danger.

'There was definitely no sound?'

It was confusing.

'... If I'm confident enough to detect presences, then I wouldn't be able to detect anything below B-class. I've never heard of a new S-class appearing in Korea. It's my first time seeing this face... Is it an unofficial hunter close to S-class?'

I was already nervous. I was so out of it because I witnessed something strange on the first day I started working alone.

The man looked confused, but gradually collected his thoughts and looked at the person who was silently smiling as if waiting for him to be flustered. He was a person with softly curled, bright blond hair and a matching smile.

Soon the other person opened his mouth.

"hello."

“…Ah, yes.”

The everyday, gentle tone made me lose strength in my body.

“Good morning.”

“My name is Sergio.”

“Sergio….”

The man clenched and unclenched his fist. For some reason, a cold sweat broke out.

“It’s ‘Mr. Sergio’.”

He was also someone who received attention from curator Yoo Seong-un.

One of the new recruits of the C-class encountered a person who the other employees also laughed strangely at and were reluctant to describe in detail. It was Sergio, the unofficial special force of the collector, who was part of the early morning shift.

“I heard the story.”

“What is your name?”

“…….”

“I wonder what your name is.”

Are you listening to my story?

‘… It’s strangely confusing because the tone is so abrupt.’

The man spat out my name.

“…I am Binary.”

"lily?"

“No, it’s a binary without a gender.”

"okay."

“You can call me whatever you want.”

"All right."

The blue eyes curved gently.

“Would you like to talk to me?”

“…….”

The man checked his watch without realizing it.

“…….”

4:51 a.m.

‘… 51 minutes.’

The time when the work was managed was 4 o'clock sharp. And the current time is 4:51.

A gap of about an hour.

“…Yes, if we talk… that would be good.”

The man nodded.

It wasn't like I could go back right away anyway. Even if I did talk, it wouldn't be a problem.

“I don’t think I can go home right away.”

“I think it would be nice to spend some time talking.”

“Yes, that’s right….”

The man sighed and turned around to look at the porcelain dolls again.

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

They sat quietly with a lovely appearance.

“…Excuse me, Sergio?”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“I heard that Mr. Sergio also often takes care of gallery management.”

“Yes, there are many wonderful and beautiful works of art in this gallery.”

"then…."

He should report it separately before any problems arise, but he wanted to hear Mr. Sergio's opinion separately. He thought of the word 'godfather' that the dolls had been whispering.

“Could you please take a look at these dolls?”

The man stepped aside a little to show the dolls, who had innocent and cute faces. They were porcelain dolls that didn't move at all, but they looked quite happy, perhaps because the tea party had just ended.

The man described the strange phenomenon that had just occurred.

“I know that it is a piece where each person uses one sentence at a tea party, a total of three sentences. But just now, for some reason, you used an additional sentence of 10, adding 3 more sentences to 7.”

“Was that a bad thing?”

“That’s not it. They were good words. They seemed to be sufficiently satisfying sentences for this tea party. However, I didn’t expect the speech to become this long….”

“It means that good fortune that cannot be contained in a 24-hour period is coming to you.”

“…….”

The man made a subtle expression.

“Isn’t that just a disaster?”

“That’s a new perspective.”

“I like a little luck.”

“I will keep that in mind.”

“…Oh, yes.”

He was a unique person.

'The tone of the words is quite soft… but the form is stiff.'

However, it was not awkward, like a foreigner who is not familiar with Korean. This soft yet blunt tone suits me very well, but when I think about it rationally, there is a strange sense of incongruity.

“Can I watch those kids for a moment?”

“…Of course, because you’ll be better than me, a newbie at anything.”

“Thank you for your permission.”

Sergio approached quietly and examined the porcelain dolls.

Although the manual said that there was no harm in touching it as long as you didn't destroy it, he was caressing the doll with kind hands like an old man holding his grandson. There was affection in his touch.

It was a noble, fairytale-like scene, as if it came out of a famous painting… .

“…….”

It was a little creepy.

‘… The atmosphere itself is definitely gentle… .’

It was difficult to breathe.

The air was heavy, as if someone had died.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (120)

Episode 120

Sergio was a kind and old-fashioned man.

'I never knew I could feel such an embarrassing feeling when I see someone.'

But it was a thought that came to mind at first glance.

“Today’s snack was star candy.”

“Yes, they were purple, yellow, and green star candies.”

“Isn’t it really sweet?”

“According to the records… they only asked for snacks.”

“Last time I wanted lemon madeleines.”

It wasn't a very meaningful conversation. Although he didn't stop me from reporting it on the radio, Sergio naturally brushed aside the strange phenomenon of the 'Sweet Tea Party' by saying that 'good luck outside the norm will come.'

The conversation we were having now was more like ordinary small talk. Thanks to this, the man was able to feel a little more familiar with 『Sweet Tea Party』.

“I even baked it myself.”

“I guess you’re good at cooking.”

“I have a talent for bringing imaginary food into reality.”

“I’m a little jealous of that.”

Is this the power that good people give? As we talked, my stiff body gradually relaxed.

‘… It’s a conversation that gives a sense of stability.’

Although the conversation didn't have anything special to say, Sergio's attitude toward men gave me a sense of stability.

Even though he didn't do anything particularly noticeable, Sergio's deep kindness was evident.

'You said you had a conversation with another new employee last time. Are you managing employees or something?'

It was a huge favor, hard to understand.

“…Do you often have conversations like this with other employees?”

The man continued to ask.

“I heard you don’t stay at the company long.”

“I’m staying in a place that’s easier to find than you think.”

“Oh, by any chance… in that case… yes, are you living in a dorm?”

“I live in this building.”

“It’s such a big building, I didn’t even know it had such a facility.”

The man understood. It seemed like there was quite a bit of collectors hanging around. That was clear.

‘Well, if it’s an opponent with this kind of atmosphere…’

It was not difficult to understand the psychology of the guild leader, Bisabal.

'It feels like it might just disappear quietly at any moment.'

Sergio seemed somewhat disconnected from reality.

His voice is soft and gentle, like the sunlight that spreads faintly on a spring day. His gaze is clear but its color is soft and blurred, and his attitude toward people is polite but careful, giving off a sense of slow lightness.

The soft speech and the faint smile that appeared on his face and never disappeared seemed like faded memories from children's fairy tales or silent films.

“…….”

Is that too explicit a thought to make to someone you're meeting for the first time?

‘… but you don’t seem like the type of person who would be tied down somewhere.’

It didn't seem like he would enjoy the noisy atmosphere though.

‘The actions are noble and the atmosphere is heavy… .’

It felt a little strange because it felt like such an absurdly romantic being that would suddenly disappear, wander the world, appear in unexpected places, give unexpected gifts, and then disappear.

He had an indescribable aura about him. I couldn't believe that he was there next to me and talking to me.

“…….”

“Do you like sweets?”

“…To some extent.”

“I like sweets too.”

Is this unconditional empathy?

'Part of social activities?'

Without even being able to think about it, the other person handed me a small snack.

“Would you like to eat?”

“…What is this?”

“These are lemon madeleines.”

“…….”

moment.

"…thank you."

I thought it was strange.

‘I don’t know what’s strange, but….’

Didn't we just talk about lemon madeleines a moment ago?

Since you said you enjoy cooking, it's probably a snack you either made yourself or bought somewhere.

But the lemon madeleine that suddenly appeared during the conversation was wrapped in faintly transparent white paper and decorated with a neat, unobtrusive black ribbon.

The madeleines, wrapped in elegant paper and emitting a sweet fragrance, were more suitable for the porcelain dolls in the Sweet Tea Party than for them. However, the black ribbon, which was merely used to organize the entrance, seemed more bitter than sweet.

“…….”

Rustle.

I took out the madeleine.

“…Did you make it yourself?”

“It is my pleasure.”

“You are really talented.”

To be honest, I couldn't imagine the process of the person in front of me baking and packaging this directly.

'… Rather than that… .'

It literally felt like it was going to be made.

It seemed as if it was in his hands, just because he wanted it.

‘… You’ve been having strange thoughts since a while ago. Ruminations aren’t going to help you at all.’

The madeleines were smaller than I thought, as if they were handmade from scratch. The lemon madeleine crust, which had a white coating like opaque frosting, had a crispy yet crunchy texture.

The madeleine, which had a faint scent of wood on a rainy day, was lighter and softer than I expected.

“…It’s delicious.”

It was just so delicious that the tension that had made my body stiffen for some reason was completely relieved.

“Actually, I couldn’t believe you said you were a good cook.”

“That’s sad. Why did you think that?”

“It doesn’t seem like you’re in a mood to get your hands wet.”

“That’s a story I hear often.”

“That’s the impression you get. But….”

It wasn't that I thought they didn't match at all.

“…He also has the impression that he goes well with anything.”

He seemed like he could do anything.

He seemed to have ascended to the highest of places, the Pope's throne, and he also seemed to have sat as a beggar in the lowest and most humble of places. But the man felt that, wherever he might truly be, he would be able to accept it all.

Even if he is an unimaginable reject, even if he is a carnation child born in the slums on a cold winter day. Yes, you will definitely think that it is possible.

“…The reason is….”

well.

“I don’t know.”

“That’s a strange thing to say.”

“…Is that so.”

But one thing was certain.

“…….”

No matter what his status was, it seemed like no one could catch this guy.

It is natural for time to pass and the world to change.

'…I need to stop thinking about it.'

Stop it now.

The man stared blankly into space.

"……."

With so much to do, it was time to get out of this miserable comfort zone.

"…It's…later than I thought."

Before I knew it, it was 6 am.

"I don't think we really had much of a conversation."

"It was a pleasant conversation."

"…I'm glad you felt that way."

Around that time, I felt something new.

"Geo?"

He was a curator of Yoo Seong-un.

"Were you awake?"

"Yes, Mr. Yoo Seong-un."

The two talked naturally as if they knew each other well.

"I was talking to this person."

“Oh, I was wondering who you are. You’re the Binary Curator.”

When I nodded with nothing to say, Yoo Seong-un didn’t say anything else. As if he was good at dealing with people, he looked back at Sergio again as if he didn’t want to make him uncomfortable.

“What did you talk about?”

“The story was that they couldn’t believe that I was good at cooking.”

“Oh, really? I thought it suited me pretty well… Your cooking is really delicious.”

Curator Yoo Seong-un asked in his characteristically calm tone.

“It’s already past 6am. The staff will be here soon. Are you going to stay in the gallery?”

“No, I’m going to go back before the other staff members arrive.”

Under the falling lights, a man's blue eyes were in focus.

“What will you do, Mr. Binary?”

“I’m going back to the dormitory, which the company supported….”

“Is that Mr. Binary’s house?”

“It seems more like a place to just stay rather than a home.”

“You will soon have a comfortable home.”

He showed his favor again.

“Do you need guidance?”

“…….”

Without me knowing.

“…….”

The man looked around the gallery 'without knowing it'.

I looked at the porcelain doll I was in charge of, Sweet Tea Party. I looked at the glass curtains of the picture frames hanging next to it and in front of it. I looked at the light coming down from the ceiling and the clock hanging between them.

I saw the floor where the light fell. In the vertically falling light, there was a shadow. A blackness that was missing… .

“…….”

I saw it.

"…no."

When I raised my head, my eyes suddenly met with those of curator Yoo Seong-un.

"it's okay."

Those eyes curve sharply and reveal a smile.

“I have memorized the entire structure of this gallery.”

"okay."

“I’ll go out by myself.”

“Thank you for talking with me.”

The man in the black cloak said.

“I remember and affirm you.”

“…….”

“Have a nice day.”

It's a strange sound.

“…….”

The man nodded and left the gallery.

“…….”

I walked through the twisted hallways in case of an unexpected situation.

The lights hanging from the ceiling cast shadows along with my footsteps. After several shadow movements, I finally arrived at the elevator.

The boarding place is the 3rd basement floor. The exit is the 1st floor lobby. When you press the button, the elevator starts to operate.

“…….”

I muttered without realizing it.

“…What a peculiar person.”

Even though I only saw it briefly, time flew by. Even though I only saw it very briefly, it happened. It can happen.

Despite his rather large physique, his presence was very vague, and he didn't seem to be there even though he was right next to me. Nevertheless, I couldn't help but notice his presence, even if I tried to turn my eyes away.

“He seemed like a great person.”

He was affectionate and old-fashioned.

He was as sparkling as a fairy tale prince who had grown up, as pretty as an old historical relic now buried in the ground, and as special as a miracle of the past that no one remembered.

“A person who gives comfort….”

Why did a rural village I had never seen before come to mind? Why did I hear the sound of dry grass rustling in the quiet wind?

I felt a similar longing as when I admired the crimson color of the sea as the sun set calmly, or when I heard a lullaby sung by a parent to put a child to sleep. It was simple and lyrical.

therefore.

“He's a good person.”

The man knows nothing.

"okay…."

There was also a one-hour gap where it was clear that I was possessed by something else.

The sound of dry grass flowing from bare feet.

The shadows that didn't exist alone under the light, or the huge forest reflected on the glass that coated the frame.

The sun too.

The sea too.

Eyeball too.

Eyes too.

eye.

“…….”

I don't even know the gaze that the eyes reflected in the glass were sending me.

I don't know.

“…He’s a good person.”

Because 'Sergio' is a 'good person'.

It had to be that way.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (121)

Episode 121

“…….”

“…….”

In a place where only the two were left, Yoo Seong-un was the first to speak.

“Geo.”

“Yes, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“Your shadow is gone.”

“…….”

Geo's head slowly lowered at Yoo Seong-un's comment.

“Oh, no.”

It's a very artificial reaction.

'Did you think that kind of reaction was appropriate in the current situation?'

As soon as he thought that, a shadow appeared beneath Geo's feet.

Yoo Seong-un was secretly impressed.

'It feels alive.'

He thought the word 'bloomed' was quite accurate.

It is so vivid and colorful that it cannot be considered as a simple shadow created by an object blocking the light.

Shadows spread across the retina.

‘… A school of fish?’

Schools of tiny fish swam about, waves swayed in the wind, and it seemed as if I saw long-horned deer or thick-clawed beasts walking along the ground, or the large wings of gliding birds.

The colorful shapes that passed by in an instant soon grew into a large forest, then became refined again to form a human being.

“…….”

The long shadow, as if searching for a 'realistic' position, settled darkly and small beneath Geo's feet.

The process of gradually developing a complete form from a crude form like drawing a picture. Considering that Geo has the characteristics of a painter, it was an interesting change.

'Then can we still call Geo outside the frame a painting?'

Soon Geo opened his mouth.

“I should have been more careful, but I showed you my ugly side.”

“That might happen as you live.”

“I thought there wouldn’t be any problems, but there was this loophole….”

Geo stretched out his words.

“I’m embarrassed.”

“With something like that.”

He clearly said, 'I didn't think there would be any problems,' which was no different from saying he had guessed that there might be problems.

'That is, Geo is aware that he is imitating a human.'

Yoo Seong-un, who had organized his thoughts to that point, muttered to himself.

'Surprisingly, it was possible to be objective. I thought Geo would think of himself as a human being, so what kind of attitude should I take if this is the case?'

Could it be that even his previous remarks regarding himself as a human were part of an imitation? If so, Geo was close to imitating at a level that would be difficult to imagine for a human being.

'It's a side that is sometimes seen in gods who enjoy playing. Even things that feel like the truth to us humans are sometimes actually lies. Even Geo's way of thinking about himself as a human could be one of those imitations... .'

If a human truly thinks about it, it becomes a belief, but for beings of a different level like God, even that can be an act. Even though I intentionally left open various possibilities, I felt like I was hit in the back of the head a little.

It was indeed surprising. Yoo Seong-un swallowed an awkward laugh inside.

'The existence of the source cannot be measured by human standards.'

This is especially true if the thing that Yoo Seong-un is dealing with is the source itself.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un, who was quietly catching his breath, asked in a calm voice.

“Unlike before, there are some parts that are a bit awkward now?”

“It would be a great help if you could tell me what part of it was like that.”

“In what part, you say….”

Do you want to know how far humans can perceive?

The scope of the original being and the human's vision were different. Perhaps the flaws in Geo's imitation that he had just seen came from this difference in vision, or perhaps this was also part of the act.

'It may be similar to the way humans put robots in to understand the ecology of monsters.'

In the case of monsters or beasts that are wary of humans, robots shaped like them are sometimes deployed to observe the daily lives of those entities.

From a human's perspective, they would know it was a robot, but to a monster, it would feel like a kindred spirit with a slightly strange side.

'Geo and our human situation probably isn't that different from that.'

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“It’s not difficult.”

As a curator and as a gardener, I could easily tell you about that difference in perspective.

“As I said before, I was a little surprised that there was no shadow.”

“It should have been there, but I forgot for a moment.”

“First of all, the lights are falling on our heads.”

The gallery in Bisabal was brightly lit and had a particularly clean white color.

This was done not only to help visitors fully appreciate the work, but also to ensure that curators could quickly spot unusual phenomena like the one just now.

“There was a shadow beneath Nana, the new curator’s feet.”

Only Geo didn't have it.

“The next strange thing would be the weight.”

“It’s a feeling of weight.”

“I can’t hear you when you move.”

“Can't you hear me?”

“If I had to put my finger on it, it would be something like the sound of dry grass swaying?”

In fact, this was a chronic problem with Geo's human imitation.

“When I toured Seoul before, it was pretty light.”

“I thought it was a bit heavy.”

“But that doesn’t mean that a normal person will fly away just because the wind is blowing a little strong.”

“I remember it didn’t fly away.”

“Yeah, my body floated.”

“Wasn’t the wind particularly strong?”

“The winds of the Earth do not blow people away.”

The meteor cloud right next to it was fine, but didn't Geo almost fly away?

“Similarly, the sound is still very light.”

“It’s light.”

“When I walk like that, I don’t make any sound.”

“That was definitely something I didn’t pay attention to.”

Bam… .

Geo, who was hitting the floor with his bare feet, tilted his head.

“This is hard to fix.”

“Don’t be too hasty, it’ll be hard to fix everything at once.”

From a human perspective, the more detailed Geo is, the faster it is possible to grasp the situation.

“And let me tell you one more thing….”

“Is there more?”

“I don’t know if this will be interpreted well, though.”

What Yoo Seong-un was pointing to was a piece of art hanging on the wall in the hallway where they were standing.

It was large enough to embrace a standing person, and like most of the paintings on display, it faced people as if it were a mirror.

“You look a little weird.”

A mass that could be called nature is reflected on the cleanly maintained glass.

“Is it because the gallery lights are so bright? We can be seen a little bit through that glass.”

“Why does that look strange?”

“Do you appear human enough in your eyes?”

“Yes, that’s right. It sounds like you’re saying that it doesn’t look like that to Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“It’s embarrassing to say that, but it’s true.”

The 'Portrait of Geo' reflected in the glass was not a human figure.

“I can see the forest.”

Actually, you couldn't say it was a forest.

The abundant trees, grass, and flowers that symbolize the forest. Living creatures such as wolves and rabbits that run around inside. And the ecosystem in which they are eaten and live. It is not simply a symbol of nature, but a gigantic figure with a will and destiny… .

It was similar to what we saw in Geo's 'shadow' just now.

'You can't just call this a forest.'

It was clearly staring at the meteor and the world. It was the 'eye' of something very large.

'I can feel your gaze.'

However, Geo, who is standing next to him, is not looking at the meteor cloud through the glass of the picture frame.

'Is this something Geo doesn't know about?'

Or is it that they know but are pretending not to know in order to 'imitate' it?

From a human standpoint, his truth and lies cannot be distinguished, so in reality there was not much difference either way. There was no point in distinguishing between them.

Yoo Seong-un spoke indifferently, as if he had never seen that huge thing.

“I should say that it feels like it’s on a different level.”

“I don’t quite understand what Mr. Yoo Seong-un is saying.”

The blonde portrait smiled gently.

“To me, my reflection in the glass looks sufficiently human.”

"…okay?"

“Do you still see me that way, Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“…….”

When Yoo Seong-un checked the glass again, he was able to confirm the shape of 'Giovanni'.

There was no 'forest' anywhere.

"…oh."

Is this how it comes out?

“Yes, I can definitely see a person reflected in it.”

“Could it be that the paintings stored behind the glass were confusing my image?”

“That could be the case. The works here are all very assertive.”

Yoo Seong-un didn't bother to convince her by saying, 'You are not human.'

'If you say this even though you already know it well, it probably means that you shouldn't bother to dig into it any further.'

He had no intention of incurring the resentment of the works I managed.

'If Geo wants to look human, it's better to leave him that way.'

Isn't that what the source wants?

There was no reason not to accommodate Geo, who was trying to act like a human and wanted to. Geo could be human, but he just wasn't human.

"hmm…."

Yoo Seong-un asked, rubbing his cold neck.

“I asked the same question earlier, but when you were touring Seoul before, weren’t there less abnormalities than this? Did you have any change of heart when you noticed some vulnerabilities while you were away?”

“I don’t know if I can really put it that way, but there was definitely something similar to a change of heart. It was about me becoming perfect as Giovanni, and I think these ideals came from that.”

Geo continued with a smile.

“I can’t ask for any more help from Giovanni.”

I should say that his speaking style is truly unique.

'Speaking like this makes it seem like you really have no intention of imitating a human being.'

It could be that he hadn't realized that his way of speaking was strange, or it could be that he was just revealing his true feelings because Yoo Seong-un was a comfortable partner. Either way, it wasn't such a bad situation.

Then Yoo Seong-un asked.

“What do you mean it would be difficult to expect Giovanni’s help?”

“It’s true. All this time, Giovanni was not a portrait, so we could count on him for help, but now we can’t.”

“Because the Giovanni in front of me now has become a complete portrait?”

Is that what it means to 'become perfect as Giovanni'?

“So Geo could receive that kind of help when it wasn’t a perfect portrait.”

It is giving things that should be natural to a human being to a ‘portrait’ that cannot be called human.

‘… In the past, it was speculated that the identity of this portrait was countless deaths and lives.’

This portrait was constantly replaying the life and death of 'Geo' somewhere in countless dimensions. Now that he knew that he was the source, Yoo Seong-un was certain.

This entity called 'Geo' was originally an 'eye' that experienced, understood, and ultimately applied humans.

'Then, we can explain how the great being called the Source gives us a system that meets human standards.'

That's why there are so many 'geos' that Yoo Seong-un doesn't know about yet.

“…….”

When he, whose essence is the source, acts as a human being on one level, I think he also plays a role in helping other humans adapt and function smoothly. That's what I mean when I hear the usage of this personality called 'Giovanni'.

‘… But it seems that as time passes, it eventually takes on the character of a portrait.’

Just as a piece of Korean paper gradually turns black when placed face down in an ink bowl, the self called 'Giovanni', who could be called human, was eventually swept away by the status of the origin. Having thus lost his reference point, Geo will not be able to be certain of his condition as a human being.

This was how the gigantic being known as the Source imitated tiny humans.

"…then…."

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“What are you going to do from now on? Are you going to give up your current status as an A-class Hunter?”

“No, I find it very appealing to be active as a proper citizen of this world.”

“But it’s hard to live comfortably with so many creepy loopholes like this.”

“So I guess we’ll need help from another ‘Geo’.”

The portrait was still smiling.

“If there are any results, I will send you a letter.”

“Yeah, that sounds good.”

Yoo Seong-un suddenly noticed another vulnerability.

‘…the expression is the same.’

Like a portrait that was already drawn and could not be changed, Geo always had the same smiling expression.

'It's like being stuffed alive.'

It was a very romantic thing.

* * *

“Crunch.”

“…….”

“Gurr?”

“…I thought there was no problem.”

“Gurrrr.”

“There were more loopholes than I thought.”

Back at the cabin, Geo was munching on the squishy honey.

The plump, plump water bird tumbled around softly in Geo's large hands. Feeling the bouncy texture of his son's body, which was flexibly and freely twisted, Geo confessed his mistake frankly.

“If Mr. Yoo Seong-un hadn’t told me, I really wouldn’t have known until the end.”

He thought it was fortunate that the new curator he met today didn't notice his ideals.

The new curator was aware of Geo's 'weaknesses' but he almost gritted his teeth and pretended not to know, but Geo did it anyway. He thought the previous conversations had been successful.

“I was too complacent, thinking that I would have no problem functioning as a fully-integrated Geo.”

“Kung?”

“No, this dad won’t give up. No matter how scared I become, in the end, my home is Earth.”

“Gurrrr.”

“You should sleep in a portrait, but sometimes you should also feel the stimulation of your hometown.”

Moderate brain stimulation is good for preventing dementia.

“I will live a long and healthy life.”

“Kuruk.”

“Then I guess I’ll have to find another Geo….”

As it turned out, I had a friend who was a good fit.

List of suitable candidates

Animal Kingdom_Argio

Fairy tale rate 0%

“…Is it time to take out the ‘Animal Kingdom’ that has been stuck in storage?”

It was when I was combining with the second suitable person, 'Argio'.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (122)

Episode 122

Argio is not a name.

"beautiful"

cruel.

『Geo』

beast.

“Am I a monster?”

It meant 'cruel beast'.

* * *

“There are evil spirits in quite a few dungeons.”

Inside the dungeon, which was heavily colored with the colors of primitive religion, the priest of the Solar Church, Kang Seo-dam, explained.

“There are so many of them compared to the traditional gods who value peace and mercy. Does any of you know the reason for this?”

“Because, unlike traditional gods, evil gods can be easily created artificially.”

“That was a good answer, Sister Iruda.”

Bam.

“I put my wand on the mossy marble floor,” said Kang Seo-dam.

“It is not difficult to make a white garment that has been stained with black paint even blacker. You can smear it with charcoal, you can crush it with dirty shoes, you can put it in a mud pit. However, from the moment a white garment is stained with black paint, it can no longer be called a ‘white garment.’”

The corpses of monsters were burning around Kang Seo-dam and the prospective priests.

“It is much easier to make a garment black than to keep it white. It is much easier to degrade than to maintain a noble mystery. There are more ways to become dirty than ways to become pure.”

As the monsters' corpses completely turned to ash, Kang Seo-dam looked around.

“I’m sure this place is safe. Let’s take a short break and continue our conversation. All prospective priests, please take your seats.”

“Yes, Father.”

A group of young priests, about ten years old, sat huddled together near an old altar. There was blood and bones here and there, as if it was a place for offering sacrifices, but there were no children here who would be frightened by such things.

Kang Seo-dam continued speaking while standing after confirming that all the priests were seated.

“Similarly, there are many ways in which evil gods can be created compared to traditional gods. For example, the dungeon we visited was a place where living sacrifices were made to evil gods."

"Isn't that what happened on Earth?"

"Yes, the Sun Cult understands it to be a history from another dimension. The name of this cult is Sankalut, and they torture newborns and the elderly in creative ways, tying them to altars and leaving them there until they die."

It was a terrible story for children to hear, but while some children were horrified by it, none were afraid. It was proof that people on Earth today are living lives very close to death and suffering.

Kang Seo-dam also continued his explanation gently.

"The interesting thing is that the evil spirits worshipped by the Sankaluts were created beings."

He looked over the prospective priests.

"Is there any brother who can explain to me how God came into being?"

"There is a monotheistic god who has existed since the beginning of a dimension, and there are traditional gods who are not monotheistic but were born in nature and destiny after the existence of the dimension."

"What other gods?"

"You can escape your mortal fate and gain divinity, becoming a being called a god. I heard that you can either become a descendant of an existing god or walk the path of an evil god."

"Thank you for your answer, Sister Iruda."

Kang Seo-dam nodded.

"We call the gods who maintain the providence of dimensions and pursue coexistence ‘traditional gods.’ The one and only god who has existed since the beginning is one of them. All gods who are not mortal but born from nature and fate can be called ‘traditional gods.’”

He said, looking at the girl with her hair tied low.

“Also, as Sister Iruda said, there are cases where people escaped their mortal fate and attained divinity. More than 99% of those who twisted their fate and attained divinity in this way become evil spirits.”

“Why do beings who gain divinity from mortality become evil gods?”

“First, beings who have attained divinity by going against the natural order are likely to have wild and rebellious wills. Considering that most traditional gods value obedience and harmony, it is easy to see why they become evil gods.”

There was another reason.

“Second, mortals cannot understand immortals. Unlike traditional gods who are born immortal because they do not change and are eternal, those born mortal are prone to corruption by negative emotions because they change and think.”

That is why in this vast dimension there were more evil gods than good gods.

“Third, as Sister Iruda said, it is possible to create evil spirits artificially. What kind of artificial process is being referred to here?”

“It refers to the gathering of faiths of thinking creatures in one place.”

“That’s right. There are beings that are not worshipped as gods because they originally existed that way, but who acquired divinity or were born because they were worshipped as gods. This is the case with the Sankalut religion.”

Kang Seo-dam pointed to an old but splendidly decorated marble hall.

“If you look at the murals, you can read that the Sankaluts worshipped the red jewel that they could not even think of as a god, and praised the redness of the jewel, offering the blood of newborns and the elderly to maintain it.”

“Did that jewel really become an evil spirit?”

“Because it was a religion of the nation and its beliefs were also dark, the jewels truly became evil spirits. This dungeon was discovered and conquered early in the Great Calamity, and now remains as a resource for learning about the origins of the existence of gods and their influence.”

The girl with the low tail asked him again.

“If the conquest is complete, where is the evil spirit in the form of a jewel?”

“The level of risk has been determined and is currently stored in the Hunter Association Research Institute in Korea.”

The prospective priests were in an uproar at the Gangseo Dam.

“Association Research Institute…?”

“There was a place like that.”

“I thought it was in the collector’s gallery.”

“Isn’t the lab a warehouse?”

Kang Seo-dam explained as if he was familiar with the reactions of such prospective priests.

“The collector’s gallery is open to outsiders who meet certain conditions, and even allows for purchases, but the association’s research center is not like that. Only the association's staff manage the items, and sales are prohibited, and even information leaks to the outside are strictly prohibited."

Kang Seo-dam said as if he understood.

"The gallery of the collectors will be familiar to you, the prospective priests."

"Yes, and when spring comes, there's a parade… isn't it great?"

"If you become a full-fledged priest and belong to a denomination, you will become more familiar with the Association's research institute."

"Why is that so?"

"Because dangerous and sensitive items related to God require strict management and storage."

It was difficult to expect such seriousness from the collection in the 'Gallery', since the guild leader himself was talking about 'loving the work'.

"Do you have any other questions regarding the storage of evil spirits?"

"……."

"Yes, there isn't. That's good."

Kang Seodam moved his body and stepped back to get a better view of the marble altar.

"It was here that the sacredness of the Sankalut religion was created. Do you feel it?"

"I felt that I should not have faith lightly."

"Thank you for your proactive attitude, Sister Iruda."

Kang Seo-dam nodded as if he had done well.

“I don’t know what kind of god you will worship in the future, or what religion you will join. But you must never forget that even gods are ultimately swayed by faith.”

The novice priest who was to be renamed raised his hand again.

“I have a question, Father.”

“Please speak.”

“Have there been instances where a human, rather than a jewel, was worshipped as an evil spirit?”

“It is not uncommon for this to be confirmed.”

Kang Seo-dam rolled his eyes as if remembering something.

“As I said before, there are evil spirits in quite a few dungeons. This is why evil spirits are classified as a type of monster, unlike traditional gods. They are easy to create, but they are also easy to seal and destroy.”

Unlike traditional gods, who were difficult to destroy because they were nature and destiny itself.

“Most of those who have become evil spirits in human form have physical forms. Beings born immortal and beings born mortal have different roots, and because they can think as humans, they face various limitations.”

“…….”

“That is why those who have become evil spirits in human form are all subdued or sealed and are kept on Earth. Most of them have vague thoughts, feelings, and desire to eat and drink something. This is also a limitation that holds them back.”

A bound person cannot become a true god.

“We call them gods because they can encompass anything. If they don’t have the capacity to encompass at least one dimension, they are nothing more than monsters that have been subdued at some point. So in reality, the distinction between evil gods and monsters is blurred.”

“…Then what if you could become a god with a mortal body and embrace everything?”

“There are only two cases discovered so far, but they are of course real. Both of them gave up their rationality as living beings and wished to become a single system that coordinates nature and destiny.”

“Then there is no God with will and self?”

“There is. There is a God with will and self, so even now on Earth, we often find gods enjoying play. Just remember that they are just ‘will’ and ‘self’ in human terms.”

God was nature and fate.

“What we see as will may have been but a single breath to God, and what we think of as the affectionate personality as self may have been but a single hair to God.”

“I don’t understand.”

“This is a very dangerous statement. As a person who has entered the bosom of God, there are some things that we must bear in mind. We must not understand God, we must not calculate, and we must not expect anything from Him.”

That was God.

“Don’t try to measure them.”

Even analyzing it didn't work.

“If that’s possible, then it means you’ve already become something other than human.”

“…Was I rude?”

“There is no problem as a prospective priest. However, please keep in mind that even if you simply look at and follow the gaze to understand, you can suffer a disaster like divine punishment.”

“Am I being punished by heaven just for looking at it to try to understand?”

“It is not a punishment from heaven, but a disaster of that kind. Even though God had no intention of punishing you, it will come to pass in the end.”

“Thank you for your advice.”

“I’m glad you accepted.”

Kang Seo-dam continued speaking.

“There is a saying that says not to look into the eyes of God.”

“If you look at it, you’ll go crazy, so don’t do it….”

“It is a problem beyond the realm of human perception.”

There are photographs that capture the entire landscape of the Earth without any omission. It is impossible to capture all of them at once, which easily exceeds hundreds or thousands, and if you try to do so, your eyes will burst and your brain will rot.

That was what it meant to see God.

“Do you have any other questions?”

At Kang Seo-dam's words, a boy with curly hair, Chae Sol, raised his hand.

“Are evil spirits that harbor pure evil treated as monsters?”

“…pure evil….”

He spoke at length.

“In our Solar Church, we do not treat pure beings as monsters.”

However, this was interpreted differently depending on the religion. This is because it is still an era where the distinction between gods and monsters is vague.

“Some religions say that the results of evil cannot be pure.”

"ah…."

“The standards of justice and nobility are similar for everyone, but the standards of evil are different for everyone.”

“…….”

“I wonder if there can be such a thing as pure evil in the first place.”

It was a difference of perspective.

“That is why there are so many evil spirits.”

It may be an obvious 'evil' to the vast majority, but it may be a 'good' to a small minority.

Who can set absolute standards for good and evil?

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (123)

Episode 123

“I don’t worry about good and evil.”

The man wearing the beast's bones said.

“I’m not the type of person who thinks about such boring things. I’m somewhat aware that I’m capricious and self-willed. I always do things that I can enjoy.”

“…….”

“If a thinking person has no desires, isn’t he a corpse? I am true to my instincts. I become greedy for what I want, I become angry at those who make me angry, and I do nothing that would prevent me from defending my beliefs.”

The clothes he wore were primitive, made of bones and feathers, but they were also adorned with rich fabrics that only noble people could use, giving them an antique look. The man wearing a mask made of a sheep skull smiled.

“What do you think?”

“I think it’s a fun life.”

“Oh, yeah, we can talk.”

“Life should be enjoyable.”

Geo, wearing a black cloak, nodded.

“Have you ever killed a person?”

“I must have killed quite a few, there were so many people who were angry at me.”

“Why are those people angry with you, Argio?”

Then Geo's second suitable candidate, 'Argio', answered.

“They say I am the root of all evil in the world.”

Deep, curved golden eyes were visible beyond the bone mask.

“Am I a monster?”

“…….”

Geo muttered inside the palace made of bones and blood.

“That’s a very abstract metaphor.”

“I think so too, buddy.”

When 'Argio' laughed, a tiger growled and roared.

“Isn’t this really difficult? If you’re angry, I want you to tell me exactly what you’re angry about. What I did to them, and what part of myself you’re angry about.”

“Why is that?”

“Then I can get angry too. I can confront with all my might, exchange emotions, and create a better situation. Isn’t that the most powerful force anger has?”

Argios, sitting on a splendid throne adorned with all sorts of silks, feathers, and leather, pretended to look tired. He spoke as if he was troubled.

“But most people can’t do that. They’re just stupid people who can’t control their anger and end up being eaten up in return. If they’re swayed by emotions that are part of me, how can they be considered human?”

Then he smiled again.

“Honey, so all those people were beasts.”

"oh…."

“Isn’t that right?”

“It’s a new idea, but I respect it.”

“It’s nice to be respected.”

'Argio' rested his chin on his hand with a bright smile. His long, sharp claws, like those of a cat or a bird of prey such as an eagle, caught my eye.

Geo bravely couldn't hold back his curiosity.

“Do you grow your fingernails?”

“…Ahahahahahahaha!!”

The bursting 'Argio' answered with a voice full of laughter.

“No, well. I guess I’ll raise it if I have to, but it’s not really for the purpose of beauty.”

“I thought it was intentional because it goes very well with current fashion.”

“It’s not that I trimmed my nails after wearing these clothes, I just dressed up because that’s the way my body is.”

“I have no fashion sense and only wear black clothes. I’m really jealous.”

“…Hey, don’t you know how to dress yourself up? Are Earthlings usually like that?”

“Seeing that people who want to decorate know how to decorate well, I think it’s my personal problem.”

“…….”

'Argio', whose smile had disappeared, looked at the other person with pity.

“…I believe that if you come with me, even that shy personality will improve a little.”

“Do you not like my current outfit?”

“No matter what beast I bring in, it will have a more colorful taste than you.”

“They said that if you wear neutral colors, you’ll look flat.”

“It’s not like there’s a ritual or anything, unless there’s a cultural reason for it, so why is it all black?”

“I couldn’t help it because I like black.”

“The black one that was used will cry, it’s a shame.”

'Argio', who clicked his tongue, returned to the topic just now.

“My claws are one of the abilities I was born with. If you stay with me, you will eventually have to use them, so it would be best if you listen carefully to my explanation.”

“I will concentrate.”

“Good posture. To put it simply, the power I possess is the power to mimic beasts. Like now, I can avoid danger by mimicking the claws of a predator, the large wings of a bird flying in the sky, or the quick wit of a prey.”

“How can you be this greedy?”

“I too truly cherish this power, but strangely enough, my family feared it very much. They called me a curse and drove me into the forest filled with dangerous beasts.”

“…….”

Geo shut his mouth tightly. 'Argio' asked.

“You look dissatisfied?”

“I don’t understand why people called ‘Geo’ always bring up heavy personal issues when we first meet.”

“That’s a unique idea, isn’t that what this place was created for in the first place?”

'Argio' laughed as if it was funny.

“Or do you wish to become one with me without any explanation?”

“Now that you mention it, I think it would be better to hear an explanation.”

“That’s right. Looking at what you’re doing, I don’t think you’ll act stupid and meet a foolish death.”

'Argio' nodded and introduced.

“So what I’m saying is, I am a curse with no name. I am a descendant of a royal family that once ruled a great nation, a natural born who grew up with intelligent and dangerous beasts as family, and eventually died after being struck by the hammer of humans. I am ‘Geo.’”

He added.

“In the end, ‘Argio’ is a name that is not my name.”

“Does the word 'Argio' have any meaning?”

“In the ancient, primitive language, it means Ar, cruel. Geo, beast. In a word, a cruel beast.”

"beast…."

Geo looked at his opponent seriously.

“You certainly look strong.”

“I guess it was more of a contempt than a pure admiration.”

“You look like you have a lot of muscle. If you come with me, can I use that strength too?”

“If you want a body like this, why don’t you start exercising already?”

“I didn’t want to sweat anything other than farming.”

“…….”

Then, 'Argio' nodded.

“If you become a fairy, can I take care of your body?”

“Are we perhaps becoming one with another self?”

“No, that’s not the case. I’m worried that I won’t be conformed to that lazy spirit.”

“I don’t think he’s that lazy, he just doesn’t exercise.”

“Then what are you devoted to? Farming? Well, I don’t really like that kind of thing….”

Even though he was covered by a mask with only eye holes, you could feel Argio's brow furrowed.

“Do you enjoy fighting?”

“There are so many things to enjoy in the world, so why choose that?”

“I had a feeling it would be like this since I was called here, but I really don’t feel well.”

“Why should I buy it and go through the conflict?”

“Shouldn’t we at least know how to be justifiably angry at the conflict that arises?”

“I get angry too.”

“Have you ever harvested the tongue and teeth of someone who was talking nonsense?”

“On Earth, you would be caught if you did that.”

“Hmm, certainly laws and rules are an important part.”

“This is another unexpected answer.”

Geo was impressed.

“I thought you were so aggressive that you weren’t bound by law or morality.”

“You don’t seem to be that concerned about morality.”

"ah?"

“But that doesn’t mean we deny the need for goodness and rules.”

'Argio' continued speaking in a cool tone.

“I’m quite fickle. Some days I want to get drunk in a town full of smiles, and other days I want to head to hell with a clear mind and screams.”

“…….”

“Have you ever wanted to act like a ruthless beast? Have you ever wanted to throw off all your cumbersome clothes? Have you ever wanted to fight until your whole body falls apart, cheering and screaming and smelling the sweet smell of blood?”

"doesn't exist."

“I understand your way of life. What I wanted to say was that in order for me, a capricious person like you, to be satisfied with everything, the world must have good and evil, peace and chaos.”

To do that.

“In the end, what we need is people who believe in good and people who follow the rules.”

So that I can enjoy what I want at that time on that day.

“It can’t be helped that I am called an evil spirit.”

“Have I come here to become one with the evil spirit?”

“Surprisingly enough, that’s true.”

“Can I go out?”

“You cannot leave unless I permit you, my kind source.”

“This is unreasonable. I think I should have a choice.”

“It’s really pitiful, but your authority only extends to entering this place.”

'Argio' continued, laughing happily.

“So, how about listening to my story a little more?”

It's going to be quite exciting.

* * *

There was one great family that ruled over mankind.

There was a curse passed down through generations in this family: when one of the children in the family turned ten, he or she would turn into an evil beast.

“That’s why my family encouraged having as many children as possible. If you only have one child and that child turns out to be an evil beast, you have to kill him, so we have other countermeasures.”

At the age of ten, the child, whose true nature was revealed to be horrific, was abandoned in the most filthy and horrific hell a human could ever reach: a gigantic rainforest called the 'Black Forest'.

“I was praised for my beauty and my outstanding drawing skills, but when I was ten, a horn grew on my forehead. That was the cause. It was famous for the story of a monster living in the ‘Black Forest,’ but I never thought that the monster there would come from my family… I was abandoned without even knowing what was going on.”

As rumored, such an abandoned place was a dangerous place.

“In the darkness where the sun never rises, dangerous beasts and insects await their chance to devour flesh. Each one contains a poison so strong that it cannot be easily consumed or eaten, and from time to time, ear-piercing screams, as if ghosts were screaming, can be heard.”

But he didn't die.

“Aren’t I also a beast? When I realized that I wasn’t human, I acted instinctively and greedily like an animal, and fought for food on equal footing with my forest family. I was able to create a new family without much difficulty.”

And then I discovered something surprising.

“Deep in that forest, there were traces of an old dynasty. I learned that the power I possessed was not a curse but a blessing, and that the monsters that had been abandoned here were actually saints who could prevent the dangerous disaster of the Black Forest.”

There was too much remaining evidence to suggest that it was just a fabrication by ancestors who had gone mad in the dark forest.

“But as time went by, people forgot about it. They forgot that the reason they sacrificed children was to prevent disaster, so they thought our alien powers were curses, and the ominousness of the Black Forest was not caused by the disaster, but by us.”

Of course, it didn't matter.

“What difference would it make if I knew?”

Although he was not angry at the family that had abandoned him, 'Argio' had a new family. He painted on the walls of the great old dynasty, got what he wanted like an animal, and sometimes shared and spent time with them.

“In the process, I sometimes ran out into the forest….”

well?

“I swear by my warrior’s soul that I have never harmed an innocent person. Of course, I wouldn’t say I have harmed anyone. How could I leave those who attack me alone?”

The problem came next.

“Rumors started going around that I was the cause of some epidemic.”

The humans were angry.

“I had to see my house burning before I knew it. Yes, they didn’t have the courage to fight me directly, so they decided to burn down the entire forest. I suffered severe burns in the process, but I survived for a little while and eventually died in the arms of my family….”

It's not that I wasn't angry at 'Argio' for his indiscriminate display of anger.

“Listen, do you remember? The Black Forest originally existed to prevent a disaster that would destroy the world. The evil beasts that appear at least once every generation are the forest keepers who help with that… and are also like the last barrier.”

Now the forest was burnt down and there was no forest guard to protect it.

“In the end, the disaster that had been hidden since long ago revealed itself. The beasts acquired human-like intelligence, they began to speak, and their emotions became more detailed and more intense.”

Among them, the 'Argio' family also burned with a desire for revenge against humans.

“What would the world have become?”

For countless years, humans have raised and slaughtered animals for food. But as if the food supply was gone, they began to speak to humans, curse them, and engage in horrific 'interactions' with them.

There was no way the human world could survive.

“In the process, I became an evil spirit. To be exact, I could say that it is a collection of all the evil beasts that were abandoned in the Black Forest, saints who were not recognized for their worth and suffered horrible deaths.”

It was truly a pity.

“Almost all humans were unaware that ‘Argio’ was a crowd. However, people began to gossip about the source of all evil, and created a nation.”

An evil spirit that causes disasters and leads massacres from the Black Forest.

“A cruel beast.”

It was 'Argio'.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (124)

Episode 124

“…….”

"…hmm…."

Geo nodded.

“Can I leave when everything is finished?”

“Why don’t you listen more?”

“It’s heavy enough. It’s suffocating.”

“Is there such a joke in the world?”

“The limits of my violence are friendship quarrels and lover’s quarrels.”

“Please wait, the main topic is not over yet.”

“I’m good at that.”

“You are truly sincere.”

Delighted with the special listener, 'Argio' continued his explanation related to himself.

“In this way, the evil spirit called ‘Argio’ was born, and the world quickly approached destruction. The souls of countless saints gained divinity… How could they be docile?”

Humans said that evil spirits used evil demons to torment them, and it really happened.

“If I were to give you an analogy that’s easy for you to understand, I would say he’s like the Demon King.”

“I would understand it as a demon king from a fairy tale with a kidnapped princess or a brave warrior.”

“It’s not that different, it’s just a rough expression.”

In a peaceful world, there was only one ominous area. There, the Demon King began to spread an epidemic and use monsters to torment humans.

This continued for a very long time, long enough to be recorded in history books. Humans began to live in silence under the tyranny of the Demon King, and the world was ruled by terrible monsters.

“The Demon King’s tyranny has reached its peak, so what should appear now?”

“Hero?”

“As time passed and the evil spirits appeared, those who would seal this evil beast began to appear.”

“I guess this is a very typical response….”

“They eventually succeeded in sealing this ‘Argio’.”

In the process, the warriors learned the truth about the Black Forest, but...

“That’s not that important.”

In the end, they hid the secret story of the evil god's birth.

“Perhaps it was simply that I could not accept the foolish mistakes of my ancestors, whom I believed to be good. How shocking would it be to find out that the beings I believed to be the evils of the world were actually created by humans?”

“Do you have any complaints?”

“No, in the first place, they are not the lunatics who burned down my house and family. They are not the ones I should be angry at. More than anything, I cannot welcome the life of being oppressed by countless vengeful spirits and having to continue to endure unwanted anger…”

'Argio' said calmly.

“I am grateful.”

The anger had to be entirely mine.

“Do you know how horrible it is to express anger that is not yours? Do you know how stupid it feels to express anger that is worthless? Now I know why the devil is called the devil, that I have to enjoy killing people I never wanted.”

It was an absurd act.

“I know I have not lived well enough to deserve God’s mercy and grace, but isn’t this a bit much? It is not my pleasure to slaughter innocent people. What is the point of killing an innocent child who is terrified and unaware?”

“Surprisingly normal words….”

“Anger must be equal to feel its value and joy. However, the suffering and despair of the saints were too great for me alone to stop. The anger of those who had to die horribly in the darkness without even knowing what was happening was too great.”

But to him, anger was not something so frivolous.

“I affirm myself. I affirm everything about myself, so life is enjoyable and free of hesitation. So the anger I feel should also have its own value….”

In that sense, I am grateful.

“They may sound like warriors, but they were nothing more than sacrificial lambs. Just because they were strong and talented, they were dragged into a battlefield where they had no responsibility, sealed the Demon King, and suffered much pain and sorrow in the process.”

“…….”

“They didn’t want to fight. They were just human beings, not warriors, someone’s family, someone’s friend. And in order to get back their happy daily lives with them, they had to suffer so much to fix a mistake that wasn’t even their fault.”

How absurd this is.

“But in the end, the world was destroyed. Isn’t that natural? This evil spirit was created by humans in the first place, and sealing him away would not make the remaining beasts’ anger disappear.”

“Then how did Mr. Argio’s world come to an end?”

“They fought so miserably and vulgarly that there was no point in distinguishing between humans and beasts, and then they perished. It was a very childish fight. Those who remained must have long since degenerated into monsters….”

Tsk, 'Argio' clicked his tongue.

“Humans have done many evil deeds using me as an excuse. When my lover cheated on me, I said that it was an evil spirit that tempted me. When I killed someone, I said that it was an evil spirit that led me to that evil path. When I fought with my neighbors and fought with the neighboring villages, I blamed it all on this cruel beast.”

Ultimately, their shifting of responsibility gave birth to the evil spirit and made him even stronger.

“They did not seem to think that such indolence would also incite the ferocity of the evil spirit. As a result, the story of ‘Argio’ was recorded in history in an even more horrific form, and in keeping with those records and memories, ‘Argio’ became an extremely cruel monster.”

“I guess I got it back.”

“So, my excuses should be small. Isn’t that right? They have inflated and enlarged our bodies, and even made us feel uncomfortable. If they had not been ashamed of the beast they had conceived, and had revealed the secret of the saint, everything might have been okay.”

That's what 'Argio' asked for.

“Hey, Geo. He’s a friend who looks just like me.”

“I'm listening.”

“I just want to vent my anger.”

That's what 'Argio' wanted.

“Those who want to fight can fight me, and those who have sinned against me can offer their blood to me. I am an honorable warrior with my family, and I am a greedy person who needs to get what I want.”

That was his wish.

“I will give you mine, so take care of my family’s descendants.”

“These ‘Geo’ people keep talking about their families.”

“The guy named Giovanni in front of me wanted to support his father, right? I’m the same way.”

“How can I take care of you?”

“You just have to go to the ‘Animal Kingdom’ you drew and show mercy to the poor beasts.”

“I don’t think I am a person worthy of mercy.”

“No, you are more than qualified.”

and.

“Above all, please stop this mad demon’s wrath.”

“Yes? Me?”

“I believe you can do it.”

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth.”

“Is that the source? Very believable.”

“There is a misunderstanding, I don’t know how to deal with a dangerous being like an evil spirit.”

“I’ll pass this off as another very clever joke.”

“You really only hear what you want to hear. You are definitely a ‘Geo’ too.”

“This narrow hearing is one of the talents that helped me survive in the Black Forest.”

"Argio" said, smiling as if it was nothing.

“Don’t worry, your vessel is bigger than this ‘Argio’ vessel, so there’s no way you can’t handle it. I, the last personality to die, am just here. If you want to become one with ‘Argio’, you’ll end up becoming one with those countless lunatics.”

“Is it really not okay to be soft? I’m not confident.”

“Didn’t I tell you, it’s just venting? After all, the ghosts of the Black Forest are just kids a little over ten years old. No matter how long they live, they won’t live past thirty. I just want you to accept the venting of their childish anger with an adult mind.”

“…….”

Geo asked, momentarily puzzled.

“So how old are you?”

“He died at the age of 24.”

“I didn’t realize you were that young because you were covered by a mask.”

So, does that mean he died while he was a college student?

“For your age, you’re quite… mature.”

“Isn’t the culture of the Earthlings you remember much slower?”

'Argio' tilted his head.

“In Sergio’s memories, the Earthlings were still childish and threw tantrums even after they turned 20. It’s a different culture from mine, where people are considered adults who take responsibility for their families from the age of 15.”

“If you’re 15, you’re a middle school student, Mr. Argio.”

“You can think of it as a cultural difference. It’s something on a completely different level, so it can’t be helped that the brain structure itself is different. Anyway, since you’re older than me, I believe you’ll be able to handle it well.”

He laughed.

“In the end, I will be with you.”

“…I don’t want to become an anti-social person.”

“I think you already have a fairly antisocial personality.”

“Where can you find a model student like me who says such things?”

“There’s a saying that even illusions are abundant on Earth.”

“…….”

The haunted portrait was eerie.

“…Mr. Argio is right.”

“I’m so happy I won this.”

* * *

“…….”

Animal Kingdom_Argio

“I don’t feel… very good.”

Argio's Quest

“There is such a quiet world.”

“Kur?”

“Yeah, not really.”

Demon's Control (0/1)

Rain in the dry forest (0/2)

“I feel like I’ve just drank some bad alcohol….”

Fairy tale rate 1%

"yes."

“Kkuk.”

“This might be fun too.”

“Gurrrr?”

“You also have a cute son.”

Geo, who was lying on the bed, hugged the small water bird tightly.

“Peace isn’t as bad as I thought.”

There were no more screams of rage in his ears.

Control of the Evil Spirit (1/1)

Fairness rate 21.1%

“…….”

“…….”

“Is there no place to fight?”

“Kung kung kung kung kung!!!”

“Ouch….”

I got scolded by my son for not coming to my senses.

* * *

Around the time when Geo was fully concentrating on his spirit as 'Argio'.

"What are you doing?"

“Draw a picture.”

“Do you know how to draw?”

“Want to see?”

"huh."

The youngest of the Cha family, Chaisol, was chatting with my partner.

“Ta-da.”

“…Well, you said you draw, but I don’t think you ever said you draw well.”

“Isn’t it so well drawn that you can run everything you want to run?”

“So I don’t know what’s wrong.”

“Look, this is a cloak….”

"ah."

Chaisol's partner, Iru Da, nodded.

“Did you draw a black cloak by any chance?”

“Yeah, now that I think about it, it makes sense, right?”

“It certainly makes sense that it’s black.”

“Luda, please tell me that I drew it well, even if it’s just an empty promise.”

“Okay, I drew it.”

“This is the first time I’ve met a friend who can’t say empty words like this.”

Chaisol laughed heartily.

“Now, look again.”

“I don’t think I can look at it.”

“This is the arm. This is the leg. This is the torso….”

“Oh, yeah. I see.”

“This is snow.”

“…….”

Then he tilted his head.

"…eye?"

“Yeah, eyes.”

“…Are you talking about a person’s eye?”

“I’m not that good at drawing?”

“That’s not the problem….”

The eyes were too big.

“…….”

So much so that the human face is drawn far behind the body.

“…I thought it was just a halo.”

“Huh? Does it look like that?”

“Usually when you say eyes, they mean the ones attached to a person’s face, like ours.”

“There were some people who weren’t like that.”

“Not that person….”

Then I saw the picture stained black again.

“…Is that person right?”

“Even black cloaks are people.”

“I don’t think so.”

The black cloak in the rumor, and the black cloak in this picture.

"…hmm."

Until just now, I thought it was just a bad drawing.

Looking at the large, intricately intertwined eyes, I felt a little creeped out.

“Chaisol, you… said that you don’t have any gods you serve right now.”

“No, nothing. I don’t know what to do yet, so I’m not confident.”

"okay?"

For something like that.

"I see."

I felt a 'gaze' in that ugly picture.

It was an ominous gaze, of a lower temperature than the one she was receiving.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (125)

Episode 125

Iruda was already a priest chosen by God.

She was blessed by the gods since birth. Quite a few gods coveted Iruda's vessel, and she chose the most gentle and articulate god to make a contract with. In other words, she was a career god.

Perhaps among the priests of this class, there was no one who knew the presence of God better than Iruda.

“…….”

Looking at it that way, there was something eerie about Chae Sol's paintings.

‘Surely not the evil god… .’

She thought to herself.

'I've never heard of a black cloak having any divine powers.'

Wasn't it a normal monster?

Iruda had also heard rumors about the Black Cloak. It was a humanoid monster wearing a black cloak from head to toe, and it was said that it drew a dungeon that could be called a 'work of art' and dragged bad guys there.

'I've always wondered why the damage from monsters isn't that great.'

The citizens were clamoring, "Are we seeing new native monsters?" but if you think about it a little, you'll realize that it's nonsense. Didn't the current native monsters on Earth go through a 32-year process of appeasement?

In comparison, the Black Cloak had only been on Earth for a short time, and there were few casualties as a result. This was an action that a monster that could not hold back its hatred for humans would not show.

Iruda's parents said that there was a possibility that it was not a monster.

'The association said that this is a method often used to prevent confusion. Since the citizens still lack awareness of monsters, they are easily fooled even if you make it up. That's why there are still quite a few truths hidden.'

In that case, we really had to consider the possibility that the black cloak was an evil spirit.

Compared to monsters who are busy expressing their hatred without being able to control it, beings like evil gods know how to act cleverly even if they have negative images inside them. This means that they have the ability to be called a 'god'.

“…Chaisol.”

"huh?"

“Do you like black cloaks?”

“Oh, that’s kind.”

“You sound like we’ve met before.”

“I met you!”

“…….”

Chae Sol's sunny friendliness has caused another accident.

'I never thought it would apply to beings that are treated as monsters.'

He asked a beat later.

“…when, how, in what way?”

“Did I do something wrong?”

“I think I’ll know once I hear it.”

“I just see you sometimes.”

“If you see it sometimes, doesn’t that mean you encounter it quite often?”

“He stopped by my house once.”

“That’s… a truly amazing story.”

Iruda nodded.

“It would be best not to tell anyone else.”

“I told you because you are Ruda.”

“I want to live next to you because you keep acting like that.”

“Because we are partners!”

“I didn’t mean it that way, but I guess it’s similar.”

You are like the light and salt of my tough life.

'Live like that for the rest of your life.'

In this dirty and deadly world, we need shiny fools like Chaisol.

“You must be sensitive to the aura of the gods, but I think the black cloak is more dangerous than you think.”

“But he was so kind… He’s such an affectionate older brother.”

“I meant that I might have made you think that way. I wish Black Cloak were a good person like you think, but well, the world doesn’t run on such wishes alone.”

“I think Ruda makes it too difficult to speak.”

“I wish you would tell me that I’m mature. Anyway, I think that meeting or interacting with such a being without any sense of caution is an overly careless act.”

Then I saw Chae Sol's painting.

“How about trying to avoid meeting him as much as possible?”

She knew the talent that Chaisol possessed. Like Iruda herself, he was fit to contain a god, and was born with an aura that many gods would desire.

Whether traditional gods or evil gods, they coveted the qualities of a foolish hero like Chaisol.

“You never know.”

Such people are especially often entangled with evil spirits.

“Is there any evidence that Black Cloak is a good being?”

“There isn’t any.”

“That’s why I’m telling you to exercise self-restraint.”

If a person makes a pact with an evil mystery in a moment of carelessness, then from that moment on, that person's life becomes more terrible than hell. It is something that can be decided in an instant with just a breath or a glance from God.

“There’s no harm in being careful.”

“That’s true.”

Fortunately, Chae Sol, who was not possessed, obediently agreed with Iru Da's words.

“I’ll be careful too.”

“…Okay, if you see me again, tell me.”

“Yeah, but is the black cloak an evil spirit?”

“It seems… not impossible.”

“It was so warm, I guess that could happen.”

“…….”

Is it warm?

'I would understand if you said it was hot.'

It didn't feel like such a gentle existence. If it's a mystery that can be felt to the extent that the essence beyond can be felt just by this kind of awkward drawing, doesn't that mean that it's of considerable rank?

'Those beings don't care about humans.'

To be exact, it is closer to not being considerate. It is not easy for great mysteries to grasp the imagery according to the narrow human vessel. It becomes even more difficult as the level increases.

Of course, Chaisol's vessel was so large that it could withstand even the most gigantic god, but it was not without worry. Chaisol was a fool of this era, as Iruda had admitted.

“…No matter what you feel, humans should not completely trust God. That is not a matter of trust. Trust is something that proceeds based on the minimum mutual understanding. God cannot understand humans, and humans cannot understand God.”

That is not possible. If God and humans could understand each other, how could we distinguish between the two in this world?

Above all, human beings were happy beings when they did not know many things and could not do many things. Incompetence in accordance with the topic enriched life.

“So, whatever you feel, you shouldn’t believe that it’s the other person’s true feelings.”

“Then it’s not okay to make a contract with an evil spirit?”

“…Usually… wouldn’t that not work? Especially with a personality like yours….”

There were officially recognized religions of evil spirits: death, disease, fear, anger, sorrow. They were usually quiet disasters whose value and significance were recognized by humans.

But that doesn't mean that evil spirits aren't dangerous. Even traditional gods consider humans as mere toys, not even their long-term partners, and those with violent temperaments like evil spirits are even more so.

“You really better be careful.”

“If I make a contract with Black Cloak….”

“Let’s think about it some more, I think that would be wise.”

“Luda, I think what you said is right.”

“That’s how you should be my partner.”

Fortunately, Chaisol wasn't a fool who would insist on meaningless things.

“I will burn that painting.”

“Wouldn’t it hurt if I burned it?”

“Who is sick?”

“The black cloak.”

“Sometimes I learn a lot from your way of thinking.”

“Then I’ll burn it, since I drew it.”

Chaisol burned the painting neatly.

“But I don’t think he was really a bad guy.”

“Priest Kang Seo-dam said the same thing. How can you judge the good and evil of God?”

“That’s true too.”

Chaisol, who had been lying on the bed for a while, said with a smile.

“Next time, Ruda, do you want to meet up with me too?”

“…Okay, let’s do that.”

Iruda did not refuse.

'If there's one thing I've learned since coming to church, it's that not all evil spirits are evil.'

In the end, distinguishing between gods was also nothing more than human arrogance. How can we divide the disasters and mysteries that exist into right and wrong? Rather, there were times when the behavior of traditional gods was even worse than that of evil gods.

'I guess we shouldn't be prejudiced when looking at the world through the eyes of a mere human being.'

In the end, it was clear that the most proper form of god and priest was the master and his tool. The master seeks a useful tool, and the tool seeks a master who is satisfied with its treatment. As long as they are well-matched, that is all that matters.

So, if the Black Cloak was truly an evil spirit, he might surprisingly fit in well with Chaisol.

“Next time you see Black Cloak, you must call me, Chaisol.”

I was just worried.

“You don’t know much about God yet.”

“Yeah, so thanks to Ruda, I’m learning a lot.”

“…….”

I feel my heart warming up.

“I have to live next to you.”

“I will do that too.”

“Does Black Cloak really give out snacks?”

“Something like cookies or chocolate?”

“It’s interesting.”

“If I see you again, I’ll ask for a snack.”

“That would be a good experience too.”

Ruda recalled the image that still seemed to linger before her eyes.

What on earth would the snacks offered by that distant and eerie essence taste like?

* * *

“…….”

“…….”

Geo muttered, holding a bloody knife.

“I think student Chaisol called me for a moment.”

I didn't really go out because it seemed like there was someone else next to me.

“John Ryu?”

“Wait, Dana. Your father is still dismantling.”

“Ryujonjonjonjon?”

“Seeing someone with such a good appetite, I don’t think I’ll starve to death no matter where I go.”

A wonderful thing.

“You are my daughter.”

Geo laughed contentedly as he peeled off the golden sheep's skin. Unlike Giovanni's, his smile had a fierce and experienced quality to it.

“Why do intruders keep coming into my comfortable sweet home?”

“Gurr?”

“Yeah, this time even the golden sheep showed up. Is there a time when you get so embarrassed?”

Argio was currently slaughtering a huge sheep hanging from the ceiling. He didn't really hunt it himself, he just went out to the garden to think about what to eat and there was another sacrifice.

“If you think about it, that monster field could probably be used as a security force.”

It really beat any trap.

“The meat quality is also very good, as it was killed by piercing the forehead.”

“Kung?”

“They say that a living thing must die without knowing anything for its flesh to become tender, Honey.”

“Gurr.”

“Yeah, you should learn how to slaughter, it’ll be useful.”

Argio had lived like an animal, but perhaps because of the manners he learned as a child, he would sometimes enjoy eating while imitating humans. In the process, his butchering skills naturally improved.

“I can tell this sheep is definitely from my homeland. It has a golden coat that glides smoothly and a body as big as a ploughing ox. Sharp teeth and two pairs of eyes. Thick claws….”

It was clear.

“It’s a type of sheep that lives in the Black Forest.”

Golden step sheep

A carnivore that camouflages itself as a gentle prey or hunts its prey by being charmed by its golden glow. The plants that the golden steppe steps on turn into gold, and this gold emits a sweet scent that impairs the judgment of living things. Unlike ordinary gold, its strong teeth easily suffocate its prey.

“Yeah, you’re being diligent today too.”

Geo nodded.

“It has a cute appearance, a scent, a feel, and everything about it. However, if you are fooled by its gentle appearance or are seduced by the gold it creates, you will end up having your throat bitten.”

“Kururu?”

“Just like you said, it’s a story of experience. They are really good at acting coy, but you have no idea how thick and sharp their teeth are. Thanks to them, I almost got my throat ripped off, but in the end, I was the winner.”

Elixir: The bones of a golden step ram can be boiled to produce a powerful painkiller or drug. The blood inside the horn can be used as a painless death elixir for females, or as a painful resurrection elixir for males.

“Oh, right. That’s how I was able to survive.”

Geo looked at the system and smiled broadly.

“It just so happened that the one I killed was a male. Their horns aren’t as strong as they look, so they break quite easily, and inside they have golden blood pooling. I liked the shiny thing, so I drank it, and my dying heart started beating again.”

Since then, I've been carrying it with me all the time.

“The male’s horns are curved towards his back like this, and the female’s horns are curved towards the front. Looking at the horns that are curved towards his back, this guy looks like he’s a male. Right?”

“Gurrrr.”

“I’ll cut off the horns last, so eat as much as you want. You shouldn’t drink the blood from a female horn if you don’t have a strong tolerance, but you can drink the blood from a male horn if you’re healthy. The effect is small unless you’re on the verge of death.”

I can just feel my body getting a little hot.

“The leather is in good condition too.”

When the sheep's skin was completely removed, a black lump of flesh could be seen inside.

“Hmm….”

“Gurrrr!!”

“Yeah, I think you guys should have the fur.”

The golden sheep's fur was so exquisite that it was perfect for bedding, but the golden sheep's sparkle attracted many water birds that coveted its jewels, including honey.

“As a father, there is no way I wouldn’t give up even a single skin for my children.”

At those words, the water birds that were loitering around the slaughterhouse came over and pecked at the golden sheep’s hide. The power of their tiny beaks was so great that the hairs were pulled out of the hide, and the sight of those jewel water birds was truly like living gold and silver treasures.

“As expected of my children, they know how to take care of themselves.”

“John Ryu?”

“Yes, our Dana. This dad will cut off the flesh right away.”

Dana, who was a little bigger than the average cat, had fluffy fur and was nice to hug. It was truly ecstatic to have Dana cling to my leg and lean against me.

When I cut off the sheep's cheek, Dana bit into it.

“That’s right, you have to chew it thoroughly. The best delicacy of this sheep is the cheek meat. The cheek meat of the golden sheep, which has almost no facial muscles and cannot make expressions, has a chewy yet very soft texture that is exquisite.”

However, if you eat it too quickly, it can get stuck in your throat.

“Isn’t it really tasty?”

"baby?"

“I’m glad you like it.”

What could be more joyful than having my beloved family enjoy the same things I do?

Argio, who had let Dana savor it for a long time, soon turned his head again and looked at the black flesh of the sheep hanging from the hook.

“The bones can be used for drawing later….”

What should I do with this overflowing fat?

“…….”

He muttered.

“…The meat of the golden lamb is quite elastic, so let’s try steaming it.”

All meats in the world become delicious when boiled for a long time with alcohol and seasoning.

Yes, Argio was not without his gluttony.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (126)

Episode 126

Since ancient times, meat boiled or steamed in alcohol could not be tasteless.

“The savory aroma of alcohol removes the meat’s gamey smell, and the mild heat softens the chewy texture.”

There just so happened to be just the right ingredients.

"therefore…."

candy trap tree

A tree with a round, swollen base like a candy. It is a monoecious plant, with leaves on the outside, but the fruit grows inside the swollen trunk. If the fruit of the candy trap tree, which has a strong sweet and bitter taste, is not removed in time, it will start to rot from the inside, and depending on various conditions, this fruit mixes with the tree's sap to become vinegar, juice, or fruit wine.

“Yeah, this.”

Geo took a small piece of ceramic from the basket in Dana's mouth. When Dana, who had run an errand to the icehouse, spat out the basket, Argio put a piece of golden-stepped sheep's flesh in her mouth.

The omnivorous cat, who is not a picky eater, did not refuse raw meat.

Unlike regular cats, Dana, an anti-cat with teeth lined up in a single row, enjoyed the flesh with gusto.

“John Ryu?”

“What a wonderful thing.”

I heard that you grow up so fast these days. I wish you could eat a lot and grow up like a pig. Then you have to poop five more times instead of just once. Geo was happy.

“The good thing about these candy trap trees is that each tree has matured to a different degree. That’s why the taste is slightly different. This one… has a strong woody scent.”

The heaviness unique to alcohol that makes your tongue burn as soon as you touch it was strong, and the bitter taste unique to plants that seemed to roll around in your mouth. The scent of the sugar trap tree itself was added, giving it a somewhat smoky feeling.

This liquor was delicious even when drunk on its own. It was to the point where I thought people who enjoyed drinking wouldn't understand why it was used in cooking.

“Naturally produced alcohol did not exist even in the Avilas rainforest.”

“…….”

“Honey, would you like to try it?”

“Gurrrr.”

“It’s nice to see all the children eating well. They’ll grow up well.”

Geo tried to pour the fruit wine into a small dish, but Honey didn't care and squeezed her way into the narrow ceramic entrance. He watched quietly for a while, and soon Honey's chubby face suddenly popped out.

“…….”

“…….”

The water bird hanging slightly at the entrance tilted its head.

“B-kung?”

“Oh, like that.”

“…Kungkungkung….”

“It didn’t taste good, did it?”

“Gulp.”

“They say that some people are better suited to drinking alcohol. I may have told the child about that too.”

“Kung….”

“Would you like to try it deliciously?”

Argio, who enjoys drinking as much as fighting, was happy to give advice.

“There are several ways to enjoy fruit wine. You can hold it in your mouth and feel its weight and texture, analyze the unique bitterness of the plant, or appreciate the aroma of the fruit itself or the aroma that comes afterward.”

“Kuruk.”

“It’s probably hard for a young child like you to enjoy alcohol. I’ve always enjoyed this kind of texture and smell since I was little, so I’ve kept alcohol close to me, but if it doesn’t suit you, you can use it in cooking. I just happened to win the perfect alcohol.”

Whether it was the cat's keen sense of smell or simply the one she brought with her that looked the best, Dana brought the one that went best with meat among the fruit wines she had been collecting whenever she was bored.

“If it’s regular alcohol, its flavor and taste will almost disappear during the cooking process, but the alcohol here is special, so that won’t happen. The meat stew I’m making this time will be quite delicious.”

Geoda always felt sorry that when cooking with alcohol, the flavor and aroma almost disappeared during the boiling and stir-frying process. However, the things that grew in this forest did not disappear so easily.

“I should say that it truly has strong vitality.”

“Gurrrr?”

“Yeah, just like you.”

Geo, who was caressing his son sitting on his shoulder, soon turned to look at the teddy bear.

"so…."

“…….”

“Why is our father so distant?”

“Kyuu….”

“Is your new son so unfamiliar?”

Geo's hair, which was a deep red like wine, soon faded and became platinum blonde.

“So how is it now?”

"…dream."

“Yes, it’s the same person. It’s no different at all.”

“Kuk kuk kuk.”

The traditional god who once ruled over a dimension smiled and applauded. It wasn't exactly a situation worthy of applause, but no one was there to point it out.

Giovanni smiled, gave his father a hug, and stood up again.

“Hmm.”

His hair turned dark red again.

“But if we do this, I’m worried about how our mermaid siblings will react.”

“Huh?”

“Yes, it’s almost time for those kids to come. This is….”

Argio laughed.

“That sounds fun.”

It was going to be a very enjoyable meal.

* * *

“…….”

“Our princess has arrived.”

"Shit."

The Little Mermaid Aria stabbed me in the eye.

“My geo has been contaminated with impurities.”

Aria was whining, blood streaming from her eyes. She looked just like a crying child, and Argio burst out laughing. He whined as he led Aria, who was not coming down from the second floor, to the table.

“If you say it’s an impurity, wouldn’t this teacher’s heart hurt too much?”

“How did this personality of someone so unlike Giovanni come into being? Aren’t there only ‘Geos’ with similar characteristics?”

“Oh, my student. My disciple. Why don’t you understand that in the end, we are all the same Geo?”

“I know.”

Aria, who had regained her sight, clicked her tongue and looked at Argio’s clear golden eyes. Rather than a calm sea bathed in sunlight, they reminded her of a cold lump of gold covered in blood.

Yet there was a familiar affection inside me. It was a love that I could never forget, a love that could not be confused.

“…That gaze cannot be imitated.”

“Be honest too.”

“You know that in the end, you are my teacher.”

That wasn't a lie.

“It’s not that I didn’t expect it would turn out like this someday.”

The 'Gio' in this portrait was varied. In fact, even 'Sergio' and 'Giovanni' were very different.

First of all, their ages were different, and although they were not visible because of their clothes, their physiques were different. Their bone structures and colors were different, and even the expressions they could make and the types of expressions they could make were different. So it was not strange that such a bright red Geo was added now.

The teacher asked him.

"then?"

“…….”

Before sitting down at the table, Aria carefully held the hand of Giovanni, who had escorted her.

“Geo.”

It was a soft voice.

“I want to have a meal with you.”

“…Me too.”

Giovanni also smiled as usual.

“I want to brag about this recipe that I made this time.”

“Then why were you making that face instead of just bragging about the recipe?”

“I don’t think you like Argio’s face. I think I should explain it to you….”

"…ha…."

Aria, who was quietly looking at Giovanni's awkward smile, let out a small sigh and said.

“I can explain it well enough with words.”

“But what explanation could be more certain than showing?”

“You have such a shameless side.”

Only then did Aria sit down in the seat that Geo had shown her.

“Is this something new that was made this time?”

“Yes. It smells really good, doesn’t it?”

“It smells a bit like alcohol. It looks like it will be a delicacy.”

“I don’t think it will be bad.”

Geo, who had returned to his black hair, sat across from him. Honey and Dana climbed onto the table as if they were used to it, and the teddy bear with the sun god also took its place on the chair.

and….

“…….”

Aria looked around.

“What are those water birds?”

“They’re just watching to see if there’s anything they can take.”

“Why do you have to take it?”

“I think it’s because of the kids who took the golden wool, which is a sheep accessory, earlier.”

“Golden fur?”

“The meat placed in front of Aria now is the skin that was exposed.”

"aha…."

Aria nodded as she looked at the water birds by the window, their eyes sparkling and watching us.

“Now, the golden sheep appears and things are really strange.”

“There was no such thing in our hometown.”

“If there was something like that, it might have been possible to turn people’s attention in that direction.”

“It was such beautiful fur that even the most discerning person would be unable to overcome their greed.”

“So I think it would be better not to put it out there. Well, that’s just my extremely personal desire.”

The mermaid still didn't trust humans.

“I was worried because the teacher had no sense of caution in some strange areas.”

“Aria has really grown into a wonderful adult.”

Geo was impressed by the way his disciple took care of him. He naturally smiled like Giovanni, even though he was Sergio with black hair. It was because they were completely in sync.

“I used to be really prickly and hot-tempered.”

“Oh… How long ago are you talking about?”

But Aria also acknowledged that part.

“I know that I had many shortcomings back then.”

Aria, who was just born into the world, had a sensitive and prickly side. She was suspicious of everything that approached her, had a hard time acknowledging anyone, and felt annoyed and disgusted by anything that got in her way.

“I’ve become a lot more mature than I was as a child.”

“Actually, I don’t think it’s much different now.”

“Ha, I can just be comfortable in front of the teacher.”

“Suddenly such a touching story?”

“I didn’t say that to be moved, though.”

Aria didn't even look at the food, just fiddling with the glass of water.

“Who could I be so honest with? Not even in front of my younger brother Isser, because I had to lead him.”

“…….”

“I’ve become quite skilled. I’ve become more skilled, and I’ve learned to smile in front of anyone, regardless of whether I like it or not. As the teacher said, this has helped me a lot in communication.”

She looked at Geo with pearly eyes.

“Is this the kind of ‘growth’ you like?”

“Maybe so, maybe not. It doesn’t matter what I like.”

“He’s still an ambiguous person.”

As Aria let out a forced sigh, Geo smiled slightly. It was a small, gentle smile directed at his cute student.

“So you’re not planning on eating?”

“I feel sick to my stomach when I think about the meal that some unknown idiot made.”

“That unknown mold could be your teacher.”

“It gets even stranger because it’s clear that he’s my teacher. In an instant like this….”

I felt really strange.

“…….”

But I just wasn't used to it, it wasn't to the point where I wanted to reject it.

“…As I said before, the scent is nice.”

“It’s because the aroma of the newly brewed liquor remains intact.”

“The meat is very tender.”

“It’s boiled once, then baked, steamed, and then topped with sauce.”

“I don’t know why cooking can be so troublesome.”

And as cumbersome as it was, the dish was delicious.

“You said you put the sauce on separately, so isn’t it a little different from making stew?”

“It will definitely make a difference, doesn’t it make the meat taste better?”

“You said it was the flesh of the golden lamb? Yes, it is a great delicacy.”

The deep black flesh, like squid ink, cuts smoothly when chewed and tears easily. However, the unique, plump, chewy texture adds to the chewiness, making it enjoyable to chew.

In particular, the aroma felt from the meat itself was very impressive. The aroma that came up on the tongue was similar to spices such as garlic or onion. The oily flavor and richness of the meat coming from the juice was indescribable.

“It’s strange how, when you spend time with a teacher, you feel like you’ve become a gourmet without even realizing it.”

“I will take that as a compliment.”

“You end up eating food while thinking about it for no reason.”

“I thought it was a compliment.”

“There’s no one like you, Geo, who thinks positively.”

The sauce was pretty good too.

“My tongue hurts a little.”

“I didn’t add any spicy spices, but it’s probably because the alcohol I used this time is strong.”

“Usually, doesn’t all the alcohol evaporate during the cooking process?”

“Isn’t it because the alcohol itself has largely died out, but the scent itself still remains intact?”

“I can’t understand how a scent alone can be this strong.”

“Mermaids are particularly bad at eating strongly stimulating foods.”

"no…."

Aria muttered to herself.

'Isn't it a miracle that someone like me can feel this way?'

It was Aria who had accumulated power to the point of being close to an evil spirit. It was impossible for Aria, who had 'grew' over a long period of time, to be like an ordinary mermaid.

And yet, I can enjoy Geo's cooking like an ordinary person.

'Did you cook it differently to suit my level?'

or not.

'Can anyone just enjoy Geo's cooking as he intended?'

Arya thought it was probably Huzairi. Didn't even the Sun God, who had no appetite, make Geo wait for his cooking? It was truly a strangely great ability.

He did so simply because he wanted to share his cooking with everyone, whether it be a monster who had surpassed the limits of a mermaid or a teddy bear who was once a god but was blind.

"……."

Aria asked.

"…Is there any bread to go with it?"

"I made something in advance. Would you like to eat it?"

"The sauce is so delicious that I want to dip it in it."

"Then I will cook it for you right away."

Geo got up from his seat and put the bread he had baked in advance into the oven.

A golden water bird flies over and lands on the shoulder of the black mantle, as if it wants to eat something. The water birds sitting by the window also come over, splashing, and a large human hand caresses my little ones.

"Yeah, the smell of baking is nice, right?"

"Gulp."

"Let's wait a little longer."

The sound of the firewood crackling, the scent of the already baked bread becoming even more golden brown, the warmth radiating from it, and the sound of the teddy bear's utensils clanking…

"……."

Aria noticed it all.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (127)

Episode 127

It was a peaceful world.

“…….”

Isn't that so?

My benefactor, who had died a horrible death, is alive and well, and he always prepares meals for Aria when she comes. He consoles her with the same voice as before, and he laughs, chats, and enjoys himself with his new children… .

I had no intention of undermining this terrible peace.

“…Giovanni.”

No matter what happens in the future, Aria is determined to cherish this peace.

“My teacher.”

“Yes, Aria.”

After the short meal, Geo returned to his blunt face. With a calm face that seemed to have never smiled before, but with a familiar affection, the teacher asked.

“Do you want dessert?”

“Is that a dessert loaded with sugar?”

“Yes, it’s very sweet.”

“The cake I ate last time was really delicious.”

“Just what Aria wants is right here.”

“This is where I always found what I wanted.”

“You’re smart too.”

He brought a small cake.

“Is this what you wanted?”

“That’s right. You also gave it to a human named Yoo Seong-un who visited here before?”

“That’s right, I got a fish-shaped bread in return.”

“That’s quite a modest price to pay….”

The 'price' coming out of my mouth was like a child's play.

“I’m talking about such a delicious cake.”

It resembled a small round cake and had a very light texture.

First of all, the sheet was like that. It had a soft texture that was like chewing on a well-baked meringue cookie, with a soft crunch and a smooth texture that soaked right in. The outside was smooth and had a sweet sugar powder sprinkled on top.

The layers are divided into four: vanilla cream, green tea cream, and mascarpone cream cheese. Although it is said to contain a lot of sugar, it feels lighter than expected thanks to the exquisite harmony.

“I didn’t know you had talent for pastry, teacher.”

“Your baking skills are not bad, so I think it might be because of that influence.”

“That could be the case.”

There is a clear crunchiness to the bite, but the weight and texture are so light that you don't even realize it's going down your throat. It was an ecstatic texture that no human could ever create.

“You can’t hide your sense of discomfort just because the taste you feel is human.”

“I don’t know what you want to say. Do you have any advice for me?”

“I was just saying that once. I really don’t know what kind of teacher you want to be….”

The taste was quite familiar. When I spied on the Earth, I saw that this type of sweet and soft cream was popular. Perhaps Sergio wanted to imitate it.

However, Aria, who is a great analyst, knows what kind of an outing this is. She realizes it after just one bite of the cake. It would not be easy for a human to imitate this texture.

“I respect my teacher.”

Geo was a smart person, but he was not one to be caught up in his surroundings. He was even a person who could bestow his own death with loving mercy.

Oh, how arrogant he is.

“You can make a cake like this, can’t you?”

“I feel embarrassed that I am receiving so much praise for just a cake.”

“A dessert this delicious deserves more praise.”

“Would you like a cup of tea?”

“I haven’t had my tea yet?”

It was so delicious that I forgot about it for a moment.

“Would you like me to have a glass of what you’re drinking right now, teacher?”

“Let’s do that.”

A delicate and clear sound like a bead made of cut gems striking each other. The sunlight streaming in through the window shattered into the light blue-colored tea. It seemed as if what was inside should be a gem, not a liquid.

Still, what Aria received was tea of the right temperature.

“…….”

Drink it and look around.

“…I cherish this place.”

“I can tell without even hearing it directly.”

“But if you ask me if I like it, I don’t know.”

“I know that too.”

“…Yes, Giovanni….”

Aria smiled wryly.

“This must be sadness.”

It was different from anger.

“This is what it means to miss something.”

“…….”

“It’s another feeling of regret.”

In this comfortable place, Aria felt such emotions.

“I wondered why I felt that way in such a peaceful and quiet world. A place where I could meet my teacher again at any time, a cabin filled with sweet honey and fruit, and where I could hear the chirping of beautiful birds. A wooden house filled with warm air.”

It's just so good.

“I always feel queasy when I come here.”

Aria asked.

“Why does this place feel like a grave to me?”

“I am alive.”

“I feel like you’re going to go somewhere again.”

“I will continue to be here.”

“It’s so strange to talk about such eternity.”

Giovanni never said 'forever', which was proof that we had come a long way.

The one before his eyes had already died once, and would experience countless more deaths in the future. And he would reveal even more changes to those he loved. That was how it was supposed to be.

“A person who longs for the dead is a failure. He will never be able to bring them back to life, so he will spend his entire life buried in the past. Those who rebel against fate are no longer human, so they become monsters.”

That was the situation now.

“I became that monster.”

“You don’t have to overthink it.”

“Geo, how about you?”

Are you human?

“Can you consider yourself human?”

“I ask you this, how could it not be so?”

"well."

Aria couldn't bring herself to say 'no' to him.

“You are always right.”

The being drinking tea with me in front of me is not a human being.

It may be human, but its very essence cannot be called human. In the end, the only human teacher of Aria is here, but it is not like that.

Giovanni is alive and dead.

'It was stuffed.'

Like a faded portrait of a time at its most beautiful.

'How many more of our most beautiful moments will be stuffed in the future?'

He feels lost in that short and colorful life and the eternal changes. Geo will never remain stagnant for even a moment, and Aria will be anxious to keep up with his changes every time.

I felt hurt even though we were drinking the same tea together. I felt so distant.

“…Longing is truly a ?鵑贊? emotion.”

Aria continues speaking.

“It looks good, but it’s a mess inside.”

“It’s because I’m not immune to emotions.”

“Have humans become accustomed to these feelings?”

“We all live with a sense of longing, no matter what it is.”

“It’s horrible to think that I’ll be living like this my whole life.”

“It’s not that terrible.”

Geo's voice was quiet, as if there was no sound.

“We can have memories because we miss them.”

“They say that even this is a memory.”

So Aria now.

“I’m lost in that memory right now.”

I felt like I was suffocating.

I felt like a fish in fresh water instead of the ocean. I felt like a human being trapped in a world filled with nitrogen instead of oxygen.

It felt both painful and peaceful. It was a really strange feeling.

“How should we define this peace?”

“Why don’t you just enjoy it without worrying?”

“It’s like a devil’s temptation, a more clever proposal than any devil I’ve ever seen.”

“Oh, you’ve encountered the devil.”

His blunt voice became warm, as if he was trying to appease his student. He asked with a gentle voice and smile.

“How were they?”

“Well, it’s of much lower quality than yours.”

In many ways.

“To be honest, I don’t have the confidence to accept this peace. I know it’s all true, but I think it’s a lie. I know it’s real, but I think it’s a mirage.”

“Aria thinks too much, it’s a problem.”

“In my opinion, it seems that the teacher is not thinking deeply. I don’t understand what kind of symbol it is that allows him to define himself as a human being without any hesitation.”

“Why wouldn’t my change make me human?”

“There are many reasons. There are many, but I think the teacher would not consider them as valid reasons. I have to say that such stubbornness is really trustworthy….”

Or should I say it is ominous?

“You can achieve anything you want.”

But Geo, despite his ominousness, was something she could neither control nor possess. Even if the peace she longed for now were to suddenly disappear one day, Aria would be able to accept it.

And on that day we will learn despair. The long road we have already walked has proven that it was a predetermined fate.

“I have already learned fear.”

“How did that happen?”

“Because you’re not in my dungeon.”

When I lived as a monster, thinking that it would never exist and that it had already left my hands, I would rather laugh. But it was so scary when my benefactor, who I couldn't even grasp, hovered around me with a smiling face.

Once was enough. I couldn't lose it twice. I couldn't bear that kind of loss again.

“That’s the guy named Giovanni. He comes up with ideas that no ordinary person would ever think of, he gives his all to such things, he understands even the smallest things, and his patience is beyond imagination.”

He was a man who would try anything.

“But now, you’re not just trying, you’ve gained the strength to do it. I’m not sure if it was like that from the beginning or if it became like this later… but you are still my teacher after all.”

“…….”

“It will change over and over again. It will disappear someday. You may die before me, or you may outlive me. If you want it, it will happen. If you don’t want it, you will just enjoy your fate.”

“…….”

“I admit it. But, Geo, don’t you know? We realized our hatred for your death and killed and harmed so many humans. We endured all these years. And what is this?”

Aria looked at Giovanni.

“You are too much to comfort us through all these long years….”

It soon turned black.

“…….”

“…….”

It turned red again.

“…You’re so fickle.”

“You understand me well.”

“That makes me very anxious.”

It's been too long.

“I have lived for such a long time enduring hatred and anger, but the teacher I met again unexpectedly does not respond to my greed. If it were up to me, I would put you in my dungeon, admire you without taking my eyes off you for even a moment, and spend all that time passing by together.”

Argio smiled wryly at the mermaid's greed.

“That’s not fun at all.”

“I knew it wouldn’t be easy to catch, and I didn’t try because I knew I would fail.”

Because Geo didn't forgive them and so he wouldn't accept them.

That couldn't hurt Aria. I think it's natural and obvious. But because of that, the mermaids couldn't completely get their hands on my gift.

“I wonder how the teacher will disappear in the meantime.”

“That’s what makes you anxious.”

“Yes, in that my only variable is to acknowledge and love the only one.”

Aria laughed along with him.

“How can you believe in this peace?”

“I think that’s homework left for you.”

“That’s exactly what you would say.”

The fact that a mere human was invited here, the future in which Geo's color would change countless times, and the great responsibility of the mermaids that could not be fully shouldered even after tens of thousands of years.

All of this was ultimately just a homework assignment that Aria had to take on. A homework assignment to believe in the peace that exists now.

“I wish I were a stupid person.”

Then I would have believed it.

“Isn’t that right?”

“But it’s not a wise choice.”

“…Is that so?”

“Constantly worry and doubt.”

Golden eyes widened with affection.

“That will prove you.”

“As expected, you are….”

Aria smiled weakly.

“…My teacher is right.”

A human being who has no limits in strange places, always has a realistic future in his mouth, and is busy teaching something.

Let us remember that the person in front of us is the only one who loved us, the mermaid… .

"love you."

"so do i."

Only then did I feel at ease.

We are still in our daily lives today.

* * *

Giovanni always said, 'Learn as many emotions as you can while I'm around.'

“It will be a token of your mermaid life.”

“Proof?”

“Emotions are the tokens of memories, of learning, of all memories.”

He said that would make you grow into a mermaid.

“Your current feelings will tell you the way forward.”

“Geo, why don’t you tell me?”

“I am not at all like Aria, so I can be erased and disappear from that life at any time.”

“I won’t erase you or let you disappear.”

“After all, aren’t we still drawing a different future?”

“…….”

“…even if I’m not there, and even if I’m there.”

Geo always said.

“I hope that this sign will help you understand more.”

But before he could understand much of it, Giovanni died.

Death took more than you might think. It meant no one to smile brightly when you woke up in the morning, no one to insist on having a meaningless meal at a set time, and no one to cover you up with a blanket at the end of the night.

Each and every one of them was truly ordinary and big. There were also small and many.

“…….”

We have always learned about death.

So today was not much different from any other day.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (128)

Episode 128

Gallery at 4am.

“Geo.”

Yoo Seong-un called the portrait as usual.

“Are you awake?”

“Yes, I am awake.”

“I sent a letter.”

“…….”

A portrait with its eyes covered in black paint looks at a meteor cloud. A bloodless lower body spits out words.

“Were you able to read it this time?”

“Nothing has changed. It’s the same as what you sent me before.”

"okay."

There was no sign of discouragement.

As usual, the tone of the portrait was dull and empty. The calm tone was certainly pleasant to listen to, but its weight was heavy, making it difficult to ponder for long.

Yoo Seong-un let the voice flow without any meaning being understood. Then the portrait spoke again.

“I can show you something fun.”

“If you say it’s fun….”

Yoo Seong-un nodded as if he had guessed.

“Did you succeed in finding another ‘Geo’?”

The reason why he was able to imitate humans so well despite his huge stature was because he was awakening his old personality, another 'Geo'. It was said that it was easy for 'Geo', the human, to act as a human before he was imbued with the portrait.

Geo answered Yoo Seong-un's question in the affirmative and provided an additional explanation.

“I drew it, I didn’t find it.”

“So that’s a painting after all? Then how is it different from a portrait?”

“To be exact, I am asking Geo beyond the picture.”

“Please….”

That's a pretty mild expression.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un calmed his mind so that he wouldn't show any signs of trouble. He was ready to face the disaster.

“So what kind of person is this ‘Geo’?”

“It is one of the evil spirits.”

“Aha, does that mean it’s time for the Earth to end?”

“I will not destroy the Earth.”

“I’m grateful, but I’m a little scared.”

Why does it have to be an evil spirit?

“…No, if you’re an evil spirit…then you weren’t human in the first place, right? Is it okay to receive help from someone like ‘Geo’?”

“It is possible because he is human after all.”

“You are so compassionate. I always feel that your standards for humans are very broad.”

I knew it when I saw those scary mermaids and started preaching, 'You are humans too.'

‘It’s the same with thinking of yourself as an ordinary human being… .’

Actually, it seems like it's some kind of joke or an act, but anyway, there's no lie in 'believing' like that. It seems that Geo's standards for treating others as human beings are quite... tolerant.

“So that’s why you called me to tell me that story?”

Although Yoo Seong-un still couldn't interpret Geo's letter, he knew that he had something to say. That's why he came to visit him that morning after receiving the letter.

“Or is there something you would like to discuss with me?”

“Rather than that….”

Dalgrak—.

The portrait's ringed hand held the frame.

“…….”

‘Geo’ covered in black paint pops out like a meteor cloud… .

"-peekaboo."

I was playing a prank.

“…….”

“…….”

“Why is there no response?”

"…uh…."

As Yoo Seong-un stepped back, pale bare feet landed in the space. Yoo Seong-un grabbed his heart as 'Geo', who had already completely stepped out of the portrait,

“…Oh, okay.”

“What does that mean?”

“I was scared for a moment.”

“I didn’t mean to scare you.”

"I see."

This time I really thought I was going to die.

'The eyes….'

The moment I met those golden eyes looking down at me, my mind went dizzy.

Yoo Seong-un had previously speculated that the 'Portrait of Geo' was the 'eye' of the source for gathering the human database.

Since then, I tried even harder to avoid eye contact, but when I looked at him straight on like this, it took my breath away. It was really… .

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un took a deep breath and returned to his usual expression.

“Is this the Geo I knew?”

“I still remember and affirm you, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

"hmm…."

The response was certainly as positive as ever.

“…It seems like things have changed a lot. It was the same with Giovanni, but things have really changed to extremes.”

From the blunt 'Sergio' with no expression whatsoever, he became the priest 'Giovanni', characterized by a bright and affectionate smile.

'And now, he has become an evil spirit who knows how to smile with a dark smile… .'

I thought Geo was basically good-natured, but seeing as he turned into an evil spirit, I wonder if that kind of nature can change?

'It's true that Geo himself can't be said to be kind by human standards. His taste for liking kind and polite things is likely fixed, but his unique politeness and kindness toward humans may change.'

Even after organizing my thoughts like that, there was still not enough information. Unlike the previous 'Geo' who was generally gentle, this guy was flashy from his appearance to his personality.

The first change that can be mentioned is color.

“Is that the color of this ‘Geo’?”

“Isn’t it pretty fancy?”

“It definitely is, it’s really gorgeous.”

The eyes were a cool golden color, and the hair was a deep red like aged blood. Yoo Seong-un could quickly recall a similar color palette.

Geo probably felt the same way.

“The guild leader here seemed to be a similar color to me.”

“Oh, that’s right. He has a keen eye for detection too.”

It wasn't exactly the same color. Bisabal's hair and eyes were a bit more saturated than Geo's now. His hair resembled freshly squeezed blood, and his eyes were closer to lemon than gold.

Even so, that's true.

“They are very similar.”

At first glance, you might think they're relatives.

'If I tell you this much, you'll be offended.'

Since the other person introduced himself as an evil spirit, he had to be careful. If he introduced himself as a mere human, it could be seen as an insult to the god. It was better to avoid that.

But Geo's reaction was quite cool.

“Are we similar enough to be considered family?”

“…Maybe so.”

“Are you good at fighting?”

“Oh no, absolutely not. If you hit it, it will fly away.”

“Oh, like that.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un chewed his tongue inwardly.

'Is this the type of evil spirit?'

Among the evil gods, there were schemers with twisted personalities, and there were berserkers who would wipe out any schemes or anything. It seemed that Geo this time was closer to the latter.

“…So you started enjoying fighting, then?”

“Don’t worry, my friend, I won’t go wild unless you’re worth it.”

“I see….”

First of all, seeing that you call me 'friend', it seems like the goodwill you had built up until now hasn't been deleted.

'You've always thought of me as a friend.'

I was grateful, but it was more of a burden. It was a great honor for a gardener to be considered a friend by a being with the same name as the Eye of Origin, but it was also a position where I would never be able to die as a human.

'I might not be able to live out my lifespan if I'm not careful.'

Anyway, good things are good things. It was obvious that it was better to gain favor than to gain enmity.

“…….”

The meteor cloud, scratching its neck, spoke again.

“…Can we talk comfortably?”

“A good person like Mr. Yoo Seong-un deserves to be treated accordingly.”

“Even though it’s the same honorific, the feeling is definitely different.”

The honorifics of Black Geo were eerily blunt, while Giovanni's were gentle and polite. The honorifics of the gorgeous Geo before his eyes were filled with a sharp smile, making them sound a little sarcastic.

'Is it because of that dignity that I don't feel like a common punk?'

Yoo Seong-un looked inside the black cloak this time. He knew that there was a rare chance that the outfit would change whenever 'Geo' changed.

The black cloak that covers him from head to toe makes it impossible to see inside, but if he reveals himself, the inside can be seen. When he was Sergio, Geo wore a black suit, and when he was Giovanni, Geo wore a white priest's outfit.

'Detailed details like hairstyle and fashion seem to change depending on Geo's mood at the time, but this one definitely stands out.'

This time Geo's attire was full of bones and jewels.

“…….”

If you go out like that, how are you going to handle it?

'The atmosphere is a bit ominous for explaining all of those as artifacts.'

Geo smiled as if he had noticed Yoo Seong-un's thoughts.

“Would I really be walking among people like this?”

“Or maybe I’m really lucky.”

“If necessary, I’ll wear a suit, because it’s neat.”

“Then what are you wearing now?”

“Isn’t this to show Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

The way he speaks really changes quickly.

'A rather capricious type… .'

You had to be careful. Even if you said that, you could still pass people by dressed like that.

These days, there are so many hunters with unique concepts that I wonder if it will be a big problem, but since I introduced myself as an evil spirit, it would be foolish to be complacent.

“…So….”

Feeling a little confused, Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth first.

“I’m starting to get a grasp of the situation.”

“Is that so?”

“Is there anything you want from me?”

“I had something to ask.”

“What do you want to ask? Is that the main point?”

"that's right."

Geo asked.

“Am I still scared?”

“…….”

It was amazing.

‘…Is the current Geo also considerate of humans?’

Although the evil seed was a black cloak that did not treat humans like humans, Geo basically showed fair affection to humans.

It's so fair that it sometimes feels like indifference, but I know that it's the consideration of this portrait.

'But was that possible even for the evil Geo?'

I was prepared for a lot of things when I introduced myself as an evil spirit. It felt like I was seeing something really unfamiliar.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un shook his head after carefully looking over his opponent.

“No, it’s not scary.”

"really?"

“To put it more precisely, there is something about your momentum that is a bit overwhelming.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed innocently.

“But this can’t be helped. You’re considerably taller than other humans, and your color is intense right now, and your gaze itself is intimidating. Your expression… has a ferocious side.”

but.

“But I still think he’s human.”

Of course, it was still difficult to look Geo in the eye directly.

However, the reason that Yoo Seong-un was able to quickly escape even after meeting him at such a close range was because Geo was still clearly in a human state.

Geo's lips twisted ambiguously at Yoo Seong-un's calm reaction. It seemed like he was probably smiling.

“It feels very strange to hear that.”

“Is it really like that?”

“It’s strange to say that you look like a human.”

“Is that… a change due to the current you?”

"okay."

Geo, who seemed to be thinking about something for a moment, opened his eyes.

“Everyone calls me Argio, but Mr. Yoo Seong-un, you can call me whatever you want.”

“Argio? Is that the word that refers to you?”

“In the old language of my hometown, it means a cruel beast. It’s a kind of derogatory term.”

“…Then I’ll just call you like I usually do.”

There was no need to praise an already cruel evil spirit by calling it 'cruel'.

'It's also a shame to call someone who doesn't show any malicious intent a derogatory term.'

As if he knew what Yoo Seong-un was thinking, Geo smiled broadly. Only then did Yoo Seong-un realize that Geo's eyes were sharper than he had thought.

'When you smile like that, you definitely look more like the guild leader.'

He usually sits calmly and collectedly, so I didn't think he had sharp eyes. It was such a random topic that I didn't say anything, but Geo opened his mouth.

“That’s all for today.”

“Have you checked to see if there are any side effects from becoming one with another Geo?”

“I guess so, I was satisfied.”

He pulled the hood of his cloak down low, and covered his entire body with a dark black cloak. Only his pale bare feet showed the black suit again above them.

Geo spoke from within the pitch-black shadow of the cloak.

“Thank you for responding to my letter.”

“…….”

It was definitely 'Sergio'.

“…Hey….”

This is going to get harder and harder to adapt to as time goes on.

'I guess I'm still human because I find this creepy.'

As the days passed, the erosion of the garden became more severe, but it seemed that even if they came into contact with the source, it would not have any effect. Yoo Seong-un felt a chill and laughed at everything about 'Geo' that was replaced in an instant.

For this portrait, ‘Geo’ is a kind of clothing.

'It's probably an attempt to find clothes that fit the situation and fit in with humans without feeling awkward.'

Yoo Seong-un understood the attempt and consideration. In his own way, ‘Portrait of Geo’ was trying to get along with the other person by using numerous memories and personalities.

'So, did you call me this time to show off to your family and friends that you bought new clothes and want them to look good on you?'

It was a little funny. There was something cute about this behavior in 'Portrait of Geo', like seeing the immature and passionate being of the newborn.

“I will gratefully accept your thanks.”

“Maybe I can help you another day.”

“That would be even more appreciated.”

As a gardener, help from the source can be a lifeline.

'I don't know if it will help in any way since there has been no such case historically.'

The portrait caught the meteor cloud that was about to leave.

“If you are tired, would you like to stay the night in my cabin?”

"hmm…."

It's true that I'm tired, though.

“…It’s not that I’m not interested.”

"yes."

“If I were to visit, I would like to do so in a more respectable manner.”

"okay."

“Wouldn’t it be unpleasant for you to postpone the consideration you showed me now until another time?”

“I always look forward to Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s visit.”

“That’s a really nice invitation.”

It was a ghostly invitation that bewitched a lonely and weary traveler.

“I like that kind of thing.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled with his blue-gray eyes wide open.

* * *

At that time, in an abandoned building in the outskirts.

“…….”

In that place filled with ash and soot, a man who had lost everything sat quietly.

What he held was a sign of an evil spirit called Sankalut.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (129)

Episode 129

Unlike other traditional gods who were difficult to contact and interact with, most evil gods were not difficult to summon and had a high probability of responding.

This was because the evil spirit actively sought out my fallen believers.

“Or, he may intentionally cause misfortune in order to make the human he likes his disciple. Some humans are loved by evil spirits because they are corrupted, while others become corrupt because they are loved.”

There is a way to call upon any god who watches over humans. In the countless dungeons created in the ruined dimensions because of this, there have been many cases where intellectuals with wrong intentions have brought disaster upon themselves.

“The most common purpose is revenge.”

“Revenge?”

“There are rare instances where a demon is summoned simply to bring about destruction.”

Kang Seo-dam continued his explanation in the classroom for prospective priests.

“Do you know about the seven deadly sins?”

“Pride, greed, envy, anger, lust, gluttony, and sloth.”

“Okay, Sister Iruda. This is a concept that existed even before the Great Calamity, when there was no close connection with God.”

Kang Seo-dam nodded.

“There have been many changes in perception on Earth since the Great Disaster. If the concept still exists, it must be because it has shown its worth.”

In religious circles, these were the seven deadly sins.

“The proud do not learn. The greedy do not share. The jealous lose the opportunity to grow. The angry do not tolerate. Lust easily blinds people. Gluttony makes people forget how to respect. Sloth rots away their own worth.”

Kang Seo-dam looked around at the students.

“Humans are social creatures who cannot survive alone. Especially before the catastrophe, humans on Earth were considerably weaker than other creatures on Earth.”

“…….”

“And yet the Seven Deadly Sins still existed at that time. Can any brother guess why they were considered sins regardless of whether they existed before or after the Great Calamity?”

The girl with the low tail raised her hand.

“I can explain.”

“Please explain in front of the brothers.”

“As you said, humans are weak social creatures, so they must form communities, and in order to survive and develop sustainably, they must not commit such sins.”

“That was an exemplary answer.”

Kang Seodam looked around again.

“Is there anyone who understood what Sister Iruda said?”

“Me.”

“Yes, Brother Chaisol. I would like to hear your opinion.”

“I think we should live well because if we are selfish, we can’t live together.”

“That was an accurate summary.”

He expressed his approval.

“Just as good and evil are, the world is vast and people are diverse, so when someone acts according to their own desires, someone else is bound to be unhappy. This is because resources are limited and not everyone has the same personality and desires.”

This is the method that humans, as social animals, have chosen to survive.

“There may be brothers who would like to say this. When the dungeon is overflowing and monsters are pouring out, is it really right to protect others instead of protecting oneself in such a critical situation?”

Kang Seo-dam shook his head.

“It is not about judging whether human actions are good or evil. Since humans exist, think, and act for themselves, such human actions can easily face evil. It is extremely rare for a choice to satisfy everyone, so in the end, someone will criticize even your good deeds.”

So what was important was not the good or evil of humans.

“If we were faced with a great disaster, I would say this. Let everyone figure out how to survive.”

“Uh… Uh uh….”

“Does it sound strange? But priests are also human beings, and human beings exist for themselves.”

“…….”

“If even self-preservation is considered evil, then humans should not exist in the first place.”

I will not even consider selfishness when life is threatened as a sin. However, acts of generosity when one has the means to do so will contribute to the survival of humanity.

So, okay.

“Good and evil are not important in the subject of this lesson.”

They had to see the world.

“Look at the flow of the world.”

I had to broaden my horizons.

“Is this the great disaster? Are you now in a place where monsters are overflowing? The world is gradually becoming more organized and is running towards peace, and as the speed increases, the average number of people receiving the grace of life also increases.”

“…….”

“For priests who serve traditional gods, the most important thing is the balance of dimensions. This dimension, the world, the country must be maintained so that they and we can enjoy the grace of life as long as possible. So don't be stupid, but think about good and evil."

Kang Seo-dam rubbed his chin.

"I know how absurd it may sound to say, 'Do good in this world.' But if you want to live and enjoy more, if you are one of those ordinary people, it would be better to become a faithful servant of God's word."

He looked around at the students again.

"Then another question arises. What if you become a priest of an evil god who loves destruction and imbalance, not a traditional god? What if you desire the grace of death rather than the grace of life, and are not an ordinary person who enjoys everyday life, chatting with friends and enjoying a good meal… why not become a faithful servant?"

Kang Seo-dam nodded.

"So we return to our original topic."

He took the students in his eyes.

"In the dungeons of countless fallen dimensions, hunters have witnessed the consequences of the misguided wisdom of the mind, for many gods can be summoned with only the slightest qualifications and simple knowledge."

Even the weakest scholar can summon an evil spirit. If he knows what the evil spirit he wants to summon wants and the procedure for doing so, or if he only wants a disaster that will fulfill his wrong wish, the evil spirit will respond to him.

"Some demons even agree to bargain with humans using very simple materials and rituals. Some are summoned by sacrificing a rat, others are summoned by drawing a simple picture, and still others invite disaster by reciting a short prayer."

Even the faintest groans of a human being are quickly responded to by evil spirits.

“Because hatred and disillusionment reach God faster than gratitude and praise.”

Evil spirits speak to humans when they are at their weakest, and disaster strikes in an instant.

“Traditional gods are born in providence, so they are often immature in dealing with such negative prayers. Most gods do not even recognize the small entity called human beings, so how can they understand their wishes, and is that understanding really correct? The probability of that happening is low.”

“Then how can I receive God’s answer?”

“The easiest way, as I said before, is to summon an evil spirit. Most evil spirits that seek to exploit human negative emotions or blatant greed are experienced and, as a result, skilled at dealing with humans.”

Kang Seo-dam said, pointing to the numerous pieces of data that appeared on the screen.

“This may also explain why most gods who enjoy play are evil gods.”

The demons who have the most experience with humans are more likely to be skilled at understanding and imitating them. That is why they can respond immediately to a human's call.

Kang Seo-dam clicked his tongue.

“First of all, let me say this: in Korea, all evil spirits are subject to punishment, except for those recognized by the government and religious circles.”

“Ah, so that’s why the evil spirit is a monster….”

“Yes. So, even if you see an evil spirit that seems very gentle and kind, you should not easily make a contract with them or rely on them. They are very knowledgeable about humans.”

He especially enjoyed corrupting these young priests.

“Quite a few evil spirits enjoy corrupting humans.”

“Why is that so?”

“I’m guessing it’s because it’s literally fun.”

“…Well, it’s fun….”

“No matter how well you treat humans, never forget that they are just toys to God.”

Even if the grace they bestowed could objectively be called 'love' from the perspective of humans, that 'love' could ultimately be just a glance from God. The standards of God and humans were completely different.

“No matter how much they love and care for you, they won’t cry for you as a family when you die. They won’t build a grave for you, and they won’t prepare a warm meal for you when you’re sad and struggling. You can only expect that from a fellow human being.”

Kang Seo-dam looked at his brothers with slightly tired expressions.

“That doesn’t mean you have to be afraid to serve God.”

“But then, aren’t we just being used in the end?”

“If we are to be exact, we humans are also using God.”

“Isn’t it a little different…?”

“What would you do if a passing ant followed you?”

Then the priests opened their mouths one by one.

“I think I’ll take it and raise it.”

“Should I give you some food?”

“I feel like I’m going to run away because I wonder why you’re following me.”

“Isn’t it so small that you might not be able to see it?”

“I think I’ll look into it to see if there’s a problem.”

Kang Seo-dam asked questions in turn.

“If you take an ant home, how will you raise it?”

“Uh… Should I give you a house? There’s an ant-raising kit, right?”

“What kind of food would you like to give it?”

“…I don’t know, maybe rice grains? Star candies? Something like that?”

“Why did you think I would run away?”

“It’s strange how ants recognize me and follow me. They’re not even human. I think someone is up to something sinister.”

“Do you care if it’s small and you can’t see it?”

“You wouldn’t have known that in the first place, right? You wouldn’t have even known that it existed.”

“How do you check if there is a problem?”

“Just grab it…? Look around the body, or something….”

Kang Seo-dam asked one last time.

“Are you sure you can hold a small ant in your hand and not burst it?”

“…If I’m unlucky, I think it’ll explode.”

“Please express the emotions you feel at that time.”

“Are you… sorry? Is it gross?”

"okay."

He said to the priests.

“This is how the gods feel about you.”

“…….”

The faces of the children who didn't know turned pale, and the children who had guessed what was going on sighed. Kang Seo-dam, who had been looking at their faces, continued speaking.

“If God loves you and takes you in, you will be imprisoned in a safe and peaceful shackle. If God misinterprets your cries and gives you more power and wealth than you can handle, you will easily be ruined.”

“…….”

“Some gods might find it incredibly disgusting and repulsive that humans come to them. Other gods might not even acknowledge them no matter how desperately they are called. That can happen.”

He looked at the child who had answered last.

“If there is a god who tries to understand and care, you can die by his hand. And no god would be sad if a human dies like that.”

If that incident had made him interested in humans, he would have sought out other believers, but if he had developed antipathy towards them, he would have never even glanced at humans for the rest of his life. That was the existence of God.

“In very rare cases, there are humans who receive the normal affection of God. We call these beings saints and saints, and they serve as mediators connecting humans with the great being of God throughout their lives.”

“I heard that the saint of Dalnim Church communicates with God! She is a living God, the next Dalnim.”

“Yes, she is a very important person. And because of that, the saintess of Dalnim Church will never be able to leave the church for the rest of her life, and will always be locked in the hands and eyes of God. She is the only person whose vessel is so great that she can treat God as an ordinary person.”

“…….”

“That is far from the human happiness we usually talk about.”

Kang Seo-dam said firmly.

“Do not try to understand God. Do not expect anything from God, and do not try to use Him. God’s enmity is a disaster that can be easily understood, but God’s favor is a disaster that can be compared to it.”

“…….”

“God is nature with a will and destiny. Just as we humans find food in nature and do not question our impending destiny, so do it. Then disaster will be avoided.”

He added.

“That’s how you coexist with God.”

“…I’m even more scared….”

“A priest, by his very presence, can open up the possibility of communication with God.”

"but…."

“Someday, a god who is a good fit for you will come to you.”

Kang Seo-dam said with his characteristically blunt face.

“But there is no greater disaster than worshipping the wrong god.”

"…yes."

“So what I’m trying to say is, try to be as kind-hearted as possible.”

"yes?"

“I keep saying that the quickest response to negative human emotions is usually an evil spirit.”

And the evil god is also a god.

“In that case, you will face a disaster you could never have imagined.”

Haven't I been telling you about the dangers of God so many times that my mouth is worn out?

“One day, you may find something you want to devote your life to. It may be gold and silver, or a dream lover, or revenge on someone who has made you miserable. Or you may simply be driven by an impulse and want to ruin everything.”

but.

“If you hear the voice of God then, do not respond.”

It could be that it was the god who brought you into the pit of misery. People who are easily tempted by sin and are ruined by it hold on to it without even realizing that it is a rotten rope.

In the first place, the god who speaks to humans when they are most distressed and struggling, the god who gives them opportunities, can never be called a god of benevolence and abundance. It is highly likely that he is an evil god who is waiting for the person to completely collapse.

“Rather, let your anger flow out, let someone else use it to create chaos in society, let madness take hold of the hands of men. Kill bystanders, set fire to the houses of those who sleep, and disembowel them alive.”

“…That, that’s too….”

“That’s cheaper than responding to the evil spirit. Those who use the evil spirit to express their greed will not be able to properly resolve their own greed, and they will devastate those around them. It would be better for you to step forward yourself, and it will be a way that will relieve your own feelings and cause less damage to those around you.”

When an evil spirit that is skilled at dealing with humans intervenes, no one can be saved. Whether the instigator or someone else on the side. Whether there is sin or not, such things would not be of much importance to the evil spirit.

“No one can be satisfied or happy when they are caught up in the evil spirit. That is why it has been confirmed that the intellectuals who summoned the evil spirit for revenge wrote words of regret and died. The same goes for the summoners who only wanted destruction.”

That soul would still be left in the clutches of the evil spirit.

“Beware of God, and reject the evil spirits.”

“…….”

“Then you’re halfway there.”

To him.

“…….”

“…….”

Chaisol was sweating profusely.

Kang Seo-dam and Iru looked at that appearance with very subtle eyes.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (130)

Episode 130

“Brother Chaisol.”

In the end, Chae Sol was called to Kang Seo Dam.

“Let me get straight to the point.”

"yep."

“Have you ever had contact with an evil spirit?”

"…yep!"

“I like it when you’re honest.”

“But just a moment, sir.”

“Please speak, I will listen.”

"thank you…!"

Chae Sol took a deep breath and spoke solemnly.

“It might not be an evil spirit!”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam did not necessarily deny it.

“It is certainly ridiculous to distinguish between evil spirits from a human perspective.”

“He might really be kind.”

“What I can tell you is that most gods are pretty evil by human standards.”

“Yeah… yeah, I remember.”

“You are a sincere student. I am also a believer in God, so I can tell you this clearly.”

He shook his head.

“God is not a being that can be trusted and relied on.”

“I’ve been wondering this for a long time. If you say something like that, won’t the sun god get angry or upset?”

“God doesn’t care about words, but about actions and results. He doesn’t punish you if you don’t do anything that has a real negative impact.”

“Surprisingly, these so-called gods are… a bit….”

“You are indifferent. It is true. It is because of the low level of understanding of the human being.”

Kang Seo-dam searched through the documents in the drawer of my consulting room.

“That’s why there are also aspiring priests who deliberately hope for evil spirits with a high level of human understanding. Once they become full priests and actually serve the god, they won’t be able to say such things… but here they are.”

He placed some documents in front of Chaisol.

“This is information about evil spirits recognized in the country. You can take it with you.”

“Thank you…?”

“But judging from Brother Chaisol’s reaction, it seems like he already has a god in mind.”

“Can I talk?”

“Do you know the name of God? That is a very rare case.”

Kang Seo-dam rubbed his chin.

“Most evil spirits will have separate names so that humans can call them without any burden. Is there no other nickname for the evil spirit that Brother Chaisol knows? In our Seoul branch of the Sun Church, there is a second name called ‘Light of Justice’….”

Then Chae Sol beckoned to Kang Seo Dam. When Kang Seo Dam obediently gave Chae Sol his ear, the child whispered.

“It’s a black cloak.”

"…oh…."

Kang Seo-dam nodded, slowly returning to his original position.

"okay."

"yes."

“…….”

“Did I do something wrong…?”

“…I think I need to think about it a little more to know.”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been worried, asked again.

“Brother Chaisol said that he still doesn’t know whether he is an evil spirit or a traditional god.”

“Yes, how can you tell the difference?”

“You just have to see whether the claims and powers that God puts forth are harmful to humans or not.”

“Then I guess he’s not an evil spirit!”

“But most evil spirits often make false claims.”

Kang Seo-dam called the prospective priest Iruda, who was waiting outside. Iruda, who was about to return to the break room with his partner Chae Sol, quickly came back inside and saw Kang Seo-dam.

“It’s been a while since I’ve seen you, Sister Iruda.”

“I think so.”

“I think it was Sister Iruda who told Brother Chaisol that he was an evil spirit.”

"…you're right."

“I’d like to hear the reason why you thought that way. Is that possible?”

“Yes, I will do that.”

Iruda explained earnestly, even though her face seemed disillusioned with everything in the world.

“I saw a picture of something drawn by Brother Chaisol. It was black….”

“I just heard from Brother Chaisol what we were talking about.”

“Thank goodness. When I saw the drawing of that black figure, I felt a chill and creepy feeling.”

“Could it be that you simply mistook the awe of God?”

“As far as I know, it was the evil divinity of the evil god, even if it wasn’t explicit.”

“It wasn’t explicit….”

Soon, Kang Seo-dam asked.

“Didn’t you feel any warmth?”

“Yes? Yes. Brother Chaisol also said that it would be okay since it was warm.”

Chae Sol muttered to him.

“It’s really warm.”

“I am not optimized to feel the temperature of God.”

“The temperature of God?”

“…….”

As she hesitated, Kang Seo-dam explained on her behalf.

“Do you remember what I said about God being nature with a will and destiny?”

“Yes, I remember.”

“Humans have a very narrow range of perception. Unless they become very devout believers, ordinary people can go their entire lives without feeling God.”

"ah…."

“Thanks to our awakening as priests, we can feel God more easily. That is why each priest has a different way of accepting and interpreting God.”

Kang Seo-dam pointed to Iru-da.

“In the case of Sister Iruda, I feel the volume of God.”

“Volume?”

“You can feel how big God is, where He touches you, how loud His voice is. In short, you can feel the full size of God.”

"I see…."

“In the case of the Chaisol brothers, they seem to be sensitive to the temperature of God. Compared to the Iru sisters, who are easily aware of the pressure and violence of God, the Chaisol brothers are more likely to feel the affection or mercy that God sends.”

Kang Seo-dam, who explained the case of the two priests, pointed to himself.

“But most priests, including myself, do not easily sense God, so we follow the orders of the church. The longer we stay in the temple, the easier it is to grasp the will of God.”

“…….”

“This means that Brother Chaisol and Sister Iruda have great capabilities as priests. When other priests reach their age, they will each find their own way to serve God, but for now.”

Kang Seo-dam saw Chae Sol.

“That’s why I’m even more concerned about which god Brother Chaisol will make a contract with. Especially since it overlaps with Brother Chaisol's personality… I feel uneasy."

"Am I a very anxious person?"

"To be honest, yes, that's true. I know that Brother Chaisol is surprisingly experienced and intelligent, but kids at that age are particularly prone to getting carried away by emotions."

"…Ughhhh…."

After much thought, Chaisol asked.

"What should I do?"

"Did he ever directly solicit a contract from you, brother?"

"No, we only met a few times in private."

"I still don't know whether that being is an evil spirit or a traditional god."

Although he would not say specifically, the Black Cloak was a being that had been given the light of fairness that he revered. Since it was a being that the traditional goddess of providence affirmed, it was difficult to simply dismiss it as an evil spirit.

Even though they were both gods of death, there were traditional gods who respected human providence depending on the level of origin, and evil gods who broke the law and spread the pain of death throughout the world. It was really difficult to distinguish between gods by human standards.

"As we discussed in class today, evil spirits can easily see through human desires and anger. They can turn even initially intelligent people into the embodiment of greed, or into berserkers of rage."

They easily destroy humans. Even warriors with convictions can be turned into miserable murderers in an instant. That was the evil spirit.

“There is a subtlety to it that you don’t find in traditional gods. It happens without you even realizing it, very naturally. That’s because evil spirits are also a part of nature and fate.”

“…….”

“In our Solar Church, there have already been several times… priests who were possessed by evil spirits and ruined their lives and those around them. Even though they made the contract with the altruism of a saint or a saintess, not selfishness, in the end, it turned out that way.”

Kang Seo-dam emphasized.

“Don’t believe in God.”

“…But then why do we sign a contract?”

“I misspoke. I meant that you shouldn’t treat God with human emotions.”

"yes."

“You can believe in God and rely on Him as much as you want, but you cannot expect humanity from Him.”

“…….”

“The devil is particularly cunning in that respect….”

Kang Seo-dam, who was about to say something, quickly closed his mouth.

“…….”

"…teacher?"

“…No, just….”

He continued speaking.

“I hope you will be careful.”

"yes yes."

“The object you mentioned is not something that has been observed on Earth for very long.”

“That’s what they said.”

“So there isn’t much data… um.”

Kang Seo-dam nodded.

“I still don’t feel any negative energy from Brother Chaisol.”

“Oh, then is it okay if I keep seeing you?”

“I would like to tell you not to sign a contract hastily. If you just don’t do that, you’re halfway there.”

“Why the contract?”

“No god can make a believer without a contract. That is why a faithful believer who can use holy power can never be considered a priest.”

"ah…."

“For various reasons, the gods do not influence the human world without a contract. A contract is a kind of Maginot Line.”

“Then I just don’t have to sign the contract?”

“I need to look into the situation further, but for now, this is sufficient.”

I interrupted their conversation.

“Is this okay? Maybe the evil spirit brainwashed you so you wouldn’t notice….”

“I may not be as genius as Sister Iruda, but I have more experience than her.”

“But even so….”

“My partner was possessed by an evil spirit and executed. I personally orchestrated the action.”

“…….”

“I am the one who can recognize the signs of evil spirits better than anyone else.”

He smiled faintly.

“Don’t worry, Brother Chaisol is under the protection of the sun.”

“I was rude, I’m sorry.”

“How could I not know that you are worried about your own brother?”

"thank you."

“But if anything happens, please let me know at any time.”

“I will do so.”

Iruda came out of the counseling room and buried her face in her hands.

“…….”

“Rudaya?”

“I made a mistake.”

“It’s because you like me too much.”

“It makes me mad that what I said wasn’t wrong.”

“Thanks to you, I feel very strong?”

“…If you know it, you can do it well.”

"how?"

“Let me know whenever he touches you….”

“I will do that.”

The two chatted for a while as they headed to their assigned rooms.

“But the teacher said in class today that the scholars summoned evil spirits.”

“That’s right.”

“So you’re saying that even if you’re not a priest, you can still summon a god? Even if you’re not an awakened person like us, but an ordinary person?”

“Since even ordinary believers who are not priests can use the Holy Power, it is only natural in a way.”

“But most people don’t even think about calling out to God.”

“That’s because… knowledge about God has not been popularized.”

Above all, the civic consciousness of today's chaotic world is too low to even handle the knowledge of God.

“For fear of people doing crazy things rashly, most knowledge related to the call of God is controlled by the government and associations. If there are people who know the details, it would be the three major guilds.”

“Guild….”

“As long as you don’t worship a god of the same lineage, if you worship a different god, you can join a private guild after becoming a full-fledged priest. Your personality, Chaisol, might be better off this way.”

“Then what about your partner?”

“I heard that they usually move together. It’s not always like that, but I heard that it’s not easy to find a fellow priest who works well together to that extent.”

“Oh….”

Chaisol didn't make any definite decisions.

“Well, we don’t know what the future holds.”

“That kind of mindset is wise.”

“Then, knowledge related to God is… um… only those on high are aware of it?”

“Rather than saying that we know, I think we should see that there is a group that controls some knowledge.”

“What if someone in that group has bad intentions?”

"…that…."

Iruda then let out a sigh.

“…It is the sin of man to trust man.”

That's why we end up relying on God.

Because humans are neither immortal nor strong enough to rely on.

* * *

I sinned because I believed.

“…….”

The honest man only hoped that the tragedy would not be repeated.

He loved his family, respected his friends, and was with his colleagues. The man had no doubt that what he was doing would help this dangerous world.

But in the end, the man was left alone because of that.

"…I…."

It was unrealistic and miserable.

“What did I do wrong?”

Although I did not believe in God, I eventually began to call out to Him.

There's a person here. Please listen to me. I crawled into the mud without knowing it. Please save me. Please save me.

But there was no one by his side. There was only the smell of coal.

“What did I….”

How long do I have to endure this?

“What should I do?”

I couldn't stand it.

He already realized that he was in a deep pit of blood.

“…….”

God did not answer.

“…….”

He had already created the sign of the evil spirit and was holding it tightly in his hand.

This is the fork in the road.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (131)

Episode 131

Some orphanages, sponsored by governments and associations, are a kind of public institution, and the man came from there.

“Joohyun-ah.”

“Yes, sir.”

According to the orphanage's rules, the name is Joo-Hyeon, without a surname.

“If you have time, could you run an errand for the association?”

“Okay, I’ll do that. What should I convey this time?”

“Here’s a list of new arrivals, please review it.”

He was born four years before the catastrophe.

In short, he suffered a great disaster when he was around 4 years old, but the child who lost his name was smart and honest, and survived with lots of love from adults and the care of others. That was also the reason he was able to stay in the orphanage.

“Okay, I’ll be back soon.”

“Joohyun is kind, too.”

“It’s something that needs to be done.”

The Association Line's orphanages generally selected children who were smart, healthy, and honest. Children who grew up here either became hunters and became independent when they awakened, or they were given the opportunity to get a job at the Association.

Joo-Hyeon was one of them, but unlike other orphans who lived however they could, he had ambition.

“Joohyun said she wanted to go to the association research center, right?”

“Yes, even if I awaken, I still like the lab.”

I wanted to make the world a little bit better. I wanted to prevent as many tragedies as possible.

“I can help you, hunters.”

Having experienced the catastrophe with his bare body, he has seen the misery of the world. He has seen how far humans can fall into the abyss.

Among them, Joo-Hyeon was particularly lucky. He wanted to share his good fortune with others so that the same tragedy would not happen to them.

“Joohyun is amazing.”

"thank you."

“The research lab is always short on manpower, so I’m sure you’ll be able to get a job.”

“I wish that were true.”

If I can share what I have, there is no reason not to share.

“I want to help.”

That was Joohyun's idea.

It's embarrassing to say, but it was my own belief. If I can help, I will help, and if I can be with you, I will be with you.

In that mission, even after getting a job at the association, the man did not forget to support the orphanage that raised him.

“I know you’re busy trying to make a living too, but I’m always grateful.”

“It’s all thanks to the director who raised me.”

“That’s my job, so what….”

“I know that our work must have been difficult for you.”

Joo-hyun was a mixed race child with dark skin. The 'Guitar Orphanage' where he stayed was a place where many foreign children like him gathered.

“Most people don’t care about skin color or anything these days, but there was a time when it was really hard.”

“It was right after the disaster, so people were very sensitive.”

“I know, there was a lot of talk about how we have to take care of foreigners when we are busy taking care of Korean children. I remember that.”

“Joohyun, that’s….”

“I know I’m Korean. I was born here. It was just a sensitive time for everyone, just like the director said.”

However, because all records, including nationality, were lost, people at the time were very wary and looked down on anyone who looked even slightly different from an Asian.

The Great Disaster was such a time.

“I understand, but I wonder if the atmosphere from back then still remains the same… Our orphanage still doesn’t receive much support.”

“It’s my fault. Maybe, the people in the association are ignoring you….”

“I can’t say no. But that’s okay, you know me. If you’re smart and capable like this and behave well, you’ll find a place for yourself in no time.”

The association staff who were hired through the orphanage system were discriminated against, and the orphanage that Joo-Hyeon came from was a place where they were looked down on even more. Promotion was slow.

Of course, I was not able to participate in proper projects. Researchers who were not promoted were essentially no different from odd jobs.

Nevertheless, with his sincerity and hidden cleverness, Joo-Hyeon won the hearts of his colleagues and showed outstanding abilities, drawing the attention of his superiors.

“Why do you work so hard?”

“It’s something I can do, so why shouldn’t I do it?”

“You are sincere. I hope to see you again for a long time.”

While some people liked him, others were worried or sarcastic.

“If you work that hard, you’ll get tired quickly.”

“Thank you for the advice.”

I accepted it and swallowed it because it was true.

Joo-Hyeon wasn't exactly a gentleman, but his goal was to make the world a better place, and he found ways to help make it happen as cleverly as possible.

‘You’ve set your goals too high…’

Appropriately, so as not to tire easily.

'You can do them one by one.'

I wasn't impatient. I didn't want fame or anything like that. But I was confident.

He was the smartest of the researchers and a quick learner. Although he was not an awakened person, he was always taking care of himself, so he was in better than average health.

Joo-Hyeon also did a lot of volunteer work.

“From the association?”

“That’s funny, do you need some test subjects?”

“What are you so good at that you’re helping me?”

Those in need of help in the outskirts, or inside and outside, were very wary. Nevertheless, Joo-hyun kept in contact with them and talked to them and interacted with them. After some time, they softened up.

“Thank you for treating me last time.”

“I heard the kid over there is sick….”

“Is there anything else to eat? Why, it’s winter.”

Some of them were genuinely grateful, and some of them treated Juhyun like a chicken that lays eggs. There were those who were often rude, but Juhyun did not give in and continued to serve faithfully.

“…I’m busy.”

But even that was good.

I participated in the association's research, and in my spare time I studied or volunteered. On both sides, there were rude people everywhere, and there were bound to be times when I got angry. But it was still good.

'If I gain more experience, I will be able to become a team leader someday. If I become a research team leader, I will be given the time and resources to conduct personal research. Then, I can conduct research on dungeons and monsters.'

It was a time when I was so busy every day.

"…uh?"

“Ah ...

“What, what.”

A man ran out and grabbed Juhyun's ankle.

“Save me, save me, please…!! I was wrong!! I was wrong, I won’t do it again!!”

“Okay, just a minute….”

“You fucking bastards, spare me, no!! I don’t want to die!! At least not like that…!!!”

“Ugh…!!”

The staff at the research center started to murmur, and soon after, a security force appeared. No, they were chasing the man to catch him, so they immediately subdued him.

As I was standing there dumbfounded, holding onto my cold ankle, the researcher who seemed to have followed me felt sorry.

“Oh, is your ankle okay? It’s not broken?”

“Yes? Oh, yes. Oh… No, I think I need to get treatment.”

“It was our mistake. The association will provide treatment, but we will compensate you separately.”

“But that person earlier…?”

"huh?"

The researcher tilted his head when he saw Joo-hyun's face.

“Oh, you haven’t worked on a proper project yet?”

“Does that have anything to do with it?”

“I’m a response officer, a response officer. I ran out because I didn’t want to do my job.”

“If you are a response officer….”

I knew it.

“Are you talking about the people who participated in the experiment?”

“In other words, it’s just a test subject, you know.”

“…….”

“I guess you’re not adjusting well.”

The researcher chuckled.

“I guess it’s just something like that, it’s nothing serious.”

“…As far as I know, I have heard that response personnel are given appropriate treatment and compensation.”

“That also has its own level. I don’t know about Joo-hyun, who has never been involved in a project, but that was more like a lab rat.”

“I think you clearly asked to be spared.”

“I was scared because I was going to go into the red room after meeting the hourglass. I had to take good care of it, but I was surprised because it was stronger than I thought.”

“…An hourglass? The red room?”

“Since Joohyun will be working with us soon anyway, I’ll let you know in advance.”

It was a reward that seemed to reward the efforts made so far, but her heart was pounding and she was sweating so much that she didn’t have time to be thankful. Soon, Joo-hyun was able to see the ‘hourglass’ and ‘red room’ that the researcher had mentioned.

“That is a monster that eats human time. It looks like a fancy hourglass, but if it doesn’t eat human time once a week, the decorations will become simple. When that happens, a strange phenomenon occurs… We’ll learn about that later.”

“…….”

“You see that room attached to the other side? Joo-hyun must have seen it once or twice when she came and went on errands, but it was put there with the route in mind. The monster living inside is a bright red jewel, and it gets satisfaction by feeding on the blood of the elderly and newborns.”

It was difficult to understand.

“…Eating time means, well….”

“It’s hard to find a newborn or an old person these days, so we just make them old and put them in.”

“…Then both the monster called the hourglass and the monster called the red room will be satisfied. Right?”

“I understand. I think Joo-hyun will adapt well. I’m really grateful.”

"haha…."

In short, it was a sacrifice to be offered to the monster.

“Is that okay? Is there a problem or something?”

“The responder who just arrived was a level 5 citizen.”

The researcher added as if he knew what he was talking about.

“Don’t worry too much.”

He's a murderer who's killed dozens of people. The researcher said that, tapped Joo-hyun's shoulder a couple of times, and then disappeared.

Joo-Hyeon saw numerous researchers moving around the endless rooms of monsters, talking to each other, or entering each room.

I felt left alone even though I was in a crowd.

“…….”

Joohyun soon came to his senses and did what he had to do.

I was faithful to my assigned duties, went out to volunteer and talked to the abandoned citizens, and even asked the president of the association to talk to me. But nothing got better. Everything was the same. It was the same everyday life.

The orphanage family and friends on the street asked.

“You look really tired these days.”

Joo-hyun was comforted by him.

“The things that happen in the lab aren’t as… sublime as I thought.”

“If only the association itself were noble, then that would be amazing in its own right.”

“Yeah, that’s right.”

I pulled myself together.

“Thank you for listening to my story.”

I was able to get back on my feet because I had family and friends.

'I have survived the catastrophe. I can survive this time too, and I must find a better way.'

So he tried to do more. After gaining authority, Joo-hyun even used himself as a test subject and showed results.

But all he saw was the tragedy he hated so much, recurring over and over again, despite all the work he had done to avoid seeing it happen again.

“…….”

“You’ve overdone it. I’ll give you a vacation, so take a month to recuperate and come back.”

"…but…."

“I know what you want, but in your current state, you won’t be able to even do the job you’ve been given properly.”

"…All right."

It was something that the association president personally recommended after seeing Joo-hyun working too hard, perhaps because he had been feeling it since their conversation the previous day.

Joo-hyun was about to be stubborn for a moment, but soon realized that her mind and body were very disturbed and gave in. She didn't want to be stubborn without a plan.

“I’ll take a little rest.”

But that shouldn't have happened.

“…….”

When I returned after recovering until my body had somewhat recovered, I found my hometown in flames.

Some of his friends on the street were nowhere to be seen, and something was a bit messy. Ju-hyeon couldn't even calm down and ran around trying to figure out the situation.

"yes?"

And then he soon realized that the cause was within himself.

“Because of me?”

“I guess some people who are dissatisfied with you have done something.”

“Complaints? What on earth are you talking about…?”

“They were all over the place?”

It is said that everyone at the orphanage he considered his hometown, some of the friends he considered close on the street, and some of the staff at the research institute he considered capable colleagues all hated Joo-Hyeon.

It's not like Joo-hyun didn't know about those feelings at all. The conflict that arose from jealousy, envy, disgust, and differences in ideology. Knowing that, he was more careful, but in the end, things happened.

“Actually, I didn’t think it was that good either.”

“…….”

“You seem to be the only one pretending to be clean, don’t you?”

That's a bit.

"…haha."

It sounded terrible.

As for why I didn't hear the news before, the research team leader in charge of Joo-Hyeon said that he did it to kill his spirit, as if he had some strange ulterior motive. He said that he couldn't work with someone who had strange ideas.

Did I really stand out that much? Well, I didn't.

'I think I was careful.'

I tried to understand the thoughts of my colleagues as much as possible. There were many times when I agreed with them. However, there were also times when I made suggestions. Perhaps these small, small details came together to create this ridiculous 'reporting ceremony'.

But my family and friends were not fifth-class citizens. They were 'innocent citizens.' Even in a world where human rights and such are hard to find, this was absurd.

'Why didn't anyone stop me? Why isn't anyone feeling guilty? Why am I the only one suffering?'

Someone said this:

“If that’s the case, if you’re not careful, even Joo-Hyeon could become a response agent.”

“Is that possible?”

“If there is a shortage of personnel, researchers are also deployed as response personnel.”

“I always hear that there is a shortage of research personnel.”

“First of all, Joohyun has already served as a test subject.”

“Is that a problem?”

“I don’t know what the problem is, but it could be an excuse.”

“…I understand.”

Someone else got angry.

“Fuck, I knew this would happen. This is why you shouldn’t trust those Association brats!”

“No, I….”

“My friends died because of you! What about those invisible guys? Did you drag them in as test subjects?”

“…That’s not it….”

“You hypocrite, you pretend to be nice to me and then get stabbed in the back of the head. Do you feel good about that? It’s so dirty….”

“…….”

I was tired.

“…….”

I wish I was just tired, but I was angry. It was a sequence that I didn't quite understand, but it was hard to think rationally about this tired anger.

I'm so angry that I want to burn all this anger on myself… .

‘…That could be the case.’

Since humans are naturally fickle and self-centered, this kind of thing could happen. Ingratitude is one of the characteristics of the human species. They quickly forget what they have received and are sensitive to losses.

I started this knowing all of that. There were countless times when I was hurt by that. But I wanted to make the world a better place, I didn't want to see the same tragedy, and that was my belief, so I lived with a smile.

'That could be possible.'

But then it occurred to me that I was human too.

"…therefore…."

When he came to, he was holding the sign of the evil spirit in his hand.

He created a sign for Sankalut, one of the evil gods.

“…This could happen.”

I haven't written it yet.

Sankalut was said to be the evil spirit of blood and honor. If you offered the blood of a newborn or an old person who died in terrible pain, he would grant your wish and send the soul of the person who died in the process to paradise.

The reason he hadn't summoned the evil spirit yet was not because Joo-Hyeon was kind or thought he could endure it this time. He just hadn't thought about who to kill or what wish to make.

‘… I don’t understand why you’re thinking of getting angry when you don’t even want anything. Was I always this stupid?’

I feel like something is empty.

“…The person who dies will just come out.”

I felt like a puppet tied to a thin thread, not of my own free will.

He was granted access to the 'Hourglass', a monster that eats away at human time, but he's been through a lot, so I'm not sure if he still has that authority.

“But I guess I can still summon the evil spirits.”

That's enough.

“The wish is… um.”

What should I pray for?

'Should I ask my dead family members to come back to life?'

Joo-Hyeon entered the orphanage, which had been reduced to ruins by the fire, in a daze.

The bodies were all collected, but the abandoned building in the dark location was not even demolished. Joo-hyun silently entered the children's blackened rooms. In the rooms that were still intact, traces of the children were visible.

“…This is….”

There was also an unidentified painting that was barely burnt but still charred.

“Did you draw a black cloak?”

It was quite famous at the time.

'There are quite a few children who talk about or draw pictures of the Black Cloak.'

Joo-hyun, who was staring at the painting with lifeless eyes, soon dropped it roughly down. There was a sound of it hitting the floor.

He sat on the smelly bed with his body tired. It was then that he looked into the sign of the evil spirit he had created.

“…….”

“…….”

“That’s cool.”

An exclamation of wicked interest.

He realized there was someone at the entrance to the room.

“It’s a jewel that smells of blood and wealth, isn’t it?”

"…what…."

“If you give it to me, I can give you a more beautiful and valuable jewel.”

“Where are you now…?”

“Hey, gentleman. Let me guess what you’re thinking right now.”

A man in a black suit was leaning against a gold-leafed picture frame.

“Aren’t you hungry?”

"…yes?"

It was a sudden remark.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (132)

Episode 132

The horror stories about the Black Cloak were famous, but Juhyun wasn't particularly interested in them.

'There was no information I could access.'

The humanoid monster 'Black Cloak' that suddenly appeared recently had its information and traces managed by high-ranking researchers. There was no information that Joo-Hyeon, who was still only a proxy, could access.

But he knew full well that it was a kind of portrait.

“…….”

“Why, are you speechless at seeing something so beautiful?”

“…Ah… You’re so… confident?”

“If I just do it, I should be brimming with confidence.”

"that…."

The conversation was so natural that I was dumbfounded.

“…Is that a black cloak?”

It was so different from the image I knew.

“I heard that Black Cloak speaks more harshly.”

“Then it’s no fun. I know how to change to suit the other person, that’s my talent.”

“I don’t really understand what’s going on.”

“Surprisingly, I’m not dreaming, please don’t treat me like I’m dreaming.”

“…It doesn’t seem to be a lie….”

My mind is still a little dazed, but I can see my heart pounding with surprise.

“Why… why are you here?”

“I think someone is calling me.”

“At least I never called….”

“I guess so.”

A portrait with its hood pulled down so low that its face could not be seen pointed down the frame.

“You seem like you could draw better than this.”

"…ah."

Where he pointed, there was a picture of a black cloak drawn roughly with a black crayon.

“…….”

For some reason, the picture wavered unsteadily.

“…Is this what it looks like in this picture?”

“If so, it would have come from that piece of paper, you stupid gentleman.”

“But isn’t it true that that picture called you?”

“That’s how I found this location, and thanks to that, I met you.”

“Your speech is really… rude.”

“It’s hard to stay still for even a moment.”

“It’s so different from the image of the black cloak I’ve heard of….”

“Hmm.”

His face was hidden by the shadow of his hood, but for some reason he seemed dissatisfied.

“This kind of conversation is not fun.”

“…….”

Only then did Joo-Hyeon suddenly feel a sense of crisis.

"…sorry."

Whatever the identity of the opponent, there was no benefit in incurring his enmity.

I couldn't even remember that I had been contemplating whether or not to pray to the evil god Sankalut just a moment ago. I was faced with such an absurd situation that my mind wasn't working properly.

Joohyun apologized first and then looked at it.

“If you were offended… uh….”

“Will you offer me a sacrifice?”

“I don’t even know who you are, so it’s a bit much to offer a sacrifice…?”

“Wonderful. Prudence is a good virtue for humans to live by.”

“But really, why are you here?”

“I think I said that earlier?”

“Nobody called you.”

“No one called.”

There was a brief moment of silence, and the portrait waved its hand gently.

“You called me, didn’t you?”

“…….”

Unlike before, the voice was gentle and soft.

“That’s why I came.”

“…….”

“To summon the evil spirits.”

And once again, he became as callous as a corpse.

“I’m looking for a friend to help me adjust.”

"…friend…."

Is this 'adaptation' perhaps a word directed at human society?

Among the gods, the evil spirits were particularly interested in humans. It was really unexpected, but if the 'Black Cloak' was one of those evil spirits, it was somewhat understandable why he suddenly appeared and spoke to me like this.

'No, I'm not going.'

Is it true that evil spirits just appear out of nowhere like this?

“…I, I… was trying to call another evil spirit… you?”

“No matter what being you were trying to summon, there would be no better choice than me.”

"uh…."

It was a very arrogant statement, but rather than feeling resentment, I felt fear and anxiety.

'The presence is growing.'

I understood that the other person's speech was inconsistent. Most of the great mysteries did not fit human standards, so many parts seemed strange.

'Maybe he's adapting as I said before.'

But the pressure that I didn't feel at first was gradually increasing, which was a dangerous sign.

'Is the level of shame revealed more clearly as I return to that blunt tone?'

At first, when he spoke in a tone that had a somewhat cruel interest, it was rather absurd, but when he spoke in a voice that had a pious weight, and even more so in his current mechanical tone, the intensity felt even clearer.

“…….”

“You seem confused.”

“…A little bit.”

“How may I help you?”

“Could you…speak a little more lightly…?”

"aha."

The tone suddenly rose.

“I guess you prefer something more informal?”

“…Yes, this is more comfortable.”

At the same time, the pressure has also improved.

‘… Does personality change?’

For a moment, I felt compelled to report this new information about the 'Black Cloak', but it soon subsided. I found it ridiculous that I could not break away from my usual habits while holding the mark of the evil spirit.

